INDIAN CASES

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF DECISIONS

OF

The PRIVY COUNCIL, the High Courts of ALLAHABAD, BOMBAY, CALCUTTA, LAHORE, MADRAS, PATNA and RANGOON, the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of CENTRAL PROVINCES, OUDH, PESHAWAR and SIND

REPORTED IN

The following 30 Legal Periodicals:

Allahabad (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal; Bombay (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Reporter; Calcutta (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Weekly Notes; Lahore (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Punjab Law Reporter, (4) Punjab Weekly Reporter; Madras (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Times, (4) Law Weekly, (5) Weekly Notes; Nagpur (1) Law Journal, (2) Law Reports; Oudh (1) Cases, (2) Law Journal, (3) Oudh and Agra Law Reporter; Patna (1) Cases, (2) Indian Law Reports, (3) Law Reporter, (4) Law Times; Rangoon (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Burma Law Journal; Sind Law Reporter; Criminal Law Journal and All India Reporter,

Books Checked

WITH

A large number of extra Rulings not reported elsewhere.

S. N. D...
Advocate High Cou...
Jammu & Kashmir
Srinagar.

VOLUME 77, 1923.

EDITOR:

S. D. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL. B.,

VAKIL, HIGH COURT, LAHORE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGER, AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," LAHORE.

K UNIVERSITY LIB.
K. DIVISION
Acc No 75446
Date 18.12.69

GMR

CONSOLIDATED

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports for the period specified at the top of each table, with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

45 I. L. R., ALLAHABAD SERIES, FOR DECEMBER, 1923.

Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.		Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol and page of Ind. Cas.
667	Bu Ali Khan v. Sujan Kunwar	75	100	711	Hawal Rai v. Har Prasad ..	75	835
669	Nasir Khan v. Itwari ..	74	905	715	Sham Bebari Lal v. Ram Kali	74	495
671	Emperor v. Sita Ram ..	75	358	718	Baij Nath Rai v. Gokul Rai..	74	498
676	In the matter of Kashi Nath ..	74	11	720	Mohammed Bux v. Mohammed Abdul Baqi Khan ..	74	490
679	Lallu Mal v. Reoti Ram ..	74	353		Mithu Lal v. Sri Lal ..	74	918
680	Emperor v. Mahadeo Prasad..	75	159	724	Rabi Pratap Narain Singh v.
682	Muhammad Zain Khan v. Nur-ul-Hasan Khan ..	74	142	725	Ram Prasad ..	74	502
685	Sultan Bux v. Abdul Hamid..	74	24	727	Emperor v. Umed ..	74	858
687	Suraj Narain v. Jang Bahadur	74	2	729	Uman Shankar v. Aisha Khatun ..	74	869
691	Abdul Rashid Khan v. Nisar Muhammad Khan ..	77	448	735	Kapur Chand v. Kanhaiya Lal ..	74	513
692	Inayat Ilahi v. Hardeo Sahai	74	325		Santi Lal v. Raj Narain ..	79	87
700	Bansi v. Lakshmi Das ..	75	934	741	Sheo Nandan v. Bal Gobind
701	Ruhul Amin v. Shankar Lal ..	77	30	744	Misra ..	74	647
709	Baldeo Missir v. Ram Lagan Shukul ..	77	694	749	Emperor v. Dartari Singh ..	To be printed.

50 I. L. R., CALCUTTA SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923.

853	Bhairabendra Narain Deb v. Udai Narain Deb ..	79	298	939	Dibakanta Chatterjee v. Gour Gopal Mukherjee ..	75	715
867	Halfhide v. Halfhide ..	To be printed.		948	Rajendra Narain Chowdhury v. Satish Chandra Chowdhury ..	77	795
872	Rahim Sheikh v. King-Emperor ..	73	773	957	Manindra Chandra Nandi v. Kaulat Shaik and Lagun Mandal ..	To be printed.
878	Satchidananda Dutt v. Mitya Nath Mitter ..	79	287
892	Pran Krishna Gharai v. Nitya Gopal Maiti ..	79	333	969	Ahmed Ali Sardar v. King-Emperor ..	75	537
898	Ramesh Chandra Sinha v. Mohammed Elahi Buksh..	79	309	972	Bansi Mirdhya v. Brojeswar Dutt ..	To be printed.
903	Sachhidananda Thakur v. Mahes Chandra Das ..	79	312	974	Ibrahim Mallick v. Lalit Mohan Roy ..	79	537
907	In the matter of a petition of Bishun Priya Chowdhurani	79	305	978	Sukur Mahomed v. Asmot Mandal ..	79	491
912	Kripal Singh v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.		985	Binode Behari Nath v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
919	M. L. Chuckerbutty v. Olof Borin ..	To be printed.		992	Dakshina Ranjan Ghosh v. Omarchand Oswal ..	75	173
929	Annada Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick ..	74	499	1004	Kushai Mallik v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.

38 CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, FROM OCTOBER TO DECEMBER, 1923.

350	Golam Rahaman v. Garudas	73	586	379	King-Emperor v. Akbar Molla	To be printed.
353	Emperor v. Bimalanand Das Gupta ..	77	985	384	King-Emperor v. Dhananjay Ray ..	To be printed.
355	Kedar Nath Das v. Bidhu Bhushan Guha ..	70	583	388	Nagendra Nath Chakrabarti v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
358	Habibar Rahaman v. Saidannessa Bibi ..	77	907	397	Mamfru Chowdhury v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
360	Corporation of Calcutta v. Bejoy Kumar Addy ..	77	529	406	Phillip E. Billinghust v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
363	Habibar Rahaman v. Saidannessa Bibi ..	77	949	411	King-Emperor v. Barendra Kumar Ghose ..	To be printed.
369	Surja Prasad Sukul v. Midnapur Zemindari Company Ltd. ..	77	954
372	Bhairab Chandra Das v. The Midnapur Zemindari Co, Ltd ..	77	1015

27 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM 25TH JUNE TO 17TH SEPTEMBER, 1923.

725	Merla Venkama v. Merla Agasthiah ..	Not reportable.		806	Vally Mohd Haji Gunny v. Nederland S. Navigation Co.	To be printed.
733	Messrs. Sadasook Ramprotap v. Hoore Miller & Co. ..	To be printed.		809	Shoshi Mukhi Debya v. Keshab Lall Mukerjee ..	To be printed
739	Re Ballav Chand Serowgee ..	To be printed.		812	In the goods of George Thomas Williams ..	75	466
740	Narendra Lal Chowdhury v. Benode Behari Sadhu Khan ..	To be printed.		816	Jadu Nath Holdar v. Manindra	To be printed.
743	Deba Kanta Chatterji v. Gour Gopal Mukerji ..	75	715	817	Jatindra Mohan Pal v. Bhola Nath Bhakat ..	To be printed.
749	Mohd. Solaiman v. Kumar Birendra Chandra ..	74	906	820	Nagendra Chandra Dhar v. King-Emperor ...	73	430
755	Lakshan Chunder Dey v. Nikunjamani Dassi ..	To be printed.		821	P. E. Billinghurst v. H. P. Blackburn ..	To be printed.
759	Roshan Ali v. Chandra Mohan Das ..	75	447	854	Hafizan Bibi v. Suba Bibi ..	78	948
760n	Abinas Chandra Bhattacharjee Amar Chandra De ..	70	328	857	Government of Assam v. Sahebulla ..	75	129
763	Kustea Loan Office, Ltd. v. Annada Charan Chackrabartty ..	77	26	878	Hurnandrai Fulchand v. Pragdas Budhsen ..	72	485
765	Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Sheikh Rahaman Gazi ..	To be printed.		883	M, L. Chakrabarty v. Olof Borin ...	To be printed.
769	Kalipada Das v. Durgadas Roy ..	73	10	888	Probodh Chandra Mitter v. Harish Chandra Naskar ..	78	7
772	Jamini Nath Mallik v. Midnapur Zemindary Co. ...	75	231	893	Surendra Nath v. Raja Reshee Case Law ...	79	271
774	Khatubai v. Mahomed Haji Abu ...	72	202	897	Sarat Chandra Das v. Sarajini Rudraja ..	79	257
783	J. C. Galstaun v. E. D. Sassoon & Co., Ltd. ..	To be printed.		901	Sahdeo Narain Deo v. Kusum Kumari ..	71	769
787	The Corporation of Calcutta v. Bejoy Kumar Addy ..	77	529	908	Govind Das Pity v. Jardine Skinner & Co. ..	To be printed.
792	Hemangini Dasi v. Bhagwati Sundari Dasi ...	75	682	916	Re Meghraj Purohit ..	To be printed.
797	Baikuntha Nath Chattaraj v. Prasannamoyi Debya ...	72	286	918	Saila Bala Dei v. Gadadhar Hazra ..	70	408
802	Kishan Narain v. Pala Mal ..	72	187	919	H. K. Bedwar v. Rao Shahat C S R. Rao ..	74	76
				923	Natabar Khan v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.

27 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM 25TH JUNE TO 17TH SEPTEMBER 1923—concld.

925	Jagdeo Narain Singh v. Baldeo Singh ..	71 984
933	Bhowanidas Ram Gobind v. Harsukhdas Balkshendas ..	To be printed.
936	Rash Behari Guha v. Dwarka Nath Bandopadhya ..	73 401
941	Abedunnissa Bibi v. Isuf Alikhan ..	74 1010
943	Saroda Prasad Banerji v. Gosto Behari Hazra ..	70 385
947	Radha Raman Kundu v. Gopal Chander Sinha ..	To be printed.
947	Bausi Mirdha v. Brojeswar Dutt ..	To be printed.
949	Thakurain Harnath Kuar v. Thakur Indar Bahadur Singh ..	71 629
955	Giridharilal Hanumanbux v. Eagle Star & British Dominions Insurance Co., Ltd. ..	To be printed.
959	Surendra Nath De v. Asutosh Nandi ..	75 474
962	Rajah Reshi Kesh Law v. Chintamani Dalai ..	70 535
964	Tarakeswar Pal Chowdhury v. Srish Chandra Ghosh ..	To be printed.
969	Syed Ali Kazemini Motwali v. Manik Chandra Pramanik	To be printed.
972	Idol Sri Sri Gokul Nath Jiu v. The New Birbhum Coal Co., Ltd. ..	To be printed.
974	Kishavlal Brothers & Co., v. Diwanchand & Co. ..	74 396
982	Priya Nath Basu v. Tara Chand Moral ..	To be printed.
987	Sasi Kanta Acharja Chowdhury v. Salim Sheikh ..	74 1001
989	Raja Peary Mohan Mookerjee v. Manohar Mookerjee ..	74 373
996	Benoda Behari Nath v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
997	Rajani Kanta Pal v. Jaga Mohan Pal ..	73 252
1004	Shiba Prashad Singh v. Rani Prayag Kumari Debi ..	Not reportable.
1007	Satchidananda Dutt v. Nritya Nath Mitter ..	79 287
1013	Sahu Bibi v. Ismail Sheik ..	To be printed.
1017	Lakshmi Narain Baijnath v. Secretary of State for India in Council ..	To be printed.
1021	Kamulammal v. T. B. K. Visvanathaswami Naicker	71 643
1025	Injad Ali v. Mohini Chandra Adhikari ..	To be printed.
1029	Annada Kumar Das Gupta v. Dwarka Nath Mandal ..	To be printed.
1033	Chandra Mohon Ganguli v. Jnanendra Nath Banerjee ..	To be printed.
1037	Ayinannessai Bibee v. Panna Lal Sil ..	Not reportable.
1040	Basanta Khmar Chakravarti v. Ashutosh Chakravarti ..	To be printed.
1042	Harish Chandra Chaudhury v. Giridhar Sarkar ..	73 328

28 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM 12TH NOVEMBER TO 31ST DECEMBER, 1923,

1	M. Subramanian v. M. L. R. M. Lutchman ..	71 60
6	Chandmull Kangoria v. Debi Chand ..	To be printed.
10	Dakshina Ranjan Ghose v. Omar Chand Oswal ..	75 173
16	Sadek Ali v. Samed Ali ..	To be printed.
20	Banka Behari Das v. Guru Das Dhar ..	To be printed.
23	Nafar Chandra Pal Chowdhury v. King-Emperor ..	76 429
25	Chaitkani Venkatarayanim Garu v. Sree Rajah Vatsavaya Venkata Subadrayamma Jagapati ..	71 1035
31	A. E. Salayjee v. Fatima Bibi ..	71 753
34	Raghumull Khandewal v. Official Assignee of Calcutta ..	To be printed.
46	Anil Kumar Biswas v. Rash Mohan Saha ..	To be printed
49	Secretary of Stata for India in Council v. Laxmibai ..	72 898
55	Baijnath Goenka Bahadur v. Nanda Kumar Singh ..	To be printed.
57	Dwijendra Mohan Sarma v. Monorama Dassi ..	70 990
62	Abdul Latif Kazi v. Abdul Huq Kazi ..	To be printed.
66	Annada Mohan Roy Chowdhury v. Kina Das ..	,,

28 CALCUTTA WEEKLY NOTES, FROM 12TH NOVEMBER TO 31ST DEC., 1923—concld.

70	Dala Meah v. Abdul Rahaman	To be printed.		119	Haro Nath Malo v. Sonai Mia Chowdhury ..	76	961
73	Harichand Mancharam v. Govind Luxman Gokhale..	71	763	121	Haji Abdur Rahim v. Narayan Das Aurora ..	71	646
79	Mohammad Sher Khan v. Raja Seth Swami Dayal ..	66	853	127	S. N. Halder v. S. N. Mallik	To be printed.
85	Bhupendra Nath Mukherjee v. Manohar Mukherjee ..	77	783	131	Bhubanmohini Dasi v. Kumudbala Dasi ..	To be printed.
92	Kristopala Ray v. Chaitanya Charan Mandal ..	69	530	140	Boidyanath Chattopadhya v. Panchanani Dasi ..	72	128
98	Rani Jogadamba Kumari v. Thakur Wazir Narain Singh	77	1041	143	Sashi Bhusan Hazra v. Kazi Abdulla ..	To be printed.
104	Burn & Co. Ltd. v. H. H. Thakur Shaheb Sree Lukhdirjee ..	To be printed.		145	Srinath Rai v. Pratap Udai Nath Sahi Deo ..	To be printed.
114	Nagendrabala Chowdhrani v. Bejoy Chand Mahatab Bahadur ..	74	153	157	Pitambar Gain v. Ram Charan Moral ..	76	365
116	Sachhidananda Thakur v. Mohesh Chandra Das ..	79	312	160	Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Manmatha Bhusan Chatterjee ..	To be printed.
118	Hamid Ali v. Sri Kissen Gosain ..	75	367

4 I. L. R., LAHORE SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923.

390	Ali Ahmad v. Said Mian ..	75	1028	434	Bashu Ram and Balak Ram v. Piara Chand ..	75	938
392	Sant Kaur v. Sher Singh ..	73	786			79	248
399	Ghulam v. Crown ..	77	446	439	Jhuman v. Dulia ..
402	Zainab v. Ghulam Rasul ..	73	425	442	Notified Area Committee Una v. Amar Singh ..	75	908
406	Budhu Ram v. Niamat Rai..	75	375	445	Neki v Chhajju Ram ..	77	869
408	Bahadur Chand v. Muhummad Ismail ..	79	201	448	King-Emperor v. Khanu ..	76	29
423	Gulab Rai Sagar Mal v. Mirbhe Ram-Nagar Mal ..	79	194	451	Autar Singh v. Crown ..	To be printed.
428	Punjab Cotton Press Company v. Secretary of State for India ..	79	208	460	Abdul v. Ghulam Muhammad	76	20
432	Punjab Cotton Press, Company v. Secretary of State for India ..	79	185	462	Crown v. Abdul Aziz ..	To be printed.
				467	Muhammad Shafi v. Kalsum Bi ..	79	260

45 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FOR DECEMBER, 1923.

798	Sudarsana Rao v. Christian Pillai ..	76	813	822	Surayya v. Venkataratnam..	To be printed.
800	Jeremiah v. Johnson ..	76	695	825	Vedacheri v. Narasimha Mudali ..	76	793
804	Karuthan Chettiar v. Raman Chetti ..	79	340	826	The Vizagapatam Sugar Development Co., Ld. v. Muthurama Reddi ..	76	894
805	Bava Levvai Sahib v. Ammeenammal ..	To be printed.		827	Ramanatha Aiyar v. Nagendra Aiyar ..	76	805
808	Govindan Nair v. Krishnan Nair ..	To be printed.		829	Paramasiva Thevar v. Pulukaruppa Thevar ..	77	631
811	Lakshmi Ammal v. Alamelu Ammal ..	79	325	840	Kamalammal v. Chokkalingam Asati ..	76	840
813	Krishnaswami Naidu v. Chengalroya Naidu ..	76	836	842	In re Ellan ..	76	611
817	Aburubammal v. The Official Assignee of Madras ..	To be printed.		844	Karuthian Chettiar v. Raman Chetti ..	To be printed.
				845	In re Mulimayandi Thevan ..	76	829
				846	In re Doraiswami Udayan ..	75	987
				849	Gopalakrishna Pillai v. Kunjithapatham Pillai ..	79	651

	Privy Council.
1	Jagdeo Narain Singh v. Baldeo Singh ..	71	984
10	Jai Berham v. Kedar Nath Marwari ..	69	278
15	Behari Lal-Bulaki Ram v. Kundan Lal ..	69	356
19	E. D. Sasson & Co. v. Ramkissen Das ..	70	777
25	Yorkshire Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Thomas Craine ..	Not reported.
36	City of Montreal v. Watt & Scott, Ltd. ..	Not reported.
41	Kishan Narain v. Pala Mal ...	72	187
45	Khatubai v. Mahomed Haji Abu ..	72	202
48	Kamalammal v. Visvanathaswami Naicker ...	71	643
52	Khawaja Mahammad Hamid v. Mian Mahammad ..	77	1009
62	The Sisters of Charity of Rockingham v. King ..	Not reported.
70	Chelikani Venkatarayanin Garu v. Sree Rajah Vatsavaya Venkata Subadrayamma Jagapati Bahadur Garu ..	71	1035
81	Socrates Atychides v. The Secretary of State for India	To be printed.
86	Merla Venkanna v. Merla Agasthiah ..	Not reportable.
96	A. E. Salayjee v. Fatima Bibi	71	753
99	P. M. Sadasiva Mudaliar v. A. R. Hajee Fakeer Mahomed Sait & Sons ..	72	48
109	Pirthipal Singh v. Ganesh Din Singh ..	71	641
111	The Secretary of State for India v. Laxmibai ..	72	898
115	Mahomed Soleiman v. Kumar Birendra Chandra Singh ..	74	906
121	Sahdep Narain Deo v. Kusumkumari ..	71	769
129	Ram Bujhawan Prasad Singh v. Nathu Ram ..	71	933
137	Sarat Kumari Dasi v. Amullyadhan Kundu ..	71	632
149	Rajanikanta Pal v. Jagamohan Pal ..	73	252
153	Haji Abdur Rahim v. Narayan Das Aurora ..	71	646
157	Rani Jagadamba Kumari v. Thakur Wazir Narain Singh	77	1041
162	Kumar Naresh Narayan Roy v. The Secretary of State for India ..	77	1048
171	Hurnandrai Fulchand v. Pragdas Budshen ..	72	485
	Privy Council—concld.
175	Harichand Mancharam v. Govind Luxman Gokhale ..	71	763
180	Akhtari Begam v Liljan Ali	71	621
184	M. Subramanian v. M. L. R. M. Lutchman ..	71	650
189	Shiba Prashad Singh v. Rani Prayag Kumari Debi ..	Not reportable.
190	Point Anne Quarries, Ltd. v. The Ship "M F. Whalen ..	To be printed.
196	Geoffrey Teignmouth Clarkson v. E. C. Daires ..	Not reported.
205	Edith May Walpole v. The Canadian Northern Ry. Co.	Not reported.
	Madras High Court.
1	Ragunathaswami Ayyangar v. Gopal Rao ..	74	596
3	Sankara Variyar v. Kalathil Ummar ..	70	787
6	Ponduri Adeyya v. Jaladi Bureyya ..	71	305
9	Kurukundi Sama Rao v. The Firm Marwadi Vannaji ...	71	153
20	L. S. Rajamanikam v. W. T. Farrar ..	69	954
25	Matamulla Manikath Pattanchandu v. Kuttiyil Rayru ..	66	396
27	Kuppuswami Chettiar v. Rajagopala Ayyar ..	70	324
32	Chintalapudi Sanyasi Rao v Chintalapudi Venkat Rao ..	73	470
37	The Secretary, Board of Revenue (Income-Tax Madras) v. The Madras Export Company, Madura ..	71	756
44	Palchur Mahalakshmamma v. Vemi Reddi Babu Reddy ..	69	529
46	Allu Ramalingier v. Subramania Pillai ..	69	402
47	Sri Gadicherla Venkatanarasimha Rao Garu v. Nayapathi Subba Rao Pantulu Garu ..	73	991
81	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Emperor ..	71	608
82	Naina Muhammad Rowther v. Abdul Rahman Rowther ..	72	207
89	Seshadri Reddi v. Sir S. Subrahmania Aiyar ...	47	35
96	Ramaswami Pillai v. Janaki Ammal ..	69	393
98	Narayana Ayyar v. Biyari Bivi ..	69	977
100	Dervish Hussain v. Emperor	71	212
102	Ghulam Mohideen v. Ahamadulla Begum Sahiba ..	71	49

	Madras High Court—contd.
104	Arunachala Thevan v. Vellachami Thevan ..	71	514
107	Ramanunni Kurup v. Raman Somayajipad ..	74	309
114	Venkatrama Ayyar v. Sultan Maracayar ..	70	987
118	Sundara Iyer v. Arumugam Pillai ..	72	325
118	Hanumantharow v. Krishnamma ..	70	329
122	Perumal Chetty v. W. Kandaswamy ..	72	925
124	Subbaraya Mudaliar v. Kandaswamy Mudaliar ..	70	168
126	Raja Rajeswara Sethupathi Raja of Ramnad v. Tiruneelakantam Servai ..	72	250
133	Rangaswami Nayudu v. Krishnaswami Iyer ..	71	463
136	Rama Patter v. Appukutti ..	72	139
137	Periayayagi Ammal v. A. Ratnavelu Mudaliar ..	76	1042
146	Koonamavelli Unnara v. Koyiparambath Porinkitayil Kunhi Raman ..	72	582
152	The Crown Prosecutor v. A. Duraiswami ..	72	358
153	A. V. Srinivasalu Reddiar v. Govinda Goundan ..	71	798
155	A. R. A. R. S. M. Somasundaram Chettiar v. Sundarasa Rao Scindia Saheb ..	Not reportable.
157	V. S. Natesa Chettiar v. V. E. R. M. Annamalai Chettiar ..	78	213
158	Malli & Co. v. V. A. A. R. Firm ..	69	396
164	M. R. Krishnamurthi Iyer v. C. V. Parasurama Iyer ..	72	69
166	Kandaswami Reddi v. Supparmal ...	70	576
169	Venkatachalapathi Aiyar v. China Muna Chakrapani Aiyar ...	63	844
172	The Official Assignee of Madras v. Doraiappa Aiyar alias Krishnaswami Aiyar ..	71	1056
174	Srinath Deivasikamani Nataraja Desikar v. Rao Bahadur M. R. Govinda Rao ...	72	5
175	Dhanammal v. Veeraregavalu Naidu ...	72	335
178	C. Sarvothama Rao v. Chairman, Municipal Council, Saidapet ..	73	619
190	In re Venkatasubbier ..	72	356
191	Nambia Pillai v. Sudalamuthu Nadar ...	76	872
192	R. Kuppusami Pillai v. S. Narayanasami Aiyar ...	70	670
195	Kottithoti Hamid Haji v. Emperor ..	72	381

	Madras High Court—contd.
198	N. V. E. Nachiappa Chettiar v. N. A. K Subbier ...	72	820
212	Swaminadha Mudaliar v. Kumarasami Chettiar ..	72	284
214	Nataraja Pillai v. Rangasami Pillai ...	72	536
217	In re Ramanatha Chettiar ..	71	608
217	Kistappa Chetty v. Lakshmi Ammal ...	72	842
222	Dronamraju Rama Rao v. Vissaragada Vedayya ..	73	183
230	The Secretary of State for India v. Saminatha Ayyar	74	281
232	Sundaram Ayyar v. Muthuramalinga Sethupathy ...	72	308
234	In re Venkatagurunatha Sastri ...	72	612
236	The Secretary of State for India v. Venkataratnam ...	73	106
245	Arulnanandam v. Arul Pakkiam ...	72	134
246	Venkatarama Aiyar v. Elumalai Naicker ...	72	464
248	In re Kottayya ...	75	768
249	Balusami Iyer v. Venkatasami Naicken ...	75	219
251	Prayag Doosjee Varu v. Sarangapani Chetty ...	To be printed.
252	Sheik Muhammad Rowther v. Subba Naicker ..	72	46
253	Venkatarama Ayyar v. Annamali Chettiar ..	72	42
258	Varada Chariyar v. Krishnamba Garu ..	76	781
263	Davud Beevi Ammal v. Radhakrishna Ayyar ..	72	81
269	Maharajulungar Maharaja of Jeypore v. Ganga Raju Bahadur ...	72	745
273	Rarichan v. Damayanti ..	72	638
276	Utuman Ammal v. Naina Mahomed Rowther ..	72	314
277	Durai sami Ayyar v. Subraya Ayyar ..	72	322
279	Rathanamasari v. The Secretary of State for India ..	72	214
285	Srinivasan v. Murugesa Mudali ..	72	545
288	Doraiswamy Iyengar v. K. Nerayana Iyengar ..	68	983
290	Latifa Bi v. Mottai Ammal ..	72	141
293	Gopalaswami Aiyar v. Ramachandra Ayyar ..	72	137
294	Krishna Aiyar v. Subramania Aiyar ..	72	154
296	In re Lakshminarayana ..	72	669
297	In re Ramaswami Thevan ..	72	615
298	Bhagavanulu v. Seetharamaswami ...	73	202
300	In re Cholancheri Ayyammad	72	515
301	Baba Sah v. Hajee Mohamad	73	297

32 MADRAS LAW TIMES, FROM JANUARY TO APRIL 1923—concld.

304	Subbier v. Moideen Pichai ..	72	558
306	Secretary Board of Revenue v. Ripon Press and Sugar Mills Co. Ltd. ..	77	621
309	Muthu Pillai v. Secretary of State for India ..	72	436
312	Runganayaki Ammal v. Virupakshi Rao Naidu ..	72	455
315	Marimuthu Naidu v. King-Emperor ..	73	235
316	Deekshathulu v. Chenga Reddi ..	72	900
317	Mahalakshmi v. Venkam Setti ..	Not reportable.
318	In re Ramudu Aiyar ..	72	538
321	Dasaratha Row v. Subba Row Pantulu ..	72	838
323	Ammani Ammal v. Periasami Udayan ..	74	58
330	Janu Sait v. Ramasami Naidu	72	735
340	In re Ramaswami Mudaliar ..	69	272
341	Sri Ramachandra Venkatahnarayana v. Narasimha Rao	72	865
344	Rasa Goundan v. Arunachala Goundan ..	72	978
345	Maddu Venkayya v. Maddi Paidama ..	73	944
347	Ramanna v. Gurunatham ..	72	881
349	Parthasarathy Reddy v. Kandasami Reddi ..	73	954
352	In re Gopal Naidu ..	73	343
364	Ramachandradu v. Venkatanarasimha Row ..	73	670
365	Koudiah v. Emperor ..	72	616
366	Kunhalikutty Haji v. Kunhamayan ..	72	833
369	Alagu Pillai v. Veluchami ..	74	609
371	Nagathal v. Arumugam Pillai	69	40
372	Pothu Nassiar v. Raru Nair...	72	727
377	Chokkalingham Chetiar v. Palani Ambalam ...	73	926
378	President District Board South Kanara v. Gopalakrishna Bhatta ...	74	223
380	Subbiah and Co. v. Telly and Whitley ..	75	673
382	Marakkarutti v. Veeran Kutty	73	1050
385	In re Varisai Rowther ...	73	163
399	Ramasami Pattar v. Lakshmi Narassiar ...	72	627
401	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Venkatachalam ...	72	836
403	Kondath Sankarn Nair v. Atchuthan ...	73	793

33 MADRAS LAW TIMES, FROM JULY TO OCTOBER, 1923.

Privy Council.

209	Harold Eaton McMillan v. The Canadian Northern Railway Company ...	Not reported.
212	Chia Khwee Eng v. Chia Po Choon ...	Not reported.
214	Foolkooverbai v. Rai Sahib Keshrisingh Rajmal ...	73	242
216	Thakurain Harnath Kuar v. Thakur Indar Bahadur Singh	71	629
219	Amelia McColl v. The Kanadian Pacific Railway Co. ...	Not reported.
225	Ward & Co. v. The Commissioner of Taxes ...	Not reported.
228	The Engineer Mining Company v. James Allen Fraser	Not reported.
232	Mirza Abid Hussain Khan v. Ahmad Hassain ...	75	502
233	Raja Indrajit Pratab Bahadur Sahai v. Amar Singh ..	74	747
241	Nur Muhammed Peerbhoy v. Harmosji Mottiwalla ...	71	625
246	Grand Trunk Railway Co. of Canada v. King ...	Not reported.
257	City of Montreal v. Attorney General of Canada ...	Not reported.

Privy Council—contd.

262	Bommadevara Naganna v. Ravi Venkatappayya ...	76	594
267	Alcock Ashdown and Company v. The Chief Revenue Authority ...	75	392
275	Baliram Singh v. Seth Narsingdas ..	75	546
277	Sudhamani Das v Surat Lal Das ..	73	530
279	Gopi Lal v. Lakhpat Rai ...	Not reportable.
283	Jatti v. Banwari Lal ...	74	462
285	Subbaiya Pandaram v. Mohamad Mustapha Maracayar ...	74	492
289	Bishwa Nath Singh v. Jugal Kishore ...	73	244
291	Midnapore Zamindari Co. v. Uma Charan Mandal ...	74	482
294	Sourindra Nath Mittra v. Heramba Nath Bundopadhaya ...	To be printed.
301	Tata Iron and Steel Co. v. The Chief Revenue Authority ...	74	469
309	Naba Kumar Das v. Rudra Narayan Jana ...	77	141
314	Surapati Roy v. Ram Narayan Mukerji ...	73	193
317	Balgobind v. Badri Prasad ...	74	419
321	Mohamed Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Mohan Singh ...	74	476

33 MADRAS LAW TIMES, FROM JULY TO OCTOBER 1923—contd.

	Privy Council—concld.
325	Satish Chandra Chatterji v Kumar Satish Kantha Roy	73	391
312	Keshavlal Brothers and Co. v. Diwanchand and Co. ...	74	396
349	Seth Kanhaya Lal v. The National Bank of India Ltd., Delhi ...	75	7
355	Lal Ram Singh v. The Deputy Commissioner, Partabgar ..	76	922
361	Ma Than Than v. Ma Pwa Than ...	77	63
365	Ananda Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick ...	74	499
370	Mirza Mahomed v. The Official Assignee ...	77	755
372	Phirozshaw Bomanjee Petit v. Bai Goolbai ...	76	929
376	Jamnabai v. Fazalbhay Heptoola ...	77	355
378	The Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Shri Bala Maharaj ...	77	100
389	Madhavrao v. Raghunath ...	74	362
395	Imperial Bank of India v. Rai Gyaw Thu and Co., Ltd. ...	76	910
401	Putlibai v Sorabji Naroji ...	76	996
408	Raja Srinath Rai v. Maharaja Pratap Udai Nath Sahai Deo ...	To be printed.
419	Champsey Bhara Co. v. Jivraj Balloo Co. Ltd. ...	73	436
424	Seth Kevaldas Tribhovandas v. Sakerlal Bulakhidas ...	79	152
430	Heng Moh & Co. v. Lim Saw Yean ...	75	287
432	Kumar Prasanna Deb Raikat v. Uddhab Chandra Shaha ...	75	556
433	Arthuh Harbert Hallen v. Frederick Benjamin Speath	Not reported.
437	Isubu Lebbe Marikar Hadjiar v. Idross Lebbe Marikar Hadjiar Abdul Hamid ...	Not reported.
438	The United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company v. The King ...	Not reported.
443	The United States of America v. Motor Trucks, Ltd. ...	Not reported.
457	Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai ...	77	689
462	Bhimabai v. Municipal Corportation Bombay ...	To be printed

	Madras High Court.
1	Aissamma v. Moidin Kunhi Beari ...	77	264
3	Ayyanah Chetty v. P. K. Subramania Ayyar ...	76	756
5	Naduvil Edom Karnavan Kelu Achan v. Cheriya Parvathi Nethiar ...	73	87
17	Etakandam v. Kunhakkar ...	76	187
18	Balaguru Naidu v. Muthurathnam Aiyar ...	76	767
19	Janoo Hassan v. Batchu Kamandu ...	76	752
21	Rajagopala Naidu v. Ramasubramania Aiyar ...	74	198
25	Doraiswami v. Chidambaram Pillai ...	75	46
34	Varada Reddi v. Srinivasa Mudaliar ...	72	683
37	Kanniappa Mudaliar v. Chinnaswami Chettiar ...	73	540
40	Taluk Board, Dindigul v. Venkataramma Ayyar ...	75	38
44	Pakkiri Kanni v. Haji Mohammad Manjoor Saheb ..	75	334
45	Neelakandan Nambudri v. Vasudevan Nambudri ...	73	1041
46	Karri Bapanna v. Sunkari Yerramma ...	74	218
48	Thareesamma v. The Deputy Collector, Cochin ...	77	347
53	The Vizagapatam Sugar Development Co. Ltd., v. T. Muthurama Reddi ...	76	886
57	Subraya Sampigethaya v. Krishna Baipadithaya ...	73	584
64	Kandaswamy Chettiar v. Maruda Pillai ...	76	761
66	E. E. Mack v. The M. and S. M. Railway Co., Ltd. ...	75	230
71	Subramanian Chetty v. Lakshmanan Chetty ...	76	670
72	T. R. Tawker and Sons v Harsook Doss Choughmull...	76	124
73	Rangaswamy Ayyangar v. Veeraraghavachary ...	73	1003
77	Basireddi Narappa v. King-Emperor ...	76	641
80	Konthalathammal v. Thangaswami Pillai and Soundarathachi ...	74	896
92	Burla Appanna v. Anala Latchayya ...	79	372
98	In the matter of a 2nd Grade Pleader, Ramachandrapur ...	75	977
100	In the matter of a 1st Grade Pleader, Guntur ...	To be printed.
101	Ambi v. Puthiah Kavilakath ...	75	566
103	Anglo Persian Oil Co., Ltd. v. P. S. Panchapakesa Aiyar ...	76	1011
106	R. Gopalakrishna Pillai v. M. Kunjitapadam ...	79	651

33 MADRAS LAW TIMES, FROM JULY TO OCTOBER, 1923—concld.

	Madras High Court—contd.
110	In the matter of an Advocate of the High Court ...	76	873
119	Secretary, Board of Revenue v. Arunachalam Chettiar ...	77	216
122	Secretary, Board of Revenue v. Muniswami Chetty and Sons ...	77	39
125	Vemuri Pitchayya v. Srimath Rajah Yarlagadda Ankineedu ...	76	750
126	Sellappa Goundan v. Masa Naicken ...	76	1018
130	Ponnuswamy Ayyar v. Ganapathy Ayyar ...	To be printed.
137	Paramasiva Thevar v. Pulukaruppa Thevar ...	77	631
146	Nadepena Appamma v. Saripalli Chinnaveadu ...	79	510
152	Hajee Shakoor Gani v. Sabapathy Pillai ...	77	70
156	Basireddi Narappa v. King-Emperor ...	76	642
159	Bachala Peda Somadu v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
166	The Public Prosecutor v. Pachiappa Mudali ...	75	760
168	Mrs. S. K. Burke v. T. C. W. Skipp ...	To be printed.
175	Najavath Ali v. Mujafar Ali ...	77	568
181	Narayanaswami Chetti v. Vellaya Pillai ...	To be printed.
182	In re Samachari ...	To be printed.
184	Avadayappa Mudaliar v. King Emperor ..	74	856
185	In re A. E. Smith ...	To be printed.
188	Karuthan Chettiar v. Raman Chetti ..	79	340
189	V. Govindan Nair v. Kuttasseri Kunhi Krishnan Nair ...	To be printed.

	Madras High Court—concld.
191	Vedala Venkata Subbamma v. Venkamma ...	77	214
194	G. G. Jeremiah v. W. H. Johnson ...	76	695
196	Pannai Ananthanarayana Ayyar v. Pannai Ramasubba Ayyar ...	79	395
204	Kamalammal v. N. Chokalingam Asari ...	76	840
205	Kuppu Ramanadha Ayyar v. Thoguluva S. Nagendra Ayyar	76	805
207	R. C. Krishnaswami Naidu v. R. Chengalroya Naidu ...	76	836
210	Thaikkottathil Kunhun v. King Emperor ...	76	644
213	Doraiswami Udayan v. King-Emperor ...	75	987
215	Akula Sudarsana Rao v. J. A Christian Pillai ...	76	813
217	Aburubammal v. The Official Assignee of Madras ...	To be printed.
221	Lakshmana Ayyangar v. Narayana Ayyangar ...	76	786
223	Sukhevadoss Ramprasad v. Govindoss Chathurbujadoss	76	893
224	Manikonda Lingayya v. King-Emepror ...	75	985
225	Shunmugappa v. Sangarya Chetty ...	74	120
227	Narayana Sa v. Balaguruswami Nadar ..	75	838
230	The Official Receiver of South Arcot v. Perumal Pillai ...	79	322
231	Pakkiam Solomon v. Chelliah Pillai ...	75	17
234	Ramachandra Rao v. King-Emperor ...	75	691
235	The Official Assignee of Madras v. Subramania Ayyar ...	77	740
243	Sri Rajah Lakshmikantaraju Garu v. Sri Rajah Jagannatharaju Garu ...	77	464

18 LAW WEEKLY FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923.

681	Surapati Roy v. Ram Narayan Mukerji ..	73	193
685	Premchand Indoji v. Soleti Gopalappa ..	75	876
686	Ambi alias Subramaniam Pattar v. Puthia Kovilakath Viathan Sridevi styled Valia Thamburatti...	75	566
689	In the matter of a 2nd Grade Pleader, Ramachandrapur	75	977
692	Ramaswamy Reddiar v. Peria Veera Kudumban ..	76	154
694	The Public Prosecutor v. Pachiappa Mudali ..	75	760
696	E. N. A. Samu Pattar v. Official Assignee of the Property of "V. M. Appachi Chetty & Sons," ..	73	532
705	In re Bachala Peda Somadu..	To be printed.
715	In re C. Kunhammad ..	To be printed.
717	In the matter of a 1st Grade Pleader, Guntur ..	To be printed.
718	Mrs. K. Burke v. T. C W. Skipp ..	To be printed.

18 LAW WEEKLY, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923—conc'd.

728	Raja Indrajit Pratap Bahadur Sahi v. Amar Singh ..	74	747
739	Vemuri Pitchayya v. Srimanth Raja Yarlagadda Ankineedu Bahadur Zemindar Garu ..	78	750
741	In re Mahankali Sreeramulu	To be printed.
743	In re Samachari ..	To be printed.
747	Maharajah of Jeypore v. Raja Lakshminarasimha Garu ..	76	269
752	Anglo Persian Oil Co., Ltd., v. Panchapakesa Aiyar ..	76	1011
757	V. C. T. N. Chidambaram Chetti v. Kandasami Goundan ..	74	155
767	Ram Bujhawan Prosad Singh v. Nathu Ram ..	71	933
775	The Secretary, Board of Revenue, Land Revenue and Settlement (Income-Tax) v. R. M. A. R. R. M. Aruhachalam Chettiar ..	77	216
780	Paramasiva Thevar v. Pulukaruppa Thevar ..	77	631
792	The Secretary, Board of Revenue v. Messrs. B. Muniswami Chetty & Sons ..	77	39
796	Hajee Shakoor Gani v. Sabapathy Pillai ..	77	70
802	Jai Betham v. Kedar Nath Marwari ..	69	278
808	Karuthian Chettiar v. Raman Chetty ..	To be printed.
809	Ponnuswamy Aiyar v. Ganapathy Aiyar ..	To be printed.
818	In re Arumuga Goundan ..	To be printed.
823	In the matter of An Advocate	76	873
836	S. Rangiah Chettiar v. Annasamy Alwar Aiyangar ..	79	408
837	Karuthan Chettiar v. R. M. M. Raman Chetti ..	79	340
838	Sellappa Goundan v. Masa Naicken ..	76	1018
844	R. Gopalakrishna Pillai v. M. Kunjithapatham Pillai ..	79	651
849	Burla Appanna v. Anila Latchayya ..	79	372
857	Pannai Ananthanarayana Aiyar v. Pannai Ramasubba Aiyar ..	79	305
868	Kuppu Ramanadha Iyer v. Nagendra Ayyar ..	76	605
870	Krishnaswami Naidu v. R. Chenchalroya Naidu ..	76	836
874	Lakshmi Ammal alias Pichai Ammal v. Alamelu Ammal	79	325
876	Lakshmana Iyengar v. Narayana Iyengar ..	76	786
879	In re A. E. Smith ..	To be printed.
883	Venkatalakshmi Ammal v. Sadasiva Aiyar ..	76	761
884	Official Receiver of South Arcot v. Perumal Pillai ..	79	322
886	In re Mulimayandi Thevan ..	76	829
887	Khaji Mir Najavath Ali v. Khaji Mir Mujafar Ali ..	77	568
895	G. G. Jeremiah v. W. H. Johnson ..	76	695
899	In re Ayarvali Pokker ..	74	952
903	A. S. V. Subbaiya Pandaram v. Mohamad Mustafa Maracayar ..	74	492
907	Shunmugappa v. Sangarya Chetty alias Sangappa Chetty ..	74	120
911	Sukhevadoss Ramprasad v. Govindoss Chathurbujadoss & Co. ..	76	893
913	Sri Raja Bommadevara Naganna Naidu Bahadur Zemindar Garu v. Ravi Venkatappa ..	76	564
918	Alcock, Eshdown & Company, Limited v. Chief Revenue Authority of Bombay ..	75	591
928	A. D. Narayana Sa v. Balagnruswami Nadar ..	75	838
933	Jayamurai v. Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Company, Ltd. ..	76	992
940	Phirozsh w Bomanjee Petit v. Bai Goolbai ..	76	929
946	In re Thaikkottahil Kunheen	76	644
949	V. Govindan Nair v. Kuttasseri Kunhi Krishnan Nair	To be printed.
953	Vizagapatam Sugar Development Company, Limited, v. T. Muthuramareddi ..	76	894
960	In re Manikonda Lingayya ..	75	585

(1923) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM OCTOBER TO DECEMBER

711	Ma Than Than v. Ma Pwa Thit ..	77	63
714	Baliram Singh v. Seth Narsindas ..	75	546
716	Mirza Mahomed v. Official Assignee ..	77	755
718	Kumar Prasanna Deb Raikat v. Uddhab Chandra Shaha	75	556
719	Veraprasada Rao v. Venkata Bhashyasarlu Rao ..	75	604
720	Sobhanadri Alparao v. Emperor ..	74	944
720	Palaguru Naidu v. Muthurathnam Iyer ..	76	767
721	Venkatasubramania Aiyar v. Syed Usuff ..	74	1006

(1923) MADRAS WEELY NOTES, FROM OCTOBER TO DECEMBER—concld.

726	Sundara Ramanujam Naidu v. Sivalingam Pillai ..	77	542
731	Narayana Aiyar v. South Indian Railway Co., Ltd...	75	260
732	Varahaliah v. Venkata Suryanarayana ..	75	465
734	Sourindra Nath v. Hramba Nath ..	To be printed.
739	Janoo Hassan v. Patchu Kamandu ..	73	752
741	Etakandan Konhokker v. Emperor ..	76	187
743	Surjimul v. Ananta Lal ..	74	1029
745	Samudi Goundan v. Buddu Goundan ..	76	647
746	Karuthian Chettiar v. Raman Chetti ..	Not reportable.
747	Venkatachalam Pillai v. Srinivasa Iyer ..	75	115
750	Kannisa v. Devichund ..	75	390
753	Ambi v. Valia Thamburatti ..	75	566
754	Premchand Indji v. Gopalappa ..	75	876
755	Apparao v. Bajiraju ..	76	61
756	Kamaraju v. Gunnayya ..	74	1003
758	Ayarvali Pokker v. Emperor	74	952
761	Murari Rao v. Balavanth Dikshit ..	76	242
762	Subramanian v. Lutchman ..	71	650
766	Parvathi Ammal v. Govinda Raja ..	76	896
767	Ramchandra Rao v. Emperor	75	691
768	In re Second Grade Pleader, Ramachandrapur..	75	977
770	Nagier v. Krishnan Chettiar	75	830
772	Shaw Wallace & Co., v. Panchapakesa Iyer ..	76	1011
775	Sellappa Gounden v. Masa Naicken ..	76	1018
779	Muhammad Shamsgoya Rowther v. Omandu Pillai	76	76
780	Venkataratnam v. Official Receiver, Godavari ..	76	1006
781	Ramaswami Reddiar v. Peria Veerakudu ..	76	154
782	Duraiswami Udayan v. Emperor ..	75	987
786	Ramaswamy Aiyar v. Venkataramа Aiyar ..	75	406
789	Rangaswamy Iyengar v. Veeraraghavachary ..	76	1003
793	Bibi Akhtari Begam v. Diljan Ali ..	71	621
796	Marimuthu v. Emperor ..	73	961
799	Balgobind v. Badri Prasad ..	74	449
802	Visvanatha Asari v. Sami Asari ..	73	972
803	Ananda Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick ..	74	499
807	Koppassa Menon v. Kalliani Amma ..	75	476
811	Gopalakrishna Pillai v. Kunjithapatham Pillai ..	79	651
814	Mahankali Sreeramulu v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
815	Govindan Nair v. Krishnan Nair ..	To be printed.
817	Doraiswami v. Chidambaram Pillai ..	75	46
825	Appamma v. Chinnavadu ..	79	510
831	Narayanasamy Chetty v. Vellaya Pillai ..	To be printed.
832	Midnapur Zamindary Co, Ltd. v. Uma Charan Mandal ..	74	482
834	Tawker & Sons v. Harcokdass ..	76	124
835	Kandaswamy Chettiar v. Maruda Pillai ..	76	761
837	Gopobondhu Behara v. Venkatesam Pantulu ..	76	1030
838	Karuthan Chettiar v. Raman Chetti ..	79	340
839	Lakshmi Ammal v. Alamelu Ammal ..	79	325
840	Rangiah Chettiar v. Annasamy Alwar Ayyangar ..	79	408
841	Ramaswamy Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty ..	76	798
846	Atychides v. Secretary of State for India ..	To be printed.
849	Muhammad Kunhi v. Packrichi Umma ..	72	671
860	Thachreth Hydross v. Emperor ..	75	695
867	Kuppusamy Chetty v. Singaravelu Chetty ..	75	848
871	Parthasarathi Chetti v. Abdul Rahiman Sahib ..	75	489
872	Singam Aiyangar v. Anganna Naidu ..	72	703
873	Chhotey Lal v. Collector of Moradabad ..	69	14
876	Arunachalam Chetty v. Emperor ..	74	949
878	Jayammal v. M. & S. M. Ry. Co., Ltd. ..	76	992
882	Muhammad Ghouse Sahib v. Shaik Mohideen Sahib ..	73	985
883	In re Court Fees ..	76	721
893	Dharam Singh v. Emperor ..	74	959
894	Narayana Rao v. Mehta and Sons ..	75	901
895	Siva Subramania Pillai v. Theethiappa Pillai ..	75	572
902	Kanthalathammal v. Soundarathachi ..	74	896
913	Mrs. Burke v Skipp ..	To be printed.
919	Ponnusammi Aiyar v. Ganapathy Aiyar ..	To be printed.
925	Abboy Naidu v. Ramachandra Naidu ..	76	905

6 NAGPUR LAW JOURNAL, FROM SEPTEMBER TO DECEMBER 1923.

185	Arjun v. Chhaganlal ..	72	1044	231	Lachmansingh v. T. Balwant-singh ..	To be printed.
189	Malhar Rao v. Martand Rao	To be printed.		234	Sarjerao v. Harakchand ..	Not seperable.
202	Ramrao v. Emperor ..	75	158
205	Lakshman v. Keshco ..	73	1021	237	Laxmichand v. Narayan ..	To be printed.
209	Ayub Kareem v. Jaffar ..	74	45
213	Onkarsa v. Bridi Chand ..	73	1037	239	Ganpatrao v. Laxmichand ..	77	640
217	Mitsui Bhusan Co. v. Padam-raj ..	72	461	269	Gania v. Gangaprasad ..	77	738
224	Gopala v. Sakharam ..	73	15	274	H. Baines v. Emperor ..	67	316
227	Hindusingh v. Mangal ..	72	438	279	Kesho Rao v. Govind Rao ..	68	340
				281	Jairarayan v. Vithoba ..	71	555

26 OUDH CASES, FROM SEPTEMBER TO DECEMBER, 1923.

257	Lal Ram Singh v. Deputy Commissioner of Partabgarh	76	922	333	Pandit Ajodhia Nath v. City Magistrate of Lucknow ..	To be printed.
266	Rup Kishore v. Kanhaiya Lal	74	563
282	Ram Nidh v. Ram Saran ..	To be printed.		336	Surja v. Bijai Bahadur Singh	73	13
				341	Ram Sarup Singh v. Jageshur Singh ..	73	466
284	King-Emperor v. Mahommed Bakhsh ..	To be printed.		345	Nilkanth v. Mahabir Singh ..	74	558
				350	Nand Kishore v. Kishori Lal	74	299
286	Sheo Charan Das v. Brij Bahadur Singh ..	To be printed.		352	Kandhai v. Husaini Bibi ..	77	768
				355	Ram Dayal v. Nimar Singh ..	To be printed.
288	Girwar Sahai v Mangal ..	73	241	358	Ahmad Husain v. Rahiman	To be printed.
289	Kalloo Singh v. Bakhtawar Singh ..	74	360	361	Dwarka v. Idu ..	74	813
295	Bikram Singh v. Suraj Bakhsh Singh ..	77	618	363	Parbhu Dayal v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
297	Munwan Shankar Bakhsh Singh v. Ram Bahadur Singh ..	70	311	368	Durga v. Jamna Prasad ..	77	109
299	Ganga Bakhsh Singh v. Raghubar Singh ..	73	27	374	Raja Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. Munnu Lal ..	76	763
306	Hayat Mohammad v. Nageshwari Prasad ..	72	390	378	Bhola Nath v. Rasool Bakhsh	77	78
308	Jai Gobind Singh v. Abhairaj Singh ..	77	125	381.	Special Manager, Court of Wards, Bhogaitapur Estate v. Gulzari Lal ..	To be printed
317	Beni Madho v. Yusuf Husain Khan ..	72	1031	383	Thakurain Abhayraj Kunwar v. Data Din ..	To be printed.
319	Husaini Bibi v Mohammad Zahir Abdi ..	74	802	384	Lal Bahadur v. Paspat Prasad	74	301
321	Pran alias Ratan v. Sheo Lal	76	1055	386	Manna Lal v. Jai Indar Bahadur Singh ..	73	774
324	Samuel Burge v. Improvement Trust, Lucknow ...	73	127	393	Bibi Batul Khanam v. Saltanat Bahadur Khan ..	To be printed
327	Ghasi Ram v. Uma Dutt ..	79	576
329	Mohesha v. Rameshwar ..	74	295

*10 OUDH LAW JOURNAL, FROM JUNE TO DECEMBER, 1923.

226	Murli Dhar v. Mulchand ..	73	39	263	J. C. Galstaun v. Mirza Abid Husain ..	73	428
229	Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. Munnu Lal ..	76	763	280	Mahadeo v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
232	Beni Madho v. Yusuf Husain Khan ..	72	1031	288	Mirza Abid Husain Khan v. Ahmad Husain ..	75	502
235	Babu Ram Raj Singh v. Avadh Bihari Lal ..	To be printed.		289	Mohammad Karim Khan v. Mirza Sadiq Husain ..	71	339
240	Mahabir Prasad v. Surajpal Singh ..	To be printed.		295	Gulab Rai v. Khudaiya Bibi ..	79	214
245	Ram Nath v. Ram Harakh ..	75	770	299	King-Emperor v. Rameshar Tewari ..	74	539
252	Mahadeo Baksh Singh v. Suraj Bakhsh Singh ..	To be printed.		303	Sheonandan Lal v. Sheo Balak	71	974
				305	Dubey v. Ram Sahai ..	79	654

* Decisions of the Board of Revenue, U. P., not printed in Indian Cases—Ed.

10 OUDH LAW JOURNAL, FROM JUNE TO DECEMBER 1923—concld.

315	Bishunath Saran Singh v. Sitla Bakhsh Singh ..	To be printed.		442	Bishambhar Nath v. Rukkha	To be printed.
335	Siya Ram v. Sa'ik ..	77	352	443	Mohammad Yasin Ali Khan v. Ali Bahadur ..	79	685
337	Mathura Singh v. Sheo Mohan Prasad ..	74	792	447	Balbhaddar Prasad v. Dhanpat Dayal ..	To be printed.
339	Sheikh Mohammad Ahsan Ali v Masud Ali ..	77	358	468	Badri Sah v. Balbhaddar Singh	79	697
347	Din Dayal v. King-Emperor	To be printed.		481	Jai Indar Bahadur Singh v. Sheo Indar Bahadur Singh	73	393
348	Ghasi Ram v. Uman Datt..	79	576	491	Sharfuzzaman v. Henry Stanyon ..	To be printed.
349	Debi Prasad v. Lekhraj ..	76	1050
351	Harihar Paasad v. Shankar Dayal ..	77	337	513	Ram Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Partabgarh ..	76	922
353	Jang Bahadur Singh v. Ranjit Singh ..	77	353	524	Rudra Partap Singh v. Hausla Prasad ..	To be printed.
357	Ram Naresh Singh v. Dalpat Singh ..	77	120
360	Dwarka Prasad v. Ram Dei ..	77	329	525	Awadh Ram Singh v. Mahbub Khan ..	To be printed.
368	Balgobind v. Badri Prasad ..	74	449
374	Mohkam Singh v. Chandra Pal Singh ..	77	346	535	Zarifunnisa v. Shafiquzzaman	75	626
				593	Ganesh Shankar v. Emperor ..	73	321
376	Udairaj Singh v. Ram Udit Tewari ..	77	340	595	Rachhpali v. Chandresar Dei	78	256
379	Bishwa Nath Singh v. Jugal Kishore ..	73	244	606	Chandan Singh v. Sheo Narain Singh ..	To be printed.
383	Mohammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Mohan Singh ..	74	476	611	Kandhai v. Husaini Bibi ..	77	768
				614	Brij Bhukhan v. Ram Kirat..	78	566
390	Raza Husain Khan v. Ganesh Prasad ..	77	383	619	Sarabjit Bharthi v. Gauri Nath Kakaji ..	To be printed.
393	Jangi Singh v. Ganga Singh..	77	391
399	Ram Narayan v. Ram Sukh..	77	79
404	Oudh Behari Lal v. Dal Singh	79	666	643	Bhim Shankar Datt v. Mani Ram ..	To be printed.
409	Amjad Husain v. Ummatul Askari ..	79	644
412	Dhauntal Khan v. Ram Lal..	75	227	646	Indarpal Singh v. Thakur Din Singh ..	78	895
420	Batul Khanan v. Saltanat Bahadur Khan ..	To be printed.		657	Indar Kuar v. Nand Rani Kuar ..	To be printed.
424	Mohan Singh v. Sewa Ram ..	75	579

2 I. L. R., PATNA SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923.

749	C. J. Smith v. A. Kinney, Official Trustee of Bengal..	To be printed.		793	Abdul Hamid v. Emperor ..	75	72
				796	Sia Shachari Peari v. Ram Kishori Kuer ..	74	867
754	Tata Iron & Steel Co., Ltd. v. Baidyanath Laik ..	78	55	800	Bibi Zainub v. Paras Nath ..	75	430
759	Jago Mahton v. Khirodhar Ram ..	74	130	805	Basdeo Prasad v. Dwarika Pandey ..	To be printed.
765	Raghu Singh v. Mahant Krishna Deyal Gir ..	To be printed.		809	Bhagwat Prashad Singh v. Dwarka Prashad Singh ..	74	174
768	Jagannath Sao v. Debi Prasad Dhandhania ..	73	598	814	Chand Ray v. Bhagwati Charan Goswami ..	To be printed.
771	Ram Lal Malikand v. Deodhari Rai ..	74	781	819	Kaniz Zohra v. Saiyid Muztaba Husain ..	77	209
777	Raghunath Sukul v. Ram Rup Raut ..	76	2	829	Radha Kishun Lal v. Kashi Lal ..	76	927
784	Rambhanjan Singh v. Pashupat Rai ..	74	847	833	Ramrut Goshain v. Mahabir Shah ..	74	825
787	Chaurasi Mahasarick v. Bhagan Sahu ..	74	144	839	Ramnandan Sahay v. Jaigovind Pandey ..	75	955

2 I. L. R. PATNA SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER DECEMBER, 1923—concld.

874	Nawaba Waziri Begum v. Shashi Bhushan Rai ..	74	820
879	Srimati Savitri Thakurain v. The Secretary of State for India in Council ..	77	611
890	Ranglal Sahu v. Kali Shanker Sahai ..	77	73
898	Ram Uraon v Doman Kalal	75	209
905	Nand Rani Kuer v. Durga Das Narain ..	To be printed.
909	K. B. Dutt v. Taraprasanna Roy Chaudhury ..	74	753
913	Sheogobind Ram Sahu v. Mahipat Dusadh ..	79	420
916	Mahadeo Singh v. Dhobi Singh ..	74	838
919	Sheopujan Rai v. Maharaja Bahadur Kesho Prasad Singh ..	76	347
925	Shyam Sunder Rai v. Jagarnath Misra ..	74	758

*1 PATNA LAW REPORTER, FROM JUNE TO DECEMBER 1923.

Criminal.

130	Basawan Pandey v. Tilak Gope	72	345
135	Gajadhar Mull Marwari v. Thakur Singh ..	To be printed.
137	Chote Lal Modi v. King-Emperor ..	74	710
142	Laimani Mania v. King Emperor ..	72	161
151	Bhangi Dubey v. King-Emperor ..	72	360
152	Lakhpat Gope v. King-Emperor ..	72	544
154	Rangi Sah v. The B. N. W. Railway, Co. ..	74	1047
158	Ramdheyan Ram v. Ram Dularia ..	65	576
159	Mohammad Ishaq v. King-Emperor ..	65	552
161	Wayezul Huq v. Shobrati Jolaha ..	74	258
164	Jiblal Teli v. Gena Sahu ..	72	956
166	Kedar Nath Chaubey v. Jaleswar Ram Tewari ..	72	883
171	Madodar Ram v. King-Emperor ..	65	573
174	Kabir Shah v. King-Emperor	Not reportable.
177	Jagarnath Chauley v. King-Emperor ..	To be printed.
178	Gansa Aranon v. King-Emperor	73	561
182	Dasrath Singh v. Emperor ..	67	502
195	Abdul Hamid v. Hasan Reza	72	951
199	King-Emperor v. Abdul Hamid ..	68	945
223	Akal Mahton v. Mahabir Mahton ..	75	531
229	Lachmi Narayan Marwari v. King-Emperor ..	77	177
236	Ramjit Ahir v. King Emperor	74	705
242	Tanak Chaudhury v. King-Emperor ..	73	158
248	Emperor v. Bhola Bhagat ..	72	375
255	Sukhai Mania v. Ram Khelawan Thakur ..	72	69
256	Jailal Jha v. King-Emperor..	To be printed.

Civil.

267	Rajendra Lal Bhattachaji v. Menoka Debi ..	To be printed.
269	Dhoby Roy v. Mahadeo Singh	73	451
270	Chotu Mian v. Palo Gope ..	To be printed.
273	Ram Gopal Lal v. Aipna Kunwar ..	69	31
281	Syed Shah Muhammad Maudood v. Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh Bahadur	74	693
285	Gokaran Prasad Singh v. Malik Waris Ali ..	71	957
283	Ram Sundar v. Amrit Pajiyar	72	135
289	Nathuni Rai v. Sir Rameshwar Singh Bahadur	73	629
311	Jugal Kishore Narayan Singh v. Bhatu Modi ..	To be printed.
314	Ramniranjan Chaudhury v. Gobardhan Thakur ..	To be printed.
316	Munshi Gobind Prasad v. Lala Jagdeep Sahai ..	77	252
318	Raja Ganesh Narayan Sahi v. Manik Lal Chandra ..	76	194
322	Chattrapat Pratap Bahadur Sahi v. C. G. Lees ..	72	648
328	Man Mohan Saw v. Muhammad Hasain Khan ..	72	152
332	Jagarayan Dubey v. Bidapat Dubey ..	72	409
335	East Indian Railway Company v. Nadia Coal Company ..	77	250
338	Basanta Kumari Dasi v Balmakund Marwari ..	72	912
345	Raja Indarjit Bahadur Sahi v. Amar Singh ..	74	747
355	Panchu Bania v. Anand Thakur ..	77	37
358	Radha Kishen Lal v. Kashi Lal ..	73	927
361	Bibi Zainub v. Paras Nath ..	75	430
366	Ramnandan Parbat v. Deni Sahi ..	74	877
370	Kapleshwar Jha v. Raghunandan Parsad ..	74	474
373	Shyam Sundar Rai v. Jagarnath Misra ..	74	758

* Decisions of the Board of Revenue, Bihar & Orissa, not printed in Indian Cases—Ed.

1 PATNA LAW REPORTER, FROM JUNE TO DECEMBER, 1923—concld.

	Civil—contd.
377	Linton Molesworth & Co. v. Jagannath Supakar ..	77	403
386	Kudip Sahay v. Rajkumar Singh ..	75	1046
390	Palte v. Nirdhan Gope ..	74	815
393	Karshan Baaban Chatalia v. Indra Narain Chandra ..	79	188
398	Firm of Ramdyal v. Firm of Bhairo Bux ..	79	183
402	Shevraji Kuer v. Dhani Mian ..	75	794
434	Keshavlal Brothers & Co. v. Diwan Chand & Co. ..	74	396
445	Ram Bhujhawan Prosad v. Nathu Ram ..	71	933
453	Bhagwat Prashad Singh v. Dwarka Prasad Singh ..	74	174
458	Mahipat Narain Singh v. Kirit Singh ..	To be printed.
459	Mahomed Moinuddin Ashraf v. Mohammad Ishaq Ashraf	75	265
462	Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Kumar Ganganand Singh	75	381
467	Dipa Mahton v. Lala Sheonandan Prasad ..	To be printed.

24 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923.

769	Gulzar Jan v. Emperor ..	74	433
770	Emperor v. Narotam ..	74	434
779	Maharaj Prasad v. Emperor	74	443
780	Mahbub Ali Khan v. Emperor ..	74	444
781	Feroza Jan v. Amir Ali ..	74	445
783	Mahalakshmi v. Subbarayadu ..	74	447
784	Dukhi v. Emperor ..	74	448
785	Tara v. Emperor ..	74	529
789	Jageshar v. Emperor ..	74	533
790	Bishen Singh v. Emperor ..	74	534
791	Raghudatt v. Emperor ..	74	535
792	Cheta Mahto v. Emperor ..	74	536
795	Emperor v. Rameshwar Tewari ..	74	539
798	Krishna Chandra Bhowmik v. Emperor ..	74	542
799	Sant Ram v. Emperor ..	74	543
800	Dalsher v. Emperor ..	74	544
801	Ramjit Ahir v. Emperor ..	74	705
804	Naini Mal v. Emperor ..	74	708
806	Chote Lal Modi v Emperor	74	710
808	Mahadeo v. Emperor ..	74	712
809	Jharu Lal v. Madan Das ..	74	713
811	Mohammad Yunis Khan v. Gulab ..	74	715
811	Mata Palat v. Emperor ..	74	715
812	Jamaluddin v. Emperor ..	74	716
813	Ritlal Singh v. Emperor ..	74	717
814	Bulda Pasi v. Nasir Ali Khan	74	718
815	Kiran Sarkar v. Emperor ..	74	719
817	Abdul Wahid Khan v. Abdullah Khan ..	74	849
823	Mandar v. Emperor ..	74	855
824	Avadayappa Mudaliar, In re	74	856
825	Wahari Mander v. Emperor ..	74	857
826	Umed v. Emperor ..	74	858
828	Dwarka Singh v. Emperor ..	74	860
829	Maniruddin v. Emperor ..	74	861
830	Deenabandhu Rajaguru v. Viswarasarayi Lachanna Dora ..	74	862
831	Debi Singh v. Emperor ..	74	863
833	Ponnusami Odayar v. Ramasami Thathan ..	74	945
835	Beni v. Emperor ..	74	947
837	Arunachalam Chetty v. Emperor ..	74	949
838	Etan Khan v. Emperor ..	74	950
840	Ayarvali Fo ker, In re ..	74	952
842	U Damadaya v. Emperor ..	74	954
845	Nand Kishore Missir v. Kalika Missir ..	74	957
846	Alaga Pillai v. Emperor ..	74	958
847	Dharma Singh v. Emperor ..	74	959
848	Emperor v Annawdin ..	74	960
849	Makbul Ahmad v. A. J. L. Allen ..	74	1041
850	Nga Waik v. Emperor ..	74	1042
851	Sarat Chandra Ghosh v. Emperor ..	74	1043
852	Parakuzhiyil Ayamad v. Emperor ..	74	1044
854	Shibco v. Emperor ..	74	1046
855	Rangi Sah v. B N. W. Railway, Co. ..	74	1047
857	Ashiq Hussain Khan v. Emperor ..	74	1049
858	Emperor v. Nga Po Chit ..	74	1050
862	Emperor v. Dulla ..	74	1054
862	Bansidhar Marwari v. Emperor ..	74	1054
865	Bansidhar Marwari v. Indar Narain Singh ..	75	65
867	Emperor v. Sher Mahomed ..	75	67
869	Nand Kishore Missar v. Kalika Missir ..	75	69
870	Emperer v. Sher Mahomed ..	75	70
871	Ah Lin v. Emperor ..	75	71
872	Abdul Hamid v. Emperor ..	75	71
874	Abdul Aziz v. Maung Tin ..	75	74
875	Shahbaj Mandal v. Bhajahari Nath ..	75	75
877	Labhu Singh v. Emperor ..	75	77
879	Kudrat Nath v. Emperor ..	75	79
880	Nilkanth v. Suryabhan ..	75	80
881	Government of Assam v. Sahebulla ..	75	129
897	Emperor v. Nrityа Gopal Roy ..	75	145
900	Peary Lal v. Emperor ..	75	148

24 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1923—concld.

902	Dwigendra Narain Bagchi v. Emperor ..	75	150
904	Moti Ram v. Emperor ..	75	152
910	Ramrao Gurao v. Emperor..	75	158
911	Mahadeo Prasad v. Emperor	75	159
913	Sant Ram v. Diwan Chand	75	289
916	Emperor v Jagmohan Das..	75	292
918	Hamid v. Emperor ..	75	291
919	Apalu v. Emperor ..	75	295
920	Bagh v. Emperor ..	75	296
921	Ghulam Yusaf v. Emperor..	75	297
923	Emperor v. Hasrat Mohani..	75	299
928	Maung Tun Yin v. Ma Thein Shin ..	75	304
929	Girdhar Das v. Emperor ..	75	353
929	Maung Shwe Ku v. Emperor	75	353
932	Sewa Singh v. Ranjha ..	75	356
933	Nga San Dun v. Emperor ..	75	357
934	Ma Mi v. Emperor ..	75	358
934	Sita Ram v. Emperor ..	75	358
935	Waryam Singh v. Emperor	75	359
937	Nanhu v. Emperor ..	75	361
938	Prasanna Chandra v. Upendra Nath ..	75	362
939	Rambarai Rai v. Sagina Rai	75	363
940	Samir v. Beni Madhab Goe	75	364
941	Sher Muhammad v. Emperor	75	365
943	Hamid Ali v. Srikissen Gossain ..	75	367
944	Fattu v. Emperor ..	75	368

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER, 1923.

Privy Council.

65	Sudhamani Das v. Surat Lal Das ..	73	530
66	Champsey Co. v. Jivraj Balloo Co. ..	73	436
70	Balgobind v. Badri Prasad ..	74	449
73	Satish Chandra v. Satish Kantha ..	73	391
86	Prasanna Deb v. Udhab Chandra ..	75	556
87	Heng Moh v. Lim Saw Yean	75	287
88	Sarapati Roy v. Ram Narain	73	193
90	Bishwa Nath v. Jugal Kishore	73	244
93	Baliram v. Narsingdas ..	75	546
95	Naba Kumar v. R. Narayan ..	77	141
98	Sourindra v. Heramba Nath	To be printed.
102	Mirza Abid Hussain v. Ahmad Hussain ..	75	502
103	Gopi Lal v. Lakhpat Rai ..	Not reportable.
105	Keshavlal v. Diwan Chand ..	74	396
112	Foolcooverbai v. Keshrisingh	73	242
114	Kanhaya Lall v. National Bank ..	75	7
118	Mahomed Mumtaz Ali v. Mohan Singh ..	74	476
122	Putlibai v. Sorabji Naoroji ..	76	996
128	Raja Indrajit v. Amar Singh	74	747
136	Jatti v. Banwari Lal ..	74	462
138	Alcock A. & Co. v. Chief Revenue Authority ..	75	392
146	Mirza Mahomed v. Official Assignee ..	77	755
148	Tata Iron & Steel Co. v. Chief Revenue Authority ..	74	469
156	Ma Than Than v. Ma Pwa Thit ..	77	63
160	Lal Ram v. Deputy Commissioner Partabgar ..	76	922
167	Bommadavara Naganna v. Ravi Venkatapayya ..	73	594
171	Phirozshaw v. Bai Goolbai ..	76	929
175	Subbaiya v. Mohamad Mustafa	74	492
178	Kevaldas v. Sakerlal ..	79	452
184	Jamnabai v. Fazalbhoy ..	77	355
187	Midnapur Zemindari Co. v. Uma Charan ..	74	482
189	Annada Mohan v. Gour Mohan	74	499
194	Maharaja Kolhapur v. Balamaharaj ..	77	100
205	Madhavrao v. Raghunath ..	74	362
211	Imperial Bank of India v. U. Rai G. T. and Co. ..	76	910
217	Srinath Ray v. Udai Nath ..	To be printed.

Privy Council—concld.

Allahabad High Court

161	Udit Narain Lal v. Ram Lachhman Rao ..	77	933
161	Suraj Mal v. Nathwa ..	76	983
163	Syed Fazal Haq v. Aziz Hasan ..	77	940
164	Mustafai Bibi v. Sheikh Mahomed Shabbir ..	71	273
165	Babu v. Sukkha ..	77	918
167	Lala Lachman Prasad v. Majju ..	77	913
168	Lala Sheo Prasad v. Babu Ram ..	71	350
169	Kali Din v. Madho ..	77	862
170	Lala Bhagwan Das v. Mohabbat Shah ..	77	955
171	Jagannath Prasad v. Chattur Kuer ..	79	308
173	Ram Kishore v. Abdul Karim	77	909
173	Syed Shamsul Hasan v. Syed Hasan ..	71	296
175	Ram Chander v. Emperor ..	73	694
175	Dina Nath v Nek Ram ..	74	75
176	Chhottey Lal v. Chandra Bhan ..	To be printed.
179	Jhunwa v. Municipal Board Dhampur ..	71	291
180	Ram Naram v. Mahomed Akbar ..	79	508

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
181	Har Dayal v. Gur Dayal ..	79	542
182	Kalidin v. Chandrika Prasad	79	503
183	Khunna Mal v. Indarpal Singh ..	71	278
185	Fakirullah Khan v. Baldeo Sahai ..	79	225
186	Badri Singh v. Tulshi Ram ..	79	82
187	Badri Singh v. Gobardhan ..	79	220
189	Behari Lal v. Maqsood Ali ..	71	283
191	Durga Chowdhari v. Jagroop	79	232
192	Durga Prasad v. Emperor ..	76	969
193	Sri Krishna Sonar v. Emperor	71	368
193	Allu v. Emperor ..	74	260
194	Emperor v. Hira ..	71	605
197	Partab Singh v. Bohra Nathu Ram ..	79	231
199	Jugal Kishore v. Ram Narain	To be printed.
202	Basdeo Budhsan v. Niaz Ahmad Khan ..	To be printed
204	Bahadur Singh v. Ram Bahadur ..	71	405
206	Kishan Singh v. Chhajju Singh	79	238
210	Ram Chaittar v. Mohan Dei	71	488
211	Ambika Prasad v. Jhinak Singh ..	71	321
213	Peare Lal v. Ashraf Khan ..	71	456
214	Md. Sharif Khan v. Md. Moazzam Ali ..	79	464
216	Ram Chandra v. Kirpa Devi	65	648
218	Chatur Bhuj v. Govind Ram	67	668
220	Md. Ismail Khan v. Hasan Ali Khan ..	79	43
225	Jai Raji v. Bhagwat Prasad ..	65	844
229	Abdul Rahman v. Rifaqtunnissa ..	65	641
230	Nihal Singh v. Najuban ..	65	585
231	Badri Prasad v. Mohar Singh	65	511
232	Rampia v. Hazarilal ..	65	654
233	Bhanga v. Din Mohammad ..	65	593
234	Abhey Singh v. Hamta ..	65	653
234	Firm Parbhoo Lal Ram Ratan v. The Bengal North-Western Railway ..	65	583
235	Govind Dass v. Ram Charan	68	307
242	Kishori v. Jiwan ..	67	231
247	Baldeo v. Gopalji ..	Not reportable.
248	Dwarka Ram v. Jhulai Panle	72	134
249	Nand Ram Sahu v. Hira Dei	73	495
250	Ajodhia Prasad v. Gobind Prasad ..	71	1034
251	Sadiq Ali v. Abdul Baqi Khan ..	71	460
254	Abdul Karim Khan v. Qasim Ali Khan ..	70	951
255	Raghunadan v. Mulak Raj Singh ..	Not reportable.
256	Rahima v. Razzak Ali ..	71	562
257	Sita Ram v. Chait Ram ..	71	447

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
260	Jhinak Singh v. Ram Baran Singh ..	To be printed.
261	Chiddu Singh v. Jhanjhan Rai	79	303
263	Saithwar v. Bishan Mohan Sahai ..	73	651
263	Dina Singh v. Devi Chand ..	71	529
265	Sakat Mul v. Catori ..	71	376
267	Abdul Wahid v. Municipal Board Allahabad ..	71	1032
267	Jhinku Singh v. Sital Singh ..	74	133
269	Krishna Dutt Dube v. Brij Lal ..	To be printed.
270	Badlu Singh v. Panthu Singh	71	474
271	Mahadeo Prasad v. Hamiden	71	457
271	Priya Lal v. Bohra Champa Ram ..	79	498
273	Hazari Lal Firm v. Kesho Das Firm ..	Not reportable.
274	Chhanga Mal v. Ram Gopal	To be printed.
276	Nur Muhammad Khan v. King-Emperor ..	71	525
277	Emperor v. Gayan Singh ..	To be printed.
281	Reshna Bibi v. Lhawani Saran ..	79	77
282	Shib Dei v. Kaniz Fatima ..	73	536
282	Sheo Ram Koeri v. Ikramunnissa Bibi ..	71	631
284	Tulshi v. Bishnath Rai ..	71	623
285	Jodha Singh v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
286	Sukhrani Kunwar v. Bhukhan Singh ..	71	628
287	Lala Ram Raghubir Lal v. Dip Narain Singh ..	71	749
291	Hafiz Abdullah v. Alli ..	71	640
291	Sadar Singh Kondari v. Amar Singh Kondari ..	71	991
292	Bansi Dhar v. Lala Shyam Lal ..	71	1012
293	Abdul Haq v. Moti Lal ..	71	983
293	Basra Begam v. Babu Sheo Narain ..	71	979
294	Her Keshi v. Mewa Ram ..	72	247
295	Ram Khelawan v. Brij Lal ..	71	991
295	Hazari Lal v. Nimar ..	71	1038
296	Shyam Lal v. Padam Singh ..	71	1025
297	Ram Dass v. Inayat-ulah ..	71	1027
298	Mohan Lal v. Ganga Prasad ..	71	975
298	Bhagwan Das Naik v. Mahadeo Prasad Pal ..	71	959
301	Cawnpore Cotton Mills v. G. I. P. Railway ..	71	614
304	Hanisraj v. Baldeo Singh ..	71	1028
306	Shambhu Diyal Singh v. Iswar Saran ..	75	597
310	Kesho Saran v. Khairati Lal	74	836

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
311	Mahomed Umar Khan v. Amtul Rahim Bibi ..	71	965
312	Jagleo Tiwari v. Kuber Nath Pandey ..	71	755
313	Lalta Prasad v. Kharga ..	71	773
315	Abul Nasar v. Lalta Prasad ..	71	1018
319	Inayat Hussain v. Faiz Muhammad ..	71	767
319	S. T. Gadre v. Brijnandan Saran ..	To be printed.
321	Munni Babu v. Koer Kamta Singh ..	72	85
322	Mahadeo Prasad v. Emperor	76	1025
325	Abdul Wahid Khan v Abdullah Khan ..	71	661
327	Har Narain Prasad v. Emperor	71	704
327	Anandi v. Emperor ..	71	689
329	Hub Ali v. Emperor ..	Not reportable.
331	Kaneez Fatima Begum v. Ram Nandan ..	73	977
332	Ram Badan Singh v. Janki ..	71	692
332	Jasua v. Emperor ..	71	696
233	Ashiq Husain Khan v. Emperor ..	74	1049
334	Jaini Lal v. Durga Prasad ..	75	527
335	Hiria v. Ram Adhin Singh ..	75	553
337	Badri Prasad v. Raj Kunwar	75	686
338	Chhajju v. Gokal ..	75	593
340	Syed Abdul Rauf v. Raju Muhammad Shah ..	75	655
341	Dhola Kuar v. Mathura Singh	75	657
342	Devi Deen v. Rohilkhand Kumaon Ry. ..	75	669
343	Ram Gajadhar v. Surtani ..	71	381
344	Irshad Mahammad Khan v. Jwala Prasad ..	75	663
345	Nand Lal v. Firm Gulab Rai Narain Das ..	71	610
346	Tirbeni Sahu v. Lachmi Pande ..	75	666
347	Gulab Singh v. Shib Lal ..	74	286
319	Jai Singh Gir v. Sita Ram Singh ..	74	757
349	Surjan Singh v. Wazir Singh	72	483
350	Ram Chandar v. Chhannu Lal ..	75	323
352	Khetal v. Emperor ..	73	62
355	Aliman Begam v. Ali Husan ..	73	1029
355	Emperor v. Umroo ..	74	257
356	Tirmal Singh v. Kanhaiya Singh ..	To be printed.
357	Radha v. Emperor ..	73	975
357	Rup Singh v. Mitthu Singh ..	Not reportable
358	Iqbal Haider Khan v. Wasi Fatima ..	74	1004
36	Dulla v. Emperor ..	74	1054
361	Ram Lal Rai v. Murta Kuer	75	676

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
361	Suraj Narayan Prasad v. Ram Ghulam Shukul ...	76	1050
362	Mahomed Shakur v. Sheikh Abdul Ghani ..	71	369
363	Kuldip Chaube v. Jagnandan ..	71	299
364	Akbari Begam v. Shaikh Zamin Ali ..	79	402
365	Mahadeo v. Ram Bharose ..	75	679
366	Sita Ram v. Rewa Ram ..	71	390
367	Muhammad Altaf Ali Khan v. Rani Phool Kunwari ..	71	40?
367	Kandhya v. Raj Kunwar ..	75	681
368	Ram Din v. Har Dayal ..	To be printed.
369	Doki Dube v. Umandat Dube	71	292
371	Muhammad Qasim v. Municipal Board Saharanpur ..	75	607
372	Molvi Ahmad Husain v. Sirajuddin ..	75	615
373	Ghulam Husain v. Ganesh Lal ..	75	619
374	Ramman Bibi v. Mathra Prasad ..	75	621
375	Kundan v. Sobha Ram ..	71	655
377	Janki Ram v. Misri Lal ..	71	382
378	Muhammad Ashghar Ali Khan v. Rammon ..	71	432
382	Bisheshar Nath v. Abdul Wahid ..	75	672
382	Ghasi Ram v. Maldury Club through Seth Chiranji Lal ..	75	603
383	Chander Sen v. Emperor ..	73	576
384	Gopal Nath Shukul v. Sat Narain Shukul ..	74	1014
386	Sri Ram v. Emperor ..	76	28
387	Fateh Singh v. Thakur Rukmini Rawanji Maharaj ..	72	8
392	Yad Ram v. Sunder Singh ..	74	778
394	Bindeshari Pershad Tewari v. Badal Singh ..	74	873
396	Gajadhar Prasad v. Muhammad Abdul Majid ..	Not reportable.
397	Abdul Ghafoor v. Qamar Uddin ..	71	973
398	Sheo Nandan v. Munni ..	71	1013
398	Girja Nand v. His Highness the Maharaja Parbhu Narain Singh ..	75	605
399	Laku v Sardar Lal Singh ..	71	265
401	Tika Ram v. Duba Shib Lal	71	992
401	Makhan Lal v. Deli Prasad	Not reportable.
402	Mannu Lall v Babu Ram ..	To be printed.
403	Durga v. Babu Ram ..	75	596
404	Bohra Tara Chand v. Rayisi Begum ..	73	1040
404	Gaya Prasad v. Methai Lal ..	75	624

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
405	Makhan Lal v. Badri Prasad	Not reportable.
406	Kampta Prasad v. Sheo Prasad ..	71	971
407	Hazari Lal Chhangmal v. Sohan Lal ..	75	609
408	Amar Deo Pande v. Gaya Pande ..	71	393
409	Balkishen v. Raghubar Dayal	74	991
410	Ram Dayal v. Mithoo Lal ..	71	287
411	Lachman Das v. Mulchand ..	71	441
412	Bhagwan Sahai v. Gopal Rai	To be printed.
413	Kabul v. Kabul Singh ..	79	408
414	Baba Jhanak Singh v. Babu Ambika Prasad ..	71	424
414	Tulsi Prasad Sahai v. Ramraj Ahir ..	71	308
415	Abdul Quddus v. Sayad Ahmad Husain ..	79	411
416	Badri Upadhia v. Dwarka Upadhia ..	71	559
417	Mukntara v. Sardara ..	71	444
417	Ram Nath v. Mata Sahai ..	72	108
418	Jharap Rai v. Jaint Rai ..	71	1033
419	Tarif v. Asa Ram ..	73	212
420	The Collector of Bulandshahr v. Ram Sarup ..	73	217
420	Haji Shaikh Boodha v. Sukhram Singh ..	73	989
421	Mir Singh v. Makkhau ..	74	88
423	Benarsi Goldsmith v. Bhulla	73	227
424	Sahu Raghunath Singh v. Seth Srinarain ..	73	1018
425	Kunj Behari Lal v. Narain ..	71	1026
426	The Secretary of State for India in Council v. (Firm) Jiwan ..	71	609
428	Kunwar Pal v. Bakhshi Madan Mohan ..	71	645
429	Shah Muhammad Ehsanullah v. People Industrial Bank, Ltd. ..	72	106
429	Lala Singh v. Basdeo Singh ..	71	768
430	Samasul Hasan v. Syed Hasan	75	612
431	Jumman v. Emperor ..	Not reportable.
432	Emperor v. Bulaki ..	Not reportable.
433	Pitam Lal v. Emperor ..	71	996
433	Ram Sewak Rai v. ShoNaik Rai ..	73	945
435	Seth. Goberdhan Das v. Makund Lal ..	74	1024
436	Kanhaiya Lal v. Gaura ..	71	564
437	Syed Shabbir Husain v. Syed Ghulam Husain ..	72	276
438	Sita Ram v. Har Sahai ..	71	619
439	Jasram v. Amar Nath ..	71	475
440	Fatteh Din v. Umrao ..	Not reportable.

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
441	Ramji Das v. Mihin Lal ..	71	654
442	Mohammad Ahmad v. Babu	71	762
443	Hulas Rai v. Sohan Lal ..	71	620
443	Kesho Ram v. Peare Lal ..	71	761
445	Bhirgunath Rai v. Ajnarain Rai ..	71	455
446	Ram Harakh Pandey v. Chunni Singh ..	71	649
447	Shakur v. Husaini Bibi ..	71	653
448	Jagannath Singh v. Sardar Singh ..	75	614
449	Ram Narain v. Somi ..	74	277
449	Lachmi Narain v. B. B. & C. I. Railway Co. Ltd. ..	74	248
451	Shaikh Sajjad Hussain v. Shaikh Wali Muhammad ..	73	1030
452	Kokla Kumar v. Kalian Mal ..	76	505
453	Dharman v. Sukhi ..	73	981
454	Lala Makhan Lal v. Kishun Lal ..	74	320
455	Sheikh Ahmad Hussain v. Shiekh Muhammad Fasih Ullah ..	74	1039
456	Keshri v. Bhawani Rai ..	76	473
457	Phul Chand v. Surji ..	74	684
458	Prag Narain v. Jwala Prasad	74	666
460	Bharat Indu v. Hakim Asghar	73	453
460	Parsottam Dass v. Shiam Lal	Not reportable.
462	Bhaggo v. Mata Prasad ..	76	507
463	Oudh Narayan Singh v. Kauleshwar Singh ..	76	516
464	Elahi Baksh v. Lala Suraj Narayan ..	76	521
464	Bishnath Singh v. Ram Sri ..	76	525
465	Bangali Mal v. Ganga Ram Ashrafi Lal ..	71	431
465	Bhola Nath v. Ram Sahai ..	71	472
466	Radha v. White ..	73	413
469	Shiam Sunder v. Emperor ..	76	572
470	Munna Lal v. The Collector of Shahjahanpur ..	74	995
471	Amjad Ali Khan v. Sheikh Mohammad Usman ..	71	963
473	J. Ovid v. Seth Chandrabhan ..	76	650
473	Kali alias Barati v. Emperor	74	270
474	J. John v. Emperor ..	74	262
476	Ganga Prasad v. Emperor ..	76	568
479	Emperor v. Bashiran ..	To be printed.
479	Mata Palat v. Emperor ..	74	715
480	Hari Lal v. Emperor ..	76	971
483	Nanoo v. Emperor ..	71	359
483	Ganga Prasad v. Emperor ..	76	652
484	Ram Din Singh v. Naujadak Singh ..	71	668
484	Umrao Khan v. Emperor ..	71	660
485	Abdullah Khan v. Mahbub Ullah Khan ..	76	556
486	Nobin Chandra Bose v. Bandi	71	370
487	Sayad Amjad Ali v. Sayad Wajid Ali ..	Not reportable.

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
488	Hari Singh v. Harbans Lall	72	491
483	Tirlok Saithwar v. Lalsa Saithwar ..	71	465
489	Jokhu Godaria v. Deokinandan Pandey ..	77	630
490	Ram Narain v. Harbans Singh	71	617
490	Ghansham Singh v. Bhola Singh ..	71	411
494	Mirza Umrao Beg v. Mirza Mukhtar Beg ..	74	687
495	Rekhab Das v Sheobai ..	74	650
499	Haji Ali Jan Khan v. Majid-ud-din ..	To be printed.
500	Bijai Shanker Sither v. Ram Charitra Singh ..	75	35
502	Hari Shankar v. Ram Pyari	74	834
503	Dutt Prasad Singh v. Sri Narain ..	74	557
504	Vilayat Hussain v. Misran ..	72	92
507	Raghubir Singh v. Jodha Singh ..	73	646
508	Shib Lal v. Bidha Singh ..	72	140
509	Lala Makkhan Lal v. Nathi ..	74	640
511	Balli Singh v. Raghubar Singh	To be printed.
513	Ram Chand Khanna v. Goswami Ram Puri ..	74	379
514	Gopi Ram v. Jeot Ram ..	To be printed.
516	Girdhari Singh v. Bhupal Singh ..	74	745
517	Parsotam v. Ganpat Ram ..	73	1012
518	Ram Nath v. Mannu Lal ..	73	615
519	Pandit Nathu Ram v. Ghanshyam ..	74	824
520	Zia-Uddin v. Md. Abul Hasan ..	77	27
522	Matadin Tewari v. Surajbali Singh ..	To be printed.
523	Sheo Badan Tewari v. Sahebzadi Kuer ..	75	792
523	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Akbar Ali ..	74	8
525	Sita Ram Tewari v. Faujdar Rai ..	74	315
526	Radhika Raman v. Bhora Shiam Sundar Lal ..	74	392
527	Chitto v. Ganga Sahai ..	77	638
529	Raja Singh v. Durga Singh ..	73	667
529	Kashi Prasad v. Panna Lal ..	74	359
530	Alama Chand v. Chhajju ..	74	339
531	Bishun Sarup v. Bindraban ..	73	446
532	Abdur Raoof v. Bachchoo ..	73	495
532	Mahabir Prasad v. Parsandi ..	74	939
534	Kali Din v. Ramapat ..	73	953
535	Bandhu Ram v. Ram Kishun Sonar ..	73	1010
536	Deo Inder Singh v. Khushi Ram ..	76	375
537	Chhammi Lal v. Sukhran Kunwar ..	74	19

	Allahabad High Court—contd.
538	Ram Dial v. Sher Singh ..	74	358
538	Kidar Nath Rajnarain v. East Indian Railway ..	74	300
539	Jagannath Singh v. Moti Lal	73	958
540	Lalta Prasad v. Ram Bahadur	74	319
541	Mariam-un-nissa Bibi v. Babu Ram ..	73	1016
542	Chanjan Kunwar v. Narain ..	73	531
543	Dakhi v. Dhanni Misir ..	73	956
544	Bhikam Khan v. Dan Singh	74	7
544	Hukum Chand v. Emperor ..	73	805
545	Emperor v. Khubi ..	To be printed.
546	Shimbhu Narain v. Emperor	73	526
547	Sheo Charan v. Emperor ..	73	520
548	Panchem v. Emperor ..	73	943
549	Krishna Dass v. Ram Ugrah Singh ..	74	845
551	Ram Charan Lal v. Raghubir Singh ..	75	387
553	Baijnath Singh v. Chandrapal Singh ..	73	529
554	Kashi Rai v. Kali Kuer ..	77	756
556	Amin Uddin v. Abdul Shakoor	73	460
557	Haji Moqbul Husain v. Hafiz Ahmad Husain ..	74	251
558	Naujadik Rai v. Ram Jatan Rai ..	73	584
559	Jokhu Rai v. Bhabhuti Rai	77	760
560	Inder Deo Rai v. Ram Charitter Rai ..	74	971
562	Dhirja v. Mithan Lal ..	74	914
563	Chitu v. Charan Singh ..	77	705
565	Ragha Mal v. Abdus Sattar ..	74	879
566	Radha Krishun Shukul v. Nokh Lal Shukul ..	74	964
567	Maola v. Bahoru ..	Not reportable.
568	Ghiswa v. Deo Narain ..	73	947
569	Shankar Sahi v. Baichu Rai	74	18
570	Hajia Khatun v. Amina Khatun ...	73	983
571	Bakshi v. Hyder Khan ..	75	270
572	L. Jagmohan Saran v. Sadhu Deoki Naudan ..	Not reportable.
573	Narain Singh v. Zalim Singh	74	351
574	Sukhnandan v. Brijnandan ..	73	1052
575	Maugru Rai v. Shivanand Lal	77	875
576	Manphul Singh v. Hakim Hamid Ali Khan ..	74	528
577	Shaman Bibi v. Abdus Samad ..	73	538
579	Kaneilla Kuer v. Sukhdei ..	74	761
580	Adya Saran v. Kali Charan ..	75	280
581	Nandan Prasad v. Hafiz Abdul Aziz ..	74	367
583	Mul Raj v. Fazl Imam ..	76	307
584	Fateh Din v. Kishen Lal ..	73	902
585	Choudhury Bidai Chand v. Kachhu Mal ..	73	477
586	Bisham Bhar Nath v. Muhammad Ubaid Ullah Khan ..	77	572

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Allahabad High Court—concld.				Bombay High Court—contd.
590	Bindeshri Prasad v. Kuar Sanju Singh ..	73	458	233	Moses Menahim v. Ahrain Solomon ..	To be printed.
591	Ram Chandar v. Haji Muhammad Nur ..	73	656	234	Government Pleader, High Court, Bombay v. G. K. Tatke ..	72	353
592	Emperor v. Zawar Husain ..	73	929
595	Gudri Khatik v. Emperor ..	77	886	236	Tukaram v. Jaganath ..	76	215
596	Ashiq Ali v. Emperor ..	73	337	237	Superintendant of Stamps v. Chimanlal ..	73	718
597	Sita Ram v. Emperor ..	73	690
598	C. J. Cadd v. Emperor ..	73	508	239	Ganesh Narhar v. Dattatraya Pandurang ..	72	249
599	Abdus Samad Khan v. Emperor ..	To be printed.		241	Muller Maclean & Co. v. Kaderbhoy ..	72	246
				242	Emperor v. Marmaduke Pickthol ..	77	436
600	Mahammad Hadi v. Debi Prasad ..	77	871
601	Peary Lal v. Kidar Nath ..	75	148		Vithalrao v. Vithalrao ..	72	242
603	Mahadeo v. Kallo ..	73	494.	244
603	Abdullah Khan v. Mahomed Maqbul Hussain ..	74	822	245	Panachand v. Stanley Dobson ..	72	261
605	East Indian Railway v. Firm Makhan Lal Bindeshri Prasad	74	814	247	Bai Balagavri v. Motilal ..	72	224
				248	Emperor v. Nasarvanji ..	72	70
605	Girdhari Lal v. Firm Achal Singh Takht Singh ..	74	64	249	Eagle Star Insurance Co. v. Dinanath ..	72	266
606	Bhure Mal v Emperor ..	73	801
608	Nanhu v. Emperor ..	75	361	253	Ganesh Mahahdev Sahasrabudhe v. Yeshwant Mahadev Phadke ..	Not reportable.
609	Jhagru v. Emperor ..	73	775
609	Asgar Ali v Emperor ..	76	1040
610	Emperor v. Basha Nand ..	77	883	253	Maruti v. Dattu ..	72	304
612	Pudai Singh v. Brij Mangal	73	654	254	Digambar v. Lahyadeo ..	72	326
				255	Emperor v. Pitre ..	76	294
613	Raghunath Singh v. Jetto Singh ..	74	830	260	Bhagubai v. Appaji Sitaram	72	277
				261	Emperor v. Imam Hasan ..	Not reportable.
613	Kedar Nath Singh v. Shee Shankar ..	76	310	262	Emperor v. Hanmappa ..	To be printed.
	Bombay High Court.			264	Gutabrao v. Vinayak ..	72	285
				264	Devendra v. Shettappa ..	To be printed.
201	Emperor v. Parshottamdas ..	72	359
201	Shrinivas Laxman Naik v. Chanbosapagowda Basangowda Gowdur ..	72	290	265	Gangadhar v. Ibrahim Bava..	72	307
				265	Vithal Yeshwant v. Shivappa	72	659
203	Gangaram Balkrishna Sawant v. Vasudeo Dattatraya Kirloskar ..	73	912	268	Thana Zalaji v. Dhana Jawhrji ..	77	497
					Chhotabhai v. Maganbhai ..	77	500
206	Khimchand Narotamdas Bhavsar v. Sobhagchand Bhogilal ..	72	324	271
				272	Nilkantha v. Murari Govind	73	178
207	Hansraj Godhaji Marwadi v. Bapu Krishnaswami Pile ..	72	275	276	Besangowda v Irgowdati ..	73	196
				281	Bulakhidas v. Gunpatram ..	77	412
208	Ramchandra Sadashiv Sidras Oka v. Keshav Dhondu Narnekar ..	To be printed.		284	Rose Hill v. Luke C. Hill ..	73	304
				287	Tirthdas v. Sadhusingh ..	73	296
					Ramchandra Laxman v. Balchim Babaji ..	72	315
211	Kurpal Hemraj v. Shamrao ..	72	321	289	Broach City Municipality v. Ghulam Rasul ..	72	636
213	Raji Thakaram v. Premraj ..	75	561	290	B. D. Gupte v. Collector Bombay Suburban ..	73	354
214	Bai Mani v. Ranchodlal ..	73	256
216	Shankar Ganpat Lele v. Damodar Bhukandas ..	75	569	293	Mahadeo v. Raghoji ..	77	472
				294	Babusingh v Sambhaji ..	77	449
216	Mulchand v. Bai Rukshmani	72	282	296	Dulanbi Kom v. Muhammad Henif ..	Not reportable.
218	Pandey v. Jamnadas ..	76	317
226	Tribhuvan Uttamram v. Bai Kushal ..	73	666	296	Ramchandra Mahadeo v. Narayanrao ..	77	463
				297	Mahableshwar v. Subramania	72	309
228	Indian Hotels Co. v. Phiroz Sorabji ..	To be printed.		299	Husenuddin v. Dulakhidas	77	474

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Bombay High Court—contd.
299	Totaram Chunilalshet v. Chhotu Motiramshet ..	73	454
300	Hanmant v. Shidu ..	72	556
301	Bhau Abaji v. Hari Ramchandra ..	72	631
302	Sheddappa v Santawa ..	77	477
303	Bhogilal v. Darasha Kooverjee ..	75	743
304	Parbhubhai v. Bai Lalita ..	76	555
305	Nariman v. Municipal Corporation Bombay ..	To be printed.
321	Wilkinson v. Wilkinson ..	77	654
358	Raghunath Vithal v. Purnanand Saraswati ..	72	312
359	Krishnalal v. Dhirajlal ..	77	502
361	Kashinath v. Ganesh ..	77	506
364	Pandurang v. Basappa ..	77	479
365	Shankar v. Ramchandra ..	73	415
366	Usuf Ali v Sayad Amiu ..	73	233
368	Chanbasappa v. Malkappa ..	77	476
369	Devichand v. Jamshedji ..	74	302
370	Daudkhan v. Chandulal ..	76	521
371	Maniram v. Vithu ..	76	549
372	Vadilal v. Manekji ..	To be printed.
379	Shrinivas Sarjerao v Narayanrao ..	76	551
381	Chunilal v. Kashibhai ..	73	419
382	Gavarawa v. Mallangowda ..	76	559
383	Narayan Bapulal v. Sonusingh	76	659
384	Sitaram v. Ganpat ..	73	412
385	Siddappa v. Pandurang Vasudeo ..	72	626
386	D. B. Manke v. B. Walwekar	To be printed.
387	Mathuradas v. Nathubhai ..	70	920
389	G. I. P. Railway v. Himatlal ..	73	606
391	Hari Shridhar v. Sakharam v.	73	443
392	Damodar Jagjiwan v. Govindji ..	73	240
393	Madhavrao v. Shrikrishna ..	79	517
394	Sukhanand v. Bhimraj ..	73	254
395	Pandurang Veduram v. Mohan	To be printed.
396	Vithu Daulaga v. Ganesh ..	74	149
397	Vijbhukandas v. Ishwardas ..	74	292
398	Gulam Mohiuddin v. Dayabhai	73	442
399	Ratanchand v. Damji ..	73	474
400	Kalyanchand v. Bhugilal ..	73	310
401	Thakoredas v. Lallubhai ..	75	102
402	Chimanbhai v. Keshavlal ..	73	464
403	Hirachand v. Nemchand ..	73	465
404	Raghunath v. Gangaram ..	75	893
407	Bandra Municipality v. D'Monte ..	76	478
408	Motilal v. Harnarayan ..	73	365
409	Kashinath Hari v. Vishwanath Bhiko ..	76	764
410	Peerkha Lalka v. Bapu Kashiba	73	231
411	Lala Miya v. Manubibi ..	73	246
412
412
413
414
415
416
417
419
420
421
423
425
427
428
429
431
432
437
440
441
449
450
452
453
454
455
456
458
459
461
462
464
467
471
473
478
480

	Bombay High Court—concld.
412	Dagdu Rajaram v. Lakshman	73	455
412	Bala Raghu Dhanwade v. Bhiku Genu Jambhale ..	73	125
413	Laxmichand v. Nandurbar Municipality ..	74	205
414	Jayavant Rao v. Narsing Sakharam ..	To be printed.
415	Raghunath Vithal v. Madhav Raval ..	76	217
416	Ambaram v. Secretary of State	74	196
417	Government of Bombay v. Khanderao ..	77	137
419	Nilwa Iraya Mattapali v. Revan hidaya Sidlingaya ..	79	208
420	Harjivan Devraj v. Gajanan Kashinath Naik ..	73	187
421	R. S. Navalkar v. Mrs. Sarojini Naidu ..	73	133
423	Secretary of State v. Great India Peninsula Railway ..	73	468
425	Bapuji Narso v. Dattu Antaji	73	279
427	Kahandas Narain v. Jivan Parag ..	73	1023
428	Sakharam Balwant Peshwe v. Laxman Trimbak Purandare	79	200
429	Hiraji Walad Guna Gujar v. Vishnu Walad Chandia ..	79	186
431	Govindas Rajaramdas Devi v. Ganpatdas Narrottamdas ..	73	1030
432	Rama Nana Babar v. Dhondi Murari Tarade ..	76	607
437	Madhavji v. Ramniklal ..	70	474
440	Timmappa v. Manjaya ..	73	424
441	Shankar Sakharam v. Ratanji	79	226
449	Sitaram Sadashiv v. Parshuram Bhau ..	77	878
450	Dada Jinappa v. Yesu ..	73	402
452	Sarspur Mfg. Co. v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. ..	73	1027
453	Vishnu Vishvanath v. Ramachandra ..	73	1017
454	Venkataraman v. Baburaya	73	1020
455	Jotta Bechar v. Parshottam ..	73	974
456	Natha Lal v. Nadiad Municipality ..	79	192
458	Gangadas v. Jekisondas ..	73	1032
459	Bai Parwati v. Nadiad Municipality ..	79	197
461	Vishnu v. Narasinha ..	73	1011
462	Ahmad v. Ganesh ..	73	1035
464	Kasturibhai v. Mahalaxmi ..	77	914
467	Mahadevappa v. Kashirao ..	77	92
471	Bhausaheb v. Ramgauda ..	76	937
473	Sandu Valji v. Bhikchand ..	75	118
478	Dhondi Subhane v. Secy. of State ..	77	147
480	Irappa Adviappa v. Ningappa Rudrappa ..	77	961

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

Calcutta High Court.

313	Onkarmal v. Nritya Gopal ..	67	885
313	Gangaram Majki v. Bamapada Mahapatra ..	68	301
314	Samad Ali v. Abdul Majid ..	65	851
315	Hara Sundar Majumdar v. Lahabara Singh ..	67	277
315	Subala Dasi v. Indra Kumar Hazra ..	65	692
316	Fazil Meah v. Prosanna Kumar Roy ..	68	395
316	Amulya Sundari v. Syama Sundar Saha ..	68	607
317	Hari Bhabini v. Narendra Nath Roy ..	67	883
318	Khosal Mohammad v. Amiruddin ..	68	331
319	Jadu Mondal v. Jagendranath Banerjee ..	68	303
319	Aswini Kumar Dutt v. Sukoda Sundari Debya ..	68	448
320	Aziz Mondal v. Girish Chandra ..	68	38
321	Aradhan Mondal v. Abhoya Charan ..	68	626
322	Golam Sobhan v. Ali Hussain Bahaddar ..	65	696
322	Sitanath v. Kanak Prabha Debi ..	67	879
323	Nurul Gani v. Kazamairi ..	63	922
324	Tejendra Chandra v. Durgadas ..	67	398
327	Krishna Pramada Dasi v. Rash Behari Das ..	67	709
327	Gopinath v. Bhajhari Das ..	68	472
329	Rupchand Ghosh v. Srimati Kshirodamayi Dasi ..	75	567
331	Surendra Nath v. Ashutosh ..	75	474
333	Debi Prosad v. Official Trustee of Bengal ..	72	1013
335	Haripada v. Equitable Coal Co. ..	76	413
338	Durgaram v. Tara Prosad ..	Not reportable.
339	Ishan Chandra v. Manmatha Nath Datta ..	71	611
342	Mukundalal v. Bansidhar ..	76	311
344	Kerali Prosad v. Jaminibala..	76	316
345	Lakhi Pria Guha v. Nanda Kumar Basu ..	To be printed.
351	Krishnendra Nath Sarkar v. Rani Kusum Kamani Debi	76	324
354	Raj Mohan Podder v. Taraprosanna ..	To be printed.
356	Dwarka Nath Sen v. Tara Prasanno Sen ..	76	328
358	Pran Kishore Taradar v. Saroje Prosad Pakrasi ..	72	55
361	Hamid Ali v. Mahomed Nurerjjama Meah ..	76	444
362	Umarangessa Bibi v. Jamirannessa Bibi ..	76	448

Calcutta High Court—contd.

364	Gora Chand Haldar v. Rakhal Chandra Gope ..	72	37
365	Dwarka Nath Banerji v. Rash Behari Guha ..	76	401
368	Sangsar Ali v. Jagannath Pal	76	252
369	Mohabbat Ali v. Tofar Ali ..	76	481
370	Reshce Case Law v. Trailokhya Mohata ..	76	493
371	Kulada Prosad Chatterjee v. Khudiram Misra ..	70	187
373	Jogendra Krishna Roy v. Shafar Ali ..	76	382
375	Bhajan Sheikh v. Balai Sarkar	To be printed.
377	Secretary of State v. Abdul Rahaman ..	76	494
378	Sayeruddin Akonda v. Samiruddin Akonda ..	72	985
379	Anantram Bhattacharjee v. Hem Chandra Kar ..	72	1041
382	Mohesh Chandra Misra v. Srimatya Nistarini Dassya	77	576
385	Bisai Nath v Tara Nath Deb	72	588
387	Bepin Krishna Roy v. Pryiabarata Bose ..	71	371
389	Uma Charan Chakraverty v. Nibaran Chandra Chakraverty ..	75	2
392	Akbar Sarcar v. Ramesh Chandra Moitra ..	72	329
394	Raj Chandra Das v. Kali Kanta Das ..	To be printed.
397	Assam Bengal Ry. Co., Ltd. v. Radhika Mohan Nath..	72	714
401	In re Amulya Charan Dutt ..	76	424
402	Moti Biswas v. Haripada Pal	70	790
403	Babujan v. Emperor ..	76	651
403	Hrishikesh Sen v. Paresh Nath Mukerjee ..	To be printed.
405	Harihar Das Chowdhury v. Raj Kumar Mukerjee ..	71	1014
406	Hridoy Mohini Dasi v. Secretary of State ..	72	472
407	Fazzar Pramanik v. Emperor	76	293
408	Sarat Chandra Ghose v. Emperor ..	74	1043
409	In re Hari Narain Das ..	74	244
410	Robindra Deb Manna v. Jogendra Deb Manna ..	To be printed.
417	Narendra Lal Khan v. Bhola Nath Bhuya ..	77	154
419	Jitmull Gridhari Lal v. Ram Gopal Bohitram ..	74	273
423	Jabeda Sheikh v. Prasanna Kumar Nag ..	75	281
425	Indian Provident Co. v. Govinda Chandra Das ..	65	318
426	Butterfield v. Butterfield ..	74	250
427	Dinaram Somani v. Bhim Bahadar Singh ..	To be printed.

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Calcutta High Court—contd.
428	Dairendra Krishna v. Mohendra Nath ..	70	869
429	Jitendra Nath Roy v. Ashutosh Goswami ..	70	828
431	Krishnadas Acharjee Chowdhury v. Samsan Ali Sheikh ..	74	925
432	Alam Mulla v. Surendra Kumar ..	69	57
433	Jatindra Nath v. Azizur Rahaman Shana ..	71	307
435	Moyghannessa Bibi v. Satis Chandra Giri ..	70	895
436	Pramatha Nath v. Abdul Aziz Meah ..	75	443
438	Khetra Mohan De v. Satish Chandra Giri ..	To be printed.
439	J. R. B. Morrier v. Lala Raghumul ..	74	287
444	Hare Ram Singh Chowdhury v. Ram Singh Chowdhury	75	218
445	Leicester Co. v S. P. Malik..	To be printed.
450	Basanta Kumar Gupta v. Abhoy Sankar Sen ..	73	306
451	Bhupendra Narayan Singh v. Nurput Singh ..	To be printed.
453	Emperor v. Profulla Kumar Mazumdar ..	74	267
456	Parul Bala Debi v. Satish Chandra ..	75	529
458	Emperor v. Ganeshi Chandra Goldar ..	74	264
460	King-Emperor v. Tincouri Dhoji ..	Not reportable.
463	Emperor v. Satyendra Kumar	71	657
467	Raghunath Sarma v. Jiban Chandra Sarma ..	70	874
469	Lal Behari Basak v. Akhil Chandra Santra ..	72	794
470	Promotha Nath v. King-Emperor ..	71	792
483	Kanai Lal Das v. Hyder Ali Khan ..	73	271
483	Sadek Reza v. Sachindra Nath Roy ..	73	265
484	Jagat Chandra Ghose v. Emperor ..	75	722
485	Sarda Prasanna Roy v. Uma Kanta ..	77	450
496	Isup Ali v. Gour Chandra Deb ..	74	591
499	Jari Lal Pal v. Lal Behari Hazra ..	75	625
501	Rajendra Kumar Bose v. Brojendra Kumar Bose ..	77	790
505	Golam Rahaman Mistri v. Curdas Kundu Choudhri ..	76	586
506	Kamini Mohan Basu v. Nibaran Chandra Mitra ..	76	577

	Calcutta High Court—contd.
507	Mahamed Mozaharal Ahad v. Mahamed Azimaddin ..	73	17
513	Burn & Co., Ltd. v. Secretary of State for India ..	76	579
516	Srepat Singh v. Ram Sarap Surya Prasad ..	73	583
517	Mahommed Yunus v. Emperor	77	819
520	Mahommad Kasiruddin Prodhan v. Bani Kanta Das ..	To be printed.
521	Kamini Kumar Deb v. Durga Charan Nag ..	74	392
524	Bijoi Chandra Singh v. Howrah Amta Ry. Co, Ltd. ..	72	98
527	Beharilal Biswas v. Nasimnessa Bibi ..	73	482
532	Shamadas Kshettry v. Phanindra Nath Roy Chowdhury ..	72	467
535	Rustam Ali Mia v. Abdul Jabbar ..	76	499
536	Damodhar Mandal v. Karamat Ali Khan ..	Not reportable.
538	Bireswar Ghosh v. Panchcouri Ghosh ..	74	975
552	Bhola Nath De v. Naishimla Prosad Roy ..	76	533
553	Rebeiro v. Elias E. L. Jacob..	77	623
557	Ganeshi Sahu v. Emperor ..	73	931
558	Surendra Nat Some v. Raghu Nath Dutt ..	76	1052
559	Anandamoyee v. Saudamani Debya ..	72	719
561	Raghunath Mody v. Kurseong Municipality ..	76	394
562	Krishna Chandra Bhomick v. Emperor ..	74	542
563	Chandrakisor v. Kumar Upendra Chandra ..	74	612
567	Samsal Haq v. Abdul Kaim..	76	766
568	Dilbar Hussain v. Sadaruddin Chowdhury ..	77	77
569	Mahadeb Prosad v. Mahabir Prosad ..	76	767
570	Annada Charan v. Hargobinda	75	557
572	Rajendra Lal v. Abdul Karim	76	455
575	Banku Behari v. Bisseswar Lal ..	76	598
577	Muhammad Khandu v. Sadakali ..	76	963
578	Sarifun Mandalin v Feradoul Khatun ..	76	603
579	Emperor v. Aliranessa Bibi	Not reportable.
582	Nirode Nath Banerjee v. Amullya Dhone Banerjee ..	77	774
584	Harish Chandra Chauchury v. Giridhar Sarkar ..	73	328
585	The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Raj Kumar Mukherjee ..	To be printed.

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Calcutta High Court—contd.
589	Kiran Chandra v. Ramesh Chandra ..	72	77
590	Priyanath Gupta v. Lal Jhi ..	72	508
594	Kartikeswar v. Bansidhar ..	76	654
596	Tulsi Telini v. Emperor ..	72	372
598	Gour Mohan v. Bansidhar ..	71	702
599	Haridasi v. Gopeshwar ..	77	619
600	Janaki Ballav v. Enat Mondal	72	136
601	Atarmoyi v. Ramananda Sen	To be printed.
603	Jadab Chandra v. Romesh Chandra ..	77	1022
606	Bhairab Chandra v. Kali Kumar ..	74	1038
608	Iswar Chandra Nath v. Gour Sundar Nath ..	To be printed.
609	Nabadwip Chandra v. Secretary of State ..	79	218
611	Promode Chandra v. Binayakdas ..	75	201
612	Khajeh Habibulla v. Asmotar Khatun ..	74	575
615	Mahendra Nath v. Abinas Chandra ..	77	364
619	Kunja Mohan v. Manindra Chandra ..	77	253
622	Harish Chandra v. Harish Chandra ..	To be printed.
624	Sasi Kanta v. Salim Sekh ..	74	1001
626	Hemendra Lal v. Fakir Chand	74	929
629	Abinash Chandra v. Khetra Mohan ..	To be printed.
631	Madhoram v. Official Assignee	To be printed.
639	H. Mohamuddin and Co. v. E. J. T. Co. ..	79	242
641	Nursing Dass v. Chuttoo Lall	74	996
644	Sheikh Samir v. Beni Madhab	75	364
645	A. Y. Reily v. Golap Khan ..	72	38
647	Bilas Chandra v. Emperor ..	77	231
649	Binode Bhari v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
650	Rakhal Chandra v. Rahini Kumar ..	74	601
651	Jogesh Chandra v. Nikunja Behari ..	73	236
652	Hari Satya Bishnu v. Emperor	73	934
654	Nagedra Nath v. Emperor ..	76	300
656	Nanibala Dassya v. Jaimini Sundari ..	70	919
657	Makbul Ahmed v. A. J. L. Allen ..	74	1041
658	Prasanna Chandra v. Upendra Nath ..		362
659	Prasanna Kumar Pal v. Panaulla Miji ..	79	77
662	Lalit Mohan Bhattacharjee v. Noni Lal Sarkar ..	77	816
663	Bengal Nagpur Railway Co. Ltd., v. Firm Balmukunda Biseswar Lall ..	To be printed.

	Calcutta High Court—concld.
665	Satis Chandra Biswas v. Nil Madhab Saha ..	73	77
667	Giris Chandra Bhattacharya v. Bhabataran Shakari ..	74	52
668	Jummon Christian v. Emperor	To be printed.
669	Darapali Sadagar v. Najir Ahmed ..	77	1030
670	Faizuddin v. Asrab Ali ..	70	570
672	Darajuddin v. Emperor ..	73	936
673	Birendra Kisore v. Trailoknya Nath ..	74	547
674	Abdul Matlab v. Nanda Lal	77	990
675	Akshya Kumar v. Commissioner's of Begra Municipality ..	75	506
676	Abdul Aziz v. Lakhmi Chandra ..	74	545
677	Karipada Das v. Durgadas Roy	73	10
679	Saradakripa Lala v. Bepin Chandra ..	74	555
681	Kustea Loan Office v. Ananda Charan ..	77	26
682	Kedar Nath v. Madhu Sudan	75	105
685	Himangini Dasi v. Bhagwati Sundari Dasi ..	75	652
689	Jadu Nath v. Manindra Nath	To be printed.
690	Natabar Ghose v. Adya Nath	75	541
691	Ramkissendas v. Binjraj ..	77	910
692	Umapati v. Mazitullah ..	72	475
694	Krishna Chandra v. W. Graham ..	75	421
699	Tinkari Bose v. Nagendra Prasad ..	77	10
701	Roshanali v. Chandra Mohan Das ..	75	447
703	In re Ballan Chand Serowgee	To be printed.
704	Jnanendra Nath Mookerjee v. Brahmapada Pramanick	79	191
705	Ajimannessa v. Pannalal ..	Not reportable.
707	Dehrai Sonar v. Emperor ..	77	991
708	Pradyumna Kumar Mullick v. Framatha Nath Mullick	77	833
714	Ukiluddi v. Asmat Ali ..	77	29
715	Jotindra Mohan Pal v. Bhola Nath ..	To be printed.
716	Jaimini Nath v. Midnapur Zemindary Co. ..	75	231
717	Nagendra Chandra v. Emperor	76	430
719	Sadasook v. Hoare Miller & Co. ..	To be printed.
720	Ahmed Aji Sardar v. Emperor	75	537
724	Rahim Sheikh v. Emperor ..	73	773
725	Shermull v. Corporation of Calcutta ..	77	892
727	Dibakanta v. Gour Gopal ..	75	715
738	Mohammad Amin v. Bijoy Chand Mahatape ..	75	20
734	Nagendrabala v. Bijoy Chand	74	153

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Lahore High Court.
281	Murli Dhar v. Duni Chand ..	69	368
281	Sahib Dayal v Dharpat Rai..	75	490
282	Kirpa Ram v. Buta Singh ..	Not reportable
282	Roop Chand v. The Church Missionary Tresel Association ..	69	417
283	Mukabar v. Karim Baksh ..	75	496
284	Udhe Ram v. Narain Singh ..	72	389
284	Rasul Khan v. Hawazi ..	75	458
286	Fathu v. Crown ..	75	368
286	Dhanna Mal v. Rai Sahib Lala Moti Sagar ..	75	654
287	Jagan Nath Sethi v. Pir Mohammad ..	72	788
288	Abdul Hafiz v. Rashida Khatun ..	75	662
288	National Engineering Co., Karachi v. Rattan Engineering Co., Lahore ..	71	268
289	Rustam Khan v. Rahman ..	71	47
290	Jawahir Singh v. N. D. Sassoon & Co. ..	75	165
291	Labh Singh v. Crown ..	75	77
293	Mian-Khan v. Crown ..	To be printed.
294	Jaimal Singh v. Crown ..	To be printed.
295	Kudrat Nath v. Crown ..	75	79
295	Kanshi Ram v. Shah Nawaz	71	811
296	Deoki Nandan v. Ram Lal ..	73	885
299	Hafizullah Khan v. Bulaqi Mal ..	75	99
299	Bajrang Das v. Ghani Ram ..	To be printed.
301	Tikkan Ram v. Lal ..	74	939
301	The Firm Rahmad Ullah v. The Firm Rahim Baksh ..	75	107
302	Des Raj Sawhney v. Frays Motor Works ..	75	64
302	Lok Nath v. Sattan Bai ..	73	821
303	The Firm Gopal Mal Ganda Mal v Hara Chand ..	75	656
304	Ram Kishen v. Bhagirthi ..	71	748
305	Rakhi v. Baza ..	75	659
307	Wali Muhammad v. Fateh Khan ..	75	680
308	Tara Singh v. Jawala Das ..	Not reportable
308	Pasawa Singh v. Amar Chand	Not reportable
309	Ramji Lal v. Shibba ..	75	667
310	Ganda Singh v. Bhan ..	73	758
311	Wazir v. Girdhari ..	71	847
312	Chandan v. Crown ..	To be printed.
313	Mehr Ali v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
315	Gulab v. Crown ..	75	693
317	Daraz v. Crown ..	75	689
319	Ramza v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
321	Piran v. Crown ..	To be printed
	Lahore High Court—contd.
322	Rahman v. Crown ..	To be printed.
325	Gurdevi v. Crown ..	To be printed.
326	Indar Singh v. Crown ..	To be printed.
327	Pir Bakush v. Crown ..	73	815
329	Karim Bakhsh v. Crown ..	76	1039
329	Karam Chand v. Mathra Das	72	369
330	Lachhi Ram v. Crown ..	73	260
332	Hussain Khan v. Crown ..	76	1037
333	Kishen Singh v. Crown ..	76	871
335	Khushal Singh v. Crown ..	76	698
336	Mahomed Hassain v. Crown..	76	692
337	Maulu v. Crown ..	76	702
339	Ladha Ram v. Jidhu Ram ..	76	891
340	Arjan Das v. Crown ..	76	963
341	Khazan Singh v. Kirpa Singh	73	779
342	Bahadur Singh v. Crown ..	76	689
344	Rahmi Ali v. Crown ..	76	710
345	Johana v. Crown ..	73	506
346	Raghunandan v. Buchu Mal ..	To be printed.
347	Rup Chand-Jiwan Singh v. Poho Mal-Nathu Mal ..	73	916
350	Zaida v. Raja ..	To be printed.
352	Bhagat Ram v. Ram Sarup Chela ..	76	589
353	Jaswant Kaur v. Wasawa Singh ..	76	592
355	Kartar Singh v. Labh Singh..	74	685
356	Hans Raj v. Balaqi Mal ..	76	582
357	Hamad Yar Khan v. Shankar Das ..	To be printed.
359	Uttam Devi v. Dina Nath ..	75	774
362	Doulat Ram v. Nanak Chand	76	742
363	G. B. Verman & Co. v. Firm Gopal Das-Ram Lal ..	76	733
366	Shuja-ud Din Khan v. Sher Muhammad Khan ..	73	475
368	Zenab-un-Nisa v Duni Chand	76	770
369	Labha Mal v. Iman Din ..	76	751
371	Karam Chand v. Har Kour ..	76	747
372	Diwan Chand v. Ram Labbaya	73	922
373	Nihal Devi v Rai Chuni Lal..	73	767
374	Kanhaya v. Naurang ..	76	754
376	Piare Lal v. Udai Ram ..	Not reportable.
377	Lehna Singh v. Jagat Ram ..	73	924
379	Khuda Bakhsh v. Nur Muhammad ..	To be printed.
380	Sardara v. Crown ..	71	603
381	Banarsi Das v Ramzan ..	73	671
383	Banarsi Das v. Kishri Lal ..	72	592
384	Banwari Lal v. Sheo Chand..	To be printed.
385	Suleman v. Crown ..	76	716
388	Hans Raj v. Lachhmi Narain	Not reportable.
389	Bhola Nath v. Supper ..	72	86

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Lahore High Court—contd.
389	Wadhawa Singh v. Crown ..	76	819
391	Nawab v. Crown ..	76	824
392	Narsingh Das v. Uttam Chand ..	76	852
394	Sohan Singh v. Crown ..	76	866
394	Sardar Din v. Ajab Bibi ..	76	844
395	Ram Nath v. Ram Sarup ..	Not reportable.
396	Rahmat Ali Muhammad Faizi v. Firm Dewa Singh-Man Singh ..	75	827
398	Sheo Narain v. Shrimati Aryavart Sarb Dehsak Sabha ..	70	1006
399	Gursaran Das v. Mohan Lal ..	76	907
401	Budha v. Fatima Bibi ..	76	921
402	Mathra Das-Bishambar Nath v. Firm Rama Lal-Kanshi Nath ..	To be printed.
403	Lalu v. Fazil Din ..	73	893
404	Mangli v. Bidha Lal ..	6	916
405	Dasondhi v. Badar Bakhsh ..	73	673
406	Das Mal v. Ram Chand ..	76	946
408	Partaba v. Crown ..	76	970
409	Kewal Ram v. Abdul Hai ..	71	779
410	Kadda Singh v. Moti Singh ..	To be printed.
411	Mansa Ram v. Karta Ram ..	76	1007
412	Dalipa v. Barkat Ali ..	76	1010
413	Nihala v. Shahab Din ..	76	1013
414	Colony Flour Mills v. Firm Bhai Sant Singh-Bhagwan Singh ..	71	487
415	Pir Muhammad v. Crown ..	76	1028
416	Jawahara v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
417	Abdul Abul Hasan Khan v. Municipal Committee, Delhi	73	725
419	Abdullah v. Crown ..	76	1034
420	Ganpat Rai v. Crown ..	73	782
422	Arjun v. Jug Lal ..	To be printed.
423	Mula Ram v. Jiwinda Ram ..	72	452
425	Sunder Singh v. Nigahiya ..	72	410
425	Kidri Prasad v. K. R. Khosla	75	590
427	Hira Nand Murti Dhar v. Gurmukh Rai Radhakishen	73	205
428	Bulaqi Mal v. Shamas Din ..	To be printed.
429	Harphul v. Crown ..	75	762
431	Gokal Mal Ramchand v. Firm Nath Mal-Gulzari Mal	75	812
431	Ramal Das v. Imam Bakhsh	Not reportable.
432	East India Railway Co., Ltd. v. Mohan Lal ..	73	447
434	Ali Ahmed v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
436	Sheo Ram v. Crown ..	75	733
438	Kunj Lal v. Hari Ram ..	75	781
438	Rullia Ram v. Crown ..	Not reportable.

	Lahore High Court—contd.
440	Crown v. Inayat ..	73	689
441	Allah Ditta v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
443	Diwan Chand v. Nizamdin ..	75	610
444	Ganga Ram v. Gujar Mal ..	Not reportable.
445	Bhagwan Das v. Mutsaddi Lal	Not reportable.
445	Ram Gopal v. Mauphul Singh	75	791
446	Bajrang Das v. Dongarsee Das ..	75	793
447	Ishar v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
448	Diyan v. Hira Nand ..	73	898
451	Muhammad Akaram Khan v. Muhammad Azim Khan ..	73	318
452	Tikaya Ram v. Jiwan ..	To be printed.
453	Ghamandi Lal v. Churanji Lal-Pakhal Mal ..	73	459
454	Zia-ud-din v. Fakhr-ud-din Ahmad Khan ..	73	791
455	Mahomed Din v. Ilam Din ..	73	817
456	Kundan Lal v. Anund Sarup	73	709
458	Mughla v. Muhammad ..	To be printed.
458	Azim Khan v. Sewa Ram ..	73	707
459	Chet Kaur v. Gurmukh Singh	75	940
460	Sant Singh v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
461	Chuhar Mal v. Bira Ram ..	73	919
462	Karori Mal v. Wasawa ..	To be printed.
462	Chala Ram v Kishen Chand ..	To be printed,
465	Barkhurdar v Karm Din ..	72	107
466	Alif Din v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
467	Sewa Singh v. Ghulam ..	To be printed.
470	Daulat Rai v. Lila Ram ..	To be printed.
471	Bhag Mal-Daya Ram v. Garimju Mal ..	To be printed.
473	Devi Sahai-Ramji Das v. Thirath Ram ..	73	143
475	Niaz Ahmad Khan v. Abdul Latif ..	To be printed.
476	Sant Kaur v. Sher Singh ..	73	786
478	China Mal v. Gul Ahmad ..	73	719
480	Partab Singh v. Hakim Singh	75	87
481	David Sutherland Clark v. Rose Grimshaw ..	73	652
483	Rikhi Kesh v. Mela Ram ..	73	450
484	Shib Devi v. Ralla Ram ..	To be printed.
485	Isher v. Hukum Singh ..	73	738
487	Nadir v. Crown ..	73	323
488	Bahali v. Crown ..	To be printed.

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Lahore High Court—contd.
490	Haliman v. Nur Muhammad Khan ..	73	136
491	Sohan Singh v. Santa Singh ..	To be printed.
493	Rur Singh v. Crown ..	To be printed.
495	Qadar Bakhsh v. Mangha Mal	73	859
497	Beni Parshad v. Gur Devi ..	73	894
497	Baj Singh v. Partap Singh ..	77	473
499	Jhandu v. Husain Bibi ..	73	590
500	Santa Singh v. Vir Singh ..	75	545
501	Salig Ram v. Badhawa ..	73	759
502	Sultan v. Varyam ..	73	895
502	Basanti v. Chanda Singh ..	77	475
503	The Municipal Committee Bhera v. Shiv Ram ..	75	90
504	Gopal Das v. Zainala Bibi ..	77	477
505	Shams-ud-Din v. Devi Das ..	77	471
506	Radhakishan v. Khushi Ram	77	478
506	The Punjab Banking Co. Ltd. Diwan Dhanpat Rai ..	75	487
508	Sher Singh v. Crown ..	77	443
509	Ghulam v. Crown ..	77	446
510	Kapura v. Hardit Singh ..	75	261
511	Kapura v. Arjun Singh ..	75	269
512	Lal Singh v. Crown ..	77	434
513	Alia v. Crown ..	77	447
513	Agha Muhammad Aslam v. Jodh Singh ..	77	416
514	P. W. Fitzholmes v. Waryam Singh ..	75	419
516	Rajindar Singh v. Crown ..	77	489
517	Samail v. Ahmada ..	73	452
518	Murlidhar v. Sultan Singh ..	73	302
519	Zainab v. Ghulam Rasul ..	73	425
421	Nawab Ghulam Qutab ud-din Khan v. Sardara ..	73	209
522	Ishar Das v. Fazal Ilahi ..	77	516
523	Mehan Singh v. Kehar Singh	75	317
524	Dwarka Das v. Rahim Bakhsh	73	755
525	Khushi Ram v. Crown ..	72	617
529	Hadayat Ullah v. Ghulam Muhammad Beg ..	73	444
530	Kirpa v. Chinti ..	77	518
532	Balbir Singh v. Gobind ..	79	543
534	Muhammad Ramzan v. The Municipal Committee, Alipur ..	77	509
535	Chando v. Miran Bakhsh ..	73	650
536	Natha v. Crown ..	To be printed.
537	Daulat Bai v. Crown ..	77	600
539	Barhatti v. Crown ..	77	602
541	Bubby Hurry & Co. v. Hertz & Co. ..	73	421
544	Kishan Das v. Lachhman Singh ..	75	94
546	Tirath Ram v. Muhammad Abdul Rahim Shah ..	73	616
548	Fitzholmes v. The Bank of Upper India, Ltd. ..	77	523
551	Ram Kishan v. Ranshan ..	77	532

	Lahore High Court—contd.
553	Azad Khan v. Nasib Gul ..	77	535
556	Maula Bakhsh v. Jiwi ..	To be printed.
557	Prem Singh v. Darbara Singh	72	775
559	Shera Khatun v. Muhammad Ali Shah ..	77	538
560	Mir Khan v. Sharfu ..	74	577
564	Khwaja Ahad Shah v. Ayshan Begum ..	77	762
565	Sita Ram-Ram Dhan v. Benarsi Das-Puran Chand	77	764
566	Emperor v. Ahmed Shah ..	Not reportable.
568	Fateh Chand v. Jowahar Dei	72	405
569	Bhagwan Das v. Parbati ..	72	742
572	Bashesher Nath v. Ganga Ram ..	73	281
575	Phulli v. Debi Parshad ..	75	449
579	Bal Kaur v. Deoki ..	75	109
581	Ghulam Mustafa Khan v. Ghulam Nabi ..	75	461
584	Prabhu Lal v. Gulzari Mal ..	76	474
585	The Firm Jowala Das Parma Nand v. Uttam Chand ..	76	553
587	Labhu Ram v. Abdulla ..	75	183
589	Jita v. Har Chand ..	72	403
590	Kanshi Ram v. Jaimal Singh	75	562
591	Sukhbir Singh v. Piare Lal	To be printed.
592	Jaggan Nath v. Daud ..	75	103
593	Atma Ram v. Nanak Saran Das ..	76	550
594	Bali Ram v. Pela Singh ..	To be printed.
595	Prabhu Diyal v. Ram Chander	Not reportable.
595	Jagan Nath v. Basant Ram ...	75	24
597	Nanha v. Sundu ..	71	840
598	Waryam Singh v. Crown ..	75	359
600	Swa Singh v. Ranjha ..	75	356
601	Tahau v. Shadi ..	79	579
601	Ganga Singh v. Ramzan ..	To be printed.
603	Sheo Ram v. The Crown ..	To be printed.
604	Sakhi Muhammad Khan v. Maiz Ali Khan ..	To be printed.
605	Mansa Ram v. Kalu Ram ..	To be printed.
607	Chando v. Siri Ram ..	To be printed.
608	Hira Nand v. Ahmad Yar ..	To be printed.
608	Jai Narain v. Ramji Lal ..	To be printed.
609	G. I. P. Railway Co., Ltd. v. Panna Lal Gopal ..	72	779
611	Chhitru v. Chhajju ..	Not reportable.
612	Umrao Bakhsh v. Malik Muhammad Khan ..	72	732

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Lahore High Court—contd.
615	Ram Chand-Dewan Chand v. Prithuri Chand ..	73	247
617	Karm Din v. Crown ..	77	1003
619	Maulu v. Crown ..	81	64
621	Ram Saran v. Crown ..	Not reportable.
622	Jassu Ram v. Crown ..	77	423
623	Dhumi v. Nawab Muhammad Sajjad Ali Khan ..	73	600
625	Ghansham v. Ramji Lal ..	78	441
626	Dal Singh v. Pluiman ..	To be printed.
628	Rajindar Singh v. Tek Chand	To be printed.
629	Moti Ram v. Bhanu Ram ..	To be printed.
630	Sundar Singh v. Sham Singh	To be printed.
632	Budhu Ram v. Niamat Rai ..	75	375
634	Chiranji Lal v. Dost Mahomed ..	To be printed.
636	Thakur Das v. The Firm Bishan Das-Mewa Ram ..	To be printed.
638	Bulaqi Mal v. Abdul Rahim ..	75	950
641	Nihal Chand v. Gurdittamal	To be printed.
642	Sarup Singh v. Pal Singh ..	73	357
643	Pam Rattan v. Raja Ram ..	78	61
645	Ram v. Gaman Ram ..	To be printed.
646	Jhuman v. Duba ..	79	248
647	Lekha v. Bhani ..	79	182
648	Ram Saran Doss v. Mula ..	78	103
649	Prem Singh v. Hardit Singh ..	To be printed.
652	Boondu v. Moti Chand ..	79	284
652	Puran Chand v. Puran Chand	75	441
654	Gyan Singh v. Gyan Singh ..	76	202
655	Piara Singh v. Mula Mal ..	75	915
657	Brij Raj Saran v. Jo i Parshad	73	799
658	Aisha Bi v. Saghra Jan ...	75	1013
659	Chuni Lal v. Chuni Lal ...	To be printed.
660	Anokh Singh v. Sapuran Singh ...	To be printed.
662	Rahman v. Crown ...	To be printed.
663	Warayam Singh v. Crown ...	To be printed.
665	Ralla Ram v. Feroz Din ..	77	913
666	Emperor v. Darya Singh ..	77	984
668	Bodh Raj v. Raja Singh ..	77	906
669	Daljit Singh v. Hari Chand ..	78	11
671	Wish Nath v. Rahmat Ullah ..	77	879
672	Khushi Muhammad v. Hayat	72	1040
673	Miran Baksh v. Mukhi Ram ..	76	135
674	Ghulam Fatima v. Khaira ..	77	901
675	Palu v. Rasilu ..	75	740
678	Jiwan Baksh v. Mubinul Haq ..	73	794

	Lahore High Court—concld.
679	Ghulam Muhammad v. Mehraj Din ..	75	746
680	Sunka v. Jaru ..	75	919
683	Sawjagar Singh v. Crown ..	77	895
684	Pirji Ashraf Ali v. Rameshwar Nath ..	77	908
685	Ghulam Nabi v. Jamala ..	72	882
685	Balla v. Baru Mal ..	77	926
686	Municipal Committee, Multan v. Moti Ram ..	77	421
687	Ram Gopal v. Crown ..	77	981
689	Mahendra Nath v. Milkhi Ram ..	77	987
689	Nazar v. Paras ..	73	668
691	Malla v. Crown ..	77	983
692	Ata Muhammud v. Crown ..	77	894
693	Nidhi Ram v. Parsa Ram ..	74	1
694	Gopali Ram v. Chaudhri Dewak Ram ..	75	743
695	Balak Ram v. Muhammad Said ..	77	872
696	Ram Sarup v. Zorawar Mal ..	73	447
	Madras High Court.
282	Kaliamasundaram Pillai v. Karuppa Muppanar ..	73	206
284	Abdul Shaker Sahib v. Abdul Rahiman Sahib ..	72	868
288	Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar v. Vibhudapriya Thirtha Swamiar ..	72	109
295	Kachinamthodi Parambil Saharabi v. Chekkuti ..	72	857
297	Saraswatamma v. Paddayya	71	274
301	Sanyasirao v. Venkatrao ..	73	470
304	Thavasimuthu Nadar v. Balaguruswami Nadar ..	70	673
306	Para Dekhan v. Ragupathi Aiyar ..	72	131
308	Parthasarathy Aiyangar v. Doraiswami ..	72	826
313	Bappu v. Annamalai Chettiar	72	42
316	Rama Pattar v. Kumaran Chidayath Karnavan ..	72	139
317	Rukmani Ammal v. Rama Chandra ..	72	874
317	Subramania Iyer v. Chokkalinga Mudaliar ..	72	189
320	Latifa Bi v. Mottai Ammal ..	72	141
321	Jagannatha Sastry v. Sarathambal Ammal ..	71	530
323	A. S. Krishna Iyer v. N. Subramania Iyer ..	72	154
324	Arunachala Thevan v. Vellachami Thevan ..	71	514
326	In re Sikka Goundan ..	72	351
327	In re China Venku Naidu ..	72	525
328	In re Kutty Moopan ..	73	155
329	In re Rangare Ramudu ..	Not reportable.
330	Kosalai Ramu Pillai v. Pulasthiam Pillai ..	72	774

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Madras High Court—contd:
331	Malayandi Goundan v. Bomman Poosari ..	71	204
331	Ramalingier v. Subramania Pillai ..	69	402
332	Rathnamasari v. Secretary of State ..	72	214
335	Rattamma v. Bo la Nagaratnam ..	71	343
337	Mohana Velu Mudaliar v. Annamalai Mudaliar ..	72	63
338	China Chendrayya v. Subbarayudu ..	71	244
339	In re Kuppusami ..	72	175
340	Sami Iyer v. Ramaswami Chettiar ..	72	194
344	Govindachariar v. Nattu Kesva Mudaliar ..	72	243
347	Kunhi Kuttiali v. Kunhammad ..	73	139
349	Nagayyar v. Govindayyar ..	70	286
350	Ramabadra Chetty v. Ramaswamy Chetty ..	73	374
351	Uthuman Ammal v. Naina Mahomed Rowther ..	72	314
352	Venkatappayya v. Venkatappayya ..	71	450
353	Muhammad Rowther v. Subba Naicker ..	72	46
354	Nagathal v. Arumugam Pillai	Not reportable.
354	Koilpillai Samban v. Sappanimuthu Samban ..	72	220
355	Official Receiver, Tanjore v. Nataraja Sastrigal ..	72	225
358	Subbiah v. Venkataramayya	71	374
359	Narasayya v. Venkatappa ..	71	298
360	Venkatarama Iyer v. Hamid Sultan Maracayar ..	70	987
362	Perumal Chetty v. Kandasamy Chetty ..	72	925
364	Dwaraka Doss v. Narasimhalu Naidu ..	Not reportable.
364	Crown v. Duraiswami ..	72	358
365	In re Ramudu Iyer ..	72	538
367	Mahalakshmama v. Vemi Reddi ..	69	529
368	Sri Rajah Gopala Rao v. C. Venkatasurya Rao ..	71	200
369	Golla Chakrapani v. Kateneni Lakshmaprumallu ..	72	328
369	In re Ganapathi Sarma ..	73	147
375	In re Satyanarayana ..	72	613
375	Arulanandan v. Arul Pakkiam	72	134
376	Venkatanarasimha Rao Garu v. Nyapathy Subba Rao Pantulu Garu ..	73	991
392	Gopala Iyengar v. Mummachi Reddiar ..	74	416
402	Annadana Jadaya Gounder v. Konammal ..	71	533
422	Secretary, Board of Revenue Income-Tax, Madras v. Madras Export Co. ..	71	756

	Madras High Court—contd.
426	Kunhahamad Haji v. Emperor	72	599
434	Budhavaram Narasimhulu Chetti v. Noota Ibbundrum Nagaram Varu ..	72	95
435	British India Steam Navigation Co. v. H. S. Mohamed Bhoy ..	70	888
439	Venkatarama Iyer v. Sundaram Pillai ..	72	885
440	A. Raichan v. Elambilakad Vazhayil Damayanti ..	72	638
442	Duraisamier v. Subbaraya Iyer ..	72	322
442	Venkatarama Iyer v. Elumali Naicker ..	72	464
443	Raja of Calicut v. Kulapura Veetil Kannan Nair ..	72	918
444	Sankaranarayana Pillai v. Ramaswami Pillai ..	72	149
447	Rama Rao v. Kessapragada Vedayya ..	73	188
452	Vazhayil Parkum Thattan Kunhi Kutty v. Vazhayil Parkum Thattan Raman ..	72	145
454	Kuppu Reddi Nookayya v. Mandaiuka Bheemanna ..	73	733
459	Suryanarayanaraju Garu v. Rajah of Tekkali ..	69	517
461	Nataraja Desikar v. Govinda Rao ..	72	5
462	Aiyapparaju v. Venk takrishnayya ..	72	488
465	Ramaswami Chetty v. Doraiswami ..	73	409
467	Davud Beevi Ammal v. Radhakrishna Iyer ..	72	81
472	Mahalakshmi v. Subbarayadu	74	447
472	Swaminatha Mudalior v. Kumaraswami Chettiar ..	72	284
473	Nataraja Pillai v Rangaswami Pillai ..	72	536
475	Sarvothama Rao v. Chairman Municipal Committee Saidapet	73	619
481	Dasaratha Row v Subba Rao	72	838
482	Sundaram Iyer v. Muthuramaliiga Sethupathi ..	72	308
484	The Official Assignee of Madras v. Doraiappa Iyer	71	1056
484	In re Atakari Saravayya ..	Not reportable.
485	In the matter of a First Grade Pleader ..	73	329
486	Sri Mahant Prayag Dossjee v. Sarang pani Chetty ..	To be printed.
487	Natesa Chettiar v. Annamalai Chettiar ..	73	213
487	Dhanammal v. Veeraraghavalu Naidu ..	72	335
489	Kaliyanasundarappa Aiyer v. Chinnaswami Servai ..	72	13
490	Krishnaji Reddiar v. Muthuveera ..	72	449

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Madras High Court—contd.
492	Venkatanarayaniah v. Subramania Iyer ..	74	209	595
497	Varadachariar v. Raja Ramakrishnamba ..	76	781	596
500	Venkatanagabushanam v. Karella Ramaswami ..	73	131	597
502	Baghavanulu v. Bollam Seetharamaswami ..	73	202	598
503	Gopalaswami Ayyar v. O. S. Ramachandra Ayyar ..	72	137	600
504	A. R. R. M. N. Narayanan Chettiar v. Kadiraya Goundan ..	72	337	602
505	Nachapa Chettiar v. Subbier	72	820	603
511	Rajagopala Pandarathar v. Thirupathi Pillai ..	72	258	604
514	Koonamvelli Unnara v. Kunhi Raman ..	72	582	606
517	Yadavalli Tripuramba v. Yadavalli Venkataraman ..	72	278	607
521	Rajaratnam Iyer v. Helesyasundaram ..	72	156	608
523	Subrahmania Chetty v. The British Indian Steam Navigation Co. ..	72	408	609
523	Gopal Naidu v. Crown ..	73	343	618
533	Subba Rao v. Balusu Buchi	72	292	619
545	Jagga Rao v. Gori Bibi ..	72	789	621
551	Kulandaivelu v. Ramaswami	72	770	623
553	Rarichan v. Manakkal Raman	74	309	624
557	Ramachendrudu v. Venkata Narasimha ..	73	670	626
558	Kunhu Pothu v. Raru Nair	72	727	633
562	Subbier v. Moideen Pitchai ..	72	558	634
563	Baba Sah . Hajee Mohamad Akbar Sahib ..	73	297	635
565	South Indian Industrials Ltd. v. Alamelu Ammal ..	72	632	638
567	Kalyanasundaram Iyer v. Narasimha Iyengar ..	73	456	641
568	Venkatachala v. Arunthavathachi ..	72	548	647
572	Ramasami v. Lakshmi Varassiar ..	72	627	649
574	Secretary Board of Revenue v. Ripon Press ..	77	621	651
576	Allagu Pillai v. Veluchami ..	74	109	652
577	Rasa Goundan v. Arunachela Goundan ..	72	978	659
578	Kishtappa v. Lakshmi Ammal	72	842	660
581	Lakshminarayana v. Standard Oil Co. ..	72	669	661
582	Muthu Pillai v. Secretary of State ..	72	436	663
584	Basavana v. Doddalingappa	72	430	665
585	Lakshminarayana Iyer v. Subramania Iyer ..	73	74	666
587	Sukratendra Thirtha Swamiar v. Prabhu ..	72	165	667
592	Venkanna v. Crown ..	71	242	674
593	Kuppuswami v. Narayanaswami ..	70	670	679
594	Venkatapathi v. Chenga Reddi	To be printed.		682
	Madras High Court—contd.			684
596	Nambia Pillai v. Sudalaimuthu	76	872	685
597	In re Srinivasa Chetty ..	72	609
598	In re Venkatagurunatha Sastri	72	612
600	Hamed Haji v. Crown ..	72	381
602	In re Cholancheri Ayamma ..	72	515
603	Raja Rajeswara Sethupathi v. Arunachalam Chettiar ..	73	217
604	Venkattasubbaiar v. Crown ..	72	356
606	Ramchandra Deo v. Gangaraju	72	745
607	In re Marimuthu Naidu ..	76	235
608	Rajagopala Iyengar v. Ramanuja Iyengar ..	72	429
609	In re Kama Kondiah ..	72	616
618	Varisai Rowther v. Emperor..	73	163
619	Ramaswami Thevan v. Crown	72	615
621	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Venkatachelam ..	72	836
623	Ranganayaki Ammal v. Virupakshee Rao ..	72	456
624	Javvadi Soorayya v. Tavvala Suryarao Naidu ..	72	795
626	Ussam Kasim Sait v. Secretary of State for India ..	74	25
633	Janu Sait v. Ramaswami Naidu	72	735
634	Ammakannu v. Narayanaswami ..	72	635
635	Muthukumara v. Chockalinga	73	952
638	Raghavachariar v. Murugesa Mudali ..	72	545
641	Venkatanarayana v. Narasimha	72	865
647	Sriramulu v. Ponaka Vira Reddi	72	805
649	Marakkarutti v. Veeran Kutty	73	1050
651	Govinda Menon v. Krishna Mannadiar ..	72	397
652	K. Sankaran Nair v. K. K. Atchuthan ...	73	793
659	Secy. of State v. Venkataratnam ...	73	106
660	Subba Reddi v. Vasireddi Jayramayya ...	76	853
661	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Emperor ...	71	658
663	Sundararaja Chariar v. Ali Muhammad ..	72	690
665	Hari Krishnan Pillai v. Arur Pandithar ...	72	688
666	Secretary of State v. Nagaraja Iyer ...	74	281
667	Krishnamurthi v. Parasurama	72	69
674	Secretary of State v. Radhika Prasad ...	74	785
679	Veerabhadrayya v. Ramchandra ...	73	65
682	Kuppuswami v. Singaravelu	75	848
684	Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Income Tax v. Doraiswami Ayyengar ...	74	22
685	Secretary Boardof Revenue v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund ...	76	833
	Chockalinga Chettiar v. Palani Ambalam ...	73	926

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

	Madras High Court—concld.
686	Parthasarathi v. Abdul Rahiman ...	75	489
687	In re Garapati Kotayya ...	75	768
688	Krishna Rao v. Seshasubramania Iyer ...	76	869
689	President District Board, South Kanara v. Gopalakrishna ..	74	223
690	Ratnachalam v. Sivachidambaram ..	76	207
693	Majet Subbiah & Co., v. Messrs. Tetley & Whitley ..	75	673
694	In re Thachroth Hydross ..	75	695
700	Kunath Achan v. Kalliani Amma ..	75	476
703	Venkiteswarayyan v. Aswatha Narayanan ..	75	491
706	Amina Umma v. Rayarappan Nambiar ..	74	1026
707	Venkayya v. Paidanna ..	73	944
708	Venkatasubramania Iyer v. Syed Usuff ..	74	1006
711	Parthasarathy v. Kandaswami	73	954
713	Ananthachari v. Ratnam & Sarathi ..	75	161
718	Bapanna v. Yerramma ..	74	218
719	Ramamma v. Garunathan ..	72	881
	Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.
121	Kolhi v. Chhotibai ..	68	294
121	Mohanlal v. Sir Bisheswardas Daga ..	70	344
124	Pomdusa v. Bahenabai ..	69	193
125	Anand Rao v. Saraswatibai ..	71	532
127	Narain v. Shankar Lal ..	68	508
129	Laxmibai v. Abdul Kadir ..	68	474
129	Yeshwant v. Shiwappa ..	68	178
130	Hazarilal v. Hazarimal ..	68	476
132	Rahim Baksh v. Shiocharan ..	Not reportable.
133	Ishwardas v. Bismallakhan ..	72	158
135	Tatia v. Sawania ..	71	477
137	Shriram v. Madno Patil ..	68	425
137	Shamrao Dewaji v. Pandurang	71	804
139	Govinda v. Laxman ..	Not reportable.
139	Mulloo v. Seth Kundanlal ..	71	863
140	Roberts v. Shaikh Hyder ..	69	894
141	Gadi v. Govinda ..	71	207
142	Keshoram v. Govindram ..	68	340
143	Jainarayan Bapu v. Vithoba..	71	556
144	Chimna Patil v. Indraraj Singh ..	To be printed
145	Govind v. Anant ..	71	816
146	Local Government, C. P. v. Madho Patwari ..	68	157
149	Ramasa v. Gambhirchandsa..	69	500
150	Govinda v. Abdul Kadir ..	71	558
151	Nana v. Jogilal ..	71	566
153	Ramkrishnapuri v. Tanba ..	71	777
155	Suryabhan v. Emperor ..	71	667
	Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—contd.
156	Tukaram v. Ganpat ..	Not reportable.
157	Shripati Maratha v. Secretary, Municipal Committee Nagpur	Not reportable.
158	Emperor v. Jangusingh ..	71	669
158	Emperor v. Jailalbhoi ..	71	795
161	Puna v. Laxman Prasad ..	65	654
161	Balwant v. Ratan Lal ..	68	429
163	Bed Prasad v. Kangalu ..	67	305
164	Shankergir Guru Motigir v. Chinnuji ..	71	140
166	Nimba v. Janki ..	71	176
167	Chhaganlal v. Aboobakar Abdur Rahman & Co. ..	72	465
169	Channulal v. Puna ..	75	660
171	Sanoo v. Bhadaria ..	71	468
174	C. P. Railway Co., by Managing Agent G. I. P. Bombay v. Whittle & Co., of Viramgaon and Bansa ...	To be printed.
177	Sampat v. Moti Lal ..	71	808
180	Ganga Prasad v. Shyam Lal..	68	45
181	Kadarmiya v. Chandmiya ..	To be printed.
182	Maharashtrayajnan Kosh Mondal Ltd. v. Bijju Lal ..	71	436
187	Narsayya v. Laxmi Narayan..	71	404
188	Rambhabai v. Totaram ..	71	727
192	Souba v. Dattatraya ..	71	831
193	Arjun v. Narayan ..	71	445
195	Krishna Bai v. Dabisingh ..	71	409
197	Makundram v. Shri Krishna...	73	142
198	Seth Narayandas v. Kamlabai	69	529
199	Rani Saheba Dhan Kumari Devi v. Thakur Mahendra Singh ..	71	443
201	Malhar Rao v. Martand Rao	To be printed.
208	Nayajukhan v. Emperor ..	69	640
209	Dhapu v. Ramautar ..	70	209
210	Ambadas v. Laxman ..	71	401
211	Yade Prasad v. Gangaram ..	70	72
213	Narayan v. Venkatrao ..	72	422
214	Latif v. Pandhari ..	Not reportable.
219	Mitsui Bussan v. Padamraj ..	72	461
222	Singhai Kanchedilal v. Shridhar ..	72	427
223	Hanumantrao v. G. I. P. Ry.	72	333
225	Laxmichand v. Narayan ..	To be printed.
226	Shriram Motiram v. Sheikh Ahamad ..	73	39
227	Hindusingh v. Mangal ..	72	438
229	Bhagirathibai v. Kesho Ganpatrao ..	72	45
230	Gunpat v. Bissesarlal Govind Ram ..	71	491
234	Hirasa v. Onkar ..	72	458
236	Behari Lal v. Jagannath ..	72	473

	Nagpur Judicial Commmissioner's Court—contd.
237	Pandurang v. Shripat ..	72	318
239	Maganmal v Darbarilal ..	72	395
241	Sheonarayan v. Ramprasad ..	74	31
243	Govardhandas v. Wahedkhan	73	24
246	Dhanu Singh v. Keshoprasad	72	388
247	Mahilal v. Bindraban ..	Not reportable.
248	Kashiram v. Emperor ..	73	262
251	Manjoo v. Emperor ..	73	266
255	Jhibu v. Balaji ..	73	228
257	Vithal v Ramchandra ..	72	327
258	Tulsiram v. Tilokchand ..	68	829
260	Suganchand v. Chunilal ..	72	361
261	Gopala v. Sakharam ..	73	15
262	Fida Ali v. Sanai Badar ..	73	1012
264	Yeshwant Rao v. Nagpur Municipality ..	73	52
265	Kushibai v. Manrakhan ..	79	422
272	Mohan Lal Balbhadra v. Bissesardas Daga ..	73	221
273	Sheoram v. Jamnabai ...	65	593
274	Rupabai v. Rodba ...	72	121
281	Mulchand v. Radhabai ...	73	251
282	Govind v. Dheklu ...	To be printed.
283	Dau v. Ramprasad ...	Not reportable.
284	Krishnaji v Sukhdeo ...	73	65
285	Puranlal v. Chikkatia Mali ...	73	7
286	Lachman v. Balwant Singh ...	To be printed.
287	Sarje Rao v Harakchand ...	Not reportable.
288	Ramnath v. Sitaram ...	74	81
289	Vithoba v. Babulal ...	65	415
290	Onkarsa v. Bridichand ...	73	1037
291	Vithoba v. Sitaram ...	65	324
292	Padamsi v. Sesarao ...	72	1055
293	Kalicharan v. Ratansingh ...	75	589
295	Pandurang v. Kishan ...	74	20
296	Gangadhar v. Govind Narain ..	74	107
297	Nilkanth v. Suryabhan ...	75	80
298	Ayub Kareem v. Jaffar Ayub	74	45
300	Arjun v. Chhaganlal ...	72	1044
301	Thakurda v. Behari ...	78	177
305	Gangu v. Kongshi ..	74	53
306	Lakshman v. Keshco Rao ..	73	1021
307	Ramrat Bi v. Bhuri Bi ..	73	959
309	Pitambar Das v. G. I. P. Ry...	Not reportable.
310	Narayan v. Tukaram ..	74	93
311	Meghraj v. Kesheo Gopal ..	73	8
313	Ramrao v. Emperor ..	75	158
314	Jiwandas v. Agent, E. I. Ry ..	73	1033
317	Vithoba v. Lal Singh ..	76	980
320	Babooji v. Ramgopal ..	73	32
321	Rajanna v. Narayan ..	76	395
322	Lachhminarayan v. Zahirul Said Alvi ..	76	772
324	Harnarayan v. Radhakisan ..	75	906
326	Sakharam v. Ramchandra ..	75	914
	Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—concld.
327	Bapu v. Vithoba ..	76	193
329	Shankar Rao v. Khushal Rao	75	999
330	Mahtapkuar v. Ashabi ..	76	68
332	Kamal Narayan v. Bamram ..	75	440
333	Sukharam v. Gotabai ..	75	823
334	Faiz Ali v Harkuar ..	77	50
336	Parasram v. Kanhaiya ..	To be printed.
	Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court.
158	Kandhi v. Husain Bibi ..	77	763
159	Ram Adhin v. Gaya Prasad ..	77	771
160	Jhanda Singh v. Anwar Khan	77	770
161	Muhammad Naqi Khan v. Rahmat Unnisa ..	76	502
162	Sheo Jiawan v. Mithana ..	76	500
163	Brij Bhukhan v. Ram Kirat	78	565
165	Emperor v. Ramshar Tewari	74	539
167	Parmeshar Din v. Emperor ..	81	07
172	Mahomed Yanus Khan v. Gulab Singh ..	74	715
173	Mahesha v Rameshar ..	74	795
175	Special Manager, Court of Wards v. Gulzari Lal ..	To be printed.
176	Muhammad Jafar v. Ram Charan ..	74	326
177	Farzand Ali v. Ekadashi ..	73	591
180	Chintaman v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
181	Nand Kishore v. Kishori Lal	74	299
182	Ganga Baksh v. Raghubar Singh ..	73	27
185	Zarif-un-nisa v. Shafiq uz zaman ..	75	626
200	Mata Ghulam Singh v. Sital Prasad ..	74	409
208	Shyam Lal v Radhe Shyam	74	546
209	Abdul Hakim v. Sajjad Husain	74	304
212	Rohilkhand & Kumaon Ry. v. Brij Raj ...	72	428
214	Khalil Ullah v. Ewaz Ali ...	74	390
216	Jugnu Khan v. Rudra Partab Singh ..	74	429
217	Emperor v. Narotam ...	74	434
227	Rup Kishore v. Kanhaiya Lal	71	562
235	Sheo Palton v. Sukhdeo Singh	74	401
236	Hayat Muhammad v. Nageshwar Prasad ...	72	320
237	Mahommad Ali v. Hasan Jaffar ...	74	489
238	Beni Madho v Shamsad Ali	74	253
240	Karim Baksh v. Abdul Huq ..	74	249
241	Nawab Mirza v. Khushal Chand ..	74	245
242	Fateh Singh v. Jagannath Bakhsh Singh ..	74	510
246	Mohammad Abbas v. Shahamat Hussain ..	79	274

	Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court—concld.
247	Kishan Lal v. Moosi Raza ..	72	57
250	Kunj Behari v. Bhuta ..	72	193
251	Sheo Nandan v. Sheo Balak ..	71	974
252	Ashfaq Hussain v. Bunyad Hussain ..	77	874
254	Yakub Beg v. Rasul Beg ..	74	517
265	Ram Ratan v. Ganga Baksh ..	71	581
271	Binda Prasad v. Benarsi Das	77	116
272	Binda Prasad v. Banarsi Das	77	115
	Patna High Court.
153	Ramdheyan Ram v. Ram Dularia ..	65	576
153	Nabijan v. Saljfan ..	67	635
154	Mahabir Misser v. Aso Kuer ..	67	435
155	Hari Bux v. Chhedi Pande ..	67	501
156	Basdeo Narain Singh v. Harakh Narain Singh ..	68	942
157	Mohammad Ishaq v. Emperor	65	552
158	Dasrath Singh v. Emperor ..	67	502
159	Ram Shivendra Narain v. Awadh Bihari ..	68	629
162	Nandkeshwar v. Sudarshan Ram ..	63	804
163	Sadhu Saran v. Ambika Lal ..	63	679
165	Rameshwar Narain v. Riknath Kouri ..	67	451
174	Kesho Prasad Singh v. Baagwat Saran ..	67	710
176	Chatter Kumari v. Pratabdeoj Singh ..	67	859
180	Gour Chandra v. Janardan Prasad ..	68	337
183	Kuldip Singh v. Ram Sewak Singh ..	67	795
185	Manzur-ul-Haq v. King-Emperor ..	71	703
185	In re Madhava Singh ..	72	875
187	Mahomed Yakub v. Abdul Quddus ..	63	372
197	Jatadhari Singh v. Dukhi Singh ..	72	1053
199	Jai Pragash Singh v. Rupmanjari ..	71	940
201	Ram Lochan Baid v. Kumar Kamakhya Narain ..	71	570
203	Brij Ratan Das v. Raghunandan Gir ..	71	944
205	Hari Prasad Chowdhury v. Harihar Prasad Choudhury	70	804
206	Jaideb Thakur v. Jamahir Missir ..	69	565
209	Bahadur Singh v. Hukum Chand ..	71	11
213	Moore v. Rai Babu Gulab Chand Saheb ..	73	5
215	Midnapur Zemindary Co., Ltd. v. Madan Marwari ..	70	782
217	Dhirasshal Singh v. Triloki Prashad Singh ..	71	318
	Patna High Court—contd.
218	Kartar Rai v. Taley Chowdhury ..		To be printed.
218	Jagernath Dass v. Jarg Bahadur Rai ..	71	887
223	Syed Baker Hussain v. Mirza Hussain Mirza ..	73	373
224	Ram Sumran Prasad v. Ram Bahadur ..	71	741
226	Brij Raj Krishna v. Chathu Singh ..	76	136
228	Gobind Swain v. King-Emperor ..		To be printed.
229	Jiblal Teli v. Gena Sahu ..	72	956
231	Taeswar Dutt v. Lakhan Prashad Singh ..		To be printed
236	Mohit Narain Jha v. Kamal Nath Jha ..		To be printed.
238	Gajo Singh v. Emperor ..	72	959
239	Sheonandan Chowdhury v. Debi Lal Chowdhury ..	71	484
242	Ram Sunder v Amrit Pajiyar	72	135
242	Pande Satdeo Narain v. Ramayan Tewari ..	71	705
259	Rameshwar Singh v. Narendra Nath Das ..	71	916
268	Kanhai Lal Khemka v. Thakur Prasad Singh ..	79	9
275	Bhikhu Mandal v Bhikeharar Dutta ..	78	780
276	Kesho Prasad Singh v. Parmeshri Prasad Singh ..	71	902
285	G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Jitan Ram Nimal Ram ..	72	440
290	Lal Bihari Singh v. Gur Prasad Singh ..	71	948
292	Bajnath Sahay v. King-Emperor ..	72	71
293	Shahdeo Shukul v. Jageshar Prasad Shukul ..		Not reportable.
295	Ramparichan Singh v. Baranji Prasad Singh ..	72	157
296	Lakurka Coal Co., Ltd. v. Biseswar Chatterji ..		Not reportable.
297	Jagarnath v. King-Emperor ..		Not reportable.
297	Kabir Shah v. King-Emperor		Not reportable.
298	Rameshwar Dass Mali Ram v. E. I. Ry Co., Ltd., ..	71	565
299	Gajadhar Singh v. King-Emperor ..		Not reportable.
301	Adelaide Christiana Lish v. David Lish ..	72	657
303	Ramati Raut v. Mahanth Hanuman Saran ..	76	1049

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923.—contd.

Patna High Court—contd.

305	Kunj Lal v. Kanhai Mahto ..	68	61
307	Lakshmi Prasad v. Emperor	65	492
309	Raghunath Das v. Sheo Kumar Missir ..	67	464
322	Barclay v. Dhandevi ..	71	937
324	Maharaja Bahadur Kesho Prasad Singh v. Ramjas Pande ..	79	199
325	Badri Das v. East Indian Railway Co. ..	79	571
327	Damodar Prasad v. Ram Sarup Kumar ..	71	843
331	Ayodhya Kuar v. Durga Prasad ..	71	383
337	Baidyanath v. Bholanath Roy	76	991
338	Jairam Sahu v. Emperor ..	72	954
340	Stonewigg v. Rameshwar Narayan Singh ..	71	1022
342	Ranjit Sahi v. Maulvi Qasim	72	916
344	Jagnarain Dubey v. Bidapat Dubey ..	72	409
346	Ram Das v. Damodar Prasad	72	218
348	Saroj Kumar v. Emperor ..	67	592
348	Miss. C. K. H. Stoney v. Miss. Murtle Stoney ..	72	811
353	Kunja Singh v. Barho Ray ..	73	12
354	Rameshwardhari Singh v. Sadhu Saran ..	72	629
355	Dhobi Roy v. Mahadeo Singh ..	73	451
356	Thibu Bhogta v. Emperor ..	73	569
361	Tarak Chaudhry v. Emperor	73	158
363	Mohodra Koer v. Khuban Panday ..	Not reportable.
364	Kedar Nath v. Jaleshwar Ram	72	883
366	Abdul Hamid v. Hasan Raza	72	951
368	Newa Lal v. Emperor ..	72	613
369	Ramjhatia v. Piar Koeri ..	73	173
371	Basanta Kumari v. Balmakund ..	72	912
375	Isnan Chandra v. Niranjan ..	72	1049
380	Ramcharan v. Sheo Dutta ..	74	619
381	Janki Ray v. Kalanand Singh	74	464
384	Janendra Nath v. Jogendra Narain Sinha ..	74	608
385	Radha Gopal v. Lakshmi Narain ..	71	341
386	Satyataran v. Jyoti Prasad	76	940
391	Bhola Pandey v. Ram Bi as ..	71	395
397	Kesho Prasad v. Ramdeni Singh	74	454
401	Jantra Koer v. Ali Jan Darji	71	478
402	Chaturgun Bind v. Tilakdhari Singh ..	71	470
404	Dasi Chamar v. Ram Autar Singh ..	71	475
405	Harnarain v. Nand Keshwar	71	573
407	Jamil Ahmed v. Kesho Das ..	72	1035
410	Jharu Lal v. Ma anath Madan Das ..	74	713
411	Ramjas v. Linton Molesworth & Co. ..	73	71
413	Ramjit Ahir v. Emperor ..	74	703
417	Khozaima v. Official Liquidator Kayestha Trading and Banking Corporation Ltd ..	Not reportable.
418	Sham Sundar v. Mushaheb Lal	72	907
420	Mahomed Wahab Husain v. Abas Hussain ..	71	280
423	Makund Deb v. Sri Jagannath	72	230
433	Najmunnissa v. Jagmohan ..	72	910
435	Mahabir Ram v. Rambahadur	72	625
436	Arjun Sahu v. Kelai Rath ..	74	150
437	Rambarai Rai v. Sagina Rai..	75	363
438	Bansidhar Marwari v. Indar Narain Singh ..	73	161
441	Narsingh Thakur v. Bishun Pargash Singh ..	74	642
443	Dukhit Ojha v. Janki Singh..	71	489
445	Damrupat v. Rameshwar ..	73	317
446	Jai Krishna v. Soghra ..	71	881
451	Medni Prasad Singh v. Nand Keshwar Prasad Singh ..	To be printed.
453	Fulbati Kumari v. Maheshwari Prasad Singh ..	74	668
464	Jagdip Prasad v. Rajo Kuer..	75	1022
470	Jaldhari Rai v. Abdul Kabir..	74	649
474	Emperor v. Ali Hyder ..	To be printed.
475	Muhammad Fahimal Huq v. Jagat Ballav Ghoshand ..	74	403
481	Dalpherao Mian v. Bangali Mali ...	71	897
483	Sadho Saran v. Anant Rai ...	77	14
487	Bhagwandas v. E. I. Ry. Co.	72	103
488	Ramashivendra Narain v. Awadh Behari ...	71	332
490	Aulad Ali v. Abdul Hamid ...	74	132
492	R. B. Man Singh v. Nawalakhbati ...	73	822
514	Surajdeo Narain v. Partap Rai	75	284
517	Jugal Kishore v. Bhatu Modi...	To be printed.
518	Sheo Prasad Singh v. Sukhu Mahto ...	72	148
519	Bhangi Dubey v. Emperor ...	72	360
520	Firm Jainarain Ramjash v. Sitaram ...	74	941
521	Indebasi Koer v. Satnarain Singh ...	74	626
525	Jaibhadur v. Matukdhari ...	76	113
527	Wahari Mander v. Emperor ...	74	857
528	Sukhari Nonia v. Ramkhelawan ...	72	69
529	Mohammad Moinuddin Ashrif v. Mohammad Ishaq Ashraf	75	265
530	Mahomed Maudood v. Rameshwar Singh ...	74	693
532	Gajo Chaudhry v. Debi ...	72	945
536	Heni v. Emperor ...	74	947
537	Jalal Jha v. Emperor ...	To be printed.

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—contd.

Patna High Court—concld.

539	Nand Kishore v. Kalika Missir ...	74	957
540	Rangi Sah v. B. N. W. Ry. Co.	74	1047
542	Chote Lal Modi v. Emperor ...	74	710
545	Gajadhar Mull v. Thakur Singh ..	To be printed.
546	Nand Kishore v. Kalika Missir ..	75	69
547	Emperor v. Bhola Bhagat ..	72	375
550	Gansa Oraon v. Emperor ..	73	561
558	Chattrapat Pratab Bahadur Sahai v. C. G. Lees ..	72	648
562	Ganesh Narain v. Manik Lal Chandra ..	73	194
564	Bhagwan Lal v. Rajendra Prasad ..	77	1
572	Jagdhari Rai v. Laugat Gope	75	676
575	Bhagjogni v Sakhi Mahton ..	77	500
576	Kaniz Zohra v. Muztaba Husain ..	77	209
581	Kesho Prasad Singh v. Lakhu Rai ..	75	305
585	Jhobali Rai v. Sakhi Rai ..	79	335
588	Lakhpat Gope v. Emperor ..	72	544
589	Ramdulari Koer v. Jang Bahadur Singh ...	77	378
590	Shyam Sunder v. Jagarnath...	74	758
592	Binanand Sawase v. Thuroo Mahto ...	76	277
597	Karshan Bhaban v. Indra Narayan Chandra ...	73	49
600	Bhuneshwari Prasad Singh v. Kishun Dayal ...	72	405

Rangoon High Court.

138	Maung Pein v. Maung Po Maung ..	To be printed.
139	Emperor v. Rambahadur Roy	To be printed.
140	Emperor v. Rangalal Singh ..	81	74
141	Ah Lim v. Emperor ...	75	71
143	Nag Po Myit v. Emperor ..	81	75
144	Nga San Dun v. Emperor ..	75	307
145	Nga Po Ya v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
146	U Th dama Waya v. Emperor	74	65
147	Mg. Shwe Zin v. Mg. Po Ngwe	81	53
148	Maung M ung v. Emperor ..	To be printed.
149	Siddik Ahmed v. M. K. M. Firm ..	To be printed.
150	Maung Maung Tin v. Ma Hla U ..	75	200
151	Maung Kyaw Dun v. Ma Seen	74	58
152	Ma Mi v. Emperor ..	75	358
153	Maung Chit U. v. Bansi Dhar	75	328

Rangoon High Court—contd.

154	Abdul Hakiem v. Nga Ni Gri ..	75	343
155	Ma Lun Me v. Ma Kin ..	74	1037
156	Ma Thein Tin v. Htoo ..	75	322
157	Maung Shwe Ku v. Emperor..	75	353
159	Maung Tun Yin v. Mathein Shin ..	75	304
160	Maung Po Han v. Ma So Yi ..	75	6
161	Maung Tha Gyaw v. Emperor	76	646
163	SS. Heiwa Maru v. Bird & Co...	76	458
171	Ma Hmun v. Ma Ngwa Thin..	74	104
174	Apalu v. Emperor ..	75	295
176	S. M. A. R. Chetty Firm v. Ko Taik ..	74	82
180	Maung Po Maung v. May Pyit Ya ..	74	933
185	Jupiter General Insurance Co. v. Abdul Aziz ..	76	479
187	U Gunuwa v. U Pyinnyadipa...	74	6
188	Thag v. Emperor ..	75	296
189	Maung Po Kan v Daw At ..	To be printed.
193	Dawoodjee & Sons v. Rangoon Municipality ...	76	519
195	Phoman Singh v. A J. Wells	76	677
196	Maung Hlaing v Maung Chit Su ...	76	449
197	Emperor v. Nga Sein Po ...	76	21
199	Maung Tun U v. Maung Po Shok ...	76	504
202	Rampiar v. Deva Rama ...	76	475
205	Maung Po Thaung v. Ma Gyi	76	812
206	Ma Ngwe Kin v. Ma Hme ...	74	100
208	K. K. Secunder v. J. A. M. Kasaiar & Co. ..	76	441
209	Ahmad Ebrahim v. A. A. Ganny	74	74
211	Nga Po Tin v. Nga Po Soung ...	74	68
212	U Damadaya v. Emperor ...	74	954
214	Ah Shein v. Emperor ...	76	396
215	Takir Ram v. Swami Naidu ...	77	1021
216	Maung Po Hmyin v. J. B. Bhattacharjee ...	76	649
218	Ma Shwe Yin v. Maung Ba Tin ..	76	620
222	Aung Dun v. Maung Tun Ya	76	508
223	A. H. D. Jones v. K. Jones ...	76	597
225	Abdul Aziz v. Maung Tin ...	75	74
226	Ma Theirn Tin v. Maung Ba Than ...	76	493
227	Emperor v. Nga Po Chit ...	74	1050
230	Mg. Po. Kin v. Mg. Oh ...	Not reportable.
231	Emperor v. Annawadin ...	74	960
232	Ma Hin Tha v. Ma Thet Sa ...	75	624
236	Bon Kwi v. Ma Kye Yon ...	79	244
237	Maung Sin v. Maung Maung	76	617
238	Chan Pyu v. Chan Chor Khine	75	225
239	Maung No v. Maung Po Thein	76	612
242	Maung Paung v Ma On ...	To be printed.
244	Ma Saw v. Maung Shwe Gon	75	309

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM MAY TO DECEMBER 1923—concld.

	Rangoon High Court—contd.
245	Maung San Myin v. Emperor	To be printed.
246	Ma Sha Ma v. Somasundaram Chetty ...	75	217
247	Kra Chan U v. Emperor ...	76	575
248	Valliappa Chetty v. Joseph ...	To be printed.
250	Maung San Ya v. Maung Ngwe Hla ...	To be printed.
251	Nag Nwaik v. Emperor ...	74	1042
252	Maung Sa v. Ma U Ma ...	76	600
253	Parliam v. Emperor ...	Not reportable.

	Rangoon High Court—concld.
254	Dawson's Bank Ltd. v. C. R. V. V. Chetty Firm ...	76	522
256	Sook Lal v. Dal Chand ...	74	835
257	Maung Hmat v. Ma Htay ...	76	494
258	Ma Zan Nyein v. Maung Kyaw Zan ...	74	1027
261	Ma Mi v. Hadji Mahomed ...	75	31
265	Shakoor & Co. v. Finlay F & Co. ...	79	291
268	Nga Maung Gyi v. Emperor ...	76	705
271	Ma Hla U v. Maung Shwe Yin ...	76	814

Alphabetical List of Cases reported in Volume 77 of Indian Cases with references to the Volumes and Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page.
A. K. Maitra v. Kamini Mohan Bose ..	25 Cr. L. J. 377 ..	425
Abdul Matlab v. Nanda Lal ..	50 C. 423; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 674; 25 Cr. L. J. 526 ..	990
Abdul Rashid Khan v. Nisar Muhammad Khan ..	45 A. 691: (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 143; 21 A. L. J. 622; 25 Cr. L. J. 400 ..	448
Abdulla v. M. V. R. S. Firm ..	2 Bur. L. J. 229; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 153 ..	866
Adiraju Arasu Kannike Ballala v. Pattu ..	(1922) A. I. R. (M.) 405 ..	942
Afagan Sahib v. Abdul Majid Khan ..	19 L. W. 164; (1924) M. W. N. 265; (1922) A, I. R. (M) 512 ..	764
Afsar Khan v. Shabu Mondal ..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 148 ..	556
Ahad Shah v. Ayshan Begum ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 564 ..	762
Aisamma v. Moidir Kunhi ..	(1923) M. W. N. 633; 18 L. W. 520; 45 M. L. J. 690; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 111; 47 M. 160 ..	264
Alia v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 513; 25 Cr. L. J. 399 ..	447
Allah Bakhsh v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 415 ..	495
Allah Ditta v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 435 ..	723
Amar Prasad v. Gagan Chandra ..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 180 ..	522
Ambalai Sarabhai, In re ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1225; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 182 ..	559
Ambika Singh v. Emperor ..	1 Pat. 212; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 498; 25 Cr. L. J. 431 ..	607
Amrit Bibi v. Mustafa Husain ..	21 A. L. J. 750; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 20; 46 A. 28 ..	66
Aruuachela Goundan v. Swaminatha Aiyar ..	19 L. W. 27; (1924) M. W. N. 144; 46 M. L. J. 240 ..	547
Ashfaq Hussain v. Bunyad Hussain ..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 252; 9 O. & A. L. R. 415 ..	874
Ashraf Ali v. Rameshwar Nath ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 684 ..	908
Ashu v. Maung Po Khan ..	2 Bur. L. J. 236; 1 R. 632; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 100; 25 Cr. L. J. 485 ..	885
Ata Muhammad v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 692; 5 L. L. J. 475; 25 Cr L. J. 494 ..	894
Atmaram v. Balaji Raghunath ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1032; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 178 ..	307
Aung Rhi v. Ma Aung Krwa Pru ..	1 R. 557; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 139 ..	362
Azad Khan v. Nasib Gul ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 553 ..	535
B. R. Bahadar v. Jadawjee Mehta ..	2 Bur. L. J. 235; 1 R. 687; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 172; 25 Cr L. J. 482 ..	882
Baba v. Sukkha ..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 165 ..	918
Babaji Ramling Gurav v. Appa Vithavja Sutar ..	25 Bom. L. R. 789; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 154 ..	130
Babu Ram v. Ram Dulari Debi ..	26 O. C. 194; (1924) A. I. R (O.) 30 ..	701
Babusing Narayanji v. Sambhaj Shiwaji ..	(1923) A I. R. (B.) 294 ..	419
Badan Singh v. Emperor ..	3 L. 373; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 11; 25 Cr. L. J. 337 ..	225
Badr-ud-din v. Muhammad Hafiz ..	20 A. L. J. 726; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 481; 44 A. 743 ..	129
Badri Das Janakidas v. Mathanmal ..	(1922) A. I. R. (L.) 185 ..	327
Badri Prasad v. Murli Dhar ..	9 O. & A. L. R. 846 ..	535
Baj Singh v. Partap Singh ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 497 ..	473
Balak Ram v. Muhammad Said ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 695: 5 L. L. J. 530 ..	872
Baldeo Misir v. Ramlagan Shukul ..	21 A. L. J. 648; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 82; 45 A. 709 ..	604

Balla v. Baru Mal	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 685	926
Banarsi Das v. Emperor	..	53 P. L. R. 1922; 4 L. L. J. 482; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 92; 25 Cr. L. J. 525	989
Banke Lal v. Kanhaiya Lal	..	9 O. L. J. 637	839
Barhati v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 539; 25 Cr. L. J. 426	602
Basanti v. Chenda Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 502	475
Basha Naud v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 610 25 Cr. L. J. 483	883
Begraj v. Alisher	..	(1923) A. I. R. (S.) 50; 16 S. L. R. 278	897
Beharilal v. Kalka	..	25 O. C. 282; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 45	695
Bhagjogni v. Sakhi Mahton	..	(1923) Pat. 234; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 575	500
Bhagwan Das v. Mohabbat Shah	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 170	935
Bhagwan Lal v. Rajendra Prasad	..	4 P. L. T. 409; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 564	1
Bhairab Chandra Das v. Midnapur Zemindari Co. Ltd.	..	38 C. L. J. 372	1015
Bharata Ayyar, In re	..	19 L. W. 275; 46 M. L. J. 324; (1924) M. W. N. 305; 34 M. L. T. 167; 25 Cr. L. J. 370	418
Bhoj Raj v. Hardeva	..	20 A. L. J. 608; 44 A. 726; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 140	140
Bhola Nath v. Rasool Bakhsh	..	9 O. & A. L. R. 631; 26 O. C. 378	78
Bhulu Beg v. Jatindra Nath Sen	..	27 C. W. N. 24; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 138	1035
Bhupendra Nath Mukherjee v. Monohar Mukherjee	..	28 C. W. N. 86; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 456	783
Bikarama Prasad v. Emperor	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 292; 25 Cr. L. J. 387	435
Bikram Singh v. Nihal Chand	..	25 Cr. L. J. 544	1008
Bikram Singh v. Suraj Bakhsh Singh	..	26 O. C. 295; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 125	618
Bilash Chandra v. Emperor	..	27 C. W. N. 626; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 647; 25 Cr. L. J. 243	231
Binda Prasad v. Banarsi Das	..	10 O. L. J. 205; 9 O. & A. L. R. 847; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 272	115
Binda Prasad v. Banarsi Das	..	10 O. L. J. 206; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 271	116
Bindra v. Bhagwanta	..	25 Cr. L. J. 359	295
Bishambhar Nath v. Muhammad Ubaid Ullah Khan	..	21 A. L. J. 503; 45 A. 581; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 586	572
Bodh Raj v. Raja Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 668	906
Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai	..	21 A. L. J. 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 C. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 P. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 46 A. 95; 26 Bom. L. R. 500 P. C.	689
Buta v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 457	809
Chanbasapa Puttappa v. Chanbasava Mallappa Yaligar	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1078; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 176	336
Chanbasappa Mallappa v. Malkappa Lingappa	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 368	475
Chandra Mohan Das v. Emperor	..	27 C. W. N. 148; 25 Cr. L. J. 528	592
Chandu Lal v. Emperor	..	21 A. L. J. 776; 25 Cr. L. J. 348; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 186	236
Chatur v. Rukmangad Singh	..	25 O. C. 181; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 249	562
Chaturbhai Lallubhai Patel v. Motibhai Bapuji Patel	..	24 Bom. L. R. 1315; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 146	952
Chhiddu v. Desraj	..	21 A. L. J. 793	753
Chhotabhai Hirachand v. Maganabhai Naginbhai	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 271	570
Chinniah, In re	..	19 L. W. 219; 46 M. L. J. 309; (1924) M. W. N. 237; 34 M. L. T. 195; 25 Cr. L. J. 367	303
Chitu v. Charan Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 563	705
Chitto v. Ganga Sahai	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 527	638
Commissioner of Income-Tax, Madras v. Arunachellam Chettiar	..	46 M. L. J. 68; 19 L. W. 125; (1924) M. W. N. 326; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 474	772
Corporation of Calcutta v. Bijoy Kumar Addy	..	27 C. W. N. 787; 50 C. 813; 38 C. L. J. 360; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 334	529

Dadabhoy Framjee Cama v, Cowasji Dorabji Panday ..	47 B. 349: 24 Bom. L. R. 1111; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 177 ..	83
Daddiprasad v. District Magistrate, Yeotmal ..	25 Cr. L. J. 346 ..	231
Dalganjan v. Emperor ..	22 A. L. J. 81; 25 Cr. L. J. 481 ..	881
Darapali Sadagar v. Najir Ahmed ..	50 C. 394; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 669 ..	1030
Darya Singh v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 666; 25 Cr. L. J. 520 ..	984
Dattatraya Bhimrao Sabnis v. Gangabai Ganeshbhat ..	24 Bom. L. R. 69; 46 B. 541; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 321 ..	17
Daulat Bai v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 537; 25 Cr. L. J. 424 ..	600
Dehri Sonar v. Emperor ..	50 C. 367, (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 707; 25 Cr. L. J, 527 ..	991
Deviprasad v. Jagannadharaju ..	46 M. L. J. 12; (1924) M. W. N. 125; 33 M. L. T. 243; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 281 ..	464
Dhondi Subhane Powar v. Secretary of State for India ..	25 Bom. L. R. 785; (1923) A. I. R, (B.) 478	146
Dilbar Hossain v. Sadaruddin Choudhuri ..	27 C. W. N. 469; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 568 ..	77
Dalhin Sona Kuer v. Bibi Ale Fatima ..	*Patna High Court ..	157
Durga v. Jamna Prasad ..	9 O. & A. L. R. 617; 26 O. C. 368 ..	109
Durga Charan Mitra v. Rajendra Narain ..	36 C. L. J. 467; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 57 ..	558
Durga Prasad v. Het Ram ..	20 A. L. J. 912; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 79 ..	91
Dwarka Prasad v. Ram Dei ..	10 O. L. J. 360; 10 O.& A. L. R. 194; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 120 ..	329
East Indian Railway Company v. Gopi Krishna Kashi Prasad ..	21 A. L. J. 448; 45 A 534; (1924) A I. R. (A.) 8 ..	1046
East Indian Railway Company v. Nadia Coal Company ..	1 P. L. R. 336; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 39 ..	260
Emperor v. Banarsi ..	22 A. L. J. 144; 46 A. 254; 25 Cr. L. J. 477	829
——— v. Basta Singh ..	3 L. 437; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 267; 25 Cr. L. J. 342 ..	230
——— v. Bhubaneswar Nag ..	25 Cr. L. J. 325 ..	181
——— v. Limalanand Das Gupta ..	38 C. L. J. 353; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 329; 25 Cr. L. J. 522 ..	986
——— v. Dattatraya Shankar Paranjpe ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1089; 47 B. 960; (1924) A. I. R (B.) 184; 25 Cr. L. J. 531 ..	995
——— v. Har Prasad ..	21 A. L. J. 42; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 91; 45 A. 226; 25 Cr. L. J. 497 ..	961
——— v. Khanu Koti ..	25 Cr. L. J. 462 ..	814
——— v. Mahomed Punjal ..	25 Cr. L. J. 448 ..	736
——— v. Marmaduke Pickthall ..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 242; 25 Cr L. J. 388 ..	436
——— v. Mithoo ..	25 Cr. L. J. 428 ..	604
——— v Moulabux ..	25 Cr. L. J. 439 ..	727
——— v. Nga The: She ..	1 L. B. R. 375; (1922) A. I. R. (L. B.) 40; 25 Cr. L. J. 518 ..	982
——— v. Sadhu Charan Das ..	26 C. W. N. 414; 49 C. 600; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 409; 25 Cr. L. J. 529 ..	993
——— v. Sarju Prasad ..	10 O. L. J. 208; 9 O. & A. I. R. 867; (1924) A I. R. (O.) 32; 25 Cr. L. J 336 ..	192
Farida v. Khaira ..	3 L. 79; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 290 ..	336
Fateh Muhammad Chaudhuri v. Sita Chaudhrain	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 278 ..	539
Fazal Haq v. Aziz Hasan ..	(1923) A. I. R, (A) 163 ..	940
Forbes v. Hanuman Bhagat ..	1 P. L. R. 190; 4 P. L. T. 414; 2 Pat. 452; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 88 ..	32
Fitz-Holmes v. Bank of Upper India ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 548; 4 L. 253; 5 L. L. J. 438 ..	523
Gajadhar v. Megha ..	20 A. L. J. 358; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 337; 44 A. 546 ..	502
Gajanan Sakharam v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 473 ..	825
Gania v. Ganga Prasad ..	6 N. L. J. 209 ..	738
Ganpat v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 356 ..	292
Ganpatrao v. Laxmichand ..	6 N. L. J. 239 (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 1 ..	640
Garlinge v. Garlinge ..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 504; 44 A. 745 ..	133

Ghanshamdas Balkrishnadas v. Motichand Harakchand ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1237; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 180 ..	747
Ghulam v. Emperor ..	4 L. 399; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 509; 25 Cr. L. J. 398 ..	446
Ghulam Fatima v. Khaira ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 674 ..	901
Gladstone Wyllie & Co. v. Joosub Peer Mahomed & Co. ..	27 C. W. N. 666; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 117 ..	868
Gobind Das v. Rupkishore ..	4 L. 367; 6 L. L. J. 25; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 65 ..	409
Gobind Prasad v. Jugdeep Sahai ..	1 P. L. R. 316; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 185 ..	252
Gokha Ram v. Sham Lal ..	3 L. 426; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 268 ..	174
Gokuldas Pitamber v. Odhavaji Gigabhai ..	25 Bom. L. R. 893; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 100	205
Gomti Misra v. Dhota Din Singh ..	26 O. C. 197; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 44 ..	737
Gopal Das v. Zainala Bibi ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 504 ..	477
Government of Bombay v. Khanderao Ramchandra Talpade ..	25 Bom. L. R. 794; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 417 ..	137
Govindlal Bansilal v. Bansilal Motilal ..	23 Bom. L. R. 1049; 46 (B.) 249 ..	931
Govindlal Bansilal v. Bansilal Motilal ..	24 Bom. L. R. 196; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 11	941
Gudri Khatik v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 595; 25 Cr. L. J. 486 ..	886
Gulsher Khan v. Ramswarup ..	19 N. L. R. 150; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 42 ..	620
Gulli Bhagat v. Narain Singh ..	2 Pat. 708; 25 Cr. L. J. 446; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 283 ..	734
Gurdit Singh v. Karam Dad ..	4 L. L. J. 199 ..	246
Habibar Rahman v. Saidannessa Bibi ..	38 C. L. J. 358; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 327 ..	907
Habibar Rahaman v. Saidannessa Bibi ..	38 C. L. J. 365; 51 C. 331; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 474 ..	919
Hari Chand v. Aya Ram ..	4 L. L. J. 321; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 403; 25 Cr. L. J. 386 ..	434
Haribhai Gulab v. Mathura Lallu ..	25 Bom. L. R. 929; 47 B. 940; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 140 ..	224
Haridasi Debi v. Gopeshwar Pyne ..	27 C. W. N. 646; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 599 ..	619
Harihar Prasad v. Shankar Dayal ..	10 O. L. J. 351; 10 O. & A. L. R. 119 ..	337
Harji Mal v. Devi Ditta Mal ..	4 L. 364; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 107 ..	398
Hasham Ali v. Umar Hayat ..	4 L. L. J. 57; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 193 ..	257
Hasti v. Hira ..	(1922) A. I. R. (L.) 37; 4 L. L. J. 201 ..	222
Hausla Bakhsh Singh v. Raj Bakhsh Singh ..	4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 47 ..	1028
Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapur Zamindari Co.	35 C. L. J. 493; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 25 ..	261
Hira Lal v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 440 ..	728
Hurbut John Amies v. Jal P. Virji ..	25 Bom. L. R. 778; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 41 ..	150
Husenuddin Nurddin v. Dulakshidas ..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 299 ..	474
Imam Ali v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 488 ..	888
Imperial Tobacco Co., Ltd. v. Albert Bonnan ..	50 C. 762; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 216 ..	193
Irappa v. Ningappa ..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 480 ..	901
Ishar Das v. Fazal Ilahi ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 522 ..	516
Jadab Chandra v. Romesh Chandra ..	27 C. W. N. 537; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 603	1022
Jadu Nandan Sahay v. Hanuman Sahay ..	(1923) Pat. 235; 4 P. L. T. 619; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 113 ..	461
Jafar v. Emperor ..	3 L. 371; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 443; 25 Cr. L. J. 345 ..	233
Jagat Singh v Achhaibar Singh ..	26 O. C. 191; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 15 ..	697
Jagdamba Kumari v. Wazir Narain Singh ..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 59; 44 M. L. J. 503; 37 C. L. J. 287; 32 M. L. T. 157; 4 P. L. T. 319; 25 Bom. L. R. 676; 2 Pat. 319; 18 L. W. 555; 28 C. W. N. 98; (1923) M. W. N. 460 P. C. ..	1041
Jagdishwar Narayan v. Muhammad Haziq Hussain ..	(1924) Pat. 142 ..	851
Jageshwar Kuer v. Tilakdhari Singh ..	2 Pat 746; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 267; 5 P. L. T. 422 ..	587
Jai Gobind Singh v. Abhairaj Singh ..	10 O. L. J. 216; 9 O. & A. L. R. 651; 26 O. C. 308; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 49	125
Jairam Kumbi v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 459 ..	811
Jalal-ud-din v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 471 ..	823

Jamnabai v. Fazalbhoy Heptoola	..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 184; 18 L. W. 437; 46 M. L. J. 160; 26 Bom. L. R. 189 P. C.	.. 355
Jamuna Rai v. Ramtahail Raut	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 387; 1 Pat. 19; 3 P. L. T. 790	.. 1039
Jang Bahadur v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 433	.. 721
Jang Bahadur Singh v. Ranjit Singh	..	10 O. L. J. 353; 10 O. & A. L. R. 189; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 141	.. 353
Jangi Singh v. Ganga Singh	..	10 O. L. J. 393; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 115	.. 391
Jassu Ram v. Emperor	..	4 L. 246; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 622; 25 Cr. L. J. 375	.. 423
Jatiram Gayan Das v. Dino Nath	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 163	.. 520
Jethu Misir v. Godawari Dutt	..	20 A. L. J. 619; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 411	107
Jhanda Singh v. Muhammad Anwar Khan	..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 160	.. 776
Jobeda Khatun v. Tulsi Charan Das	..	36 C. L. J. 472; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 82	564
Jogendra Singh v. Kesho Prasad Singh	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 429; 1 Pat. 764; (1923) Pat. 113; 1 P. L. R 91	.. 929
Johara Banoo v. Ganga Chandra	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 222	.. 1044
Jokhu v. Deokinandan Pandey	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 489	.. 630
Jokhu Rai v. Bhabhuti Rai	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 559	.. 760
Joti Prasad v. Durga Prasad	..	25 Cr. L. J. 454	.. 806
Kader Nath Singh v. Garrad	..	11 L. B. R. 382; (1922) A. I. R (L. B.) 40	.. 761
Kali Din v. Madho	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 169	.. 862
Kali Mutu Asri v. Mehra Hussein	..	11 L. B. R. 381; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 23	905
Kali Prasad Singh v. Mathura Prasad Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 28; 1 P. L. R. 16; 3 P. L. T. 813	.. 1051
Kandaswamy Goundan v. Subbai Goundan	..	46 M. L. J. 345; 34 M. L. T. 92; (1924) M. W. N. 338	.. 781
Kandhi v. Hussain Bibi	..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 158; 26 O. C. 352; 10 O. L. J. 611	.. 768
Kaniz Zohra v. Mujtaba Hussain	..	(1923) Pat. 241; 4 P. L. T. 613; 2 Pat. 819; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 576	.. 209
Kanshi Ram v. Haro	..	4 L. L. J. 214; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 235	251
Karm Din v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 617; 25 Cr. L. J. 539	1003
Karsandas Kalidas Ghia v. Chhotalal Motichand	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1037; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 119; 48 B. 259	.. 275
Kashi Pramanik v. Damu Pramanik	..	27 C. W. N. 28; 25 Cr. L. J. 524	.. 988
Kashi Rai v. Kali Kueri	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 554	.. 759
Kashinath Gyanoba Kikle v. Ganesh Sitaram Kulkarni	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B) 361	.. 506
Kashiram v. Barkya	..	7 N. L. J. 13	.. 46
Kasturibhai Manibhai v. Bai Mahalaxmi	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B) 464	.. 914
Keshav Narayan v. Ramchandra Ganesh	..	(1922) A. I. R. (B.) 156	.. 521
Keshavlal Punjalal v. Collector of Ahmedabad	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1240; 48 B. 75; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 228	.. 749
Kesho Prasad Singh v. Siv Saran Lal	..	30 M. L. T. 50; 15 L. W. 589; 26 C. W. N 689; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 226 P. C.	.. 44
Khizar v. Emperor	..	4 L. L. J. 322; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 410; 25 Cr. L. J. 533	.. 997
Kirpa v. Chiuti	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 530	.. 518
Kishen Prasad & Co., Ltd. v. Fullumal Hira-Lal	..	25 Bom. L. R. 888; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 165	.. 171
Kishori v. Parsadi	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 319	.. 382
Ko Po Maung v. Ma Mein Gale	..	1 R. 562; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 135	.. 380
Krishnalal Chunilal v. Dhirajlal Navnitlal	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 359	.. 502
Kuber Das v. Ram Din Kalwar	..	20 A. L. J. 769. (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 14; 44 A. 5	.. 927
Kumar Shoshi Kanta v. Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury	..	35 C. L. J. 339	.. 167
Kundan v. Mam Raj	..	4 L. L. J. 178; (1922) A. I. R (L.) 7	.. 274
Kundan Lal v. Makundi Kunwar	..	45 A. 571; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 153	.. 609

Kunj Behari Lal v. Abdul Hadi	..	4 U. P. L. R. (A.) 200	.. 1032
Kunja Mohan Chakravarty v. Manindra Chandra Roy	..	27 C. W. N. 542; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 619	253
Kushdia Loan Office v. Annada Charan Chakravarty	..	27 C. W. N. 631 (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 681	26
Lachman Prasad v. Majju	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 167	.. 913
Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Emperor	..	(1923) Pat. 220; 4 P. L. T. 622; 1 P. L. R. 229 Cr.; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat) 42, 25 Cr L. J. 321	.. 177
Lahini v. Bala	..	18 N. L. R. 85; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 227	798
Lal Singh v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 512; 25 Cr. L. J. 386	.. 434
Lalit Moham v. Noni Lal Satkar	..	25 Cr. L. J. 464; 27 C. W. N. 651; (1923) A. I. R (C.) 662; 39 C. L. J. 329	.. 816
Lallu Ram v. Emperor	..	21 A. L. J. 772 25 Cr. L. J. 332; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 194	.. 188
Laxman Mankar Kasar v. Ravji Dhansingh	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1027; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 150	.. 305
Laxmi Narayan v Ramratan	..	19 N. L. R. 178; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 55	761
Leibaoak Syndicate v. Finlay Fleming & Co	..	11 L. B. R. 326; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 84	920
Lila v. Emperor	..	9 O. L. J. 291; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 74; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 228; 25 Cr. L. J. 538	.. 1002
Linton Molesworth & Co. v. Jaggannath Supakar		1 P. L. R. 377; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat) 226	.. 403
Liquidator Union Bank of India v. Gobind Singh	..	4 L. 239; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 148	.. 338
Lyme v. Emperor	..	4 L. 382; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 17; 25 Cr L. J. 377	.. 425
Ma Pwa v. Muhammad Tambi	..	1 R. 533; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 124	.. 368
Ma Pyone v. Ma U.	..	2 Bur. L. J. 233; (1924) A. I. R. (R) 89	.. 877
Ma Than Than v. Ma Pwa Than	..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 156; 33 M. L. T. 361; 1 R 451; 2 Bur. L. J. 260; 46 M. L. J. 331 P. C.	.. 63
Madhavan Nair v. Abdur Rahiman	..	(1922) A. I. R. (M.) 404	.. 917
Mahadeo Prasad v. Dhiraj Singh	..	20 A. L. J. 752; 44 A. 772; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 7	.. 122
Mahadeo Ramchandra v. Raghoji Jijyaji	..	(1923) A I. R. (B.) 293	.. 472
Mahadevappa v. Kashirao	..	25 Bom. L. R. 797; (1923) A. I R. (B.) 467	92
Mahammad Hadi v. Debi Prasad	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 600	.. 871
Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Shri Bala Maharaj	..	(1923) A. I R. (P. C.) 194; (1923) M W. N. 638; 26 Bom. L. R. 252; 48 B. 1 P. C.	100
Mahendra Nath v. Milkhi Ram	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L) 689; 25 Cr. L. J. 523	.. 987
Mahommed Yunus v. Emperor	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 517; 50 C. 318; 25 Cr. L. J. 467	.. 819
Mahrana Kunwar v. David	..	21 A. L. J. 737; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 40; 46 A. 16	57
Mahtab Din v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 410	.. 490
Maila v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L) 691; 5 L. L. J. 523; 25 Cr. L. J. 519	.. 983
Manbodh Missir v. Bhairo Missir	..	(1922) Pat. 300; 4 U. P. L. (Pat.) 971 (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 559; 4 P. L. T. 322	848
Mangur Rai v. Shivanand Lal	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A) 575	.. 875
Mannoo Lal v. Lalji Chaube	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 213	.. 334
Manoharlal v. Amano	..	(1924) A. I. R. (N.) 14	.. 41
Maung Chit U v. Maung Tha Ku	..	4 U. B. R. 135; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 113	.. 258
Maung Hman v. Emperor	..	2 Bur. L. J. 238; 1 R. 689; (1924) A I. R. (R.) 172; 25 Cr L. J. 487	.. 887
Maung Lay v. Emperor	..	1 R 609; 25 Cr. L. J. 381; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 173	.. 429
Maung Lu Gale v. Maung Lu Po	..	4 U. B. R. 140; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 110	53
Maung Mu v. Maung Kau Gyi	..	1 R. 618; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 127	.. 393
Maung Tun Gyaw v. Maung Po Thwe	..	11 L. B. R. 354; (1922) A. I. R. (L. B.) 37	.. 923
Mihi Lal v. Babu Lal	..	(1922) A. I. R (O.) 200	.. 306

Mirza Mohamed v. Official Assignee ..	18 L. W. 277; (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 146 P. C. ..	755
Mohadeb Kudu v. Benode Lal Patra ..	(1921) A. I. R. (C.) 181 ..	534
Mohammad Ahsan Ali v. Masud Ali ..	10 O. L. J. 339; 10 O. & A. L. R. 146; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 149 ..	358
Mohendranath Bose v. Abinash Chandra Bose ..	27 C. W. N. 521; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 615	364
Mohesh Chandra Missra v. Nistarini Dassya ..	27 C. W. N. 449; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 382	576
Mohkem Singh v. Chandra Pal Singh ..	10 O. L. J. 374; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 140	346
Molar v. Kanahaya Lal ..	4 L. L. J. 188; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 58 ..	116
Monmatha Kumar Ray v. Josada Lal Podder ..	28 C. W. N. 300 ..	551
Morarji Premji Gokuldas v. Mulji Ranchhod Ved & Co. ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1014; 48 B. 20; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 232 ..	266
Moti Chand v. Manekchand Ramchand Gojar ..	(1922) A. I. R. (B.) 147 ..	515
Moti Ram v. Kanhya Mal ..	2 L. L. J. 514 ..	780
Motilal Jasraj v. Chand Mal Hindumal ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1082; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 155 ..	1055
Muhammad Aslam v. Jodh Singh ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 513 ..	416
Muhammad Din v. Zeb-un-nissa ..	3 L. 215; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 390 ..	541
Muhammad Hamid v. Mahmud ..	(1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 384; 44 M. L. J. 149; 32 M. L. T. 52; 27 C. W. N. 701; 4 L. 15; 25 Bom. L. R. 660; 38 C. L. J. 231; 1 P. W. R. 1923 P. C. ..	1009
Muhammad Ramzan v. Municipal Committee Alipur ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 534 ..	509
Mukund Ram v. Emperor ..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 273; 25 Cr. L. J. 537	1001
Mulla Faiz Ali v. Harkuar ..	(1923) A. I. R. (N.) 334 ..	50
Municipal Committee, Multan v. Motiram ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 686; 25 Cr. L. J. 373	421
Naba Kumar Das v. Rudra Narayan Jana ..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 95; (1923) M. W. N. 622; 45 M. L. J. 438; 33 M. L. T. 309; 28 C. W. N. 589; 10 O. & A. L. R. 521 P. C. ..	141
Nagava Gurlingaya v. Collector of Belgaum ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1232; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 157 ..	702
Najan Ahmed Hajiali v. Salemahomed Peermahomed ..	24 Bom. L. R. 998; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 113 ..	943
Najavath Alli v. Mujafar Alli ..	45 M. L. J. 791; 18 L. W. 887 ..	568
Nanak Chand v. Ram Chand ..	4 L. L. J. 189; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 101	176
Nand Kishore Misra v. Kalka Misra ..	25 Cr. L. J. 458; (1924) Pat. 195 ..	810
Nand Kishore Nath Sahi Deo v. Emperor ..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 209; 25 Cr. L. J. 369; 5 P. L. T. 353; 2 P. L. R. 159 Cr. ..	417
Narayan Singh v. Sita Debi ..	(1923) Pat. 290; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 69; 2 P. L. R. 159 ..	718
Narayana Menon, In re ..	25 Cr. L. J. 401 ..	481
Narendra Lal Khan v. Bhola Nath Bhuya ..	27 C. W. N. 336; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 417	154
Narendra Nath v. East Indian Railway Company	25 Cr. L. J. 455; 5 P. L. T. 419 ..	897
Naresh Narayan Roy v. Secretary of State for India ..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 1; 32 M. L. T. 162 (1923) M. W. N. 511; 50 C. 446; 45 M. L. J. 441; 28 C. W. N. 453 P. C. ..	1048
Nataraja Pillai v. Rangaswamy Pillai ..	46 M. L. J. 274; 19 L. W. 358; 25 Cr L. J. 361; 47 M. 384 ..	297
Neki v. Chhajju Ram ..	4 L. 445; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 225 ..	869
Nemchand Natha v. Emperor ..	25 Bom. L. R. 896; 47 B. 942; (1924) A. I. R (B.) 105; 25 Cr. L. J. 338 ..	226
Nga Po Chet v. Emperor ..	2 Bur. L. J. 239; 25 Cr. L. J. 489 ..	889
Nirode Nath v. Amullya Dhone ..	27 C W. N 466; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 582	774
Nurse v. Rustomji Dorabji ..	19 L. W. 397; 46 M. L. J. 3 3; (1924) M. W. N. 382 ..	787
Official Assignee of Madras v. Subramania Aiyar ..	46 M. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. T. 235; 19 L. W. 331; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 286 ..	740
P. C. Perumal, In re ..	19 L. W. 272; 46 M. L. J. 325; (1924) M. W. N. 303; 34 M. L. T. 165; 25 Cr. L. J. 354 ..	290

P. Kottoora Thevan, In re ..	19 L. W. 211; 46 M. L. J. 311; (1924) M. W. N. 238; 25 Cr. L. J. 396 ..	444
Pan Bu v. Emperor ..	11 L. B. R. 412; (1923) A. I R. (R.) 81; 25 Cr. L. J. 371 ..	419
Panchu Bania v. Anand Thakur ..	1 P. L. R. 356; 2 Pat. 712: (1924) A. I. R. (Pat) 180 ..	357
Pandurang Wasudeo Chate v. Basappa bin Shiddappa Ganiger ..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 364 ..	479
Paramasiva Thevar v. Pulukaruppa Thevar ..	18 L. W. 780; 33 M. L. T. 137; 45 M L. J. 829; (1924) M. W. N. 27; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 137 ..	631
Parshottam Jagjivan v. Emperor ..	25 Bom. L. R. 767; (1924) A I. R. (B.) 47; 25 Cr. L. J. 330 ..	186
Parshram v. Gopal Ramchandra ..	25 Cr. L. J. 353 ..	289
Parsotim Das v. Firm Jangli Sao ..	1 P. L. R. 199 ..	865
Peddi Veerayya v. Kokumanu Tirupatirayudu ..	(1923) M. W. N. 679; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 177 ..	758
Perianan Chetty v. Mariappan Asari ..	(1923) M. W. N. 699; (1924) A I. R. (M.) 310 ..	48
Phulmani Mundain v. Emperor ..	(1924) Pat. 13; 25 Cr. L. J. 449 ..	801
Pir Pacha Saheb v. Mohammad Ruhimuddin ..	19 L. W. 174; 46 M. L J. 245; (1924) M. W. N. 217; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 491 ..	777
Pradyumna Kumar v. Pramatha Nath ..	27 C. W. N. 684; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 708	833
Punya Symalo, In re ..	25 Cr L J. 352; 47 M. 381 ..	240
Puttoo Lal v. Emperor ..	21 A. L. J. 829; 9 O. & A. L. R. 1047; 46 A. 54; 25 Cr. L. J. 466 ..	818
Radhakishan v. Khushi Ram ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 506 ..	478
Raghunandan v. Kishin Mohan Singh ..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 210; 25 Cr. L. J. 541 ..	1005
Raja v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 465 ..	817
Rajendra Kumar v. Brojendra Kumar ..	37 C. L. J. 191; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 501 ..	790
Rajendra Narain v. Satish Chandra ..	50 C. 948; (1924) A. I, R. (C.) 233 ..	795
Rajeppa Ranappa Kundagol v. Gangappa Jotappa Mandwe ..	24 Bom. L. R. 789; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 420; 47 B. 48 ..	219
Rajindar Singh v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 516; 25 Cr. L. J. 409 ..	489
Ralla Ram v. Feroz Din ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 665 ..	903
Ram Adhin v. Gaya Prasad ..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 159 ..	771
Rami Das v. Basanti ..	20 A. L. J. 789; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 519 ..	97
Ram Das v. Dubri Koeri ..	20 A. L. J. 696; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 336; 44 A 724 ..	139
Ram Din v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 463 ..	815
Ram Gopal v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 687; 25 Cr. L. J. 517 ..	981
Ram Govind Pande v. Panna Lal ..	21 A L. J. 763; 46 A. 70 ..	35
Ram Kishan v. Raushan ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 551 ..	532
Ram Kishore v. Abdul Karim ..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 173 ..	909
Ram Kishun Ram v. North-Western Railway ..	20 A. L. J. 973; (1923) A. I. R (A.) 122 ..	1020
Ram Naresh Singh v. Dalpat Singh ..	9 O. & A. L. R. 614; 10 O. L. J. 357; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 142 ..	120
Ram Piari v. Sultan Bakhsh ..	3 L. 382; (1923) A I. R. (L.) 115 ..	207
Ram Ratan Kuar v. Tarak Nath Bhattacharji ..	(1922) A. I. R (Pat.) 249; 25 Cr. L. J. 412	492
Ram Sahai v. Angnoo ..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 496 ..	517
Ram Samujh v. Sheoraj Tewari ..	20 A. L. J. 607; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 123 ..	56
Ram Sarup v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J 350 ..	238
Ram Singh v. Waryam Singh ..	5 L. L. J. 45; (1924) A I. R. (L.) 251 ..	585
Rama Chandra v. Narayan Rao ..	(1923) A. I. R. (B) 256 ..	463
Ramanathan Chetty v. Ramanathan Chetty ..	11 L. B. R. 440; (1923) A I. R. R.) 22 ..	408
Rambharthi Hirabharthi, In re ..	25 Bom. L. R. 772: 47 B. 905; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 51; 25 Cr. L. J. 333 ..	189
Ramchandra Madhavrao v. Trimbak Shridhar ..	25 Bom. L R. 1074; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 152 ..	562
Ramdhuri Chowdhuri v. Deonandan Prasad Singh ..	3 P. L. T. 501; (1922) Pat. 269; 4 U. P. I. R. (Pat.) 71; (1922) A. I, R. (Pat.) 507; 1 P. L. R. 18; 2 Pat. 65 ..	957
Ramdulari Kuer v. Jang Bahadur Singh ..	(1923) Pat. 247; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 589 ..	378

Ramkissendas v. Binjraj Chowdhury ..	50 C. 419; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 691 ..	910
Ramnarain Singh . Ram Sukh ..	9 O. & A. L. R 625; 10 O. L. J. 399 ..	79
Rang Lal Sahu v. Kali Shankar Sahai ..	(1923) Pat. 353; 2 Pat. 890; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 235 ..	73
Raoji v. Warlu ..	3 N. L. J. 313; 18 N. L. R. 182; (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 107 ..	911
Rati Ram v. Birmajit ..	21 A. L. J. 779; 46 A. 45 ..	82
Rayabharam Saramma v. Devapurajala Gangayya ..	(1922) A. I. R. (M.) 390 ..	922
Raza Husain Khan v. Ganesh Prasad ..	10 O. L. J. 390; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 118 ..	383
Rebeiro v. Jacob ..	27 C. W. N. 569; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 553 ..	623
Repaka Mamillayya v. Addepalli Venkataratnam ..	45 M. L. J. 312; (1923) M. W. N. 672; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 100 ..	12
Rodha Ram v. Amar Chand ..	4 L. 208; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 141 ..	333
Roshan Singh v. Emperor ..	22 A. L. J. 129; 46 A. 235; 25 Cr. L. J. 467 ..	819
Ruhul Amin v. Shankar Lal ..	(1924) A. I. R. (A.) 54; 45 A. 701; 21 A. L. J. 626 ..	30
Rung Lal Kalooram v. Kedar Nath ..	27 C. W. N. 513 ..	845
S. M. Bose v. Emperor ..	22 A. L. J. 83; 46 A. 218; 25 Cr. L. J. 471 ..	826
S. N. Sen v. Abdul Aziz Tar Mahomed ..	11 L. B. R. 410; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 55 ..	400
S. P. R. M. Firm v. Maung Po Kya ..	1 R. 580; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 144 ..	382
Sadho Saran Rai v. Anant Rai ..	(1923) Pat. 197; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 483; 2 Pat. 731 ...	14
Sailendra Chandra Singh v. Emperor ..	38 C. L. J. 175; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 153; 25 Cr. L. J. 460 ..	812
Samuel Ilqanah v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 475 ..	827
San Yeik v. Municipal Committee of Pegu ..	2 Bur. L. J. 231; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 132 ..	864
Sant Prasad Singh v. Sheodut Singh ..	2 Pat. 724; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 259 ..	589
Sanwal Das v. Secretary of State ..	20 A. L. J. 604; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 433	112
Sarada Prasanna Roy v. Uma Kanta Hazari ..	37 C. L. J. 233; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 485; 50 C. 370 ..	450
Saremal Punamchand v. Kapurchand Runamchand ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1093; 48 B. 176; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 260 ..	548
Sarju v. Jai Raj Kuar ..	9 O. & A. L. R. 118; 25 Cr. L. J. 445 ..	733
Sarju Prasad v. Gajadhar Lal ..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 497 ..	527
Sarsuti Prasad v. Ehtisham Ali ..	25 O. C. 340; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 123 ..	310
Saudagar Singh v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 683; 5 L. L. J. 572; 25 Cr. L. J. 495 ..	895
Saudamini Dassya v. Secretary of State for India ..	38 C. L. J. 47; 50 C. 822; (1924) A. I. R (C.) 197 ..	707
Savitri Thakurain v. Secretary of State for India	4 P. L. T. 538; 2 Pat 879; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat) 27 ..	611
Saw Hla Aung v. Ma Ma Nyo ..	1 R. 555; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 165 ..	402
Secretary Board of Revenue v. Arunachelam Chettiar ..	18 L. W. 776; 45 M. L. J. 707; 33 M. L. T. 113; (1924) A. I. R (M.) 208; 47 M. 197	216
Secretary Board of Revenue v. Munisami Chetty ..	18 L. W. 792; 45 M. L. J. 711; 33 M. L. T. 122; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 205 ..	39
Secretary Board of Rev. (Incom-tax) Madras v. Ripon Press and Sugar Mills Co., Ltd. ..	44 M. L. J. 523; 17 L. W. 584; (1923) M, W. N 321; 32 M L. T. 306; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 574; 46 M. 706 ..	621
Secretary of State for India v. Ghulam Rasul Khan ..	4 L. L. J. 79; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 323 ..	553
Secretary of State for India v. Narsibhai Dadabhai ..	25 Bom. L. R. 992; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 65; 48 B. 43 ..	241
Secretary of State for India v. Raj Kumar ..	50 C. 347; 27 C. W. N. 472 ..	1025
Sesha Aiyar v. Venkatasubba Chetty ..	19 L. W. 201; (1924) M. W. N, 268; 25 Cr. L. J. 442; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 487 ..	730
Sewdutrai Narsaria v; Tata Sons Ltd. ..	27 C. W. N. 494 ..	769

Sha Bulakhidas v. Shah Gaupatram	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 281	412
Shakoor Gani v. Sabapathy Pillai	..	18 L. W. 796; 45 M. L. J. 749: 33 M. L. T. 153; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 236; 47 M. 222	70
Shams-ud-din v. Devi Das	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 505	471
Shankar Lal v. Kirari Mal	..	(1924) A. I. R. (A.) 81	144
Sheo Ambar v. Emperor	..	9 O. & A. L. R. 836, 25 Cr. L. J. 391	439
Sheo Balak v. Gaya Prasad	..	20 A. L. J. 601; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 510	52
Sheo Prasad Singh v. Mahangoo Nonia	..	25 Cr. L. J. 476	828
Sher v. Emperor	..	5 L. L. J. 377; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 110; 25 Cr. L. J. 430	606
Sher Singh v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 508; 25 Cr. L. J. 395	443
Shera Khatun v. Muhammad Ali Shah	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 559	538
Shermull v. Corporation of Calcutta	..	(1923) A. I. R. (C.) 725; 25 Cr. L. J. 492	892
Shib Charan v. Bepin Behary	..	27 C. W. N. 144; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 149	1047
Shidappa v. Santawa	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 302	477
Shiv Gir v. Khazan Gir	..	3 L. 369; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 451	561
Sidh Gopal v. Bihari Lal	..	26 O. C. 156: (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 48	749
Sinnam Chetty v. Alagiri Aiyer	..	18 L. W. 545; 45 M. L. J. 516; 46 M. 852; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 438	580
Sita Ram-Ram Dhan v. Benarsi Das-Puran Chand	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 565	764
Sital Din v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 366	302
Sitaram Sadashiv Shastri Sapre v. Parshuram Bhau Patil	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 449	878
Sithamalli Subbayyer v. Ramanathan Chettiar	..	19 L. W. 355: 46 M. L. J. 350; (1924) M. W. N 340	766
Siya Ram v. Salik	..	10 O. L. J. 335; 10 O. & A. L. R. 172; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 124	352
South Indian Railway v. S. P. R. S. Narayana Ayyar	..	46 M. L. J. 302	511
Subedar v. Emperor	..	(1924) A. I. R. (A.) 207; 25 Cr. L. J. 490	890
Subhadrabai v. Mahomedbhai	..	25 Bom. L. R. 931; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 187	247
Subhanali v. Bodulal	..	(1923) A. I. R. (N.) 17	1037
Sukrulla Fakir v. Fatma	..	25 Cr. L. J. 453	805
Sundar Das v. Collector of Gujrat	..	3 L. 349; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 14	616
undara Ramanujam Naidu v. Sivalingam Pillai S		18 L. W. 333; 45 M. L. J. 431; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 360; 47 M. 150	542
Suraj Prosad v. Midnapur Zemindari Co. Ltd.	..	38 C. L. J. 369	954
Surat Singh v. Umrao Singh	..	20 A. L. J. 611; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 410	113
Takir Ram Kalwar v. M. N. Swamy Naidu	..	1 R. 283; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 215	1021
Talakchand Bheraji v. Atmaram	..	25 Bom. L. R. 818; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 58	342
Teja v. Tika Ram	..	21 A. L. J. 754; 46 A. 32; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 225	37
Thana Zalaji Shet Marwadi v. Hop Dhana Jawhrji	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 268	497
Thareesaruma v. Deputy Collectur, Cochin	..	45 M. L. J. 339: 18 L. W. 356; (1923) M. W. N. 682; 33 M. L. T. 48	347
Thi Raj v. Kheausi	..	22 P. W. R. 1923	588
Thirumala Reddi, In re	..	46 M. L. J 401 (1924) M. W. N. 141; 19 L. W. 292; 25 Cr. L. J. 374; 47 M. 396	422
Thoppai Vedaviasa Aiyar v. The Madura Hindu Sabha Nidhi Co., Ltd.	..	18 L. W. 311; (1923) M. W. N. 662; 45 M. L. J. 478; (1924) A. I. R. M.) 365	148
Tin Kari Bose v. Nogendra Prasad Basu	..	27 C. W. N. 716; 50 C. 807; (1923) A I. R. (C.) 699	10
Tin Tin Nyo v. Maung Ba Saing	..	1 R. 584; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 148	385
Tukaram v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 237	237
U Pe Gyi v. Maung Thein Shin	..	1 R. 565; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 48; 2 Bur. L. J. 177	372
Udairaj Singh v. Ram Udit Tewari	..	10 O. L. J. 376; (1924) A; I. R. (O.) 147	340
Udhao v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 417	593
Udit Narain Lal v. Ram Lachhman Rao	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 161	933
Ukiluddi Akan v. Asmat Ali Munshi	..	27 C. W. N. 723; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 714	29
Umed Singh v. Emperor	..	21 A. L. J. 765; 25 Cr. L. J. 327; 46 A. 64	183

Umed Singh v. Emperor	..	22 A. L. J. 79; 25 Cr. L. J. 472	.. 824
Vedla Venkatasubbamma v. Vedla Venkamma	..	33 M. L. T. 191; 46 M. L. J. 52; 19 L. W. 83; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 308	.. 214
Venkatakuttumba Rao v. Ventappayya	..	46 M. L. J. 119; (1924) M. W. N. 137; 19 L. W. 298; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 483	.. 765
Venkatarama Aiyar v. A. V. Rangiyan Chetty	..	46 M. L. J. 258; 19 L. W. 381; (1924) M. W. N. 344; (1924) A. I. R (M) 449	.. 594
Wallu v. Emperor	..	4 L. 373; 6 L. L. J. 59; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 109; 25 Cr. L. J. 385	.. 433
Wilkinson v. Wilkinson	..	25 Bom. L. R. 945; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 321; 47 B. 843	.. 654
Wish Nath v. Rahmat Ullah	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 671	.. 879
Yeknath Narayan Kulkarani v. Laxmibai Kesho Gopal	..	24 Bom. L. R. 836; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 347; 47 B. 37	.. 117
Yezzu Mallayya v. Talluri Punnamma	..	46 M. L. J. 291; 19 L. W. 410	.. 628
Zia-ud-din v. Abul Hasan	..	45 A. 487; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 520	.. 27

Table showing seriatim the pages of Volume 77 of Indian Cases and the corresponding pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Page.	Names of cases reported.	Where reported.
1	Bhagwan Lal v. Rajendra Prasad ..	4 P. L. T. 409; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 564.
10	Tin Kari Bose v. Nogendra Prosad Basu ..	27 C. W. N. 716; 50 C. 807; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 699.
12	Repaka Mamillayya v. Addepalli Venkataratnam ..	45 M. L. J. 312; (1923) M. W. N. 672; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 100.
14	Sadho Saran Rai v. Anant Rai ..	(1923) Pat. 197; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 483; 2 Pat. 731.
17	Dattatraya Bhimrao Sabnis v. Gangabai Ganeshbhat ..	24 Bom. L. R. 69; 46 B. 541; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 321.
26	Kushtia Loan Office v. Annada Charan Chakravarty ..	27 C. W. N. 763; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 681.
27	Zia-uddin v. Abul Hasan ..	45 A. 487; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 520.
29	Ukiluddi Akan v. Asmat Ali Munshi ..	27 C. W. N. 723; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 714.
30	Ruhal Amin v. Shankar Lal ..	(1924) A. I. R. (A.) 54; 45 A. 701; 21 A. L. J. 626
31	Forbes v. Hanuman Bhagat ..	1 P. L. R. 190; 4 P. L. T. 414; 2 Pat. 452; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 88.
35	Ram Govind Pande v. Panna Lal ..	21 A. L. J. 763; 46 A. 70.
37	Teja v. Tika Ram ..	21 A. L. J. 754; 46 A. 32; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 225.
39	Secretary Board of Revenue v. Munisami Chetty ..	18 L. W. 792; 45 M. L. J. 711; 33 M. L. T. 122; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 205.
41	Manoharlal v. Amano ..	(1924) A. I. R. (N.) 14.
44	Kesho Prasad Singh v. Siv Saran Lal ..	30 M. L. T. 50; 15 L. W. 589; 26 C. W. N. 689; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 226 P. C.
46	Kashiram v. Barkya ..	7 N. L. J. 13.
48	Perianan Chetty v. Mariappan Asari ..	(1923) M. W. N. 699; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 310.
50	Mulla Faiz Ali v. Harkuar ..	(1923) A. I. R. (N.) 334
52	Sheo Balak v. Gaya Prasad ..	20 A. L. J. 601; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 510.
53	Maung Lu Gale v. Maung Lu Po ..	4 U. B. R. 140; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 110.
56	Ram Samujh v. Sheoraj Tewari ..	20 A. L. J. 607; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 123.
57	Mahrana Kunwar v. David ..	21 A. L. J. 737; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 40; 46 A. 16.
63	Ma Than Than v. Ma Pwa Than ..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 156; 33 M. L. T. 361; 1 R. 451; 2 Bur. L. J. 260; 46 M. L. J. 334 P. C.
66	Amrit Bibi v. Mustafa Husain ..	21 A. L. J. 750; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 20; 46 A. 28.
70	Shakoor Gani v. Sabapathy Pillai ..	18 L. W. 796; 45 M. L. J. 749; 33 M. L. T. 152; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 236; 47 M 222.
73	Rang Lal Sahu v. Kali Shanker Sahai ..	(1923) Pat. 353; a Pat. 890; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 235.
77	Dilbar Hossain v. Sadaruddin Choudhuri ..	27 C. W. N 469; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 568.
78	Bhola Nath v. Rasool Baksh ..	9 O. & A. L. R. 631; 26 O. C. 378.
79	Ramnarain Singh v. Ram Sukh ..	9 O. & A. L. R. 625; 10 O. L. J. 399.
82	Rati Ram v. Birmajit ..	21 A. L. J. 770; 46 A. 45.
83	Dadathoy Framjee Cama v. Cowasji Dorabji Panday ..	47 B. 349; 24 Bom. L. R. 1111; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 177.

91	Durga Prasad v. Het Ram	..	20 A. L. J. 912; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 79.
92	Mahadevappa v. Kashirao	..	25 Bom. L. R. 797; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 467.
97	Ram Das v. Basanti	..	20 A. L. J. 789; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 519.
100	Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Shri Bala Maharaj	..	(1923) A. I. R (P. C.) 194; (1923) M. W. N. 638; 26 Bom. L. R. 252; 48 B. 1 P. C.
107	Jethu Misir v. Godawari Dutt	..	20 A. L. J. 619; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 411.
109	Durga v. Jamna Prasad	..	9 O & A. L. R. 617; 26 O. C. 368.
112	Sanwal Das v. Secretary of State	..	20 A. L. J. 604; (1922) A. I R (A) 438.
113	Surat Singh v. Umrao Singh	..	20 A. L. J. 611; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 410.
115	Binda Prasad v. Banarsi Das	..	10 O. L. J. 205; 9 O. & A. L. R. 847; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 272.
116	Molar v. Kanahaya Lal	..	4 L. L. J. 188; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 58.
116	Binda Prasad v. Banarsi Das	..	10 O. L. J. 206; (1923) A. I. R (O.) 271.
117	Yeknath Narayan Kulkarni v. Laxmibai Kesho Gopal	..	24 Bom. L. R. 836; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 347; 47 B. 37
120	Ram Naresh Singh v. Dalpat Singh	..	9 O. & A. L. R. 614; 10 O. L. J. 357; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 142.
122	Mahaleo Prasad v. Dhiraj Singh	..	20 A. L. J. 752; 44 A. 772; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 7.
125	Jai Gobind Singh v. Abhairaj Singh	..	10 O. L. J. 216; 9 O. & A. L. R. 651; 26 O. C. 308; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 40.
129	Badr-ud-din v. Muhammad Ha'iz	..	20 A. L. J. 726; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 481; 44 A. 743.
131	Babaji Ramling Gurav v. Appa Vithavja Sutar	..	25 Bom. L. R. 789; (1924) A. I. R. (B) 151.
133	Garlinge v. Garlinge	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A) 504; 44 A 745.
137	Government of Bombay v. Khanderao Ramchandra Talpade	..	25 Bom. L. R. 794; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 417.
139	Ram Das v. Dubri Koeri	..	20 A. L. J. 606; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 336; 44 A. 724.
140	Bhoj Raj v. Hardeva	..	20 A. L. J. 603; 41 A. 726; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 140.
141	Naba Kumar Das v. Rudra Narayan Jana	..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C) 95; (1923) M. W. N. 622; 45 M. L. J. 438; 33 M. L. T. 309; 28 C. W. N. 589; 10 O & A. L. R. 521 P. C.
144	Shankar Lal v. Kirari Mal	..	(1924) A. I. R. (A.) 81.
146	Dhondi Subhane Powar v. Secretary of State for India	..	25 Bom. L. R. 785; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 478.
148	Thoppai Vedaviasa Aiyar v. The Madura Hindu Sabha Nidhi Co., Ltd.	..	18 L. W. 311; (1923) M. W. N. 662; 45 M. L. J. 478; (1924) A. I. R. (M) 365.
150	Hurbat John Amies v. Jal P. Virji	..	25 Bom. L. R. 778; (1924) A I. R. (B.) 41.
154	Narendra Lal Khan v. Bhola Nath Bhuya	..	27 C. W. N. 336; (1923) A. I. R (C.) 417.
157	Dulhin Sona Kuer v. Bibi Ale Fatima	..	*Patna High Court.
167	Kumar Shoshi Kanta v. Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury	..	35 C. L. J. 339.
171	Kishen Prasad and Co., Ltd. v. Fullumal Hiralal	..	25 Bom. L. R. 888; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 166
174	Gokha Ram v. Sham Lal	..	3 L. 426; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 268.
176	Nanak Chand v. Ram Chand	..	4 L. L. J. 189; (1922) A. I. R. (L) 101.
177	Lachm Narain Marwari v. Emperor	..	(1923) Pat. 220; 4 P. L. T. 622; 1 P. L. R. 229 Cr; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 42; 25 Cr. L. J. 321.
181	Emperor v. Bhubaneswar Nag	..	25 Cr. L. J. 325.
183	Umed Singh v. Emperor	..	21 A. L. J. 765; 25 Cr. L. J. 327; 46 A. 64.
186	Parshottam Jagjivan v. Emperor	..	25 Bom. L. R. 767; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 47; 25 Cr. L. J. 330.
188	Lallu Ram v. Emperor	..	21 A. L. J. 772; 25 Cr. L. J. 332; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 194
189	Rambharthi Hirabharthi, In re	..	25 Bom. L. R. 772; 47 B. 907; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 51; 25 Cr. L. J. 333.
192	Emperor v. Surju Prasad	..	10 O. L. J. 208; 9 O. & A. L. R. 867; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 32; 25 Cr. L. J. 336.

193	Imperial Tobacco Co., Ltd. v. Albert Bonnan ..	50 C. 762; (1924) A I. R. (C.) 216.
206	Gokuldas Pitamber v. Odhavji Gigabhai ..	25 Bom. L. R. 893; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 100.
207	Ram Piari v. Sultan Bakhsh ..	3 L. 382; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 115.
209	Kaniz Zohra v. Mujtaba Hussain ..	(1923) Pat. 241; 4 P. L. T. 613; 2 Pat. 819; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat,) 576.
214	Vedla Venkatasubbamma v. Vedla Venkamma ..	33 M. L. T. 191; 46 M. L. J. 52; 19 L. W. 83; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 308.
216	Secretary, Board of Revenue v. Arunachelam Chettiar ..	18 L. W. 776; 45 M. L. J. 707; 33 M. L. T. 119; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 208; 47 M. 197.
219	Rajeppa Ranappa Kundagol v. Gangappa Josappa Mandwe ..	24 Bom. L. R. 789; (1922) A. I. R. (B) 420; 47 B. 48.
222	Hasti v. Hira ..	(1922) A. I. R. (L) 37; 4 L. L. J. 201.
224	Haribhai Gulab v. Mathura Lalu ..	25 Bom. L. R. 929; 47 B. 940; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 140.
225	Badan Singh v. Emperor ..	3 L. 373; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 11; 25 Cr. L. J. 337.
226	Nemchand Natha v. Emperor ..	25 Bom. L. R. 896; 47 B. 942; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 105; 25 Cr. L. J. 338.
230	Emperor v. Basta Singh ..	3 L. 437; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 267; 25 Cr. L. J. 342.
231	Bilash Chandra v. Emperor ..	27 C. W. N. 626; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 647; 25 Cr. L. J. 243.
233	Jafar v. Emperor ..	3 L. 371; (1922) A. I. R (L.) 443; 25 Cr. L. J. 345.
234	Daldiprasad v. District Magistrate, Yeotmal ..	25 Cr. L. J. 346.
236	Chandu Lal v. Emperor ..	21 A. L. J. 776; 25 Cr. L. J. 348; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 186.
237	Tukaram v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 237.
238	Ram Sarup v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 350.
240	Punya Symalo, In re ..	25 Cr. L. J. 352; 47 M. 381;
241	Secretary of State for India v. Narsibhai Dadabhai ..	25 Bom. L. R. 992; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 65; 48 B. 43.
246	Gurdit Singh v. Karam Dad ..	4 L. L. J. 199.
247	Subhedrabai v. Mahomedbhai ..	25 Bom. L. R. 931; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 187.
251	Karshi Ram v. Haro ..	4 L. L. J. 214; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 235.
252	Gobind Prasad v. Jagdeep Sahai ..	1 P. L. R. 316; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 185.
253	Kunja Mohan Chakravarty v. Manindra Chandra Roy ..	27 C. W. N. 542; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 619.
257	Hasham Ali v. Umar Hayat ..	4 L. L. J. 57; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 193.
258	Maung Chit U v. Maung Tha Ku ..	4 U. B. R. 135; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 113.
260	East Indian Railway Company v. Nadia Coal Company ..	1 P. L. R. 336; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 39.
261	Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapur Zemindari Co. ..	35 C. L. J. 493; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 25.
264	Aisamma v. Meidir Kunhi ..	(1923) M. W. N. 633; 18 L. W. 520; 45 M. L. J. 690; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 111; 47 M. 160.
266	Morarji Premji Gokuldas v. Mulji Ranchhod Ved & Co. ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1014; 48 B. 20; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 232.
274	Kundan v. Mam Raj ..	4 L. L. J. 178; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 57.
275	Karsandas Kalidas Ghia v. Chhotalal Motichand ..	25 Bom. L. R. 1037; (1924) A. I R. (B) 119; 48 B. 259.
289	Parashram v. Gopal Ramchandra ..	25 Cr. L. J. 353.
290	P. C. Perumal, In re ..	19 L. W. 272; 46 M. L. J. 325; (1924) M. W. N. 303; 34 M. L. T. 165; 25 Cr. L. J. 354.
292	Ganpat v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 356.
295	Bindra v. Bhagwanta ..	25 Cr. L. J. 359.

297	Nataraja Pillai v. Rangaswamy Pillai	..	46 M. L. J. 274; 19 L. W. 358; 25 Cr. L. J. 361; 47 M. 384.
302	Sital Din v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 366.
303	Chinniah, In re	..	19 L. W. 219; 46 M. L. J. 309; (1924) M. W. N. 237; 34 M. L. T. 195; 25 Cr. L. J. 367.
305	Laxman Mankar Kasar v. Ravji Dhansing	..	25 Bom L. R. 1027; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 150.
306	Mihi Lal v. Babu Lal	..	(1922) A. I. R. (O.) 200.
307	Atmaram v. Balaji Raghunath	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1032; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 178.
310	Sarsuti Prasad v. Ehtisham Ali	..	25 O. C. 349; (1923) A. I. R. (O) 123.
327	Badri Das Janakidas v. Mathanmal	..	(1922) A. I. R. (L.) 185.
329	Dwarka Prasad v. Ram Dei	..	10 O. L. J. 360; 10 O. & A. L. R. 191; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 120.
333	Rodha Ram v. Amar Chand	..	4 L. 208; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 141;
334	Mannoo Lal v Lalji Chaube	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 213.
336	Farida v. Khaira	..	3 L. 79; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 290.
336	Chanbasapa Puttappa v. Chanbasava Mallappa Yaligar	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1078; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 176.
337	Harihar Prasad v. Shankar Dayal	..	10 O. L. J. 351; 10 O. & A. L. R. 119.
338	Liquidator Union Bank of India v. Gobind Singh	..	4 L. 239; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 148.
340	Udairaj Singh v. Ram Udit Tewari	..	10 O. L. J. 376; (1924) A. I. R. (O) 147.
342	Talakchand Bheraji v. Atmaram	..	25 Bom. L. R. 818; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 58.
346	Mohkam Singh v. Chandra Pal Singh	..	10 O. L. J. 374; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 140
347	Thareesaruma v. Deputy Collector, Cochin	..	45 M. L. J. 339; 18 L. W. 356; (1923) M. W. N. 682; 33 M. L. T 48.
352	Siya Ram v. Salik	..	10 O. L. J. 335; 10 O. & A. L. R. 172; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 124.
353	Jang Bahadur Singh v. Ranjit Singh	..	10 O. L. J. 353; 10 O. & A. L. R. 189; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 141.
355	Jamnabai v. Fazalbhoy Heptoola	..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 184; 18 L. W. 437; 46 M. L. J. 160; 26 Bom. L. R. 189 P. C
357	Panchu Bania v. Anand Thakur	..	1 P. L. R. 356; 2 Pat. 712; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 160.
358	Mohammad Ahsan Ali v. Masud Ali	..	10 O. L. J. 339; 10 O. & A. L. R. 146; (1924) A. I. R. (O) 149.
362	Aung Rhi v. Ma Aung Krwa Pru	..	1 R. 557; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 139.
364	Mohendranath Bose v. Abinash Chandra Bose	..	27 C. W. N. 521; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 615.
368	Ma Pwa v. Muhammad Tambi	..	1 R. 533; (1924) A. I. R (R.) 124.
372	U Pe Gyi v. Maung Thein Shin	..	1 R. 565; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 48; 2 Bur. L. J. 177.
378	Ramdulari Kuer v. Jang Bahadur Singh	..	(1923) Pat. 247; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 589.
380	Ko Po Maung v. Ma Mein Gale	..	1 R. 562; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 135.
382	Kishori v. Parsadi	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 319.
382	S. P. R. M. Firm v. Maung Po Kya	..	1 R. 580; (1924) A. I. R. (R) 144.
383	Raza Husain Khan v. Ganesh Prasad	..	10 O. L. J. 390; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 118.
385	Tin Tin Nyo v. Maung Ba Saing	..	1 R 584; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 148.
391	Jangi Singh v. Ganga Singh	..	10 O. L. J. 393; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 115.
393	Maung Mu v. Maung Kan Gyi	..	1 R. 618; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 127.
398	Harji Mal v. Devi Ditta Mal	..	4 L. 364; (1924) A. I. R. (L) 107.
400	S. N. Sen v. Abdul Aziz Tar Mahomed	..	11 L. B. R. 410; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 55.
401	Jadu Nandan Sahay v. Hanuman Sahay	..	(1923) Pat. 235; 4 P. L. T. 619; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 113.
402	Saw Hla Aung v. Ma Ma Nyo	..	1 R. 555; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 165.
403	Linton Molesworth & Co. v. Jagganath Supakar		1 P. L. R. 377; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat) 226.
408	Ramanathan Chetty v. Ramanathan Chetty	..	11 L. B. R. 446; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 22.
409	Gobind Das v. Rupkishore	..	4 L. 367; 6 L. L. J. 25; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 65.
412	Sha Bulakhidas v. Shah Ganpatram	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B) 281.
416	Muhammad Aslam v. Jodh Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 513.
417	Nand Kishore Nath Sahi Deo v. Emperor	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 269; 25 Cr. L. J. 369; 5 P. L. T. 353; 2 P. L. R. 159 Cr.

418	Bharata Ayyar, In re	..	19 L. W. 275; 46 M. L. J. 324; (1924) M. W. N. 305; 34 M. L. T. 167; 25 Cr. L. J. 370.
419	Pan Bu v. Emperor	..	11 L. B. R. 412; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 81; 25 Cr. L. J. 371.
421	Municipal Committee, Multan v. Moti Ram	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 686; 25 Cr. L. J. 373.
422	Thirumala Reddi, In re	..	46 M. L. J. 40; (1924) M. W. N. 141; 19 L. W. 292; 25 Cr. L. J. 374; 47 M. 396.
423	Jassu Ram v. Emperor	..	4 L. 246; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 622; 25 Cr. L. J. 375.
425	A. K. Maitra v. Kamini Mohan Bose	..	25 Cr. L. J. 377.
425	Lyme v. Emperor	..	4 L. 382; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 17; 25 Cr. L. J. 377.
429	Maung Lay v. Emperor	..	1 R. 609; 25 Cr. L. J. 381; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 173.
433	Wallu v. Emperor	..	4 L. 373; 6 L. L. J. 59; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 109; 25 Cr. L. J. 385.
434	Hari Chand v. Aya Ram	..	4 L. L. J. 321; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 403; 25 Cr. L. J. 386.
434	Lal Singh v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 512; 25 Cr. L. J. 386.
435	Bikarama Prasad v. Emperor	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 292; 25 Cr. L. J. 387.
436	Emperor v. Mormaduke Peikthall	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 242; 25 Cr. L. J. 388.
439	Sheo Ambar v. Emperor	..	9 O. & A. L. R. 836; 25 Cr. L. J. 391.
443	Sher Singh v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 508; 25 Cr. L. J. 395.
444	P. Kattyora Thevan, In re	..	19 L. W. 211; 46 M. L. J. 311; (1924) M. W. N. 238; 25 Cr. L. J. 396.
446	Ghulam v. Emperor	..	4 L. 399; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 509; 25 Cr. L. J. 398.
447	Alia v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 513; 25 Cr. L. J. 399.
448	Abdul Rashid Khan v. Nisar Muhammad Khan	..	45 A. 691; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 143; 21 A. L. J. 622; 25 Cr. L. J. 400.
449	Babusing Narayanji v. Sambhaji Shiwaji	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 291.
450	Sarada Prasanna Roy v. Uma Kanta Hazari	..	37 C. L. J. 233; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 485; 50 C. 370.
463	Ramachandra v. Narayanrao	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 296.
464	Devi Prasad v. Jagannadharaju	..	46 M. L. J. 12; (1924) M. W. N. 125; 33 M. L. T. 243; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 281.
471	Shams-ud-din v. Devi Das	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 505.
472	Mahadeo Ramchandra v. Raghoji Jijyaji	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 293.
473	Baj Singh v. Partap Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 497.
474	Husenuddin Nurddin v. Dulakshidas	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 299.
475	Basanti v. Chanda Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 502.
476	Chanbasappa Mallappa v. Malkappa Lingappa	..	(1923) A. I. R (B) 368.
477	Gopal Das v. Zainala Bibi	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 504.
477	Shidappa v. Santawa	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B) 302.
478	Radhakishan v. Khushiram	..	(1923) A. I. R (L.) 506.
479	Pandurang Wasudeo Chate v. Basappa alias Shiddappa Ganiger	..
481	Narayana Menon, In re	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 364.
489	Rajindar Singh v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 401.
490	Mahtab Din v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 516; 25 Cr. L. J. 403.
492	Ram Ratan Kaur v. Tarak Nath Bhattacharji	..	25 Cr. L. J. 410.
495	Allah Bakhsh v. Emperor	..	(1922) A. I. R (Pat) 249; 25 Cr. L. J. 412.
497	Thana Zalaji Shet Marwadi v. Hop Dhana Jawhrji	..	25 Cr. L. J. 415.
500	Bhagjogni v. Sakhi Mahton	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 268.
500	Chhotabhai Hirachand v. Maganabhai Naginbhai	..	(1923) Pat. 234; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 575.
502	Gajadhar v. Megha	..	(1923) A. I R. (B.) 271.
502	Krishnalal Chunilal v. Dhirajlal Navnitlal	..	20 A. L. J. 358; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 327. 44 A. 516.
504	Venkatarama Aiyar v. A. V. Rangiyan Chetty	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 359.
506	Kashinath Gyanoba Kikle v. Ganesh Sitaram Kulkarni	..	46 M. L. J. 258; 19 L. W. 381; (1924) M. W. N. 344; (1924) A. I. R. (M) 449.
509	Muhammad Ramzan v. Municipal Committee, Alipur	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 361.
		..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 534;

511	South Indian Railway v. S. P. R. S. Narayana Ayyar	..	46 M. L. J. 302.
515	Moti Chand v. Manekchand Ramchand Gojar	..	(1922) A. I. R. (B.) 147.
516	Ishar Das v. Fazl Ilahi	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 522.
517	Ram Sahai v. Angnoo	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 496.
518	Kirpa v. Chinti	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 530.
520	Jatiram Gayan Das v. Dino Nath	..	(1922) A. I. R (C.) 163.
521	Keshav Narayan v. Ramchandra Ganesh	..	(1922) A. I. R. (B.) 156.
522	Amar Prasad v. Gagan Chandra	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 180.
523	Fitz-Holmes v. Bank of Upper India	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 548; 4 L. 258; 5 L. L. J. 438.
527	Sarju Prasad v. Gajadhar Lal	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 497.
529	Corporation of Calcutta v. Bijoy Kumar Addy	..	27 C. W. N. 787; 50 C. 813; 38 C. L. J. 360; (1924) A. I. R. (C) 334.
532	Ram Kishan v. Raushan	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 551.
534	Mohadeb Kudu v. Benode Lal Patra	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 181.
535	Azad Khan v. Nasib Gul	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 553.
538	Shera Khatun v. Muhammad Ali Shah	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 559.
539	Fateh Mahammad Chaudhri v. Sita Chaudhrain	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 278.
541	Muhammad Din v. Zeb-un-nissa	..	3 L. 215; (1922) A. I R. (L.) 390.
542	Sundara Ramanujam Naidu v. Sivalingam Pillai	..	18 L. W. 333; 45 M. L. J. 431; (1924) A. I. R. (M) 360; 47 M. 150.
547	Arunachela Goundan v. Swaminatha Aiyar	..	19 L. W. 27; (1924) M. W. N. 144; 46 M. L. J. 240.
548	Saremal Punamchand v. Kapur Chand Runamchand	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1093; 48 B. 176; (1924) A. I. R. (B. 260.
551	Monmatha Kumar Ray v. Jasada Lal Podder	..	28 C. W. N. 300.
553	Badri Prasad v. Murli Dhar	..	9 O. & A. L. R. 846.
553	Secretary of State for India v. Ghulam Rasul Khan		4 L. L. J. 79; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 323.
556	Afsar Khan v. Shabu Mondal	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 148.
558	Durga Charan Mitra v. Rajendra Narain	..	36 C L. J. 467; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 57.
561	Shiv Gir v. Khazan Gir	..	3 L. 369; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 451.
562	Ramchandra Madhavrao v. Trimbak Shridhar	..	25 Bom. L. R 1074; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 152.
564	Jobeda Khatun v. Tulsi Charan Das	..	36 C. L. J. 472; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 82.
568	Najavath Alli v. Mujafar Alli	..	45 M. L J. 791; 18 L. W. 887.
572	Bishambar Nath v. Muhammad Ubaid Ullah Khan	..	21 A. L. J. 503; 45 A. 581; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 586.
576	Mohesh Chandra Missra v. Nistarini Dasya	..	27 C W. N. 449; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 382.
580	Sinnam Chetty v. Alagiri Aiyar	..	18 L. W. 545; 45 M. L. J. 516; 46 M. 852; (1924) A. I. R (M.) 438.
585	Ram Singh v. Waryam Singh	..	5 L. L. J. 459; (1924) A I. R. (L.) 251.
587	Jageshwar Kuer v. Tilakdhari Singh	..	2 Pat. 746; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 267 5 P. L. T. 432.
588	Thi Raj v. Kheausi	..	22 P. W. R. 1923.
589	Sant Prasad Singh v. Sheodut Singh	..	2 Pat. 724; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 259.
592	Chatur v. Rukmangad Singh	..	25 O. C. 181; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 249.
593	Udhao v. Emperor	..	25 Cr L. J. 417.
600	Daulat Bai v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 537; 25 Cr. L. J 424.
602	Barhati v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 539; 25 Cr. L. J. 426.
604	Emperor v. Mithoo	..	25 Cr. L. J. 428.
606	Sher v. Emperor	..	5 L. L. J 377; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 110; 25 Cr. L J. 430.
607	Ambika Singh v. Emperor	..	1 Pat. 212; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 498; 25 Cr. L. J. 431.
609	Kundan Lal v. Makundi Kunwar	..	45 A. 571; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 150.
611	Savitri Thakurain v. Secretary of State for India		4 P. L T. 538; 2 Pat. 879; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 27.
616	Sundar Das v. Collector of Gujrat	..	3 L. 349; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 14.
618	Bikram Singh v. Suraj Bakhsh Singh	..	26 O. C. 295; (1924) A. I. R (O.) 125.
619	Haridasi Debi v. Gopeshwar Pyne	..	27 C. W. N. 646; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 569.
620	Gulsher Khan v. Ramswarup	..	19 N. L. R. 150; (1924) A. I. R (N.) 42.

621	Secretary, Board of Revenue (Incom-tax), Madras v. Ripon Press and Sugar Mills Co., Ltd.	..	44 M. L. J. 523; 17 L. W. 584; (1923) M. W. N. 321. 32 M. L. T. 306; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 574; 46 M. 706.
623	Rebeiro v. Jacob	..	27 C. W. N. 569; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 553
628	Yezzu Mallayya v. Talluri Punnamma	..	46 M L. J. 291; 19 L. W. 430.
630	Jokhu v. Deokinandan Pandey	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 489.
631	Paramasiva Thevar v. Pulukarupppa Thevar	..	18 L. W. 780; 33 M. L. T. 137; 45 M. L. J. 329; (1924) M. W. N. 27; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 137.
638	Chitto v. Ganga Sahai	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 527.
640	Ganpatrao v. Laxmichand	..	6 N. L. J. 239; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 1.
654	Wilkinson v. Wilkinson	..	25 Bom L. R. 945; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 321; 47 B. 843.
689	Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai	..	21 A. L. J 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 C. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 P. L. R. 40; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 46 A. 95; 26 Bom. L. R. 500 P. C.
694	Baldeo Misir v. Ramlagan Shukul	..	21 A. L. J 648; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 82; 45 A. 709.
695	Behari'al v. Kalka	..	25 O. C. 282; (1923) A. I R. (O.) 45.
697	Jagat Singh v. Achhaibar Singh	..	26 O C 191; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 15.
699	Amba'ai Sarabhai, In re	..	25 Bom. L R. 1225; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 182.
701	Baba Ram v. Ram Dulari Debi	..	26 O. C. 194; (1924) A. I. R (O.) 30.
702	Nagava Guriingaya v. Collector of Belgaum	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1232; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 157.
705	Chitu v. Charan Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R; (A.) 563.
707	Saudamini Dassya v. Secretary of State for India		38 C. L. J. 47; 50 C. 822; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 197.
718	Narayan Singh v. Sita Deli	..	(1923) Pat. 290; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat) 69; 2 P. L. R. 159.
721	Jang Bahadur v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 433.
723	Allah Ditta v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 435.
727	Emperor v. Moulabux	..	25 Cr. L. J. 439.
728	Hira Lal v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J. 440.
730	Sesha Aiyar v. Venkatasubba Chetty	..	19 L. W. 201; (1924) M. W. N. 268; 25 Cr. L. J. 442; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 487.
733	Sarju v. Jai Raj Kuar	..	9 O. & A. L. R. 118; 25 Cr. L. J. 445.
734	Gulli Bhagat v. Narain Singh	..	2 Pat. 708; 25 Cr. L. J. 446; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 283.
736	Emperor v. Mahomed Panjal	..	25 Cr. L. J. 448.
737	Gomti Misra v. Deota Din Singh	..	26 O. C. 197; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 44.
738	Gania v. Ganga Prasad	..	6 N. L. J. 269.
740	Official Assignee of Madras v. Subramania Aiyar		46 M. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. T. 235; 19 L. W. 331; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 286.
747	Ghanshamdas Balkrishnadas v. Motichand Harakchand	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1237; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 180.
749	Sidh Gopal v. Bihari Lal	..	26 O. C. 196; (1924) A. I. R. (O.) 48.
749	Keshavlal Punjalal v. Collector of Ahmedabad	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1240; 48 B. 75; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 228.
753	Chhiddu v. Desraj	..	21 A. L. J. 793.
755	Mirza Mahomed v. Official Assignee	..	18 L. W. 277; (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 146 P. C.
756	Kashi Rai v. Kali Kurri	..	(1923) A. I R. (A.) 554.
758	Peddi Veerayya v. Kokumanu Tirupatirayudu	..	(1923) M. W. N. 679; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 177.
760	Jokhu Rai v. Bhabhuti Rai	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A) 559.
761	Kader Nath Singh v. Garfad	..	11 L. B. R. 382; (1922) A. I. R. (L. B.) 40.
761	Laxmi Narayan v. Ramratan	..	19 N. L. R. 178; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 55.
762	Ahad Shah v. Ayshan Begum	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 564.
764	Afagan Sahib v. Abdul Majid Khan	..	19 L. W. 164; (1924) M. W. N. 265; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 512.

764	Sita Ram-Ram Dhan v. Benarsi Das-Puran Chand	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 565.
765	Venkatakuttumba Rao v. Ventappayya ..	46 M. L. J. 119; (1924) M. W. N. 137; 19 L. W. 298; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 483.
766	Sithamalli Subbayyer v. Ramanathan Chettiar ..	19 L. W. 355; 46 M. L. J. 350; (1924) M. W. N. 340.
768	Kandhi v. Husain Bibi ..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 158; 26 O. C. 352; 10 O. L. J. 611.
769	Sewdutrai Narsaria v. Tata Sons Ltd. ..	27 C. W. N. 494.
771	Ram Adhin v. Gaya Prasad ..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 159.
772	Commissioner of Income-Tax, Madras v. Arunachellam Chettiar ..	46 M. L. J. 68; 19 L. W. 125; (1924) M. W. N. 326; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 474.
774	Nirode Nath v. Amullya Dhone ..	27 C. W. N. 466; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 582.
776	Jhanda Singh v. Muhammad Anwar Khan ..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 160.
777	Pir Pacha Saheb v. Mohammed Ruhimuddin ..	19 L. W. 174; 46 M. L. J. 215; (1924) M. W. N. 217 (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 491.
780	Moti Ram v. Kanhya Mal ..	2 L. L. J. 514.
781	Kandaswamy Goundan v. Subbai Goundan ..	46 M. L. J. 345; 34 M. L. T. 92; (1924) M. W. N. 338.
783	Bhupendra Nath Mukherjee v. Monohar Mukherjee	28 C. W. N. 86; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 456.
787	Nurse v. Rustomji Dorabji ..	19 L. W. 397; 46 M. L. J. 353; (1924) M. W. N. 382.
790	Rajendra Kumar v. Brojendra Kumar ..	37 C. L. J. 191; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 501.
795	Rajendra Narain v. Satish Chandra ..	50 C. 948; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 233.
798	Lahini v. Bala ..	18 N. L. R. 85; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 227.
801	Phulmani Mundain v. Emperor ..	(1924) Pat. 13; 25 Cr. L. J. 449.
805	Sukrulla Fakir v. Fatma ..	25 Cr. L. J. 453.
806	Joti Prasad v. Durga Prasad ..	25 Cr. L. J. 454.
807	Narendra Nath v. East Indian Railway Company	25 Cr. L. J. 455; 5 P. L. T. 419.
809	Buta v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 457.
810	Nand Kishore Misra v. Kalka Misra ..	25 Cr. L. J. 458; (1924) Pat. 196.
811	Jairam Kunbi v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 459.
812	Sailendra Chandra Singh v. Emperor ..	38 C. L. J. 175; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 153; 25 Cr. L. J. 460.
814	Emperor v. Khanu Koiri ..	25 Cr. L. J. 462.
815	Ram Din v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 463.
816	Lalit Mohan v. Noni Lal Sarkar ..	27 C. W. N. 651; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 662; 39 C. L. J. 329; 25 Cr. L. J. 461.
817	Raja v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 465.
818	Puttoo Lal v. Emperor ..	21 A. L. J. 820; 9 O. & A. L. R. 1047; 46 A. 54; 25 Cr. L. J. 465.
819	Roshan Singh v. Emperor ..	22 A. L. J. 129; 46 A. 235; 25 Cr. L. J. 467.
819	Mahomed Yunus v. Emperor ..	(1923) A. I. R. (C.) 517; 50 C. 318; 25 Cr. L. J. 467.
823	Jalal-ud-din v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 471.
824	Umed Singh v. Emperor ..	22 A. L. J. 79; 25 Cr. L. J. 472.
825	Gajanan Sakharam v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 473.
826	S. M. Bose v. Emperor ..	22 A. L. J. 83; 46 A. 218; 25 Cr. L. J. 474.
827	Samual Ilqanah v. Emperor ..	25 Cr. L. J. 475.
828	Sheo Prasad Singh v. Mahangoo Nonia ..	25 Cr. L. J. 476.
829	Emperor v. Banarsi ..	22 A. L. J. 144; 46 A. 254; 25 Cr. L. J. 477;
833	Pradyumna Kumar v. Pramatha Nath ..	27 C. W. N. 684; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 708.
839	Banke Lal v. Kanhaiya Lal ..	9 O. L. J. 637.
845	Rung Lal Kalooram v. Kedar Nath ..	27 C. W. N. 513.
848	Manbodh Missir v. Bhairo Missir ..	(1922) Pat. 300; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 97 (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 509; 4 P. L. T. 322.
851	Jagdishwar Narayan v. Muhammad Haziq Hussain	(1924) Pat. 142.
862	Kali Din v. Madho ..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 169.
864	San Yeik v. Municipal Committee of Pegu ..	2 Bur. L. J. 231; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 132.
865	Parsotim Das v. Firm Jangli Sao ..	1 P. L. R. 199.
866	Abdulla v. M. V. R. S. Firm ..	2 Bur. L. J. 229; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 153.
868	Gladstone Wyllie & Co. v. Joosub Peer Mahomed & Co. ..	27 C. W. N. 666; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 117.
869	Neki v. Chhaju Ram ..	4 L. 445; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 225.
871	Mahammad Hadi v. Debi Prasad ..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 600.
872	Balak Ram v. Muhammad Said ..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 695; 5 L. L. J. 530.
874	Ashfaq Hussain v. Bunyad Hussain ..	(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 252; 9 O. & A. L. R. 415

875	Mangru Rai v. Shivanand Lal	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 575.
877	Ma Pyone v. Ma U	..	2 Bur. L. J. 233; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 89.
878	Sitaram Sadashiv Shastri Sapre v. Parshuram Bhau Patil	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 449.
879	Wish Nath v. Rahmat Ullah	..	(1923) A. I. R (L.) 671.
881	Dalganjan v. Emperor	..	22 A. L. J. 81; 25 Cr. L. J. 481.
882	B. R. Bahadar v. Jadawjee Mehta	..	2 Bur. L. J. 235; 1 R 687; (1924) A. I R. (R.) 172; 25 Cr. L. J. 482.
883	Basha Nand v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 610; 25 Cr. L. J 483.
8 5	Ashu v. Maung Po Khan	..	2 Bur. L. J. 236; 1 R. 632; (1 24) A. I. R. (R.) 100; 25 Cr. L. J. 485.
886	Gudri Khatik v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A) 595; 25 Cr. L. J. 486.
887	Maung Hman v. Emperor	..	2 Bur. L. J. 238; 1 R. 689; (1924) A. I. R. (R.) 172; 25 Cr. L. J. 487.
888	Imam Ali v. Emperor	..	25 Cr. L. J 488.
889	Nga Po Chet v. Emperor	..	2 Bur. L. J. 239; 25 Cr. L. J. 489.
890	Subedar v. Emperor	..	(1924) A. I. R. (A.) 207; 25 Cr. L. J. 490.
892	Shermull v. Corporation of Calcutta	..	(1923) A. I. R. (C.) 725; 25 Cr. L. J. 492.
894	Ata Muhammad v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 692; 5 L. L. J. 475; 25 Cr. L. J. 494
895	Saudagar Singh v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 683; 5 L. L. J. 572; 25 Cr. L. J. 495.
897	Begraj v. Alisher	..	(1923) A. I. R. (S.) 50; 16 S. L. R. 278.
901	Irappa v. Ningappa	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 450.
901	Ghulam Fatima v. Khaira	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 674.
903	Ralla Ram v. Firoz Din	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L) 665.
905	Kali Mutu Asri v. Meera Hussein	..	11 L. B. R. 381; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 23.
906	Bodh Raj v. Raja Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 668.
907	Habibar Rahman v. Saidannessa Bibi	..	38 C L. J. 358; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 327.
908	Ashraf Ali v. Rameshwar Nath	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 684.
909	Ram Kishore v. Abdul Karim	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 173.
910	Ramkissendas v. Binjraj Chowdhury	..	50 C. 419; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 691.
911	Raoji v. Warlu	..	3 N. L. J. 313; 18 N. L. R. 182; (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 107.
913	Lachman Prasad v. Majju	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A) 167.
914	Kasturibhai Manibhai v. Bai Mahalaxmi	..	(1923) A. I. R. (B.) 464.
917	Madhavan Nair v. Abdur Rahiman	..	(1922) A. I. R. (M.) 404.
918	Baba v. Sukkha	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 165.
920	Lajpat Syndicate v. Finlay Fleming & Co.	..	11 L. B. R. 326; (1923) A I. R. (R.) 84.
922	Rayabharam Saramma v. Devapurajala Gangayya		(1922) A. I. R. (M.) 390.
923	Maung Tun Gyaw v. Maung Po Thwe	..	11 L. B. R 351; (1922) A. I. R. (L. B.) 37.
926	Balla v. Baru Mal		(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 685.
927	Kuber Das v. Ram Din Kalwar	..	20 A. L. J. 769; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 14; 45 A. 5.
929	Jogendra Singh v. Kesho Prasad Singh	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 429; 1 Pat. 764; (1923) Pat. 213; 1 P. L. R. 91.
933	Udit Narain Lal v. Ram Lachhman Rao	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 161.
934	Govindlal Bansilal v. Bansilal Motilal	..	23 Bom. L. R. 1049; 46 B. 249.
940	Fazal Haq v. Aziz Hasan	..	(1923) A. I. R. (A) 163.
941	Govindlal Bansilal v. Bansilal Motilal	..	24 Bom. L. R. 196; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 11.
942	Adiraju Arasu Kannike Ballala v. Pattu	..	(1922) A. I. R. (M.) 425.
943	Najan Ahmed Haji Ali v. Salemahomed Peermahomed	..	24 Bom. L. R. 998; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 113.
949	Habibar Rahaman v. Saidannessa Bibi	..	38 C. L. J. 365; 51 C. 331; (1924) A I. R. (C.) 473.
952	Chaturbhai Lallubhai Patel v. Motilhai Bapuji Patel	..	24 Bom. L. R. 1315; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 146.
954	Surja Prasad v. Midnapur Zamindari Co., Ltd.		38 C. L. J. 369.
955	Bhagwan Das v. Mohabbat Shah		(1923) A. I. R. (A.) 170.
957	Ramdhuri Chowdhuri v. Deonandan Prasad Singh	..	3 P. L. T. 501; (1922) Pat. 269; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 71, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 507; 1 P. L. R. 18; 2 Pat. 65.

K UNIVERSITY
No. 7546

961	Emperor v. Har Prasad Bhargava	..	21 A. L. J. 42; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 91; 45 A. 226; 25 Cr. L. J. 497.
981	Ram Gopal v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 687; 25 Cr. L. J. 517.
982	Emperor v. Nga Thet She	..	11 L. B. R. 375; (1922) A. I. R. (L. B.) 40; 25 Cr. L. J. 518.
983	Malla v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 691; 5 L. L. J. 528; 25 Cr. L. J. 519.
984	Darya Singh v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 666; 25 Cr. L. J. 520.
986	Emperor v. Bimalanand Das Gupta	..	38 C. L. J. 353; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 329; 25 Cr. L. J. 522.
987	Mahendra Nath v. Milkhi Ram	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 689; 25 Cr. L. J. 523.
988	Kashi Pramanik v. Damu Pramanik	..	27 C. W. N. 28; 25 Cr. L. J. 524.
989	Banarsi Das v. Emperor	..	53 P. L. R. 1922; 4 L. L. J. 482; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 92; 25 Cr. L. J. 525.
990	Abdul Matlab v. Nanda Lal	..	50 C. 423; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 674; 25 Cr. L. J. 526.
991	Dehri Sonar v. Emperor	..	50 C. 367; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 707; 25 Cr. L. J. 527.
992	Chandra Mohan Das v. Emperor	..	27 C. W. N. 148; 25 Cr. L. J. 528.
993	Emperor v. Sadhu Charan Das	..	26 C. W. N. 414; 49 C. 600; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 409; 25 Cr. L. J. 529.
995	Emperor v Dattatraya Shankar Paranjpe	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1089; 47 B. 960; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 184; 25 Cr. L. J. 531.
997	Khizar v. Emperor	..	4 L. L. J. 322; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 410; 25 Cr. L. J. 533.
1001	Mukund Ram v. Emperor	..	(1922) A. I. R. (A.) 273; 25 Cr. L. J. 537.
1002	Lila v. Emperor	..	9 O. L. J. 291; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 74; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 228; 25 Cr. L. J. 538.
1003	Karam Din v. Emperor	..	(1923) A. I. R. (L.) 617; 25 Cr. L. J. 539.
1005	Raghunandan v. Kishen Mohan Singh	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 210; 25 Cr. L. J. 541.
1008	Bikram Singh v. Nihal Chand	..	25 Cr. L. J. 544.
1009	Muhammad Hamid v. Mahmud	..	(1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 384; 44 M. L. J. 149; 32 M. L. T. 52; 27 C. W. N. 701; 4 L. 15; 25 Bom. L. R. 660; 38 C. L. J. 231; 1 P. W. R. 1923 P. C.
1015	Bhairab Chandra Das v. Midnapur Zemindari Co., Ltd.	..	38 C. L. J. 372.
1020	Ram Kishun Ram v. North-Western Railway	..	20 A. L. J. 973; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 122.
1021	Takir Ram Kalwar v. M. N. Swamy Naidu	..	1 R. 283; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 215.
1022	Jadab Chandra Mitter v. Romesh Chandra	..	27 C. W. N. 537; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 603.
1025	Secretary of State for India v. Raj Kumar	..	50 C. 347; 27 C. W. N. 472.
1028	Hausla Bakhsh Singh v. Raj Bakhsh Singh	..	4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 47.
1030	Darapali Sadagar v. Najir Ahmed	..	50 C. 391; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 609.
1032	Kunj Behari Lal v. Abdul Hadi	..	4 U. P. L. R. (A.) 200.
1035	Bhulu Beg v. Jatindra Nath Sen	..	27 C. W. N. 24; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 138.
1037	Subhanali v. Bodulal	..	(1923) A. I. R. (N.) 17.
1039	Jamuna Rai v. Ramtahall Raut	..	(1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 387; 1 Pat. 19; 3 P. L. T. 790.
1041	Jagdamba Kumari v. Wazir Narain Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 59; 44 M. L. J. 503; 37 C. L. J. 287; 32 M. L. T. 157; 4 P. L. T. 319; 25 Bom. L. R. 676; 2 Pat. 319; 18 L. W. 555; 28 C. W. N. 98; (1923) M. W. N. 460 P. C.
1044	Johara Banoo v. Ganga Chandra	..	(1922) A. I. R. (C.) 222.
1046	East Indian Railway Company v. Gopi Krishna-Kashi Prasad	..	21 A. L. J. 448; 45 A. 53; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 18.
1047	Shib Charan v. Bepin Behary	..	27 C. W. N. 144; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 149.
1048	Naresh Narayan Roy v. Secretary of State for India	..	(1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 1; 32 M. L. T. 162; (1923) M. W. N. 511; 50 C. 446; 45 M. L. J. 444; 28 C. W. N. 453 P. C.
1054	Kali Prasad Singh v. Mathura Prasad Singh	..	(1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 28; 1 P. L. R. 16; 3 P. L. T. 813.
1055	Motilal Jasraj v. Chandmal Hindumal	..	25 Bom. L. R. 1081; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 155.

TABLE
OF

Cases Applied, Approved, Considered, Disapproved, Dissented from, Distinguished, Explained, Followed, Not Followed, Overruled and Relied upon in Volume 77 of Indian Cases, 1923.

A.

A. G. Madari v. R. Miser, 36 Ind. Cas. 431; 9 Bur. L. T. 119. (Relied on) .. Page. 532

Abbakke Heggadthi v. Kinhiamma Shetty, 29 M. 491. (Relied on) .. 768

Abdool Ali v. Abdoor Rahaman, 21 W. R. 429. (Relied on) .. 798

Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi, 21 C. 496 at p. 502; 21 I. A. 26; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 399; Rafique and Jackson P.C. No. 134; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 961 (P. C). (Distinguished) .. 109

Abdulla Paru v. Gannibai, 11 B. 690; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 453. (Relied on) .. 798

Adam Umar Sale v. Bapu Bawaji, 33 B. 116; 10 Bom. L. R. 1128. (Applied) .. 952

Administrator-General of Bengal v. Prem Lall Mullick, 22 C. 1011; 22 I. A. 203; 5 M. L. J. 157; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 660; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 652 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 171

Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa 4 B. 494; 7 I. A. 162; 4 Sar P. C. J. 154; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 757; 4 Ind. Jur. 421; 3 Shome L. R. 206; 7 C. L. R. 1; 2 Ind. Dec. (N S.) 838 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 92

Aftar Ali v. Brojendra Kishore Raj, 37 Ind. Cas. 252; 24 C. L. J. 60. (Followed) .. 564

Afzal Shah v. Lachmi Narain, 42 Ind. Cas. 856; 40 A. 7; 15 A. L. J. 809. (Not followed) .. 761

Ahmedabad Municipality v. Manilal, 20 B. 146; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 655; 10 B. 212; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 144. (Relied on) .. 529

Ahsanullah Khan v. Mansukh Ram, 25 Ind. Cas. 350; 36 A. 403; 12 A. L. J. 511; 15 Cr. L. J. 598. (Relied on) .. 806

Albuquerque & Sons v. South Indian Railway Company, 68 Ind. Cas. 269; 16 L. W. 667; (1922) M. W. N. 328; 43 M. L. J. 90; (1922) A. I. R. (M) 231; 31 M. L. T. 470. (Followed) .. 511

Ali Muhammad v. Nathu, 54 Ind. Cas. 879; 163 P. R. 1919; 78 P. L. R. 1919; 1 L. L. J. 106. (Relied on) .. 401

Allu v. Emperor, 75 Ind. Cas. 980; 4 L. 376. (Relied on) .. 425

Amrita Lall Ghose v. Narayan Chandra Chakrabarti, 53 Ind. Cas. 973; 30 C. L. J. 515. (Relied on) .. 589

A—concld.

Anakaran Puthiyavallapil Mussan Haji v. Thiyan Thavara Koran, 65 Ind. Cas. 979; 41 M. L. J. 392; 14 L. W. 387; (1921) M. W. N. 679 (Relied on) .. Page. 922

Appandai Vathiyar v. Bagubali Mudaliar, 5 Ind. Cas. 280; 33 M. 439; (1910) M. W. N. 44; 7 M. L. T. 203; 20 M. L. J. 275. (Dissented from) .. 219

Arumugham Chetty v. Muthu Koundan, 52 Ind. Cas. 525; 42 M. 711; 9 L. W. 565; (1919) M. W. N. 409; 37 M. L. J. 166; 26 M. L. T. 96 (F. B). (Relied on) .. 640

Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyyappa Chetty, 21 M. 91; 8 M. L. J. 28; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 421. (Followed) .. 628

Ashfaq Ahmad v. Wazir Ali, 14 A. 1; A. W. N. (1891) 211; 11 A. 423; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373. (Followed) .. 113

Atkins, In re, Smith v. Atkin, (1909) 1 Ch. 471; 78 L. J. Ch. 307; 99 L. T. 877. (Distinguished) .. 612

Attorney-General of New South Wales v. Henry Louis Bertrand, (1867) 36 L. J. P. C. 51 at p. 57; 4 Moo. P. C. (N. S.) 460; 1 P. C. 520; 16 L. T. 752; 16 W. R. 9; 10 Cox C. C. 618; 16 E. R. 391. (Relied on) .. 425

Aurangabad Mills Limited, In re, 64 Ind. Cas. 9; 45 B. 1280; 23 Bom. L. R. 570. (Followed) .. 621

Ayarvali Pakkar, In re, 74 Ind. Cas. 952; 45 M. L. J. 305; (1923) M. W. N. 758; 18 L. W. 89; 24 Cr. L. J. 840. (Considered) .. 481

B

Babu Baldeo Prasad v. Shaikh Ali Husain, 10 O. C. 348. (Followed) .. 79

Babu Singh v. Bihari Lal, 30 A. 156; 5 A. L. J. 175; A. W. N. (1908) 61. (Relied on) 640

Baikuntha Nath v. Basanta Kumari Dasi, 34 Ind. Cas. 946; 23 C. L. J. 151 (Followed) 564

Baljit v. Mahipat, 49 Ind. Cas. 118; 17 A. J. 60; 41 A. 203 (Followed) 139, 630, 638

Baluswami Aiyar v. Venkataswami Naicken, 40 Ind. Cas 531, 40 M 745; 32 M. L. J. 24. (Distinguished) .. 737

Bamapada Roy v. The Midnapur Zamindari Co., 16 Ind. Cas. 376; 16 C. L. J. 322 (Followed) .. 261

B—contd.

Banu Singh v. Emperor, 33 C. 1353; 10 C. W. N. 962; 4 Cr. L. J. 145. (Reliedon) .. 961
Bazari Hajam v. Emperor, 68 Ind. Cas. 958; 1 Pat. 242; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 1; (1922) Pat. 46; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 73; 3 P. L. T. 626; 23 Cr. L. J. 638. (Relied on) .. 423
Beja v. Emperor, 26 Ind. Cas. 625; 13 P. R. 1914 Cr.; 16 Cr. L. J. 33; 223 P. L. R. 1915; 63 P. W. R. 1912 Cr. (Followd) .. 984
Beynon v. Ogg, 7 Tax Cas. 125. (Followed) 216
Bhagat Mal v. Abdul Karim, 34 Ind. Cas. 23; 1 P. L. J. 86; 2 P. L. W. 430; 20 C. W; N. 797. (Relied on) .. 640
Bhagwan Das v. Rajpal Singh, 63 Ind. Cas. 276; 24 O. C. 148. (Followed) .. 749
Bhagwan Dass v. Mohan Lal, 25 A. 421; A. W. N. (1903) 83 (Followed) .. 694
Bhagwan Dayal v. Param Sukh Dass, 27 Ind. Cas. 623; 37 A. 179; 13 A. L. J. 179. (Considered) .. 464
Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal, 1 Ind. Cas. 426; 31 A. 82 at p. 98; 5 M. L. T. 185; 6 A. L. J. 71. (Distinguished) .. 148
Bhugobat Singh v Ram Adhin Singh, 22 W. R. 330. (Followed) .. 167
Bhup Kuar v. Balbir Sahai, 64 Ind. Cas. 885; 19 A. L. J. 978; 44 A. 190; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 342. (Relied on) .. 353
Bibudhendra v. Debendra Nath, 27 Ind. Cas. 432; 20 C. L. J. 140. (Followed) .. 261
Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, 20 C. 708 (F. B.); 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 477. (Distinguished) .. 929
Bindesri Naik v. Ganga Saran Sahu, 20 A. 171; 2 C. W. N. 129; 25 I. A. 9; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 273; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 471 (P. C.). (Relied on) .. 122
Bisheshar Dayal v. Har Raj Kuar, 66 Ind. Cas. 622; 8 O. L. J. 346. (Distinguished) 109
Bismillah Begam v. Nur Muhammad, 63 Ind. Cas. 792; 44 A. 61; 19 A. L. J. 845; 3 U. P. L. R (A.) 186; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 155. (Dissented from) .. 901
Biswanath Prasad v. Chandra Narayan Chowdhury, 63 Ind. Cas. 770; 48 C. 509; 48 I. A. 127 (P. C.). (Considered) .. 464
Bonsey v. Wordsworth, (1856) 18 C. B. 325; 25 L. J. C. P. 205; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 494; 4 W. R. 566; 139 E. R. 1395; 107 R. R. 318. (Followed) .. 943
Bradley & Cohn Limited v. Ramsay & Co., (1912) 105 L. T. 771; 28 T. L. R. 388, (Followed) .. 590
Braithwaite v. Foreign Hardwood Co., (1905) 2 K. B. 543; 74 L. J. K. B. 688; 92 L. T. 637; 10 Com. Cas. 189; 10 Asp. M. C. 52; 21 T. L. R. 413. (Relied on) .. 943
Brij Coomaree v. Salamandar Fire Insurance Company, 32 C. 816. (Dissented from) 150
Brij Coommaree v. Ramrick Das, 5 C. W. N. 781. (Followed) .. 327
Brinsmead v. Harrison, (1871) 6 C. P. 584; 40 L. J. C. P. 281; 24 L. T. 798; 19 W. R. 956. (Followed) .. 580
Brojobashi Panda v. Emperor, 4 Ind. Cas. 485; 13 C. W. N. 398; 11 Cr. L. J. 4. (Relied on) .. 1008

B—concld.

Budh Singh v. Mula Singh, 46 P. R. 1905; 18 P. L. R. 1905; 46 P. W. R. 1905. (Followed) .. 413
Bwllfa and Merthyr Dare Steam Collieries In re, (1891), Limited and the Pontypridd Waterworks Company, (1902) 2 K. B. 135 at p. 141; 71 L. J. K. B 613; 87 L. T. 291; 50 W. R. 627; 18 T. L. R. 604. (Considered and applied) .. 347

C

C. M. R. M. A. R. Perianan Chetty v. Maung Ba Thaw, 43 Ind. Cas. 916; 9 L. B. R. 159; 11 Bur. L. T. 114. (Relied on) .. 362
California Copper Syndicate Co., Ltd. v. Harris, (1904) 5 Tax. Cas. 159; 6 F. 894. (Followed) .. 216
Chadammi v. Lalta Prosad, 16 Ind. Cas. 525; 10 A. L. J. 174; 34 A. 602; 13 Cr. L. J. 717. (Followed) .. 435
Chadburn v. Moore, (1892) 61 L. J. Ch. 674; 67 L. T. 257; 41 W. R. 39. (Relied on) .. 558
Chandan v. Bisken Singh, 11 Ind. Cas. 816; 33 A. 630; 8 A. L. J. 798. (Followed) .. 781
Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad, 1 Ind. Cas 479; 31 A 176, 6 A. L. J. 263. (Followed) .. 909
Chandramoni Mohanti v. Manmatha Nath Mitter, 5 Ind. Cas. 301; 11 C. L. J. 68. (Relied on) .. 261
Chhatar Singh v. Tej Singh, 59 Ind. Cas. 671; 43 A. 104; 18 A. L. J. 956; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 384 (Followed) .. 628
Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Vathiyar, 37 Ind. Cas. 836; 40 M. 233; 21 M. L. T. 24; 5 L. W. 132; (1917) M. W. N. 74; 32 M. L. J. 13. (Applied) .. 547
Chin Pin v. Emperor, 61 Ind. Cas. 835; 13 Bur. L. T. 154; 22 Cr. L. J. 451. (Not followed) .. 885
Chrisiana Sens Law v. Benarsi Prosad Chowdhury, 22 Ind. Cas. 685; 19 C. W. N. 287. (Followed) .. 357
Clydebank Engineering and Shipbuilding Company Limited v. Don Jose Ramos Yzquierdoy Castaneda, (1905) A. C. 6; 91 L. T. 666; 21 T. L. R 58; 74 L. J. P. C. 1. (Relied on) .. 768
Collector of Kaira v. Chunilal, 29 B. 161; 6 Bom. L. R. 652. (Followed) .. 749
Collector of Poona v. Kashinath Khasgiwala, 10 B. 585; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 778. (Considered and applied) .. 347
Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving, (1905) A. C. 369; 74 L. J. P. C. 77; 92 L. T. 738; 21 T. L. R. 513. (Relied upon) .. 217
Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Warness & Co., Ltd., (1919) 2 K. B. 444; 89 L. J. K. B. 6; 121 L. T. 125; 35 T. L. R. 436. (Followed) .. 39
Commissioners of Taxes v Melbourne Trust, Limited, (1914) A. C. 1001; 84 L. J. P. C. 21; 30 T. L. R. 685. (Followed) .. 216

C—concld.

Page.

Cort v. Ambergate Railway Company, (1851) 17 Q. B. 127; 20 L. J. Q. B. 460; 15 Jur. 877; 117 E. R. 1229; 85 R. R. 369. (Relied on) .. 943

Cyclemakers' Co-operative Supply Co. v. Sims, (1913) 1 K. B. 477; 72 L. J. K. B. 160; 88 L. T. 300, 15 T. L. R. 153. (Distinguished) .. 338

D

Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy, 21 C. 142; 20 I. A. 160; 17 Ind. Jur. 576; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 366; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 727 (P. C.). (Relied on.) .. 157

Dal Singh v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 311; 13 N. L. R. 100; 15 A. L. J. 475; 1 P. L. W. 661; 19 Bom. L. R. 510; 21 C. W. N. 818; 26 C. L. J. 13; 6 L. W. 71; 22 M. L. T. 31; (1917) M. W. N. 522; 18 Cr. L. J. 471; 85 I. J. P. C. 140; 33 M.L.J. 555; 44 C. 876; 11 Bur. L. T. 54; 44 I. A. 137 (P. C). (Relied upon) .. 252

Dalip Narain Singh v. Parmaoti Bibi, 67 Ind. Cas. 931; 42 A. 581; 17 A. L. J. 982. (Distinguished) .. 909

Darbari Mal v. Moola Singh, 56 Ind. Cas. 139; 18 A. L. J. 628; 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 160; 42 A. 519. (Distinguished) .. 37

Datto Govind Kulkarni v. Pandurang Vinayak, 32 B. 499; 10 Bom. L. R. 692. (Followed) .. 117

Debendra Nath Das v. Bibudhendra Mansingh Baramarbar Roy, 45 Ind. Cas. 411; 27 C. L. J. 543; 5 P. L. W. 1; 22 C. W. N. 674; 16 A. L. J. 522; 23 M. L. T. 384; (1918) M. W. N. 379; 20 Bom. L. R. 743; 35 M. L. J. 214; 45 I. A 67; 45 C. 805 (P. C). (Followed) .. 261

Debtor, In re, Petitioning Creditor, Ex parte, (1907) 97 L. T. 140; 14 Manson 198; 23 T. L. R. 618. (Followed) .. 580

Debtor, In re, Petitioning Creditor, Ex parte, 97 L. T. 140; 14 Manson 198; 23 T. L. R. 618. (Relied on) .. 580

Dental Manufacturing Company Limited v. C. DeTrey & Co., (1912) 3 K. B. 76 at pp. 87, 88; 81 L. J. K. B. 1162; 107 L. T. 111; 29 R. P. C. 617; 28 T. L. R. 498. (Relied on) .. 193

Deorao v. Ambadas, 43 Ind Cas. 952; 14 N. L. R. 21. (Followed) .. 640

Devappa Ramappa Naik v. Emperor, 50 Ind. Cas. 492; 43 B. 607; 21 Bom. L. R. 277; 20 Cr. L. J. 316. (Relied on) .. 233

Devi Ditta v. Saudagar Singh, 65 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 322. (Followed) 475, 906

Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh, 15 Ind. Cas. 673; 34 A. 398; 16 C. W. N. 675; 9 A. L. J. 730; 14 Bom. L. R. 485; (1912) M. W. N. 641; 12 M. L. T. 95; 16 C L. J. 60; 23 M. L. J. 200; 39 I. A. 142 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 214

D—concld.

Page.

Dharani Kanta v. Gabar Ali, 18 Ind. Cas. 17; 15 Bom. L. R. 445; 13 M. L. T. 185; (1913) M. W. N. 157; 17 C. W. N. 389; 17 C. L. J. 277; 25 M. L. J. 95 (P. C). (Distinguished) .. 307

Dilli Singh v. Bina, 44 Ind. Cas. 506; 14 N. L. R. 41 at p. 50. (Relied on) .. 640

Dinomoyee Debi v. Bon Behari Kapur, 7 C. W. N. 165. (Relied on) .. 362

Dirgpal Singh v. Kallu, 30 Ind. Cas. 956; 37 A. 660; 10 A. L. J. 945. (Relied on) .. 737

Donald Graham & Co. v. Kewalram Ganeshamdas, 15 Ind. Cas. 805; 13 Cr. L. J 533; 5 S L. R. 237. (Relied on) .. 1008

Doyanidhi Panda v. Kelai Panda, 11 C. L. R. 395. (Followed) .. 4, 56

Duke of Buccleuch, (1892) P. 201; 61 L. J. P. 57; 67 L. T. 739; 40 W. R. 455; 7 Asp. M. C. 294. (Distinguished) .. 171

Duke of Dedford v. Dawson, (1875) 20 Eq. 353; 44 L. J. Ch. 549; 33 L. T. 156. (Relied on) .. 529

Durga Das v. Jai Narain 50 Ind. Cas. 156; 17 A. L. J. 567. (Relied on) .. 532

Dursan Singh v. Bhawani Koer, 19 Ind. Cas. 974; 17 C. W. N. 984. (Followed) .. 564

E

East Indian Railway Company v. Firm Kishin Lal Tikhamal, 73 Ind. Cas. 986; 21 A. L. J. 438; 9 O. & A. L. R. 531; 45 A. 530; (1924) A. I. R. (A) 7. (Followed) 1046

Emperor v. Babu Prasad, 42 Ind. Cas. 1000; 40 A. 32; 15 A. L. J. 805; 19 Cr. L. J. 40. (Followed) .. 883

——— v. Mata Prasad, 30 A. 351; A. W. N. (1908) 152; 5 A. L. J. 400; 8 Cr. L. J. 4 .. 818

——— v. Nandbasappa Basappa, 15 Ind. Cas 795; 14 Bom. L. R. 367; 13 Cr. L. J. 523; 1 Bom. Cr. C. 123. (Considered) 481

——— v. Purshotam Kara, 26 B. 418; 4 Bom. L. R. 38. (Considered) .. 481

——— v. Raghbir Singh, 31 Ind. Cas. 375; 22 P. R. 1915 Cr.; 42 P. W. R. 1915 Cr.; 16 Cr. L. J. 775. (Followed) .. 490

——— v. Ramaya Chennappa, 28 Ind. Cas. 641; 17 Bom. L. R. 217; 3 Bom. Cr. C. 38; 16 Cr. L. J. 305. (Relied on) 811

Empress of India v. Asghar Ali, 2 A. 260; 4 Ind. Jur. 250; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 727. (Distinguished) .. 961

——— v. Kaliprosonno Doss, 14 C. 245; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 163. (Distinguished) .. 290

F

Fahmida Khanum v. Jafri Khanum, 30 A. 153; 5 A. L. J. 169; A. W. N. (1908) 55. (Followed) .. 66

Faiz Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Said Khan, 25 C. 816; 25 I. A. 77; 2 C. W. N. 385; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 320 (P. C). (Followed) .. 358

F—concld.

Faki Abdulla v Babaji Gungaji, 14 B. 458; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 767. (Followed) .. 506
Farrant v. Olver, (1922) W. N. 47; 91 L. J. Ch. 758; 127 L. T. 145; 66 S. J 283. (Relied on) .. 275
Fateh Ali v. Charles Edward Gray, 36 Ind. Cas. 210. (Relied on) .. 532
Faujdar Thakur v. Kasi Choudhuri, 27 Ind. Cas. 186; 42 C. 612; 19 C. W. N. 184; 21 C. L. J. 53; 16 Cr. L. J. 122. (Relied on) .. 734
Fazla v. Badan Singh, 11 Ind. Cas. 765; 48 P. R. 1911; 141 P. W. R. 1911; 237 P. L. R. 1911 (Followed.) .. 274
Felaram Roy v. Bagalanand Banerjee, 6 Ind. Cas 207; 14 C. W. N. 895. (Relied on) .. 174
Fernandaz v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 129; 45 B. 672; 22 Bom. L. R. 1040; 22 Cr. L. J. 17. (Relied on) .. 988
Flower v. Lloyd, (1877) 6 Ch. D. 297; 46 L. J. Ch. 838; 37 L. T. 419; 25 W. R. 793. (Relied on) .. 206
Frost v. Knight, (1872) 7 Ex. 111; 41 L. J. Ex. 78; 26 L. T. 77; 20 W. R. 471. (Distinguished) .. 275
Frost v. Knight, (1872) 7 Ex. 111; 41 L. J. Ex. 78; 26 L. T. 77; 20 W. R. 471. (Relied on) .. 943

G

Gadigi Muddappa v. Gadigi Rudramma, 61 Ind. Cas. 958; 13 L. W. 76. (Distinguished) .. 611
Gajodhar Bakhsh v. Gauri Shankar, 61 Ind. Cas. 205; 8 O. L. J. 81. (Followed) .. 340
Gajraj Singh v. Sadhu Singh, 16 Ind. Cas. 882; 15 O. C. 397. (Followed) .. 697
Gardner v. Lucas, (1878) 3 A. C. 582 at p. 603. (Relied upon) .. 297
Gazratulla Sardar v. Girish Chandra, 12 C. W. N. 175. (Followed) .. 1015
Ghulam Hussain v. Sultan Muhammad, 39 Ind. Cas. 717; 8 P. W. R. 1917. (Followed) 518
Ghumsham Das v. Uma Pershad, 50 Ind. Cas. 264; 15 N. L. R. 68; 17 A. L. J. 410; 36 M. L. J. 483; 21 Bom. L. R. 472; 23 C. W. N. 817; (1919) M. W. N. 513; 10 L. W. 511; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 86 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 50
Girdhari Lal v. Dala Mal, 3 P. R. 1901; P. L. R. 1900 p. 297. (Followed) .. 473
Girja Bai v. Sadashiv Dhundiraj, 37 Ind. Cas. 321; 43 C. 1031; 20 C. W. N. 1085; 4 A. L. J. 822; 20 M. L. T. 78; 12 N. L. R. 113 (1916) 2 M. W. N. 65; 18 Bom. L. R. 621; 4 L. W. 114; 24 C. L. J. 207; 31 M. L. J. 455; 43 I. A. 151 (P. C.) (Followed) .. 1041
Gobind Lal Roy v. Ramjanam Misser, 21 C. 70; 20 I. A. 165; 17 Ind. Jur. 536; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 356; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 679 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 851
Gobinda Chandra Chakravarti v. Nanda Kumar Das, 22 Ind. Cas. 910; 18 C. W. N. 689. (Relied on) .. 275

G—concld.

Godavarthy Sundaramma v. Godavarthy Mangamma, 47 Ind. Cas. 543; 8 L. W. 88; 34 M. L. J. 553. (Followed) .. 781
Godwin v. Brind, (1869) 17 W. R. 26; 5 C. P. 299*n*; 39 L. J. C. P. 122*n*. (Relied on.) .. 553
Gokal Chand v. Sanwal Das, 55 Ind. Cas. 933; 1 L. 348; 12 P. W. R. 1920; 79 P. L. R. 1920; 2 L. L. J 32. (Followed) .. 327
Gopal Das v. Permanad, 60 Ind. Cas. 512. (Followed) .. 542
Gopala Row Gadai Row Sahib v. Maria Susaya Pillai 30 M. 274 at p. 276; 17 M. L. J. 225. (Followed) .. 701
Govind Bikhaji v. Bhau Gopal, 39 Ind. Cas. 61; 41 B. 384; 19 Bom. L. R. 147. (Relied on) .. 362
Gunsburg, In re, Trustee, Ex parte, (1920) 2 K. B. 426; 89 L. J. K. B. 725; (1920) B. & C. R. 5; 123 L. T. 353; 64 S. J. 498; 36 T. L. R. 485. (Followed) .. 580
Guru Charan Nandi v. Sarab Ali, 52 Ind. Cas. 79; 30 C. L. J. 9; 23 C. W. N. 1041. (Followed) .. 1015
Guruthappa v. Narasingappa, 7 M. 174; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 707. (Relied on) .. 866

H

Hammer v. Sharp, (1875) 19 Eq. 108; 44 L. J. Ch. 53; 31 L. T. 643; 23 W. R. 158. (Relied on) .. 558
Hanmantram Sadhuram Pity v. Arthur Bowles, 8 B. 561; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 750. (Relied on) .. 48
Haraban dhu Adhikari v. Harish Chandra Dey, 3 C. W. N. 184. (Relied on) .. 522
Hardwar v. Ram Milan, 42 Ind. Cas. 812; 4 O. L. J. 565; 20 O. C. 271. (Followed) .. 1028
Harendra Lal Roy Chowdhury v. Hari Dasi Debi, 23 Ind. Cas. 637; 41 C. 972; 27 M. L. J. 80; (1914) M. W. N. 462; 16 M. L. T. 6; 18 C. W. N. 817; 19 C. L. J. 484; 16 Bom. L. R. 400; 12 A. L. J. 774; 1 L. W. 1050; 41 I. A. 110 (P. C.). (Considered) .. 464
Harjia v. Manakchand, 27 Ind. Cas. 866; 11 N. L. R. 9. (Followed) .. 798
Harman, In re, Lloyd v. Tardy, (1894) 3 Ch. 607 at p. 614; 63 L. J. Ch. 822; 8 R. 549; 71 L. T. 401. (Relied on) .. 83
Harnath Kuar v. Indar Bahadur Singh, 71 Ind. Cas. 629; 50 I. A. 69; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 403; 9 O. & A. L. R. 270; 9 O. L. J. 652; 44 M. L. J. 489; 37 C. L. J. 306; 45 A. 179; 27 C. W. N. 949; 18 L. W. 383; 26 O. C. 223; 33 M. L. T. 216 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 109
Hemp v. Garland, (1843) 4 Q. B. 519; 12 L. J. Q. B. 134; 7 Jur. 302; 3 G. & D. 402; 62 R. R. 423; 114 E. R. 994 (Relied on) .. 48
Hipgrave v Case, (1885) 28 Ch. D. 356; 54 L. J. Ch. 399; 52 L. T. 242. (Relied on) .. 275
Hira Bibi v. Ramdhan Lal, 62 Ind. Cas. 540; 6 P. L. J. 46; 2 P. L. T. 752; (1922) Pat. 42; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 3; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 70. (Relied on) .. 362
Hira Lal v. Emperor, 7 Ind. Cas. 1012; 13 O. C. 243; 11 Cr. L. J. 554. (Relied on) .. 439

H—concld.

Page.

Hirdey Narain v. Alam Singh, 48 Ind. Cas. 353; 41 A. 47; 16 A. L. J. 892. (Followed) .. 539
Hudson's Bay Company v. Stevens, (1909) 5 Tax Cas. 424. (Followed) .. 216
Hyam v. Gubbay, 32 Ind. Cas. 53; 20 C. W. N. 66. (Relied on) .. 558

I

Inayat Ali v. Mohar Singh, A. W. N. (1905) 231; 28 A. 142; 2 Cr. L. J. 598. (Followed) .. 888
Ishan Chunder Hazra v. Rameswar Mandol, 24 C. 831; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1221. (Followed) .. 761
Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Gous, 20 I. A. 99; 20 C. 831; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 305; 17 Ind. Jur. 321; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 307

J

Jalu Lal v. Lowis, 11 C. W. N. 712; 34 C. 848; 5 Cr. L. J. 480, 6 C. L. J. 531. (Relied on) .. 1008
Jagabandhu Saha v. Magnamoyi Dassi, 36 Ind. Cas. 884; 24 C. L. J. 363; 44 C. 555; 22 C. W. N. 89. (Followed) .. 1015
Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Secretary of State, 30 I. A. 44; 30 C. 291; 7 C. W. N. 193; 5 Bom. L. R. 1; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 412 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 707
Jagan Nath-Dewan Chand v Jagan Nath-Moti Chand, 71 Ind. Cas. 38. (Relied on) .. 764
Jagat Chandra Roy v. Kalimuddi Sardar, 71 Ind. Cas. 693; 26 C. W. N. 880; 24 Cr. L. J. 229. (Dissented from) .. 734
Jaggobundhu Mitter v. Purnanund Gossami, 16 C. 530; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 350 (F. B.) (Followed) .. 564
Jagnandan Singh v. Kishore Chand, 100 P. W. R. 1908. (Relied on) .. 532
Jahandar Baksh Mullick v. Ram Lal Hazra, 5 Ind. Cas. 565; 37 C. 449; 11 C. L. J. 361; 14 C. W. N. 470. (Relied on) .. 261
Jai Chand v. Girwar Singh, 52 Ind. Cas. 366; 41 A. 669; 17 A. L. J. 814. (Relied on) .. 564
Jai Kumar v. Gauri Nath, 28 A. 718; 3 A. L. J. 506; A. W. N (1906) 212. (Distinguished) .. 78
Jaisukh v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 559; 43 A. 125; 19 A. L. J. 1; 22 Cr. L. J. 127. (Relied on) .. 811
Jamshed Ali Khan v. Zahur-ul-Hasan Khan, 33 Ind. Cas. 357; 18 O. C. 340. (Not followed) .. 749
Jamuna Kanth Jha v. Rudra Kumar Jha, 52 Ind. Cas. 424; 4 P. L. J. 656; 20 Cr. L. J. 648; (1920) Pat. 42. (Relied on) .. 810
Janki Das v. Ahmad Husain Khan, 25 A. 159; A. W. N, (1902) 218. (Followed) .. 609

J—concld.

Page;

Janki Pershad Singh v. Dwarka Pershad Singh, 20 Ind. Cas. 73; 35 A. 391; 17 C. W. N. 1029; 14 M. L. T. 110; 25 M. L. J. 34; (1913) M. W. N. 630; 18 C. L. J. 200; 11 A. L. J. 818; 15 Bom. L. R. 853; 16 O. C. 216; 40 I. A. 170 (P. C.). (Distinguished) 1041
Jawala Ram v. Queen-Empress, 12 P. R. 1895 Cr. (Followed) .. 225
Jenks v. Turpin, (1884) 13 Q. B. D. 505; 53 L. J. M. C. 161; 50 L. T. 808; 15 Cox C. C. 486; 49 J. P. 20. (Followd) .. 303
Jeram v. Manphul, 4 P. R. 1892. (Followed) .. 473
Jeremiah v. Vas, 12 Ind. Cas. 961; 36 M. 457 at pp. 458, 461; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 576; 10 M. L. T. 506; 22 M. L. J. 73; 12 Cr. L. J. 585. (Followed) .. 481
Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress, 23 C. 493; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 328. (Relied on) .. 984
Jitendra Kumar Pal v. Mohendra Chandra Sarma, 37 Ind. Cas. 239; 24 C. L. J; 62. (Followed) .. 564
Jiwan Bakhsh v. Khan Bahadur Khan, 19 Ind. Cas. 528. (Followed) .. 52
Jogeswar Narain v. Ram Chandra Dutt, 23 C. 670; 23 I. A. 37 at p. 44; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 13; 6 M. L. J. 75; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 445 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 450
Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chundra Lahiry, 24 C. 725; 1 C. W. N. 374; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1152 (F. B.). (Followd) .. 148
Jones v. Just, (1868) 3 Q. B. D. 197; 9 B. & S. 141; 37 L. J. Q. B. 89; 18 L. T. 208; 16 W. R. 643. (Distinguished) .. 150
Jot Ram v. Hardawari, 23 Ind. Cas. 527; 27 P. R. 1914; 22 P. L. R. 1914; 249 P. W. R. 1913. (Followed) .. 538
Juggobundhu Mukerjee v. Ram Chunder, 5 C. 584; 5 C. L. R. 548; 3 Shome L. R. 68; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 979. (Followed) .. 564

K

Kailas Chandra Mitra v. Secretary of State, 18 Ind. Cas. 638; 17 C. L. J. 34 at p. 35. (Considered and applied) .. 347
Kaka v. Labh Chand, 106 P. R. 1906; 162 P. L. R. 1906. (Not followed) .. 222
Kakaralapidi Lakshmi Narayana v. Kandu Kuri Veera Sarabha, 29 Ind. Cas. 241; 39 M. 554; 17 M. L. T. 419; 28 M. L. J. 650; (1915) M. W. N. 626. (Relied upon) .. 109
Kala Tihari v. Narayan, 13 C. P. L. R. 143. (Followed) .. 789
Kalagava Bapiah, In the matter of, 27 M. 54; 2 Weir 227 & 578. (Relied on) .. 982
Kali Mandal v. Ramsarbaswa Chakravarti, 32 C. 957; 9 C. W. N. 721; 1 C. L. J. 476. (Followed) .. 520
Kandasami Reddi v. Suppammal, 70 Ind. Cas. 576; 45 M 443; 15 L. W. 325; 42 M. L. J. 268; (1922) M. W. N. 168; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 104; 32 M. L. T. 166. (Considered) .. 740
Kanhayalal Bhikaram v. Narhar Laxmanshet Vani, 27 B. 297; 5 Bom. L. R. 140. (Relied on) .. 877

K—concld.

Page.

Kaniz Fizza Bibi v. Sheo Narain Misr, 10 O. C. 108. (Not followed) .. 749
Kannu Chetty v. Amirthammal, 26 Ind. Cas. 418; 1 L. W. 877. (Relied on) .. 174
Kannusami Thanjiroyan v. Muthusami Pillai, 38 Ind. Cas. 194; (1917) M. W. N. 5; 5 L. W. 250. (Distinguished) .. 737
Karan Singh v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 7 A. 860; A. W. N. (1885) 247; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 945. (Followed) .. 933
Kashinath Govind v. Arant Sitaram, 24 B. 407; 2 Bom. L. R. 47; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 804. (Relied on) .. 532
Kashinath Parashram v. Gourabai, 28 Ind. Cas. 473; 39 B. 245; 17 Bom. L. R. 169. (Dissented from) .. 749
Kauleshar Rai v. Nabiban Bibi, 3 A. L. J. 426; A. W. N. (1906) 164; 28 A. 642. (Followed) .. 144
Kawal Nain v. Budh Singh, 40 Ind. Cas. 286; 39 A. 496; 15 A. L. J. 581; 2 P. L. W. 57; 21 C. W. N. 986; 33 M. L. J. 42; 19 Bom. L. R. 642; 26 C L. J 101; (1917) M. W. N. 514; 6 L. W. 330; 44 I. A. 159 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 1041
Kedar Nath v. Mannu Bibi, 13 Ind. Cas. 879; 16 C. W. N. 247. (Relied on) .. 897
Kedar Nath Mitter v. Denobandhu Shaha, 31 Ind. Cas. 626; 19 C. W. N. 724; 42 C. 1043. (Followed) .. 943
Kessowji v. Hurjivan Mulji, 11 B. 566; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373. (Distinguished) .. 78
Khanjan v. Queen-Empress, 4 O. C. 69. (Followed) .. 439
Khurshaid Ali v. Rashid Husain, 9 O. C. 331. (Distinguished) .. 109
King-Emperor v. Jayram, 25 B. 694; 3 Bom. L. R. 274. (Relied on) .. 811
——— v. Tirumal Reddi, 24 M. 523 at p. 535; 2 Weir 340 & 712; 11 M. L. J. 241. (Relied on) .. 811
Kishore Singh v. Bahadur Singh, 48 Ind. Cas. 470; 16 A. L. J. 933; 41 A. 97. (Followed) 638
Kishory Mohun Roy v. Mahomed Mujaffar Hossain, 18 C. 188; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 126. (Relied on) .. 368
Krishnammal v. Sunadaraja Aiyar, 22 Ind. Cas. 91; 38 M. 698; 15 M. L. T. 103; (1914) M. W. N. 200; 1 L. W. 147. (Distinguished) .. 542
Krishnaswami v. Sundarappayyar, 18 M. 415; 5 M. L. J. 164; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 638. (Distinguished) .. 542
Koylash ChunderDoss v. Tariney Churn, 10 C. 588; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 394. (Relied on) .. 558
Kuthali Moothavar v. Peringoti Kanharankutti, 66 Ind. Cas. 451; 26 C. W. N. 666; 44 M. 883; 14 L. W. 721; (1921) M. W. N. 347; 41 M. L. J. 650; 30 M. L. T. 42; 48 I. A. 395; 24 Bom. L. R. 669; (1922) A. I. R (P. C.) 181 (P. C.). (Relied on) .. 564
Kutub-ud-din Ahmad v. Bashir-ud-din, 5 Ind. Cas. 665; 32 A. 448; 7 A. L. J. 394. (Followed) .. 523

L

Page.

Lachchi Ram v. Emperor, 65 Ind. Cas. 852; 23 Cr. L. J. 196; 20 A. L. J. 218; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 61. (Dissented from) .. 995
Lachman Das v. Narain, 25 Ind. Cas. 409; 17 O. C. 213; 1 O. L. J. 553. (Distinguished) 78
Lakshmi Ammal v. Kadiresan Chettiar, 63 Ind. Cas. 431; 41 M. L. J. 198; 14 L. W. 12; (1921) M. W. N. 495. (Distinguished) 264
Lala Chatranarayan v. Uba Kanwari, 1 B. L. R. 201. (Relied on) .. 174
Lalchand v. Lakshman, 28 B. 466; 6 Bom. L. R 510. (Distinguished) .. 305
Lallubhai Bapubhai v. Cassibai, 7 I. A. 212; 5 B. 110; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 164; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 795; 4 Ind. Jur. 533; 3 Shome L. R. 245; 7 C. L. R. 445; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 117
Land Acquisition Act X of 1870, In the matter of, Munji Khetsey, 15 B. 279; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 189 (Considered and applied) .. 347
Lehna v. Kishan, 78 P. R. 1888 (Dissented from) .. 518
Loke Nath Singh v. Gaju Singh, 31 Ind. Cas. 426; 20 C. W. N. 178; 22 C. L. J. 333. (Followed) .. 357
Lucas and Chesterfield Gas and Water Board, In re, (1909) 1 K. B. 16 at pp. 30, 31; 77 L. J. K. B. 1009; 99 L. T. 767; 72 J. P. 437; 6 L. G. R. 1106; 24 T. L. R. 858. (Considered and applied) .. 347
Lyalpur Sugar Mills & Co. v. Ram Chandra Gur Sahai Cotton Mills & Co., 67 Ind. Cas. 73; 44 A. 565; 20 A. L. J. 422; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 235. (Followed) .. 766

M

Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Vadrevu Ranganayakamma, 48 Ind. Cas. 270; 41 M. 985 at p. 992; 35 M. L. J. 335; 24 M. L. T 197; (1918) M. W. N. 599; 8 L. W. 292 (F. B.). (Followed) .. 264
Madan Mohan Singh v. Gaja Prosad Singh, 11 Ind. Cas. 228; 14 C. L. J. 159. (Not followed) .. 542
Madana Mohana Aranga Bheema Deo v. Purushothama Aranga Bheema Deo, 46 Ind. Cas. 481; 20 Bom. L. R. 1041 at p. 1046; 35 M. L. J. 138; 5 P. L. W. 179; 8 L. W. 167; 16 A. L. J. 725; (1918) M W. N. 621; 24 M. L. T. 231; 28 C. L. J. 405; 41 M. 855; 23 C. W. N. 177; 45 I. A. 156 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 117
Mahadeva Aiyar v. South Indian Railway Company, 69 Ind. Cas. 59; 45 M. 135; 14 L. W. 684; 30 M. L. T. 112; 42 M. L. J. 202; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 362; (1921) M. W. N. 878. (Followed) .. 511
Mahandu v. Emperor, 57 Ind. Cas. 167; 1 L. J. 182; 1 L. 102; 21 Cr. L. J. 599; 89 P. L. R. 1920. (Distinguished) .. 984
Mahandu v. Emperor, 57 Ind. Cas. 167; 1 L. 102; 1 L. L. J. 182; 21 Cr. L. J. 599; 89 P. L. R. 1920. (Dissented from) .. 961
Mahanund Sahay v. Saidunnessa Bibi, 8 C. L. J. 525; 12 C W. N. 154. (Followed) .. 1015

M—contd.

Page

Maharaja of Bhartpur v. Rani Kanno Dei, 28 I. A 35 at p 42; 23 A. 181; 3 Bom. L. R. 51; 5 C. W. N. 137; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 792 (P. C). (Relied on) .. 167

Mahbub Ali v. Muhammad Husain, 57 Ind. Cas. 497; 23 O. C. 125; 7 O. L. J. 3 9. (Relied on) .. 737

Mahesh Dat v. Ram Asre. 67 Ind. Cas. 814; 9 O. L. J. 138; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 38; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 114. (Distinguished) .. 353

Mahmad v. Bagas, 32 B. 569; 10 Bom. L. R. 742. (Distinguished) .. 952

Mahmud Khan v. Ghazanfar Ali, 57 Ind. Cas. 34; 2 U. P. L. R. (L.) 133; 141 P. L. R. 1920. (Distinguished) .. 398

Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sulliman, 21 C. 612; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.). 1038. (Relied on) .. 206

Mahomed Musa v. Aghore Kumar, 28 Ind. Cas. 930; 42 C. 801; 17 Bom, L. R. 420; 21 C. L. J. 231; 28 M. L. J. 548; 19 C. W N. 250; 13 A. L. J. 229; 17 M. L. T. 143; 2 L. W. 258; (1915) M. W. N. 621; 42 I. A. 1 (P. C). (Relied on) .. 41

Malappurath Paramadhathil v. Gannazhi Krishnan, 13 Ind. Cas. 234; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 537. (Followed) .. 942

Malkarjun v. Narhari, 25 B. 337; 5 C. W. N. 10; 2 Bom. L. R. 927; 27 I. A. 216; 10 M. L. J. 363; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 739 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 37

Mallappa v. Hanmappa, 55 Ind. Cas. 814; 44 B. 297; 22 Bom. L. R. 203. (Distinguished) .. 117

Maniram v. Seth Rupchand, 33 C. 1047; 4 C. L. J. 94; 8 Bom. L. R. 501; 10 C. W. N. 874; 1 M. L. T. 199; 3 A. L. J. 525; 16 M. L. J. 300; 2 N. L. R. 130; 33 I. A. 165 (P. C.). (Considered) .. 740

Manmath Nath Roy v. Ameer Khan, 46 Ind. Cas. 98; 3 P. L. J. 394. (Relied on) .. 261

Mannu Lal v. Harsukh Das, 3 A. 233; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 99. (Followed) .. 107

Maruthamalai Gownden v. Palani Gownden, 16 Ind. Cas. 182; 37 M. 535. (Considered) 464

Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali, 13 Ind. Cas. 976; 34 A. 213; 16 C W. N. 338; 11 M. L. T. 145; (1912) M. W. N. 183; 9 A. L. J. 215; 15 C. L. J. 270; 14 Bom. L. R. 192; 15 O. C. 49; 23 M. L. J. 6; 39 I. A. 49 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 705

Mathura Das v. Raja Narindar Bahadur, 19 A. 39; 23 I. A. 138; 1 C. W. N. 52; 6 M. L. J. 214; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 25 (P. C.). (Relied on) .. 122

Maung Hlaing v. Maung Chit Su, 76 Ind. Cas. 449; 1 R. 135; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 196. (Distinguished) .. 280

Maung Kyin v. Maung Shwe La, 42 Ind. Cas. 642; 44 I. A. 236; 20 Bom. L. R. 278; 15 A. L. J. 825; 33 M. L. J. 648; 3 P. L. W. 185; 6 L. W. 777; 22 C. W. N. 257; 23 M. L. T. 36; 27 C. L. J. 175; (1918) M. W. N 300; 45 C 320; 9 L. B. R. 114; 11 Bur. L. T. 21 (P. C.). (Distinguished) .. 342

M—concld.

Page.

Maung Kyin v. Maung Shwe La, 42 Ind. Cas 642; 45 C. 320; 15 A. L. J. 825; 33 M. L. J. 648; 3 P. L. W. 185; 6 L. W. 777; 22 C. W. N. 257; 23 M L. T. 36; 27 C. L. J. 175; 20 Bom. L. R. 278; (1918) M. W. N. 300; 9 L B. R. 114; 11 Bur. L T 21; 44 I. A. 236 (P. C.). (Followed) 523, 923

McGowan v. Middleton, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 464; 52 L. J. Q. B. 355; 31 W. R. 835. (Followed) .. 943

Melachrino v. Nickoll, (1920) 1 K. B. 693; 122 L. T. 545; 25 Com. Cas. 103; 36 T. L. R. 143; 89 L. J. K. B. 906. (Relied on) .. 943

Mi Se Baw v. Me Min Ya, 4 Ind. Cas. 1084; 2 U. B. R. (1907 09) Evidence 19. (Relied on) .. 380

Mir Wazir-ud-din v. Lala Deoki Nandan, 6 C. L. R. 472. (Followed) .. 564

Mitrajit Singh v Emperor, 63 Ind. Cas. 825; 2 P. L. T. 520; (1922) Pat. 7; 6 P. L. J. 644; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 158; 22 Cr. L. J. 697. (Relied on) .. 988

Mohandas v. Krishnabai, 5 B. 597; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 393. (Dissented from) .. 219

Mohesh Chunder Kopali v. Mohesh Chunder Dass, 10 C. L. R. 553. (Relied on) .. 961

Mohim Chandra Debi v. Pyari Lal Das, 39 Ind Cas. 213; 44 C. 412; 25 C. L. J. 99; 21 C. W. N. 537. (Followed) .. 564

Mollo v. Ramlal, 58 Ind. Cas. 772; 18 A. L. J. 1030; 43 A. 191. (Followed) .. 638

Moorooly Ram v. Baboo Huree Ram, 8 W. R. 106. (Followed) .. 79

Moti Begam v. Sahara Begam, 33 P. R. 1895. (Followed) .. 908

Mozuffer Wahid v. Abdus Samad, 6 C. L. R. 539. (Followed) .. 564

Muhammad Abbas v. Nasiban, 53 Ind. Cas. 168; 6 O. L. J. 384. (Relied on) .. 737

Muhammad Yakub v. Kunhai Lal, 64 Ind. Cas. 673; 19 A. L. J. 809; 44 A. 83; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 157. (Followed) .. 27

Munna v. Ram Prasad, 11 O. C. 307. (Relied on) .. 768

Munshi v. Daulat, 29 A. 262; 4 A. L. J. 74; A. W. N. (1907) 49. (Followed) .. 125

Murtaza Hussain Khan v. Mohammad Yasin Ali Khan, 36 Ind. Cas. 299; 38 A. 552; 20 M. L. T. 362; 14 A. L. J. 1083; 18 Bom L. R. 884; 31 M. L. J. 804; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 555; 25 C. L. J. 1; 19 O. C. 290; 1 P. L. W. 122; 21 C. W. N. 410; 4 O. L. J. 8; 4 L. W. 538; 43 I. A. 269 (P. C.). (Distinguished) .. 1041

N

Nabiban Bibi v. Kauleshar Rai, 4 A. L. J. 351; A W. N. (1907) 110. (Followed) .. 144

Nachiappa Chetty v. Chinniah Ambalam, 36 Ind. Cas. 794; 4 L. W. 362. (Considered) .. 464

Nagendrabala Dasi v. Dinanath Mahish, 70 Ind. Cas 933; 26 C. W. N. 651; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 215. (Distinguished) .. 400

N—concld.

Page.

Nageshwar Prasad v. Bachu Singh, 53 Ind. Cas. 79; 4 P. L. J. 511. (Relied on) .. 362
Naina Muhammad Rowther v. Abdul Rahman Rowther, 72 Ind. Cas. 207; 46 M. 135; (1922) M. W. N. 845; 17 L. W. 188; 32 M. L. T. 82; (1923) A. I. R (M.) 257. (Followed) .. 628
Naman Mal v. Har Bhagwan, 66 Ind. Cas. 362; 2 L. 357, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 317. (Relied on) .. 174
Nando Kumar Nasker v. Banomali Gayan, 29 C. 871. (Followed) .. 761
Nando Lal Guha v. Corporation of Calcutta, 56 Ind. Cas. 862; 24 C. W. N. 467; 31 C. L. J. 442; 21 Cr. L. J. 558. (Distinguished) .. 892
Narain Das v. Lalta Prasad, 21 A. 269; A. W. N. (1899) 56; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 880. (Followed) .. 564
Narayana Mudaly v. Emperor, 31 M. 131; 7 Cr. L. J. 425. (Considered) .. 481
Narsiah v. Vithalingam Chingandas, 16 Ind. Cas. 83; 5 Bur. L. T. 123; 6 L. B. R. 117. (Dissented from) .. 908 Natabar Ghose v. Adya Nath Biswas, 75 Ind. Cas. 541; 37 C. L. J. 415; 27 C. W. N. 675; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 690; 24 Cr. L. J. 957. (Distinguished) .. 290
Nathu v. Budhu, 18 B. 537; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 867. (Distinguished) .. 542
Nathuram Siviji Sett v. Kutti Haji, 20 M. 446; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 316. (Relied on) .. 306
Nazir Hasan v. Dost Muhammad, 26 A. 1; A. W. N. (1903) 171; 1 Cr. L. J. 120. (Relied on) .. 1008
Nihal Singh v. Sewa Ram, 35 Ind. Cas. 275; 38 A. 292; 4 A. L. J. 434. (Followed) .. 542
Nitya Gopal v. Jiban Krishna Bagchi, 29 Ind. Cas. 412; 40 C. 318; 14 Cr. L. J. 428. (Relied on) .. 818
Nabin Chandra Chowdhury v. Bepin Chandra Roy, 29 Ind. Cas. 308; 19 C. W. N. 953; 22 C. L. J. 244. (Followed) .. 529
Noor Din v. Empress, 38 P. R. 1889 Cr. (Followed) .. 1003

P

Pahladi Lal v. Laraiti, 48 Ind. Cas. 200; 41 A. 22; 16 A. L. J. 871. (Considered) .. 464
Pandharinath Sakharam v. Shankar Narayan Joshi, 25 B. 586; 3 Bom. L. R. 244. (Relied on) .. 401
Parambil Saharabi v. Ali, 72 Ind. Cas. 857; 44 M. L. J. 141; 17 L. W. 182; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 295. (Distinguished) .. 264
Parman v. Gian Singh, 94 P. R. 1893. (Followed) .. 473
Partington v. Attorney-General, (1869) 4 H. L. 100; 38 L. J. Ex. 205; 21 L. T. 370. Relied on) .. 616
Pasupuletti Venkamma v. Shaik Hamid, 14 Ind. Cas. 741; 11 M. L. J. 421. (Relied on) 872
Pemraj Bhavaniram v. Narayan Shivaram Khishti, 6 B. 215; 6 Ind. Jur. 416; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 601. (Followed) .. 307

P—concld.

Page.

Peria Aiya Ambalam v. Shunmuga Sundaram, 22 Ind. Cas. 615; 38 M. 903; 15 M. L. T. 122; 26 M. L. J. 140; 1 L. W. 119; (1914) M. W. N. 417. (Approved) .. 125
Peria Aiya Ambalam v. Shunmugasundaram, 22 Ind. Cas. 615; 38 M. 903; 15 M. L. T. 112; 26 M. L. J. 140; 1 L. W. 119; (1914) M. W. N. 417. (Distinguished) .. 903
Pika Bewa v. Emperor, 14 Ind. Cas. 195; 15 C. L. J. 512; 13 Cr. L. J. 195; 16 C. W. N. 1055; 39 C. 855. (Relied on) .. 801
Pirthi Chand Lal v. Sampatia, 7 C. W. N. 327. (Relied on) .. 982
Premchand Burral v. Collector of Calcutta, 2 C. 103; 1 Ind. Jur. 267; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 363. (Considered and applied) .. 317
Priest v. Last, (1903) 2 K. B. 148; 72 L. J. K. B. 657; 89 L. T. 33; 51 W. R. 678; 19 T. L. R. 527. (Relied on) .. 150
Prior v. Moore, (1887) 3 T. L. R. 624 (Relied on) .. 558
Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal, 19 C. 683; 19 I. A. 166; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 209; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 898 (Followed) .. 148
Punchanun Mullick v. Shib Chunder Mullick, 14 C. 835; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 552. (Relied on) .. 780
Puppooth v. Vayisravanath Manakkal Raman Somayjipa, 74 Ind. Cas. 309; 32 M. L. T. 107 at p. 111; 44 M. L. J. 515; 17 L. W. 558; (1923) M. W. N. 301; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 553. (Considered) .. 464
Purna Chandra Dutt v. Indra Chandra Roy, 69 Ind. Cas. 978; 49 C. 389; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 397. (Relied on) .. 553

Q

Qamar-ud-din v. Jawahir Lal, 27 A. 334; 32 I. A. 102; 2 A. L. J. 397; 1 C. L. J. 381; 9 C. W. N. 601; 15 M. L. J. 258; 7 Bom. L. R. 433; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 810 (P. C.). (Relied on) .. 871
Queen v. Behary Lall Bose, 7 W. R. Cr. 64. (Relied on) .. 961
——— v. Sankara, 6 M. 381; 1 Weir 595; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 546. (Distinguished) .. 824
Queen-Empress v. Abdullah, 7 A. 385; A. W. N. (1885) 78; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 692 (F. B.). (Followed) .. 993
——— v. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 B. 112 at pp. 122, 150; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 656. (Considered) .. 481
——— v. Jagrup, 7 A. 646; A. W. N. (1885) 131; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 799. (Relied on) .. 439
——— v. Jayarami Reddi, 21 M. 360; 1 Weir 659; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 611. (Relied on) .. 1003
——— v. Mona Puna, 16 B. 661; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 919. (Relied on) 961, 984
——— v. Tirbeni Sahai, 20 A. 426; A. W. N. (1898) 102; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 632. (Relied on) .. 961
——— v. Yusuf, 20 A. 107; A. W. N. (1897) 240; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 429. (Relied on) .. 433

R

Page.

Radha Krishna v. Ram Bahadur, 43 Ind. Cas 268; 27 C. L. J. 191; 16 A. L. J. 33; 23 M. L. T. 26; 4 P. L. W. 9; 34 M. L. J. 97; 7 L. W. 149; 22 C. W, N. 330; (1918) M. W. N. 163; 20 Bom. L. R. 502 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 564

Radha Pershad Singh v. Torab Ali, 18 C. 108; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 582; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 72. (Followed) .. 167

Rajbir v. King-Emperor, 11 O. C. 328; 8 Cr. L. J. 393. (Followed) .. 439

Raghunath Rao v Secretary of State for India, 60 Ind. Cas. 187; 13 L. W. 11; 39 M. L. J. 623; (1920) M. W. N. 759; 28 M. L. T. 397; 44 M. 264. (Considered and applied) .. 347

Raj Mohkam Singh, v. Raja Rup Singh, 15 A. 352; 20 I. A. 127; 6 Sar. P.C. J. 327; 17 Ind. Jur. 376; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 943 (P. C.). (Distinguished) .. 109

Rajani Kanta Shaha v. Idris Thakur, 64 Ind. Cas. 280; 48 C. 1105; 25 C. W. N. 615; 34 C. L. J. 51; 22 Cr. L. J. 760. (Dissented from) .. 734

Rajkumar Roy v. Gobind Chunder Roy, 19 C. 660; 19 I. A. 140; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 140; 9 Ind. Dec. (N S.) 883 (P C.). (Distinguished) .. 506

Ram Charan Lal v. Rahim Bakhsh, 34 Ind. Cas. 108; 38 A. 416; 14 A. L. J. 538. (Dissented from) .. 219

Ram Das v. Dubri Koeri, 77 Ind. Cas. 139; 20 A. L. J. 606; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 336; 44 A. 724. (Followed) 630, 638

Ram Gopal v. Piari Lall, 21 A. 441; A. W. N. (1899) 163; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 988. (Followed) .. 694

Ram Kishun Ram v. North-Western Railway, 77 Ind. Cas 1020; 20 A. L. J. 973; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 122. (Distinguished) .. 1046

Ram Kumar Singh v. Messrs. Robert Watson & Co., 9 C. W. N. 334. (Distinguished) .. 1015

Ram Narain Roy v. Baij Nath Malla, 29 C. 36. (Relied on) .. 866

Ram Narain Singh v. Chota Nagpur Banking Association, 36 Ind. Cas. 321; 43 C. 332. (Followed) .. 1015

Ram Nath v. Prabhu Dyal, 65 Ind. Cas. 661. (Dissented from) .. 766

Ram Piari v. Emperor, 16 Ind. Cas. 515; 10 A. L. J. 247; 13 Cr. L. J. 707. (Followed) .. 888

Ram Singh v. Baij Nath, 49 Ind. Cas. 353; 17 A. L. J. 117. (Relied on) .. 877

Ramachari v. Saraswati Ammal, 60 Ind. Cas. 246; 12 L. W. 544; (1920) M. W. N. 721. (Followed) .. 214

Ramadh Bibi Ammal v. Kandasami Pillai, 51 Ind. Cas. 724; (1919) M. W. N. 82; 25 M. L. T. 154; 9 L. W. 479. (Distinguished) 48

Raman Chetty v. Kadirvalu, 8 M. L. J. 148. (Relied on) .. 401

Ramasami v. Subbasami, 13 M. 508; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1066. (Distinguished) .. 1039

R—concld.

Page.

Ramaswami Chetty v. Doraiswami, 73 Ind. Cas. 409; 44 M. L. J. 299; 17 L. W. 638; (1923) A. I. R (M.) 465. (Considered) .. 464

Ramchandra Dhondo Kulkarni v. Malkapa Narsapa, 36 Ind. Cas. 443; 40 B 679; 18 Bom. L. R. 757. (Relied on) .. 922

Ramdei v. Chandra Bali Bibi, 44 Ind. Cas. 399; 4 P. L. W. 237. (Considered) .. 464

Ramjan Mahomed v. Chunder Mohan Aditya, 7 C. L. J. 640. (Followed) .. 564

Ramkrishna v. Bhimabai, 15 B. 416; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 283. (Relied on) .. 53

Ramkrishna v. Shamrao, 26 B. 526; 4 Bom. L. R. 315. (Followed) .. 117

Ranganaikammal v. Ramanuja Aiyangar, 11 Ind. Cas. 570; 35 M. 728 at p. 737; 21 M. L. J. 600; 10 M. L. T. 57; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 285. (Relied upon) .. 266

Ranganayakalu Aiyar v. Subbayan, 2 Ind. Cas. 522; 5 M. L. T. 71. (Considered) .. 740

Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden, 50 Ind. Cas. 498; (1919) M. W. N. 262; 42 M. 523; 36 M. L. J. 493; 17 A. L. J. 536; 29 C. L. J 539; 21 Bom. L. R. 640; 23 C. W. N. 777; 26 M. L. T. 5; 10 L. W. 105; 46 I. A. 72 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 758

Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy, 8 Bom. L. R. 400, 10 C. W. N. 630; 3 A. L. J 363; 1 M. L. T. 135; 16 M L. J. 272 (P. C.). (Followed) 506

Rasaraj Kunai v. Prasanna Kumar Roy, 15 Ind. Cas. 506; 40 C 45. (Relied on) .. 368

Rashid-un-nissa v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 3 Ind. Cas. 864; 31 A. 572; 13 C. W. N. 1182; 10 C. L J. 318; 6 A. L. J. 822; 11 Bom. L. R. 1225; 6 M L. T. 279; 19 M. L. J. 631; 36 I. A. 168 (P. C.). (Considered) .. 464

Raynor v. Mussoorie Bank, Ltd., 7 A 681 at p. 686; A. W. N. (1885) 204; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 880. (Distinguished) .. 148

Reshee Case Law v. Satish Chandra Paul, 64 Ind Cas. 774; 25 C. L. J. 90; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 123. (Followed) .. 1015

Revenga v. Mackintosh, (1824) 2 B. & C. 693; 4 D. & R. 187; 2 L. J. (O. S.) K. B. 137; 107 E. R 541. (Relied on) .. 787

Roda v. Harnam, 18 P. R. 1895 (F. B.). (Followed) .. 222

Rohan Singh v. Bhao Lal, 3 Ind. Cas. 42; 31 A. 530; 6 A. L. J. 699. (Followed) .. 694

Rosenbaum v. Belson, (1900) 2 Ch. 267; 69 L. J. Ch. 569; 82 L. T. 658; 48 W. R. 522. (Relied on) .. 558

Rustomji v. Purshotamdas, 25 B. 606 at p. 612; 3 Bom. L. R. 227. (Followed) .. 83

S

S. V. S. T. Chetty v. Po Mya, 56 Ind. Cas. 945; 12 Bur. L. T. 261. (Relied on) .. 362

Saadut Alee Khan v. Collector of Saran, (1858) Beng. S. D. A. 841; 17 Ind. Dec. (O. S) 617. (Approved) .. 125

Sabapathi v. Vanmahalinga, 23 Ind. Cas. 581; 38 M. 959; 15 M L. T. 203; 26 M. L. J. 331; (1914) M. W. N. 256. (Distinguished) 275

S—contd.

Page.

Safdar Ali v. Dost Muhammad, 12 A. 426; A. W. N. (1890) 117; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1016 (F. B.). (Followed) .. 35
Sahodora Mudali v. Sarbosobha Dasi (Nabin Chand Boral), 27 Ind. Cas. 258; 42 C. 638; 20 C. L. J. 494; 19 C W. N. 103. (Followed) .. 564
Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437 at p. 442; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498: 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C). (Followed) 329, 589
Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.). (Interpreted) .. 640
Sarbjit Partab Bahadur Sahi v. Indarjit Partap Bahadur Sahi, 27 A. 203 at p. 253; 2 A. L. J. 720; A. W. N. (1904) 244. (Distinguished) .. 1041
Sarala Dasi v. Jogendra Narayan Basu, 25 C. 246; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 165. (Relied on) .. 122
Sardar Khan v. Emperor, 21 P. R. 1904 Cr.; 135 P. L. R, 1904; 1 Cr. L. J. 1066. (Relied on) .. 984
Sardari Mal v. Khan Bahadur Khan, 11 P. R. 1899. (Followed) .. 906
Sashikanta Acharyya v. Sarat Chandra Rai Chaudhuri, 70 Ind. Cas. 6; 34 C. L. J. 415. (Followed) .. 564
Satirama v. Meherban Khan, 9 Ind. Cas. 918; 13 C. L. J. 243. (Relied on) .. 368
Satish Chandra Kanungoe v. Nishi Chandra Dutta, 54 Ind. Cas. 431; 46 C. 975. (Relied on) .. 368
Satish Chandra Mitra v. Jogendra Nath Mahalanobi, 34 Ind. Cas. 862; 44 C. 345; 20 C. W. N. 1044; 24 C. L. J. 175. (Relied on) .. 362
Satish Chandra Sarkar v. Brojo Gopal Dutta, 46 Ind. Cas 104; 22 C. W. N. 807. (Followed) .. 564
Saunders v. Dence, (1885) 52 L. T. 644 at p. 646. (Distinguished) .. 558
Sawantrawa Fakirappa v Giriappa Fakirappa, 21 Ind. Cas 41 38 B. 18; 15 Bom. L. R. 778. (Followed) .. 952
Secretary of State for India v. Chelakani Rama Rao, 35 Ind. Cas. 902; 43 I. A. 192; 39 M. 617; 31 M. L. J. 324 20 C. W. N. 1311; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 224; 14 A. L. J. 1114; 20 M. L. T. 435; 4 L. W. 486 18 Bom. L. R. 1007; 25 C. L. J. 39 (P. C.). (Relied on) .. 564
——— v. Chelikani Rama Rao, 35 Ind. Cas. 902; 39 M. 617; 31 M. L. J. 324; 20 C. W. N. 1311; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 224; 14 A. L. J. 1114; 20 M. L. T. 435; 4 L. W. 486; 18 Bom. L. R. 1007; 25 C. L. J. 39; 43 I. A. 192 (P. C.). (Distinguished) .. 903

S—contd.

Page.

Secretary of State for India v. Digambar Nanda, 45 Ind. Cas. 43; 27 C. L. J. 334. (Followed) .. 261
——— v. Firm Jiwan and Abdullah, 71 Ind. Cas. 609; 21 A. L. J. 220; 45 A. 38; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 426. (Distinguished) .. 1046
Secretary to the Commissioner, Salt, Abkari and Separate Revenue, Madras v. Ramanathan Chetti, 53 Ind. Cas. 976; 43 M. 75; (1919) M. W. N. 826; 10 L. W. 570; 37 M. L J; 663; 26 M. L. T. 447 (F. B.). (Followed) .. 621
Seetharamayyar v. Munisami Mudaliar, 50 Ind. Cas 87; (1919) M. W. N. 185; 37 M. L J. 613; 9 L. W. 427. (Distinguished) .. 48
Selamban Chetty v. Ramanadhan Chetty, 4 Ind. Cas. 301; 33 M. 256; 7 M. L. T. 29; (1910) M. W. N. 141; 21 M. L. J. 152. (Relied on) .. 401
Seth Mohanlal v. Balmukand, 17 C. P. L. R 24. (Followed) .. 50
Shanker Lal v. Kirari Mal, 77 Ind. Cas. 144; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 81. (Followed) .. 694
Sheodhan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 64 Ind. Cas. 75: 43 A. 496; 19 A. L. J. 431. 3 U. P. L. R. (A.) 80; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 323. (Followed) .. 909
Sheodhyan v. Bholanath, 21 A. 311; A. W. N. (1899) 84; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 907. (Dissented from) .. 368
Sher Khan v. Bahadur Shah, 91 P. R. 1904; 5 P. L. R. 1905. (Distinguished) .. 398
Sher Singh v. Pem Raj, 48 Ind. Cas. 31 100 P. R. 1918; 185 P. W. R. 1918. (Dissented from) .. 401
Shiam Sundar v. Dilganjan Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 540; 20 O. C. 155; 4 O. L. J. 380. (Distinguished) .. 109
Shiva Prasad Singh v. Hira Singh, 62 Ind. Cas. 1; 6 P. L. J. 478; (1921) Pat. 345; 2 P. L. T. 487; (F. B.). (Relied on) .. 564
Shrinivasadas Lakshminarayan v. Ramchandra Ramrattandas, 58 Ind. Cas. 546; 44 B. 6; 21 Bom. L. R. 788. (Relied on) .. 839
Shriram Rupram v. Madangopal Gowardhan, 30 C. 865; 5 Bom. L. R. 483; 8 C. W. N. 25 (P. C.). (Relied on) .. 897
Sindhajirav v. Naikojirav, 10 B. H. C. R. 228. (Followed) .. 92
Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmania Ayyar, 27 M. 25; 14 M. L. J. 57. (Followed) .. 148
Sobharam v. Makdu, 12 C. P. L. R. 63. (Relied on) .. 50
Somasundara Mudali v. Kulandaivelu Pillai, 28 M. 457; 14 M L. J. 404. (Followed) .. 517
Sorabji Cowarji v. Kala Raghunath, 12 Ind. Cas. 911; 36 B. 156; 13 Bom. L. R. 193. (Distinguished) .. 368
Soshi Bhusun Guha v. Gogan Chunder Shaha, 22 C. 364; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 244. (Relied on) .. 922
Sreenath Haldar v. Bepin Behari Mal, 33 Ind Cas. 574. (Distinguished) .. 522

S—concld.

Page.

Sri Krishna v. King-Emperor, 6 O. C. 204 at p. 209. (Followed) .. 439
Srinivasa Chary, In re, 1 Weir 917. (Followed) .. 303
Srinivasa Row v. Ramaswami Chetti, 10 M. L. J. 144. (Distinguished) .. 1039
Sris Chandra Datta Chaudhuri v. Mahima Chandra Datta Chaudhuri, 33 Ind. Cas. 171 23 C. L. J. 241. (Followed) .. 795
Stephen Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti, 2 M. H. C. R. 296 at p. 303. (Followed) .. 943
Stooke v. Taylor, (1880) 5 Q. B. D. 569; 49 L. J. Q. B. 857; 43 L. T. 200; 29 W. R. 49; 44 J. P. 748. (Followed) .. 943
Subrahmania Ayyar v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 233; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 28 I. A. 257; 5 C. W. N. 866; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 818
Subramania Iyer v. Veerabadra Pillai, 70 Ind. Cas. 593; 41 M. L. J. 217; (1921) M. W. N. 475; 14 L. W. 148. (Considered) .. 740
Subramania Siva, In re, (Chidambaram Pillai v. Emperor), 1 Ind Cas. 22; 32 M. 3; 5 M. L. T. 1; 9 Cr. L. J. 103. (Considered) .. 481
Sudulla Mridha v. Joynabunnessa Bibi, 32 Ind. Cas. 703. (Followed) .. 564
Sukhdeo Dass v. Mangal Chand, 41 Ind. Cas. 812; 2 P. L. J. 630; 2 P. L. W. 140. (Distinguished) .. 78
Sukhdeo Prasad v. Lachman Singh, 24 A. 456; A. W. N. (1902) 114. (Distinguished) 171
Sundar v. Salig Ram, 9 Ind. Cas. 300; 26 P. R. 1911; 34 P. L. R 1911; 33 P. W. R. 1911. (Followed) .. 222
Sundar Das v. Collector of Gujrat, 77 Ind. Cas. 616; 3 L. 349; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 14. (Followed) .. 621
Surja Kanta v. Sarat Chandra Roy, 25 Ind. Cas. 305; 20 C. L. J. 563; 18 C. W. N. 1281; 16 M. L. T. 290; 27 M. L. J. 365; 1 L. W. 807; (1914) M. W. N. 757; 16 Bom. L. R. 925 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 564
Surja Prosad Sukul v. Midnapore Zemindari Company Limited, 77 Ind. Cas. 954; 38 C. L. J. 369. (Distinguished) .. 1015

T

Tara Singh v. Khushal Kunwar, 28 A. 610; 3 A. L. J. 349; A. W. N. (1906) 110. (Followed) .. 927
Tarak Nath Roy Chowdhury v. Syama Charan Chowdhury, 36 Ind. Cas. 292 at p. 295. (Relied on) .. 368
Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 B. 43 at p. 66; 4 Bom. L. R. 721. (Followed) .. 506
Tassaduq Rasul Khan v. Kashi Ram, 25 A. 109; 30 I. A. 35; 5 Bom. L. R. 100; 7 C. W. N. 177 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 400
Thamman Singh v. Jit Singh, 9 P. R. 1893. (Followed) .. 473
Thammiraju v. Bapiraju, 12 M. 113; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 428. (Relied on) .. 868
The Queen v. Brown, (1867) 2 Q. B. 630; 36 L. J. Q. B. 322. (Considered and applied) .. 347

T—concld.

Page.

The Trustees, Executors and Agency Company v. Short, (1888) App. Cas. 793 at p. 798; 58 L. J. P. C. 4; 59 L. T. 677; 37 W. R. 433; 53 J. P. 132. (Followed) .. 905
Thuman v. Best, (1907) W. N. 170; 97 L. T. 239. (Relied on) .. 558
Tilakdhari Lal v. Khedan Lal, 57 Ind. Cas. 465; 47 I. A. 239; 39 M. L. J. 243; (1920) M. W. N. 591; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 139; 22 Bom. L. R. 1319; 18 A. L. J. 1074; 25 C. W. N. 49; 28 M. L. T. 226; 32 C. L. J. 479; 13 L. W. 161; 2 P. L. T. 101; 48 C. 1 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 516, 862, 897
Timmangavda v. Rangangavda, (1878) P. J. 240. (Followed) .. 92
Tincouri Debya v. Shib Chandra Pal, 21 C. 639; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1057. (Relied on) .. 368
Tirumalachariar v. Andal Ammal, 30 M. 406; 2 M. L. T. 357; 17 M. L. J. 285. (Dissented from) .. 219
Tribhuvandas Varjivandas v. Balmukundas Kishoredas, 67 Ind. Cas. 865; (1923) A. I. R. (B) 15; 24 Bom. L. R. 434. (Relied on) .. 897

U

Udwani Singh v. Tokhan Singh, 28 I. A. 57; 28 C. 353; 3 Bom. L. R. 318; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 14 (P. C.). (Followed) .. 167
Umabai v. Bhavu Balwant, 3 Ind. Cas. 165; 34 B. 358; 11 Bom. L. R. 499. (Distinguished) .. 761
Umesh Chandra Roy v. Satish Chandra Roy, 41 Ind. Cas. 998; 26 C. L. J. 208; 18 Cr. L. J. 886; 22 C. W. N. 69. (Dissented from) .. 734

V

Varadajulu Naidu v. Emperor, 51 Ind. Cas. 343; 42 M. 835; 20 Cr. L. J. 455; 37 M. L. J. 81; (1919) M. W. N. 669. (Followed) .. 481
Velayuthan v. Laksmana, 8 M. 506; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 346. (Followed) .. 264
Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa, 66 Ind. Cas. 868; 46 B. 722; 24 Bom. L. R. 242; (1922) A. I R. (B.) 9. (Followed) 305
Virabhadra Gowdu v. Guruvenkata Charlu, 22 M. 312 at p. 313; 8 Ind Dec. (N. S) 222. (Relied on) .. 532
Vyasa Rao, In re, 9 Ind. Cas. 897; 21 M. L. J. 283; 12 Cr. L. J. 150; 10 M L. T. 84; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 327. (Considered) 481

W

Wahid Ali Khan v. Emperor, 11 C. W. N. 789; 6 Cr. L. J. 1. (Considered) .. 481
Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh, 30 C. 1021; 30 I. A. 182; 7 C. W. N. 774; 5 Bom. L. R. 822; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 512 (P. C.). (Considered) .. 464

W—contd.

	Page.
Walker v. Clements, (1850) 15 Q. B. 1046; 117 E. R. 755; 81 R. R. 882. (Followed)	943
Ward & Co., Ltd. v. Commissioners of Taxes, (1923) A. C. 145; 92 L. J. P. C. 33; 128 L. T. 436; 39 T. L. R. 90. (Followed) ..	39
Ware, In re, Drake, Ex parte, (1877) 5 Ch. D. 866; 46 L. J. Bk. 105; 36 L. T. 677; 25 W. R. 641. (Followed) ..	58c
Wernicke v. Secretary of State for India, 2 Ind. Cas. 562; 13 C. W. N. 1046 at p. 1049. (Considered and applied) ..	347
Whitehorn v. Davison, (1911) 1 K. B. 463; 80 L. J. K. B. 425; 104 L. T. 234. (Relied on) ..	580
Wilde v. Walton, (1878) 1 L. R. Ir. 402 at p. 405. (Relied on) ..	558
Williams v. Glenton, (1866) 1 Ch. App. 200 at p. 206; 35 L. J. Ch. 284; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 175; 13 L. T. 727; 14 W. R. 294. (Relied on) ..	247

W—concld.

	Page.
Woods and Lewis' Contract, In re, (1898) 2 Ch. 211 at p. 213; 67 L. J. Ch. 475; 70 L. T. 665; 46 W. R. 643; 14 T. L. R. 457 affirming (1898) 1 Ch. 433; 78 L. T. 250; 46 W. R. 373. (Relied on) ..	247
Wright v. Bigg, (1852) 15 Beav. 592; 92 R. R. 568; 51 E. R. 668. (Distinguished)	558

Y

Yadao v. Namdeo, 64 Ind. Cas. 536; 48 I. A. 513; 24 Bom. L. R. 609; 17 N. L. R. 145; 30 M. L. T. 53; 26 C. W. N. 393; 42 M. L. J. 219; 15 L. W. 565; 20 A. L. J. 481; 49 C. 1; (1922) A. I. R. (B) 216 (P. C.). (Distinguished) ..	117
Yagnasami Ayyar v. Chidambaranatha Mudaliar, 61 Ind. Cas. 961; 13 L. W. 15. (Distinguished) ..	148

INDIAN CASES

1923.

VOLUME 77.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 155 OF 1920.

March, 21, 1923.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Foster.

BHAGWAN LAL—DEFENDANT No. 8 —APPELLANT

versus

RAJENDRA PRASAD SAHI AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 64, O. XXI, r. 63—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Execution of decree—Attachment—Alienation during attachment, validity of—Fraudulent transfer—Colourable transaction—Claim proceedings—Title suit, nature of—Declaration.

Section 64 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates a claim which remains enforceable and not one which might have been enforceable under an attachment which has since come to an end. [p. 4, col. 2; p. 5, col. 1.]

An alienation by the judgment-debtor during the pendency of an attachment which subsequently comes to an end, cannot be avoided by a person whose claim arose under a subsequent attachment. [p. 4, col. 2; p. 5, col. 1.]

Section 53 o the Transfer of Property Act contemplates a transfer of property binding as between the parties to it, but one which is voidable in the circumstances laid down in the section. [p. 9, col. 1.]

If, however, the transaction is merely colourable and not meant to be acted upon between the parties there is no transfer at all, but merely a fraudulent attempt to avoid a liability. [p. 5, col. 1.]

A suit brought under O. XXI, r. 63 of the Civil Procedure Code is a special remedy granted in special circumstances and is not governed by the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. [p. 10, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Patna, dated the 10th April 1920.

Messrs. N. C. Sinha and R. T. N. Sahai, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—In this case, certain property belonging to Narayan Prasad Singh and other members of his family, who are the first seven defendants in the suit, was attached and sold in execution of a decree in favour of Bhagwan Lal Hajam, the defendant No. 8. The plaintiffs claimed that at the time of the attachment and sale they had a subsisting mortgage upon the property, and petitioned the Court that the sale should be made subject to their mortgage. Their application was dismissed and the property was sold free from the encumbrance of their mortgage. They consequently instituted the present proceedings praying that the properties sold at the execution sale and purchased by Bhagwan Lal Hajam, the decre-holder, should be declared subject to the encumbrance of their mortgage.

The Trial Court found in favour of the plaintiffs and granted them the relief claimed. The defendant, Bhagwan Lal, the purchaser, has appealed from that decision.

Rajendra Prasad Sahi and others, the plaintiffs in the suit, are members of a joint family residing at Phatra in the Muzaffarpur District where they carry on business as Zemindars and moneylenders. The defendants Nos. 1 to 7 Narayan Prasad Singh and other members of his family, who may conveniently be referred to as the Singh defendants, are Zemindars and cultivators residing at Jilanichak in the Patna District where at one time they owned considerable property. Bhagwan Lal Hajam, the defendant No. 8, who is the appellant before us, resides at Mahendru in Patna City. He belongs to the barber caste, but also does some business in money lending.

In the year 1892, the father of the first defendant, Narayan Prasad Singh, executed a mortgage in favour of Bhagwan Lal's father, hypothecating certain property other than that which is the subject-matter of the present suit, to secure an advance of Rs. 1,000 carrying compound interest at 2 per cent. per mensem with quartely rests. Ten years latter, in January 1902, a suit was instituated against the Singh defendants to enforce the mortgage. A decree was obtained and in execution thereof the mortgaged property was brought to sale in August 1903 and purchased by the decree holder. The decree passed in that suit was appealed from by the Singh defendants, but their appeal was dismissed by the High Court in May 1904.

The sale proceeds of the mortgaged property sold in execution proved insufficient to satisfy the decretal amount and interest which had rapidly accumulated at the high rate stipulated in the bond by the time the property was sold in execution. The mortgagee accordingly applied for, and on the 15th December 1906 obtained, a personal decree against the mortgagors for the unsatisfied balance amounting, at that time, to over Rs. 17,000. About three years later, towards the end of 1909, Bhagwan Lal, his father having died, first began to make efforts to execute this decree. After three unsuccessful attempts a fourth execution case was filed and registered on the 1st June 1914. It was numbered 201 of 1914 and certain properties belonging to the Singh defendants (the judgment-debtors) were attached in that execution proceeding in June and July 1914. The properties so attached form the subject-matter of the dispute in this case. They were subsequently sold in execution and purchased by Bhagwan Lal under circumstances presently to be stated, and after certain events had happened which are material in considering the questions for determination. The plaintiffs claimed title to these properties under a mortgage executed by the Singh defendants in their favour on the 9th March 1915. In the meantime, namely, on the 24th February 1915, Bhagwan Lal had filed a fresh application for execution praying that the Execution Case No. 201 of 1914, then pending, might be dismissed and that the new execution case might be considered as being in continuation of it. The application was heard the same day and the following order was passed:—"Fresh execution petition filed. Let this case be dismissed. The attachment made to continue. The petition filed to-day to be taken as in continuation of this case, so no fresh notice under O. XXI, r, 66 would be necessary." The new execution case was also registered on the 24th February 1915 as No. 51 of 1915 and on the same day an order was passed therein as follows, "Attachment and notice under O. XXI, r. 66 need not be issued as ordered in Execution Case No. 201 of 1914. Issue sale proclamation fixing 19th April 1915 for sale at 6 A. M."

On the 9th March 1915, as already stated, the Singh defendants granted a mortgage of certain properties, including those which had been attached, to Rajendra Prasad Sahi, the first plaintiff in this suit, to secure an advance of Rs. 25,000 repayable within two years and carrying compound interest at 1 per cent. per month with yearly rests. In May following, Bhagwan Lal, for reasons which are not material, found himself unable to continue with his execution against the properties attached, and on the 17th May 1915, the Execution Case No. 51 of that year was dismissed for default, and the attachment accordingly came to an end.

On the 16 September 1916, Bhagwan Lal filed a fresh execution proceeding, the case being numbered 181 of 1916. In March 1917 the same properties were again attached and a sale proclamation was duly issued. The plaintiff, Rajendra Prasad Sahi, subsequently, in June 1917, applied under O. XXI, r. 62 that the sale should be ordered to take place subject to his mortgage of the 9th March 1915. His application was heard together with the applications of certain other objectors and was dismissed on the 18th June 1917. The only reason assigned by the learned Subordinate Judge for dismissing the application was that there was nothing to shew the bona fide character of the mortgage, and that it looked strange that at that stage these persons should have come forward to put an obstruction in the way of the decree-holder. The properties were accordingly sold in execution of Bhagwan Lal's decree on the following day and purchased by him for Rs. 14,000.

The plaintiffs have accordingly preferred this suit under the provisions of O. XXI. r. 63 claiming a declaration that the sale of the properties to Bhagwan Lal in Execution Case 181 of 1916 was subject to the encumbrance of their mortgage of the 9th March 1915.

The Singh defendants filed a written statement alleging that they had never denied the plaintiffs mortgage bond of the 9th March 1915, and that, as the suit was not for recovery of the bond money, they were improperly made defendants, and that no cause of action had accrued against them. Bhagwan Lal also filed a written statement impugning the bona fides and the validity of the plaintiffs' mortgage bond on the ground that it was a collusive transaction between the plaintiffs and the Singh defendants and was fraudulent and without consideration and that it was merely a false and colourable transaction. He further pleaded that the suit was barred by the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act; that it was executed for the purpose of defrauding him as a creditor in contravention of the provisions of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, and further, that it contravened the provisions of section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act and was on that account illegal and invalid.

The Singh defendants did not appear at the trial and have not been represented in this appeal. On behalf of the appellant, it was argued in the first place that the plaintiffs' mortgage bond had not been proved according to law, as provided by section 68 of the Indian Evidence Act, and could not, therefore, be used in evidence, and, further, that even if that section had been complied with, the evidence of the attesting witnesses called to prove execution was unreliable and contradictory and should not be accepted. The execution of the bond was attested by 6 witnesses. In the translation of the bond filed on the record, they purport to have attested on the admission of the executants but the words used and translated as "on the admission of the executants" are "Mukhate mukrin" which might be more idiomatically rendered as "At the request of the executants". Two of the attesting witnesses, Ram Lal Mahton and Nath Sahay, were called at the trial on behalf of the plaintiffs. The former says he was a witness to the bond, and that the executants signed in his presence and he verified the signatures of himself and some of the other witnesses who, he said, were present. In cross-examination he stated that he went away after attesting the bond, and that two or three persons had already attested the bond before he went there, but that two of them, namely, Narain Mahton and Nem Narain Singh attested the bond after he went there. In the next sentence he says "No other witness attested on that bond before me". This was relied upon as contradicting his previous statement that two or three persons had already attested the bond before he went there but the words "before me" are ambiguous and they may well be a literal translation of the Hindi expression which means "In my presence. Later on, when further questioned he states that "Narain Mahton signed in my presence on the bond and after I signed it" and adds that "Nem Narain Singh had affixed his signature in my absence on that bond". This last statement would appear to be in conflict with what he had said before, namely, that Nem Narain Singh attested the bond after he went there. It must be remembered, however, that the witness was giving evidence of events which had happened five years earlier, and it may be that his recollection of the names of the witnesses, who actually signed in his presence was somewhat confused, or it may be that he was not very clear on the question put to him in cross-examination and even assuming that Nem Narain Singh signed in his absence, the nett result of his evidence would be that he and one other witness at least, Narain Mahton, were present when the bond was executed and appended their signatures as witnesses. The other attesting witness Nath Sahay, who was called at the trial, merely stated that he was a witness to the bond and proved his signature on it. He does not appear to have been asked any questions in cross examination in reference to this part of his evidence. It would, perhaps, have been better, had the learned Subordinate Judge himself endeavoured to clear up the apparent discrepancy in the first witness's evidence. The learned Judge accepted the evidence of these witnesses as sufficient to prove the execution of the bond and I do not consider that the criticism of their evidence is weighty enough to induce us to discard it as unreliable.

It was next contended that the mortgage o the 9th March 1915 granted in favour of the first plaintiff, having been granted at a time when the property was under attachment, was void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment by reason of the provisions of section 64 of the Civil Procedure Code. In answer to this argument, the respondents contended that there was no valid attachment in operation when the mortgage was executed and, secondly, even if there was a valid attachment at that time, it came to an end on the 17th May 1915 when Execution Case No. 51 of 1915 was dismissed for default. In support of their first answer on this point, the respondents contended that the attachment made in June and July 1914 in Execution Case No. 201 of 1914 came to an end on the 24th February 1915 when that execution case was dismissed, and that no proper attachment was made in the succeeding Execution Case No. 51 of 1915 which was registered on the same day. It was argued that the dismissal of the earlier execution case was a dismissal for default and that under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 57 of the Civil Procedure Code the attachment thereupon ceased and although the attachment was ordered to continue no proper notices of attachment were served and no further attachment was in fact made, and that it was not competent to the Court to effect a valid attachment in this manner. There is much to be said in support of this contention, but it is not necessary to decide the point as the subsequent Execution Case No. 51 of 1915 was itself dismissed for default on the 17th May that year, and the foundation upon which the appellants claim to have priority over the mortgage, disappeared as from that date. It is not upon the attachment which at that date terminated that their title under the subsequent sale is based. The claim of the appellants is enforceable, within the meaning of section 64, not under the attachment in Execution Case No. 51 of 1915 or the earlier execution case, but under the attachment made in Execution Case No. 181 of 1916 which was not instituted until after the respondents' mortgage had come into operation. It was contended on behalf of the appellants that the mortgage was void within the meaning of section 64 of the Civil Procedure Code against their present claim, because it was a claim which might have been enforced under the earlier attachment which came into operation before the mortgage. In my opinion, this is not the meaning of section 64 which reads as follows:—

"Where an attachment has been made, any private transfer or delivery of the property attached, or any interest therein, and any payment to the judgment-debtor of any debt, dividend or other monies, contrary to such attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment".

If the claim ceases to be enforceable under an attachment relied upon as avoiding the alienation it seems obvius that there is no longer any claim enforceable thereunder and the section contemplates a claim which remains enforceable and not one which might have been enforced under an attachment which has since come to an end. The appellants' claim, in the present instance, is no longer enforceable at all, except under the attachment made in Execution Case No. 181 of 1916 which came into operation after the mortgage. The attachment contemplated in the section is that under which the claim is enforceable but the appellants' argument demands that the words "All claims enforceable under the attachment should be read as "All claims of the attaching creditor enforceable under that or any subsequent attachment." I cannot read the section as including claims which have ceased to be enforceable under the attachment contemplated, and upon this point the appeal fails.

It was next contended that the mortgage was made with intent to defraud or to defeat or delay the appellants as creditors within the meaning of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act and, further, that the mortgage transaction was a merely colourable transaction not meant to be acted upon between the parties to it. The two points raise separate considerations. Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act seems to contemplate a transfer of property binding as between the parties to it but one which is voidable in the circumstances there contemplated. If, however, the transaction is merely colourable and not meant to be acted upon between the parties there is clearly no transfer at all and in a case like the present it would be merely a fraudulent attempt on the part of the respondents to avoid liability. The only argument urged before us in support of this part of the case was that the mortgage was merely a sham transaction engineered by the Singh defendants with the acquiescence of the plaintiffs, with the object of defeating the execution of the appellants' decree. The mortgage-bond of the 9th March 1915 is to secure a loan of Rs, 25,000. It recites that the mortgagors, under four previous bonds executed by them in the years 1904 and 1906 are indebted to the amount of Rs, 20,645 which the mortgagees undertake to discharge, retaining that sum for the purpose. The balance of Rs. 4,355 was stated in the mortgage to be necessary for payment of Government revenue, performance of the marriage of Babu Ram Ghulam Prasad Singh, a member of the mortgagors' family and meeting the expenses in connection with law suits. That the earlier bonds executed in 1904 and 1906 existed has been amply proved. It is also proved that these were discharged by the mortgagees and the bonds returned to them not long after the execution of the mortgage in 1915 except in one instance in which payment was postponed until December 1917. The appellants contend that even the earlier bonds of 1904 and 1906 were merely colourable transactions made with their relatives or tenants in order to protect their property from the possible claims of creditors in the future and especially the claim of the appellants. They point out that it was not until after the appellants' mortgage decree had been confirmed by the High Court in May 1904 that the Singh defendants began to alienate their property or create charges thereon. Had the appellants been able to shew that the Singh defendants in 1904, for the first time, suddenly began to create charges upon their property, without any apparent reason for their doing so, except that they were largely indebted to the appellants, we might, perhaps, be entitled to regard those transactions with a certain amount of suspicion; but it is clearly proved that ever since the year 1881 this family had been in financial difficulties and frequently borrowing and mortgaging their property as security for the loans. It is unnecessary to refer to these earlier transactions in detail, but they were numerous and frequent. and I am not prepared to hold that there was anything unusual in the fact that further liabilities were incurred in 1904 and 1906 or that any suspicion could attach to those transactions upon the ground suggested.

One matter however, is strongly relied upon by the appellants, and it must be admitted that it is a matter which entitles the Court to scrutinise the conduct of the Singh defendants with the greatest suspicion. I have already said that these defendants are shewn to have embarked upon a course of borrowing since the year 1881. In 1904, in order to discharge some of their more pressing debts and save their property from forced sales in execution, they sold certain portions thereof for Rs. 38,000, by a sale-deed, dated the 9th October that year, to one Dhiraj Mahto with whom they had, on previous occasions, had money lending transactions. Out of the purchase price, Rs. 933 were paid in cash, the balance being retained by the purchaser to pay off the creditors and free the property from encumbrance. A representation appears to have been made by the vendors that the creditors were willing to remit a portion of their claims for interest and the sum retained by the purchaser was arrived at on this basis. There was also some undertaking to reimburse the purchaser for any excess payments he might have to make to free the purchased property from charges and encumbrances. Dhiraj Mahto got his name recorded in the Land Registration Department as proprietor, but he found difficulty with the creditors with regard to the matter of interest. He further found certain charges and encumbrances which had not been disclosed. It also appears that the vendors got their names recorded in the survey and settlement operations, which took place shortly afterwards, with respect to some of the properties covered by the sale-deed, and various disputes arose between them and Dhiraj Mahto over possession of the lands. He, in fact, soon discovered that in purchasing the property he had also acquired a fruitful crop of litigation. Many suits and proceedings both civil and criminal ensued. These culminated in 1914 when, after Dhiraj Mahto's death, his family brought a suit against the Singh defendants for a declaration of their title to the purchased property and for confirmation of possession. In that suit, the defendants raised many pleas and endeavoured in every way they could to preserve their property. Amongst other things, they pleaded that the sale-deed of 1904 was a farzi transaction made with Dhiraj, who, they alleged, was their servant, with the object of defeating the claims of creditors. This fact is strongly relied upon as proof that the Singh defendants were unscrupulous and unprincipled in their dealings with their creditors, and that the present mortgage transaction of 1915 was only another instance of their dishonest conduct. I am quite prepared to concede that the Singh defendants, whether the plea then raised be true or false, stand self-confessed either as persons whose word is not to be trusted or whose conduct is shewn to have been tainted with dishonesty, but this does not prove that the plaintiffs were either so lacking in a sense of honesty as to lend themselves to a palpably fraudulent transaction or so foolish as to trust those who were admittedly not to be trusted. For it is abundantly proved that the plaintiffs in fact discharged the debts to pay off which their mortgage transaction was effected.

The suit of 1914 brought by Dhiraj Mahto's descendants was decided by the Additional Subordinate Judge of Patna in 1916 in a long and careful judgment in which the whole of the previous dealings of the Singh family with their property were discussed. The learned Judge found that the sale-deed of 1904, in favour of Dhiraj Mahto, was a valid and bona fide document executed for consideration, and that Dhiraj Mahto, so far from being a servant and creature of the Singh family, who lent himself to a farzi transaction to save their property, had no connection with the family except as a creditor, and had in fact discharged the debts out of the consideration money. The plaintiffs in that suit, however, did not recover the whole of the property claimed as it was proved that in one of the many disputes, which arose between the parties, after the sale, Dhiraj Mahto had, by way of compromise in 1909, reconveyed some of the properties claimed to one Parshidh Narayan Singh, the nominee of the Singh defendants, in consideration of Rs. 10,000, no doubt less than their value. This compromise was disputed by Dhiraj Mahto's heirs, but the point was decided against them. It will be observed that in that case, just as in the present, transaction which turned out to be perfectly valid was challenged as a farzi transaction. The plea, however, put forward in the previous case by the defendants themselves did not avail the defendants. In the present case, the plea is put forward by one of their creditors against another and it is not supported by the Singh defendants. I do not think the fact that the Singh defendants, on a previous occasion, endeavoured to protect themselves under a false plea, which even if true did them no credit, is sufficient in itself to lead to the conclusion that the present transaction was one of a fraudulent nature. That the Singh defendants were in want of a certain amount of cash for paying revenue and to meet other expenses is hardly surprising, and it is proved that the marriage of Ram Ghulam, which was one of the reasons for requiring cash, actually took place. It is also shewn that they had to meet expenses of litigation. With regard to the balance of over Rs. 20,000 this was required to pay off four creditors named in the bond.

Rs. 375 were due to Nemdhari Mahto under a usufructuary mortgage of 3 bighas of land in Mauza Chirayia Dayal granted in 1904. Nemdhari was called as a witness, and proved payment to him by the plaintiffs in June 1915. The receipt is endorsed on the bond, which was delivered up to the plaintiffs on payment. It was produced by them in evidence.

Rs. 14,000 were due to Jagdam Prasad Singh under a mortgage granted in July 1904 over a 4 pies share in Mauza Akbarpur to secure a loan of Rs. 1,300. The rate of interest was high, 2 per cent. per month compound with quarterly rests, as in the case of the appellant's mortgage. This improvident family do not seem to have been very particular as to the rate of interest at which they borrowed. Jagdam, the mortgagee was dead, but his brother Janki Prasad Singh was called and proved that the bond was paid off by the plaintiffs in December 1917. The bond was produced by the plaintiffs with the discharge endorsed thereon. The greater part appears from the recitals to have been borrowed to discharge previous loans and the balance Rs. 375 for household expenses. He was, in no way, related to the Singh defendants, and there seems no reason why the transaction with him should be regarded with suspicion. It is urged that if the transaction was genuine he would have sued on the bond before it was actually paid. He says, he did not do so because the defendants generally paid out of Court. His evidence, as to the payment of the bond, is corroborated by Jadu Singh, another witness, who was present at the time.

Rs. 3,270 were due under a mortgage granted to Harikishen Mahton in February 1906 over a 4 pies malguzari milkiat interest in Mauza Akbarpur to secure a loan of Rs. 1,500. The interest was in this case 2 per cent. per month simple interest. The sum was taken to discharge a previous loan of Rs. 1,200 which with interest had amounted to Rs. 1,380 and the balance was taken in cash. The plaintiffs proved payment of this bond to Harikishen in April 1915 through their servant Nath Sahai. The bond was produced with the endorsement thereon.

The last bond was a mortgage, dated the 19th April 1906, of shares in 5 villages in favour of Sham Keshwar Prasad Singh to secure a loan of Rs. 600 carrying compound interest at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. per month with half yearly rests. The amount due was Rs. 3,000. The money was borrowed to provide for the dwiragawan of a sister of Narayan Prosad Singh. Badri Singh, a son of the mortgagee, proved the transaction and the subsequent payment by the plaintiffs. The bond was produced shewing the discharge endorsed thereon.

The plaintiff Rajendra Prasad was also called and supported generally the case put forward by him.

There is no evidence on the part of the appellant to discredit this evidence except a statement by him that he was told by the defendants' karpardaz that he had committed such a fraud that there would be difficulty in finding the truth, and that another man named Khedu told him that all the deeds to which I have referred were fraudulent. He admits he made no enquiries from the creditors whose claims were discharged and he did not call either of the two persons named. The learned Judge did not place any reliance upon this part of his evidence. He thought it highly improbable that if the kirpardaz was responsible for a fraud intended to decieve the appellant he would disclose it to his victim. I think the learned Judge rightly appreciated the value of this evidence.

We have been urged, however, to treat the mortgage in favour of the Singh defendants (?) as a collusive instrument on the ground that there are many suspicious circumstances which amount almost to proof of fraud. It is asked why should the Singh defendants be anxious to pay off Nemdhari and the other creditors who had not pressed thei claims when the appellant had a decree for Rs. 17,000 carrying high interest in addition to what he had already recovered by sale of the mortgaged property. I confess I can see nothing surprising in the defendants' conduct. They could hardly be expected to have any tender feelings towards the appellant. who had already done very well out of his loan of Rs. 1,000 carrying high interest. What the total amount due to him was when he sold the mortgaged property in 1903 has not been disclosed, nor does it appear in evidence what the mortgaged property fetched. We do know, however, that after giving credit for the sale proceeds he still had an unsatisfied claim of over Rs. 17,000. That the defendants should endeavour to discharge the debts due to their other creditors by a mortgage of their remaining property before the appellant could get a lien upon it is only human nature. Moreover, the sum advanced was probably a better bargain for them than if the property had been attached and sold in execution. If, however, the transaction was a genuine one, the mortgage cannot be impugned as they had a right to prefer one creditor to another.

It is next urged that the sum advanced, namely, Rs. 25,000 was much more than the value of the property, which indicates that the transaction was a sham. In support of this, it is pointed out that the appellant himself, in his last execution case purchased the, same property or the greater portion of it for Rs. 14,000. This argument has little force when it is remembered that the appellant purchased at an auction sale in execution of his own decree, and the property purchased at that sale was valued by the Court at Rs. 21,980 based upon a road cess return, which is not the best class of evidence. whereas the property mortgaged included in addition a 2-annas share in two other villages, the value of which, although not proved, may have been considerable. Moreover, if the mortgage transaction was merely colourable it is difficult to see why the consideration should have been placed at an unreasonable figure. It may also be pointed out that the sale to the appellant in execution was challenged by the judgment-debtors and the case went on appeal to the High Court where the appellant compromised and agreed to give up 2 out of the 5 villages purchased. It may, therefore, be assumed that he was satisfied with his bargain in getting 3 only of the villages for Rs. 14,000.

The next matters called to our attention are that the mortgaged properties or most of them were, at the time of the mortgage of the 9th March 1915, the subject of a claim by the heirs of Dhiraj Mahto in the suit, to which reference has already been made, and which was not decided until the following year, and, further, that the bulk of the mortgaged properties were in fact then under attachment by the appellant himself in the Execution No. 51 of 1915 which had not, at that time, been dismissed for default. No doubt, if the plaintiffs had full knowledge of these claims and believed them to be formidable it would be a matter of surprise to find them advancing money on so precarious a security. But every one, including the appellant himself who had attached the properties, appears to have been aware that those claimed by Dhiraj Mahto's heirs, in their suit then pending, in so far as they are identical with those in the mortgage, had been reconveyed by Dhiraj in 1909 under the compromise already mentioned and belonged to the Singh defendants who were in fact in possession. The appellant himself had no doubt as to the defendants' right to them. Rajendra Prasad

Sahai, the kurta of the plaintiffs' family, would appear to have left the business transactions in the hands of his agent Nath Sahai. They both gave evidence at the trial. The former had very little knowledge of the material facts, but was advised by his agent. Nath Sahai made enquiries when the negotiations for the mortgage began some 4 or 5 months before the date of the mortgage. He ascertained that the villages to be mortgaged had been reconveyed by Dhiraj Mahto to Parsidh Narayan and that the defendants were in possession. He went to the villages and saw the village papers and the revenue and the cess receipts. He also saw the sale-deed in Parsidh Narayan's favour. He also enquired at the Collectorate and ascertained that there was no attachment on those villages in the Collector's books. It is argued that this cannot be true, but in the absence of any evidence as to what the Collector's books would shew, there is no reason why the evidence should not be accepted. It will be remembered that the execution case, in which the attachment was first made, was dismissed on the 24th February 1915, and no fresh notices were sent to the Collector. There seems no reason why after that date any notice of attachment should be found at the Collectorate, and it would be dangerous to reject the evidence of Nath Sahai on mere suspicion when the appellant himself could have put the matter beyond doubt by calling the Collector to produce his books.

A few other matters of minor importance, or which are not substantiated by the evidence, were also relied upon by the appellant in argument on this part of the case. It is pointed out that the plaintiff Rajendra Prasad Sahi and the defendant Narain Prasad Singh are relations and, therefore, likely to assist each other in a collusive transaction. It is true that they are connected by marriage. Rajendra's mother and Narain Prasad's wife are sisters, but their husbands belong to entirely different families which live in different parts of the province many miles apart. It is sufficient to say that it would be in the highest degree dangerous to treat with suspicion business transactions between relations even more nearly connected than the parties in the present case or to found any presumption of mala fides upon such slender grounds. It is also said that two of the properties mortgaged to Sham Keshwar in 1906 had already been transferred to Dhiraj Mahto in 1904, but the interest mortgaged was a share in the malikhan, milkiat interest of the two villages, in the one case 4 annas odd, in the other case 2-annas odd, whereas the property sold to Dhiraj was 8 annas share in each of the same two villages. There is nothing to shew that the shares were the same or even that the interest was the same and no cross-examination was directed to the point. Again with regard to Akbarpur, a 4 pies share in which was mortgaged to Harikishen Mahto in 1909, to which reference has been made, it is pointed out that one Nathuni Sahu had purchased a 9 pies share in this village from the Singh defendants in execution proceedings in 1903 and, as they had no interest left, the mortgage to Harikishen must have been a bogus transaction made in order to create a fictitious debt for future purposes, but there is nothing to shew that this was their only interest remaining in that village. In fact what evidence there is points the other way as it appears from the judgment in Dhiraj Mahto's case that the family had an 8 annas share in Akbarpur still in their possession in 1906.

On the whole although there are circumstances which give rise to a certain amount of suspicion, they are not, in my opinion, of sufficient weight to entitle us to discard the whole of the evidence as to the payment of the debts to the defendants' creditors out of the mortgage money retained for that purpose by the plaintiffs. If these creditors were paid off it may be said to conclude the matter, and for the reasons already given, I am not prepared to differ from the conclusions of fact arrived at by the learned Judge who saw the witnesses and accepted their evidence.

The last point taken before us was that the suit being one for a declaration only, no relief should be granted as the plaintiffs had not sought to enforce their mortgage and the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act was a bar to such a claim. This point was not seriously pressed and the short answer to it is that a suit brought under O. XXI, r. 63 of the Civil Procedure Code is a special remedy granted in special circumstances and is not governed by the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act.

In my opinion this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Foster, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 1 3, 164 AND 165 OF 1921.

March 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rankin and Mr. Justice Buckland.

TIN KARI BOSE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

NOGENDRA PROSAD BASU AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 148—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 9, O. I, r. 3—Rent suit—Summary procedure—Question of title—Issues, failure to frame—Irregularity—Joinder of claims—Money had and received to plaintiff's use.

There is no rigid rule of law to the effect that in a rent suit properly so called and filed under the provisions of section 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act a question of title may not be determined if it arises. [p. 10, col. 2.]

The procedure prescribed by section 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not a special jurisdiction but a summary procedure. [p. 11, col. 1.]

Where no issues are framed, but all the points arising in the case are dealt with in the judgment and there has been no prejudice to the parties, the irregularity, if any, is covered by section 99 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 11, col. 2.]

A claim for money had and received to the plaintiff's use may be joined to a claim for rent and may properly be tried under section 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 10, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decrees of the Subordinate Judge, Howrah, dated the 29th of September 1920, confirming those of the Munsif Third Court at that place, dated the 22nd of September 1919.

Babu Nogendra Nath Ghose, for the Appellants.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

IN S. A. NO. 163 OF 1921.

Rankin, J.—This is an appeal by certain co-sharer defendants who were impleaded together with the tenants in a rent-suit. The plaintiffs' claim to have a two annas share in the landlord's interest. The appellants contend that the whole interest belonged to them. A claim was made against the tenants for a two annas share of certain rent in arrear and an alternative claim was made against the present defendant-appellants that the plaintiffs' share of certain rent which had been received by the appellants from the tenants should be paid over to the plaintiffs. A decree has been given both against the tenant and against the defendant appellants.

On this appeal, it has been contended that a serious question of title was raised as between the plaintiffs on the one hand and the appellants on the other and treating the case as a rent suit the trial Judge did not formally settle issues that would determine the question of title, but proceeded in the manner prescribed in section 148 Bengal Tenancy Act. A further question has arisen in the course of the argument. The claim against the present appellants was not a claim for rent at all. It was a claim for money had and received to the plaintiff's use. The question arises if such a claim as that may be joined with a claim for rent and can be tried properly by the procedure prescribed in section 148 Bengal Tenancy Act.

Taking the first point first, I am of opinion that it is quite plain that there is no rigid rule of law to the effect that in a rent suit properly so called and filed under the provisions of section 148, a question of title may not be determined if it arises. In the present case, although formal issues were not framed, the judgment of the learned Judge is an extremely lucid and careful judgment; and I am quite satisfied that so far as regards the claim for rent, upon which claim the present appellants may be pro forma defendants, there has been nothing in the way of miscarriage of justice. It was suggested as a possibility, though I am satisfied that it is a possibility entirely in the air, that if issues had been framed the appellants might have had a better chance of producing evidence. I see no reason to think that the appellants had in fact any evidence that they did not adduce and they had ample opportunity in many stages of the case for taking that point if there was anything in it.

So far as this is a suit regarding the claim for a share of rent, I see no substance in this appeal. The suit, however, as I have said, was not merely a suit for rent but there was coupled with it a claim in the alternative, upon which the present appellants were not pro forma defendants but were contesting defendants, a claim that they should disgorge to the plaintiffs their share of the rent which had been paid to these defendants in full. Now a question arises, when a claim, which is not for rent, is included in a suit which is tried under section 148, whether there is any lack of jurisdiction on the part of the Trial Judge to deal with the claim. An analogy has been suggested in argument of the case where the Judge has purported, under the Small Cause Jurisdiction to try a case which apart from that jurisdiction he might have been quite competent to try. In my judgment there is this distinction between provisions as regards the Small Cause Courts and the provisions of section 148 regarding rent suit that in the former case this Court has always regarded the matter as one of jurisdiction, special jurisdiction which is given by the provisions of the Small Cause Courts Act. In the case of section 148 Bengal Tenancy Act, I am satisfied that the view, which has been consistently adopted by this Court, is that the prescribed procedure is not a special jurisdiction but a summary procedure. If I can find that, as regards the cause of action for money had and received, there was any indication that the present appellants had been prejudiced by the fact that issues were not formally framed in advance, it would, I think, become my duty not to allow the decree made against the present appellants to stand; but I think that this case is a case which is amply covered by section 99 Civil Procedure Code. I cannot find that in the present case any thing has been done that is not in conformity with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and except that the present appellants are able to show that issues were not formally framed. Having considered carefully the manner in which the case was tried by the trial Court, I am of opinion that no prejudice has been shown or can be presumed in the circumstances of the present case by reason of that fact.

For these reasons it appears to me that this appeal must be dismissed with costs. This judgment will govern the other two appeals (Second Appeals Nos. 164 and 65 of 1921).

Buckland, J.—Before we part with this case, I desire to say something about Iswar Dalin v. Girindra Kumar Nag (1) which was cited in argument by the learned Vakil for the respondent whose contention it may superficially appear to support. In that case the question considered was one of misjoinder. The point which has been argued here seems to have arisen but was treated as one of jurisdiction, for I observe from the report that it was contended that the plaintiffs could not get a decree for recovery of their share of the rent against co-sharer landlords in a suit framed under section 148 Bengal Tenancy Act. The judgment, however, proceeded upon the former question, for the learned Judges observed as follows: "It is contended that the prayer for this relief could not be joined to the prayer for the recovery of rent against the principal defendants; but in our opinion O. I, r. 3, Code of Civil Procedure provides for the joinder of such claims; and it is a well established practice to join such claims." The point to which my learned brother has addresed himself was not argued or considered; and though possibly it might have been taken in that case, it by no means follows that it would have affected the result. It seems to me, therefore, that that case is distinguishable and is not an authority for the proposition advanced by the learned Vakil for the respondent. I agree with the judgment delivered by my learned brother for the reasons stated by him.

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 726.

Z, K.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER NO. 76 OF 1921.

AND

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 619 OF 1921.

March 21, 1923.

Present :—Justice Sir Francis Oldfield, KT., Justice Devadoss.

REPAKA MAMILLAYYA AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

ADDEPALLI VENKATARATNAM—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Execution of decree—Sale, injunction staying—Sale held in contravention of injunction, validity of—Abuse of process of Court—Inherent power of Court to set aside sale.

During the progress of a Court sale, the sons of the judgment-debtor filed a suit for partition of the property in the same Court and obtained an interim injunction staying the sale. Subsequently on the same day the judgment-debtor applied to the Court for adjournment of the sale which was refused; and the sale was directed to be proceeded with notwithstanding the prior order of the Court staying the sale. The sale was held and confirmed. On an application by the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale:

Held, that though the act of the Court in conducting the sale in disregard of its own prior injunction was not in contravention of any definite provision of law, the procedure must be held to have resulted in an abuse of the process of the Court and the sale must be set aside in exercise of the inherent powers of the Court under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 13, col. 2.]

A legal act done in breach of an injunction will not ordinarily be invalidated on that account and the only consequence of contempt of an injunction is the penalty which the Court is competent to impose. It is, however, different where the proceedings are prosecuted in the Court which issued the injunction and the result is to actually deprive its own injunction of effect. [p. 13, col. 2.]

Appeal against, and petition under section 115 of Act V of 1908 and section 107 of the Government of India Act to revise, an order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Kistna, at Ellore, in Appeal Suit No. 393 of 1920, preferred against an order of the Court of the Principal District Munsif, Narasapur, in Execution Appeal No. 251 of 1920, in Original Suit No. 289 of 1917.

Mr. Varadachariar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. C. Rama Rao and V. Suryanarayana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal and the revision petition are against an order of the lower Appellate Court setting aside a Court sale. We shall confirm that order with reference to our powers under section 151, Civil Procedure Code; and it is, therefore, necessary to state fully the facts which justify our taking that exceptional course.

During the progress of the Court sale in question the sons of the judgment-debtor, here respondent, filed a suit for partition of the property and obtained an interim injunction staying the sale. That injunction is not before us; but it is not alleged that it was not in the ordinary form. After the injunction had been granted, an attempt seems to have been made to serve it on the decree-holder; but he had left the Court, although (as appears) his Vakil was still there and took part in the proceedings next to be referred to.

Those proceedings consisted in an application by the judgment-debtor for the adjournment of the sale on the ground that "the bidders had come and gone away thinking that the auction would not take place." The application was heard at once in the presence of the decree-holder's Vakil. The judgment-debtor, who was not the party who had obtained the injunction, did not rely on it directly in the first instance, but simply referred to the departure of bidders. Tha District Munsif rejected this application for adjournment; and his rejection of it is the irregularity or, as the lower Appellate Court has held, the illegality relied on as a ground for setting aside the sale, which was later in the day completed.

The District Munsif first rejected the allegation that the bidders had gone away, thinking that the auction would not take place, on the rather unconvincing ground that, although some of the bidders might have gone, there were still three persons who were willing-to bid; and it may be observed that two of those persons are said to have been gumastahs of the two decree-holders, who had obtained rateable distribution of the sale proceeds and eventuallly purchased the property. But there follows the remarkable portion of the District Munsif's order, which we extract verbatim. "The petitioner says that some injunction has been said to have been passed, and that most of the other bidders have consequently gone away. A copy of the injunction has not been served admittedly on the decree-holder and it is said that the said injunction has been passed only half to one hour ago; and no authority is shown as to how the Executing Court can take any notice of an alleged injunction said to have been passed in an injunction suit short while ago." It is clear from this that the existence of an interim injunction was relied on by the judgment-debtor, although it is not explicity referred to in his application. It is further, it must be at once observed, not suggested that the injunction having been passed was ever withdrawn. It is possible that, as the District Munsif, who in the first instance dealt with the present petition had held, the injunction was granted on insufficient grounds and the partition suit was simply a device to frustrate recovery by the decree-holders, who were supporting the sale. But that was immaterial. When the District Munsif had granted the injunction and so long as it stood, he had no duty but to give effect to it. The reason stated in the halting words we have quoted from his order for not doing so was that he did not know of its existence, and it is, we recognize, easily possible for a Court to forget the details of orders passed, however recently, in the press of business. But we can see no reason, and none is suggested, why a Court cannot and should not verify an allegation, such as was in question in this case, by reference, which could easily have been made, to papers which had been disposed of, in the words of the order before us "only half to one hour ago." We can only conclude that the District Munsif deliberately shut his eyes to or at least perversely refused to ascertain what he had done.

This having been the District Munsif's disposal of the application for adjournment, we have to decide whether there was any contravention of the law, constituting an illegality, on which the sale can be set aside. There is no doubt that, as the authorities relied on before us show, a legal act, done in breach of an injunction, will not ordinarily be invalidated on that account and that the only consequence of contempt of an injunction is the penalty which the Court is competent to impose. But it is not suggested that any of those authorities relates to the case of proceedings actually being prosecuted in the Court, the prosecution of which under the Court's authority actually deprives its injunction of effect. Such a result we cannot acquiesce in, and we do not think that the law compels us to do so. It is no doubt true that the District Munsif's conduct in the present case was not, so far as we have been shown, in contravention of any definite provision of law. On the other hand there is the fact that his action resulted, in what must be described in the words of section 151, as an abuse of the process of his Court; and we, therefore, hold that we are entitled to use, as the lower Appellate Court was entitled to use, the inherent power recognised in that section to prevent the consequences which such abuse entailed.

It remains only to refer to the excuse which the lower Appallate Court has charitably suggested for the District Munsif's act. That excuse is that the interim injunction was obtained without bringing to the notice of the Court full details regarding the sale and that, when the application was made for adjournment, the District Munsif was "naturally put out seeing that the petitioner himself set up his own sons to get the order passed without bringing all the facts to his notice." First, that is not the reason, which the District Munsif himself has given; and secondly, even if it had been the reason, it was useless, since, so long as the injunction stood, it was not open to the District Munsif to deprive it of effect, whatever his second thoughts as to the propriety of its issue.

Taking this view we confirm the lower Appellate Court's order and dismiss the appeal with costs. Civil revision petition is dismissed.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER NO. 18 OF 1922.

May 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

SADHO SARAN RAI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ANANT RAI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Compromise—Consent-decree—Court induced to sign by fraud—Inherent power to set aside decree.

Where a Court is induced to sign a compromise decree on the fraudulent representation of one of the parties, that all the parties have consented to it, it has inherent power to set aside the decree on being apprised of the true facts. [p. 17, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Arrah, dated the 14th January 1922.

Messrs. Jayaswal, Nawal Kishor Prasad and S. M. Mullick, for the Appellants.

Messrs. C. C. Das and Mahabir Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—This is an appeal against an order of the learned Subordinate Judge of Arrah by which he set aside a consent-decree. The suit in which the consent-decree was passed was instituted by the respondents against the appellants for partition of joint family properties. The properties sought to be partitioned were set forth in the several Schedules annexed to the plaint. On the 3rd January 1921 a petition of compromise was filed in the Court. The petition alleged that "all the properties sought to be partitioned have been partitioned and under the said partition the properties are in possession and occupation of the parties in equal halves." It set out the properties in Schedule A and declared that the parties were and shall be in separate possession of their respective shares. The schedule annexed to the petition deals with an insignificant portion of the properties enumerated in the schedules to the plaint. It does not, for instance, deal with the milkiat properties, and in regard to the bond debts due to the joint family, while it awards about Rs. 12,000 to the defendants, it gives less than Rs. 6,000 to the plaintiffs. There are important alterations in the schedule which attracted the suspicion of the Court when it was called upon to pass a decree in terms of the compromise. For instance, the whole of the money due from Sathan Choubey, Hargun Rai and Baijnath Rai seemed to have been allotted in the first instance to the plaintiffs but at the time when the compromise petition was actually filed in Court it was noticed that the figures standing against those persons had been tampered with and that only half the amount due from them was allotted to the plaintiffs and the other half was allotted to the defendants. As I have said, the alterations made in the schedule attracted the suspicion of the Court which called upon the plaintiffs' Pleader Babu Inder Deo Sahay to initial the alterations. I cannot help thinking that the learned Subordinate Judge should have done well to call upon the plaintiff personally to appear before him and to say whether he had consented to those alterations which were obviously to his detriment, but that course was not adopted and the learned Subordinate Judge was apparently satisfied with the initials of the learned Pleader for the plaintiffs and he passed a decree in terms of the settlement. The plaintiffs' case is that the compromise actually filed was not the compromise which he signed. His evidence is to the effect that the compromise petition was copied "in six leaves" and that the schedule contained all the family properties sought to be partitioned and that after signing the petition he made it over to Sadho

SADHO SARAN RAI v. ANANT RAI.

Saran, one of the defendants, for the purpose of being filed in Court. He makes the definite case in his evidence that only the first page and the last page of the compromise petition were retained and that the intervening pages were extracted and were not filed in Court and that alterations were made in the last page without his knowledge but to his detriment. He definitely states that Babu Indra Deo Sahay was not his Pleader and that he did not remember which Pleader had signed the compromise petition for him and that he did not himself take the petition to any Pleader for signature, and that he left it entirely to Sadho Saran relying upon Sadho Saran's honesty in the matter.

Upon the evidence I have no doubt that a gross fraud has been perpetrated not only upon the plaintiffs but upon the Court itself The petition definitely states that all the properties sought to be partitioned had been partitioned and that the specifications were given in Schedule A to the petition. Now the properties sought to be partitioned are given in different schedules annexed to the plaint. As I have said before, Schedule A of the petition of compromise comprises only a very insignificant portion of the properties sought to be partitioned. Mr. Jayaswal contends before us that in their written statement the defendants disputed the correctness of the properties set out in the schedule and that their case in the written statement was that most of the properties sought to be partitioned were not joint family properties at all. That may be so, but where the partition definitely states that all the properties sought to be partitioned have been partitioned I must assume that the meaning of the petition is that the properties sought to be partitioned in the suit by the plaintiffs have been partitioned. There is no indication in the compromise petition that the plaintiffs had recognized the justice of the defendants claim that most of the properties sought to be partitioned by him were not joint family properties and that they could not be partitioned. In my opinion it is sufficient to refer to the Schedule A annexed to the petition of compromise and to compare it with the properties set out in the schedules to the plaint to hold that the plaintiff's position in this respect is unassailable. It was then argued that the compromise petition bore the signature of the plaintiff's Pleader and that it must be assumed that the Pleader had authority to settle the case on the terms mentioned in the petition of compromise. The plaintiffs, however, deny that Babu Indra Deo Sahay is their Pleader. The evidence of Projit Rai on this point is as follows:—"Indra Deo Sahai was not my Pleader. I do not remember which Pleader had signed the sulehnama petition for me. I have not taken that petition to any Pleader for signing it. Sadho Saran had done so on my behalf." Babu Indra Deo Sahay has been examined as a witness on behalf of the defendants-appellants. His evidence is that he signed the sulehnama petition on behalf and at the request of the plaintiffs. He says that he had enquired from his client that he had compromised and he was satisfied that the plaintiffs had compromised the suit on the terms contained in the petition of compromise as filed by him. In cross-examination he admits that he was not the Pleader in the case and that the "party" went to him only when the compromise was to be filed in Court. He also admits that he cannot recognize the different persons that had gone to him, although his impression is that it was Anant Rai, plaintiff No. 1 who saw him in connection with the compromise petition. He adds, however, that he did not know Anant Rai before. He says that the person who saw him told him that he was Anant Rai and he was apparently satisfied with that and signed the compromise petition. The evidence of the Pleader, therefore, does not establish that the plaintiffs or any of them engaged him to file the petition of compromise on behalf of the plaintiffs. If indeed any of the plaintiffs were known to him at the time when he was engaged on their behalf it would be impossible to accept the evidence of Projit Rai that the plaintiffs did not engage Babu India Deo Sahay as their Pleader in the case. The vakalat- nama itself strongly supports the case of the plaintiffs. We have carefully examined the vakalatnama and it is a matter of grave suspicion that, though Babu Indra Deo Sahay actually appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs in the matter of the compromise, his name does not appear in the printed list of Pleaders appearing in the vakalatnama. It was very strongly contended before us that there is an admission in the petition of the plaintiffs that Indra Deo Sahay was their Pleader in the matter. I have read the petition very carefully and I am unable to agree that there is any admission to that effect. No doubt it is not alleged in the petition that Babu Indra Deo Sahay was not their Pleader, but it is distinctly stated that it was defendant No. 1 who obtained the signature of the Pleaders of the parties on the petition. There may be an admission by implication; but there is no clear and definite admission that Babu Indra Deo Sahay was the Pleader of the plaintiffs. If the defendants intended to make any point of such admission by implication contained in the petition filed by the plaintiffs they should have cross-examined Projit Rai on this point. The attention of Projit Rai was not drawn to the alleged admission contained in the petition, and, in the absence of any explanation of Projit Rai, I am not disposed to attach much importance to the alleged admission contained in the petition. The evidence is clear and definite that the name of Indra Deo Sahay does not appear in the printed list of Vakils in the vakalatnama and that Babu Indra Deo Sahay was not the regular Pleader of the plaintiffs but was only engaged for filing the compromise petition. Indra Deo Sahay admits that he did not know the plaintiffs but that he accepted the word of the person who actually saw him and thought that he was acting on behalf of the plaintiffs. I have no doubt whatever that a gross and deliberate fraud has been practised upon the Court and that the Court was pursuaded to sign a decree to which the plaintiffs had never consented, and that upon the representation made to the Court that the plaintiffs had consented to it.

The question then arises whether the Court had power to set aside the compromise decree either in review or in the exercise of its inherent power. There is a long list of cases of the Calcutta High Court, of the Bombay High Court and of the Madras High Court in which it has been broadly laid down that a Court has inherent power to correct its own proceedings when it is satisfied that in passing a particular order it was misled by one of the parties. It was urged before us on behalf of the defendants-appellants that the only remedy is by suit and that once the decree has been signed there is no jurisdiction in the Court to set it aside on the ground of fraud. A distinction has been drawn in the cases of the Indian Courts between a fraud practised upon a party and a fraud practised upon the Court. It has been laid down that where the question is whether there was a consent in fact, there is power in the Court to investigate the matter in a properly constituted application and to set aside the decree if it is satisfied that a party never in fact consented to it but that the Court was induced to pass the decree on the fraudulent representation made to it that the party had consented to it, but that where there is a consent in fact, that is to say, where the parties have filed a compromise petition and they admit that they have filed it but one of the parties alleges that his consent was procured by fraud, the Court cannot investigate the matter either in review or in the exercise of its inherent power, and that the only remedy of the party is to institute a suit to set aside the decree on the ground of fraud. In other words, the factum of the consent can be investigated in summary proceedings, but the reality of the consent cannot be so investigated. In Hakim Gir v. Basdeo Sahi (1) it was held by Mookerjee and Caspersz, JJ., that where an order is obtained from the Court on the allegation that both parties had assented to it and it is asserted by one of the parties that he never consented to the order in question, it is open to the Court to review the order and re-call it. In the case of Peary Choudhury v. Sonsory Dass (2) it was held by Chatterjea and Greaves, JJ., that it is the inherent power of every Court to correct its own proceedings when it has been misled and that it has complete jurisdiction to re-call the order on being apprised of the true facts. In Basangouda Hanmantgouda v. Churchigirigouda (3) the facts were that in the course of a suit a compromise was presented which was signed by the defendants' Pleader who was not especially authorised in that behalf. The Court passed a decree in terms of the compromise. The defendant then applied to set aside the decree on the ground that he did not engage the Pleader and that he never authorised the Pleader to compromise the suit. The Court set aside the decree and set down the suit for hearing. On appeal it was argued in the High Court that there was no section in the Code which entitled the party to ask the Court to re-open the suit and set aside the decree in a summary manner. Chandavarkar, J., in upholding the contention of the respondent said as follows:—"What the defendant says is that there was a suit against him, and that the suit was declared to have ended by reason of a decree passed with his consent. He never consented, and the result has been that there has been fraud committed upon the Court. The Court was pursuaded to sign a decree to which the defendant had never consented, and that upon the representation that he had consented to it. Therefore, once the Court is asked to go back upon its own procedure, it is not a question whether there is any section in the Civil Procedure Code to warrant the action of the Court amending its proceedings. It is an inherent power of every Court to correct its own proceedings where it has been misled." A similar view has been taken in the Madras High Court. See Vilakathala Raman v. Vayalil Pachu (4). These decisions, though not binding on this Court, are entitled to the greatest respect, and we have been referred to no decision which lays down a contrary rule in cases where it is asserted by a party, not that the consent was obtained from him by fraud, but that there was no consent in fact on his part. As I have said before, a distinction has been made in the Indian Courts between the cases where a party comes to Court and complains that he never consented to the order at all and the cases where a party comes to Court and admits that he did consent to the order but complains that his consent was obtained by fraud. In the one case the fraud is upon the party; in the other case, the fraud is upon the Court; and it is well established, so far as the Indian Courts are concerned, that the Court has inherent jurisdiction to set aside the order when it is apprised of the fact that it was induced to sign the decree on a fraudulent representation of facts made to it.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 894; 17 C. W. N. 632; 15 C. L. J. 408.

In my opinion the order passed by the Court below is right and I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 628; 19 C. W. N. 419.
(3) 5 Ind. Cas. 968; 34 B. 408; 12 Bom. L. R. 223.
(4) 25 Ind. Cas. 213; 27 M. L. J. 172.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 56 AND 67 OF 1919.

September 16, 1921.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Shah.

DATTATRAYA BHIMRAO SABNIS—DEFENDANT NO. 1—APPELLANT

versus

GANGABAI GANESHBHAT AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF—DEFENDANT NO. 3—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Adoption by widow—Adopted son, whether can inherit property of adoptive mother's ancestors—Succession—Bandhus, rules relating to—Males and females—Rule applicable—Son's daughter's son v. sister's daughter—Balambhatti, value of.

DATTATRAYA BHIMRAO SABNIS v. GANGABAI GANESHBHAT.

Under the Hindu Law an adopted son takes the place of a natural son, and is entitled to inherit the property of his adoptive mother's ancestors. [p. 21, cols. 1 & 2.]

It may be that where an adoption by a Hindu widow has the effect of divesting any estate vested in a third person, it might not be valid: but it does not follow that where it has no such effect the adoption is necessarily valid. [p. 19, col. 2.]

Where the daughter-in-law of the last Hindu male holder succeeds him as a gotraja sapinda, in the absence of any nearer heir, she cannot make an adoption to her husband so as to affect the devolution of the estate inherited by her as a gotraja sapinda. [p. 20, col. 1.]

The list of bandhus given in the text of the Mitakshara is merely illustrative and not exhaustive; nor does it indicate anything more than this that the atma bandhus are to be preferred to the pitri bandhus and that the pitri bandhus are to be preferred to the matri bandhus. Subject to this, propinquity to the propositus is practically the sole test of preference between bandhus. [p. 20, col. 2.]

Among bandhus of the same class, however, and of the same degree of nearness to the propositus in the same branch, the males are preferred to the females, and it is doubtful whether the preference of the males over the females can be carried further. [p. 22, col. 2.]

It is a recognised way of determining the nearness of relationship to see how far each is removed from the propositus, and in the absence of any other consideration justifying a differential treatment that would be the only means of determining it. [p. 24, col. 1.]

In the case of bandhus equally removed from the propositus, however, one in the direct line of descent should be preferred to one in a collateral line. [p. 24, col. 1.]

A son's daughter's son is a preferential heir as being a nearer bandhu than a sister's daughter, though they are both equally removed from the propositus. [p. 24, cols. 1 & 2.]

Though the Balambhatti is useful as aiding the interpretation of the Mitakshara the views propounded therein cannot be accepted without due caution and examination; for instance, the position assigned to the sister's daughter in the Balambhatti cannot be properly accepted. [p. 25, col. 1.]

First appeal against the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Dharwar.

Mr. Nilkant Atmaram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Coyajee (with him Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar), for Respondent No. 1 in F. A. No. 56 of 1919.

Mr. Coyajee (with him Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nilkant Atmaram, for the Respondent No. 1.

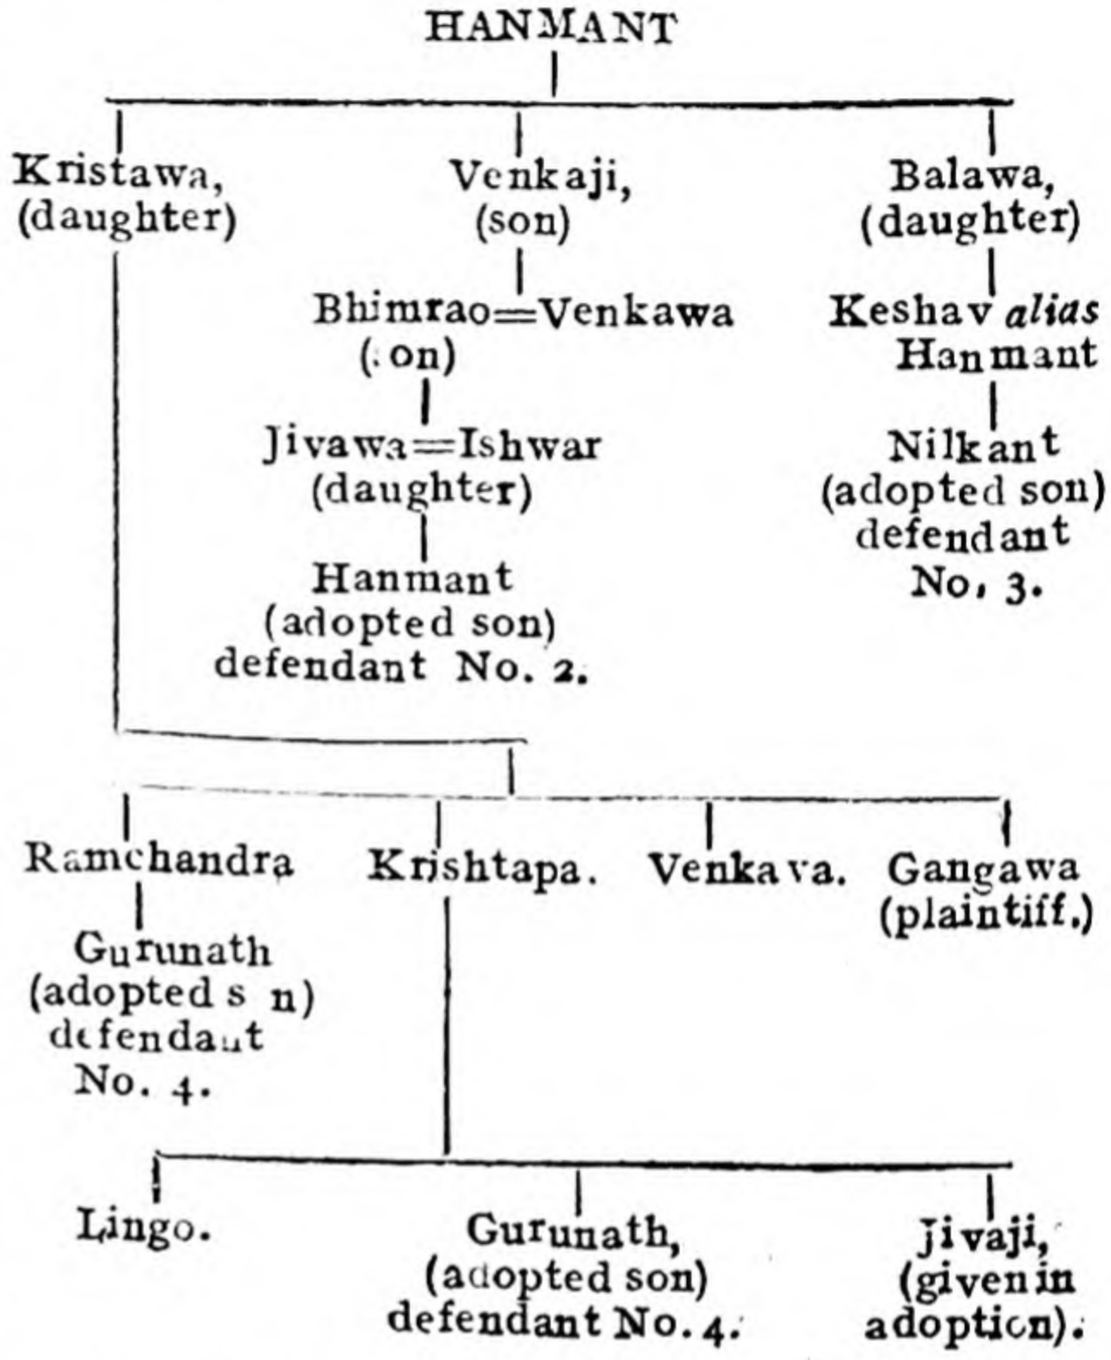
Mr. A. G. Desai, for Respondent No. 2 in F. A. 67 of 1919.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, J.—Several questions of fact and law arise in these appeals.

The following genealogical table indicates the relationship of the parties subject of course to their contentions as to certain facts:—



Gangawa, who claims to be the daughter of Kristawa, is the plaintiff in this case.

Defendant No. 1, Dattatraya, not shown in the above table, claims to have been adopted by Venkawa, the widow of Bhimrao.

Defendant No. 2 claims to be the adopted son of Jivawa, the daughter of Bhimrao.

Defendant No. 3 is the adopted grandson of Balawa.

Defendant No. 4 is the adopted son of Ramchandra, son of Kristawa.

The last male owner of the property in suit was Venkaji. Bhimrao, son of Venkaji, predeceased Venkaji, leaving a widow Venkawa, and a daughter Jivawa. He died in union with Venkaji. Venkaji died in 1880, and his widowed daughter-in-law Venkawa got the property; whether she got it as an heir or under the Will said to have been made by Venkaji in her favour is a matter to be considered. Venkawa died on the 26th December 1907.

The present suit was filed by Gangawa to recover possession of the property mentioned in the plaint with mesne profits. She claimed to be the heir of Venkaji as his sister's daughter. She claimed on the footing that Venkaji was the last male owner and that the inheritance was to be traced to him. She alleged that the adoption of defendant No. 1 did not take place in fact and that even if it took place it was invalid, that defendant No. 2 was not adopted by Jivawa, that he had no title to the property, which was said to have been wrongfully retained by him, and that defendants Nos. 3 and 4, who claimed to be entitled to the property, had no title to it.

Defendant No. 1 contended that he was validly adopted by Venkawa, that the plaintiff was not the daughter of Venkaji's sister Kristawa as aleged by her and that in any case defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4 were nearer heirs to Venkaji than the plaintiff and that as he had settled with them he was entitled to retain the property as against the plaintiff. He further contended that certain property was the property of Venkawa and that at least so far as that property was concerned the plaintiff had no right to it

Defendant No. 2 claimed to be the nearest heir of Venkaji as well as of Venkawa as the adopted son of Jivawa, and maintained that he was entitled to the whole property. He repudiated the settlement referred to by defendant No 1

Defendant No 3 claimed to be a nearer heir as the sister's son's son than the plaintiff and repudiated the settlement relied upon by defendant No. 1.

Defendant No. 4 claimed to be a nearer heir than the plaintiff on the same ground as defendant No 3 but admitted having relinquished his rights in favour of defendant No. 1 and conceded that the defendant No. 1 was the real owner of the property.

The Trial Court held that the plaintiff was the daughter of Kristawa, sister of Venkaji, that the adoption of defendant No. 2 by Jivawa was proved, that the adoption of defendant No. 1 by Venkawa was neither proved nor valid, that the Will of Venkaji set up by defendant No. 1 was not proved, that the plaintiff was a nearer heir than defendants Nos. 3 and 4 and that the plaintiff and defendant No. 2 were equally removed from the last male holder and that, therefore, they were equally entitled to the property. Accordingly a decree for partition was passed in favour of the plaintiff. As regards the land which was alleged to have been acquired by Venkawa on her own account, it was found that it was not shown to be her stridhan, and it was held that in any case the property would go to the plaintiff and defendant No. 2.

Both the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 have preferred separate appeals to this Court: and practically all the points which were contested in the lower Court arise for our decision here.

[Here, after dealing with the questions of fact and considering the evidence, his Lordship proceeded:—]

Strictly speaking the question of the validity of the adoption of defendant No. 1 does not arise. But in view of the argument on the question it seems to me to be desirable to decide that question. And in any case its validity if established could afford an additional ground for ignoring the adoption. The Will of Venkaji not having been proved, no question of his consent to an adoption by Venkawa could arise, the only consent suggested being that contained in the Will.

According to the decision of this Court in Lakshmibai v. Vishnu Vasudev (1) the consent of the father-in-law would be operative only during his lifetime. So the consent such as is contained in the Will, even if proved, would not avail defendant No. 1.

It is urged, however that Venkawa by adopting defendant No. 1 did not divest any estate vested in a third person, that the adoption had only the effect of divesting the estate vested in her, and that on that ground the adoption is valid. According to the decision of this Court that is not a conclusive test of the power to adopt. It may be that where the adoption has the effect of divesting any estate vested in a third person it might not be valid: but it does not follow that where it has no such effect the adoption is necessarily valid.

(1) 29 B. 410; 7 Bom. L. R. 436.

That view has been accepted in Ramkrishna v Shamrao (2). The ratio decidendi of this case has been approved by the Privy Council in Madana Mohana Ananga Bheema Deo v. Purushothama Ananga Bheema Deo (3). It has been applied by this Court in Datto Govind Kulkarni v. Pandurang Vinayak (4), specifically to the case of a widow succeeding as a gotraja sapinda of the last male owner under the rule established by Lallubhai Bapubhai v. Mankuvar bai (5) and approved by the Privy Council in Lallubhai v. Cassibhai (6), in consequence of the absence of nearer heirs. In the present case the daughter-in-law succeeded as a gotraja sapinda of the last male owner in the absence of any nearer heir, see Vithaldas v. Jeshubai (7). It is clear that Venkawa could not adopt to her husband so as to affect the devolution of the estate inherited by her as a gotraja sapinda.

I may add that in the argument it has not been suggested that Venkawa could have adopted to her deceased husband during her father-in-law's lifetime without his consent and that her power to adopt remained unaffected even after her father-in-law's death, in spite of her having inherited the estate, from her father-in-law: and in view of the decisions in Ramji v. Ghamau (8) and Vithoba v. Bapu (9) such a suggestion could not be made. The recent decision of the Privy Council in Yadao v. Namdeo (10) was not referred to in the argument, and its effect upon the view accepted by the Full Bench in Ramji v. Ghamau (8) may require to be considered hereafter. In the present case, however, the daughter-in-law inherited the property of her father-in-law and the question of her power to adopt thereafter stands on a different footing. The principle underlying the rulings in Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (2) and Datto Govind Kulkarni v. Pandurang Vinayak (4) is not in any way affected by the observations in Yadao v. Namdeo (10). I think, therefore, that the adoption of defendant No. 1 by Venkawa would not be valid.

It follows from these findings that defendant No. 1 has no title to the property in his own right.

It remains to consider the rights of the plaintiff, the defendant No. 2 and de endants Nos. 3 and 4 to this property. I may mention here that we are not concerned in this suit w th the effect of the settlement said to have been effected by defendant No. 1 with defendants Nos 3 and 4 and with defednant No. 2. Their rights inter se need not be considered here.

All these relations are undoubtedly bandhus: they are all within the limits specified in the Mitakshara beyond which the blood relationship cannot exist. A translation of the relevant passage is given in Ramchandra v. Vinayak (11). They are all atma bandhus. None of them is specifically mentioned in the Mitakshara or the Mayuaha: and the only test to determine the heirship is propinquity to the propositus. This is clear from the Mitakshara (see Mitakshara, Ch. II, sec. VI—Stokes' Hindu Law Books, pp. 448 and 449). Whatever doubt there may have been at one time it is now accepted that the list of bandhus given in the text is merely illustrative and not exhaustive; nor does the list necessarily indicate anything more than this that the atma bandhus are to be preferred to the pitri bandhus and that the pitri bandhus are to be preferred to the matri bandhus. It has been held by this Court in Mohandas v. Krishnabai (12) and Parot Bapalal v. Mehta Harilal (13)

(2) 26 B. 526; 4 Bom. L. R. 315.
(3) 46 Ind. Cas. 481; 45 I. A. 156; 20 Bom. L. R. 1041; 35 M. L. J. 138; 5 P. L. W. 179; 8 L. W. 167; 16 A. L. J. 725; (1918) M. W. N. 621; 24 M. L. T. 231; 28 C. L. J. 403; 41 M. 855; 23 C. W. N. 177 (P. C.).
(4) 32 B. 499; 10 Bom. L. R. 692.
(5) 2 B. 388; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 682 (F. B.).
(6) 7 I. A. 212; 5 B. 110; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 164; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 795; 4 Ind. Jur. 533; 3 Shome L. R. 245; 7 C. L. R. 445; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75 (P. C.).
(7) 4 B. 219; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 653.
(8) 6 B. 498; 6 Ind. Jur. 587; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 787 (F. B.).
(9) 15 B. 110; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75.
(10) 64 Ind. Cas. 536; 48 I. A. 513; 17 N. L. R. 145; 30 M. L. T. 53; 26 C. W. N. 393; 42 M. L. J. 219; 15 L. W. 565; 20 A. L. J. 481; 24 Bom. L. R. 609; 49 C. 1; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 216 (P. C.).
(11) 25 Ind. Cas. 290; 41 I. A. 290; 16 Bom. L. R. 863; 18 C. W. N. 1154; 27 M. L. J. 333; 1 L. W. 831; 10 N. L. R. 112; 16 M. L. T. 447; (1914) M. W. N. 835; 12 A. L. J. 1281; 20 C. L. J. 573; 42 C. 384 (P. C.).
(12) 5 B. 597; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 393.
(13) 19 B. 631; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 421.

that propinquity is practically the sole test, and indeed, in the first case, the Court preferred an obviously nearer atma bandhu, not mentioned in the Mitakshara, to an atma bandhu specifically mentioned therein. The recent judgments of the Privy Council in Adit Narayan Singh v Mahabir Prasad Tiwari (14) and Vedachela Mudaliar v. Subramania Mudaliar (15) (not yet reported) place this point beyond controversy. The difficulty arises in the application of the test of propinquity I may also add here that the test of religious efficacy or the right to offer oblations is regu ated by somewhat different considerations, and it does not necessa rily afford any safe guide or useful assistance in determining the nearness of blood relationship in the case of distant relations such as we have in the present case

It is strictly necessary to apply the test of propinquity, as best we can to the specific relationships we have in this case. Be ore dealing with this question, it will be convenient to deal with two general arguments that have been advanced in this case. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that defendant No. 2 is an adopted son, and cannot take the place of a natural son, so far as his right to inherit the property of his adoptive mother's ancestors is concerned, as it depends upon the blood relationship, and that the fiction by which the adopted son takes his pos tion as a natural son in the fami y of his adoptive father has not been carried so far in this Presidency in any of the reported cases and ought not to be applied to that extent. The second argument urged on behalf of defendant No. 1 is that the plaintiff's suit must fail on the simp e ground that as she is a female she is postponed to all male bandhus, however remote, and the recent decisions of this Court in Balkrishna v. Ramkrishna (16) and Girimallappa Channappa v. Kenchava (17), have been relied upon in support of this argument.

As regards the first point I do not think that the argument can be accepted. In view of the decisions in Uma Sunker v Kali Komul Mazumdar (18) approved by the Privy Council in Kali Komul Mozumdar v. Uma Sunker (19), it is hardly open to the plaintiff to rely upon the earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court in Morun Moee Debeah v. Bejoy Kishto (20) or of the Madras High Court in Chinnaramakristna Ayyar v. Minatchi Ammal (21). It may be, as pointed out by Mr. Coyajee, that the point has not been decided by this Court or rather that there is no reported decision on the point; but the observations in Nagindas v. Bachoo Hurkissondass (22), wherein the relevant passage from the Full Bench decision of the High Court at Calcutta is quoted, are sufficient to render the argument untenable. The criticism of this view in Ghose's Hindu Law, Vol. I, p. 655, (3rd Edition) which purports to be based upon certain texts, has been relied upon by Mr. Coyajee That criticism no doubt desrves to be considered: but it is hardly an open question now at least so far as this Court is concerned. At one stage of the argument I thought that there might be some force in the argument: but having regard to the clear decisions of the Privy Council to which I have referred, I do not think that it is permissible to us to treat it as an arguable point.

(14) 60 Ind. Cas. 251; 48 I. A. 86; 40 M. L. J. 270; (1921) M. W. N. 153; 19 A. L. J. 208; 2 P. L. T. 97; 33 C. L. J. 263; 29 M. L. T. 240; 6 P. L. J. 140; 23 Bom. L. R. 692; 25 C. W. N. 842; 14 L. W. 20 (P. C.).

(15) 64 Ind. Cas. 402; 48 I. A. 349; 44 M. 753; 14 L. W. 402; (1921) M. W. N. 669; 2 P. L. T. 707; 26 C. W. N. 159; 41 M. L. J. 676; 30 M. L. T. 198; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 13; 24 Bom. L. R. 649; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 23 (P. C.).

(16) 59 Ind. Cas. 771; 45 B. 353; 22 Bom. L. R. 1442.

(17) 61 Ind. Cas. 294; 45 B. 768; 23 Bom. L. R. 213.

(18) 6 C. 256; 7 C. L. J. 145; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 168.

(19) 10 I. A. 138; 10 C. 232; 13 C. L. R. 379; 7 Ind. Jur. 553; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 458; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 156 (P. C.).

(20) W. R. F. B. 121.

(21) 7 M. H. C. R. 245.

(22) 32 Ind. Cas 403; 43 I. A. 56 at p. 68; 18 Bom. L. R. 172; 30 M. L. J. 193, 14 A. L. J. 185; 3 L. W. 259; 19 M. L. T. 193; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 258; 23 C. L. J. 395; 20 C. W. N. 702; 40 B. 270 (P. C.)

As regards the other question about ranking all female bandhus after the male bandhus it seems to me that the two decisions of this Court already referred to proceed upon a somewhat incomplete realisation of the position of the female bandhus in this Presidency, and do not give that effect to the test of propinquity, which alone is to be determinative of the right to inherit in the case of distant blood relations. In Madras no doubt all female bandhus are postponed in favour of the male bandhus. But in this Presidency the position of the female has received a somewhat different treatment. For instance, in the case of the widows of sagotra sapindas, in this Presidency, their right is recognised to an extent to which it is not recognised in any other part of India, governed by the Mitakshara Law. That, however, is the case of sagotra sapindas and may not be strictly relevant to the present point. The sister is given a place in this Presidency which has not been assigned to her in Madras or elsewhere: no doubt this is due to a large extent to the fact that she is expressly mentioned in the Vyavahara Mayukha and even though she is not mentioned in the Mitakshara she has been practically assigned by the decisions of this Court the same place after the grandmother as in the Vyavahara Mayukha. But the fact remains that a female in that position occupies such a high place among the heirs. Then the decision in Saguna v. Sadashiv (23) implies a negation of the general proposition that the female bandhus must come in after the male bandhus. The questions and answers in West and Buhler's Digest of Hindu Law, pp. 465, 466 (4th Edition.), relating to brother's daughter and sister's daughter do not support the general statement that the female bandhus can come in only after all male bandhus, without any regard to the nearness of their relationship. In short that view appears to me to be opposed to a fair application of the doctrine of propinquity which has been so far applied in this Presidency without giving any such general preference to the male bandhus over the female bandhus. I do not say that there is no preference of males over the females at all in determining the rights of the bandhus. The extent of the preference is not easy to define and has not been defined. Speaking with some diffidence on a point of this difficulty, I think that except in the two recent rulings, the preference has so far never been stated in this Presidency to go beyond this, that among bandhus of the same class, and of the same degree of nearness to the propositus, in the same branch, the males are preferred to females; for instance in the case of sister's son and sister's daughter, the son would be preferred to the daughter. But whether it is proper to go beyond that is a point which, in my opinion, requires consideration. The basis of the rule enunciated in Rajah Venkata Narasimha Appa Rao Bahaaur v. Rajah Surenani Venkata Purushothama Jagannadha Gopala Row Bahadur (24), may be found in Lakshmanammal v. Tiruvengada Mudali (25). The view adopted in this decision has never been accepted in this Presidency as regards the relative position of the sister and her son. It is not necessary in this case to discuss the texts referred to in that case. The result of adopting this view about preferring the male bandhus to the female bandhus generally would be to postpone some of the nearest female bandhus in favour of every distant relations. Even the son's daughter, who would be so near to the propositus would be relegated to a very subordinate and distant position among the bandhus if she is to be postponed to all males; in competition with her own son, she would be postponed Of course, whether this state of law would be anomalous or not is a matter open to argument; but in this Presidency at any rate it would be considered anomalous. In Mohandas v. Krishnabai (12) Melvill, J, observed as follows:—

"The plaintiff's mother who is still alive, was a sister of Sunderlal's mother; and it may well be doubted whether the plaintiff would be entitled to succeed in preference to his own mother, through whom he claims"

(23) 26 B. 710; 4 Bom. L. R. 527.

(24) 31 M. 321; 4 M. L. T. 5; 18 M. L. J. 409.
(25) 5 M. 241; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 169.

This shows how this question has been looked at in this Presidency. No doubt if the rule as to giving preference to the male bandhus over female bandhus apart from any consideration of propinquity were adopted it would simplify matters considerably. But I am humbly of opinion that that would not be in accordance with the Hindu Law as understood and administered in this Presidency.

Without deciding this question of general preference of the male bandhus over the female bandhus and without reference to it, we can determine the question as to who is the nearest heir among the bandhus in this case. As between the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 3 and 4, I am inclined to take the view that the plaintiff would be the preferential heir. The sister's daughter is nearer to the propositus than the sister's son's son In West and Buhler's Hindu Law, in the questions and answers to which I have already referred, the opinion is expressed that a brother's daughter is to be preferred to the brother's daughter's son, and that the sister's daughter is nearer than sister's daughter's son. That, however, does not exactly meet the present case as the competition is with the sister's son's son. The case of the sister's son is mentioned in the same book at page 462. According to the opinion expressed there the sister's son comes after the sister but before the sister's daughter. It is based upon the old case of Ichharam v Prumanund (25), and upon the fact that the sister's son is mentined in the Nirnaya Sindhu. That leaves the question of the sister's son's son in relation to the sister's daughter open. If the sister's sons mentioned in the Nirnaya Sindhu can be interpreted as including the sister's sons' son and not the sister's daughter, it may be said that the latter cannot be preferred to the former. But there is no justification for adopting such an interpretation. Applying the test of propinquity it would seem that the sister's daughter would be nearer than the sister's son's son. I do not, however, decide this question as it is not necessary to do so.

As between defendant No. 2 and defendants Nos. 3 and 4 the question presents no difficulty. The defendant No. 2 is nearer by one degree to the propositus and is in the line of descent. He is to be preferred to the defendants Nos. 3 and 4.

As between the plaintiff and defendant No. 2 the question is not easy. In order to appreciate the difficulty it is necessary to bear in mind not only the high position assigned to the sister as an heir in this Presidency but also the reasons for that view. In order to have a clear idea of those reasons the judgments in the following cases may be perused with advantage:—Vinayak Anandrav v. Lakshmibai (27), Sakharamsadashiv Adhikari v. Sitabai (28), Kesserbai v. Valab Rooji (29), Lakshmi v. Dadananaji (30), Mulji Purshotum v. Cursandas Natha (31) and Bhagwan v. Warubhai (32).

Apart from the references to the views expressed in the Commentary known as Balambhati on the Mitakshara with which I shall deal separately as bearing on the point in question, it is clear that the position of the sister is largely due to the fact that the author of the Vyavahara Mayukha has assigned to her a special place, and the ground as stated by him when shorn of all technicalities is propinquity, as the texts of Manu and Brihaspati referred to by him go to show. (See Mandlik's Hindu Law, p. 81) Under the Mitakshara though the sister is not mentioned by Vijnanesvara, practically the same position is assigned to her under the decisions of this Court. I may refer to the case of Rudrapa v. Irava (33), which, like the present case, came from the Dharwar District.

The sister's position being thus established it is clear that in this Presidency she would be preferred to a son's daughter. The son's daughter can come in only as a bandhu as the deisions in Venilal v. Parjaram (34) and Mulji Purshotum v. Cursandas Natha (31), already referred to on a different

(25) (1822) 2 Bor. 515.

(27) 1 B. H. C. R. 117.
(28) 3 B. 353; 4 Ind. Jur. 81; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 236.
(29) 4 B. 188; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 633.
(30) 4 B. 210; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 647.
(31) 24 B. 563; 2 Bom. L. R. 721; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 906.
(32) 32 B. 300; 10 Bom. L. R. 389.
(33) 28 B. 82; 5 Bom. L. R. 676.
(34) 20 B. 173; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 674.

point, would show. I am not concerned with the merits of this position. But undoubtedly a sister is a preferential heir in relation to a son's daughter: and it may be argued that her issues should be preferred to the issues of the son's daughter. On the other hand, it may be urged that whatever the rights of the sister as against the son's daughter may be, the rights of these issues inter se should be determined solely with reference to their propinquity, that in the case of bandhus equally distant in degrees from the propositus those in the direct line of descent should be preferred to the bandhus among the collaterals in the ascending line, and that in the case of bandhus equally removed in degrees from the propositus a male may be preferred to a female. There is a third position which has been accepted by the lower Court, viz., that the propinquity must be determined merely with reference to the degrees by which the bandhus are removed from the propositus, and that as the sister's daughter and the son's daughter's son are equally distant in that way, they should take the property equally. As regards this last view no doubt it is a recognised way of determining the nearness of relationship to see how far each is removed from the propositus, and in the absence of any other consideration justifying a differential treatment that would be the only means of determining it.

After a careful consideration of the position of the sister I do not think that the fact that she is preferred to the son's daughter as an heir affords any ground for preferring the sister's daughter to the son's daughter's son, though at one time I thought that, other things being equal, perhaps this might afford a ground for preference. But it seems to me that the position of the bandhus with whom we are concerned must be considered with reference to the propositus without any regard to the relative rights of their respective mothers. I think, however, that in the case of bandhus equally removed from the propositus one in the direct line of descent should be preferred to one in a collateral line. I do not desire to generalise beyond the strict requirements of this case, but the son's daughter's son can be preferred as being a nearer bandhu to the sister's daughter though they are both equally removed from the propositus. It is rather strange that there should be no precedent to guide us on a point of this character: at any rate I have not been able to find any, and none is cited to us. But I am satisfied that it affords a safe basis for differentiation between these bandhus as to their propinquity.

It is, therefore, not necessary to consider the question whether defendant No. 2 can be preferred to the plaintiff on the ground that he is a male and both being atma bandhus equally removed from the propositus. I think that out of all these bandhus the defendant No. 2 is the preferential heir.

I may add with reference to the Nirnaya Sindhu that so far as I have been able to ascertain none of the relations that we are concerned with is specifically mentioned as having any preferential right inter se to perform the shraddhas. The passage relating to the sister's son is to be found in Nirnaya Sindhu, p. 273 (Nirnaya Sagar Press, 2nd Edition). I have already stated my opinion that the expression 'sister's son,' when read in relation to the context, cannot be understood as including the sister's son's sons: while speaking of the Nirnaya Sindhu it may be mentioned that the test of religious efficacy cannot help us in the case of such distant relations as we have in the present case.

As regards the Balambhatti, no doubt if the interpretation put by Balambhatta upon the word "Bhratarah" in the well-known text of Yajnavalkya were accepted the sister's daughter would come in not only before all bandhus but even before all the gotraja sapindas. A translation of the relevant passage has been given at page 306 and the list of heirs according to the scheme adopted in the Balambhatti is stated at page 308 of the report in Bhagwan v. Warubhai ('32). Though Westropp, C. J. laid stress upon the Balambhatti as supporting the case for the sister in Sakharamsadashiv Adhikari v. Sitabai (28), Jenkins, C. J. in Mulji Pursotum v. Cursandas Natha ('31) and Chardavarkar, J. in Bhagwan v. Warubhai ('32) definitely rejected it as affording a basis for the sister's position in the list of specifically mentioned heirs; and that view was followed in Hari Annaji v. Vasudev Janardhan (35).

Apart from these decisions there is another difficulty in following the shceme in the Balambhatti logically. It would not be easy to determine what place would be assigned according to the Balambhatti to the son's daughter's son. For instance in dealing with the position of the daughter's son, as stated in the Mitakshara, the author has interpreted the word dauhitra (daughter's son) as including dauhitri daughter's daughter also; (see Gharpure's edition of Balambhatti, Vyavaharadhyaya, page 207) and he has given her a higher place than the sister and her issues. It may be said that the same author would logically assign a higher place to the son's daughter and probably to her son. I may state that I have not been able to find in the Balambhati any express reference to the son's daughter, or to the son's daughter's son in connection with the relative positions of diherent heirs. So it is possible to argue that the sister's daughter occupies a higher position than the son's daughter's son according to the Balambhatti. The true view about this commentary on the particular point under consideration appears to me to be that the interpretation of the word bhratarah disturbs the settled series of heirs under the Mitakshara and it is difficult to base any inference upon that view unless we are prepared to accept the scheme in its entirety. Though this commentary is useful as aiding the interpretation of the Mitakshara the views propounded therein cannot be accepted without due caution and examination. I do not think that the position assigned to the sister's daughter in the Balambhatti can be properly accepted.

In the result I would set aside the decree of the lower Court and dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

Having regard, however, to the various contentions raised by the parties and the findings thereon and to all the circumstances, I would order each party to bear his or her own costs throughout. The plaintiff to pay to the Government the amount which she would have been required to pay as Court-fees in the lower Court if she had not been allowed to sue as a pauper.

Macleod, J.—I agree with the conclusions of my learned brother, but I should like to add a few remarks of my own. Once the questions of fact have been decided there remains the contest between rival bandhus. It was first contended that the second defendant could not inherit as a bandhu to the relations of his adoptive mother. But apart from the decision in Uma Sunker v. Kali Komul Mozumdar (18) and Kali Komul Mozumdar v. Uma Sunker (19), it would seem strange if an adopted son having left his natural family were to be considered as the son of his adoptive father only and not of his adoptive mother. As the second defendant then must be recognized as the son's daughter's son of Venkaji, it follows that the defendant No. 3 as sister's grandson is one more degree remote, and the interesting question whether he would be preferred to the sister's daughter need not be decided. There remains then the plaintiff, sister's daughter, and defendant No. 2, son's daughter's son both atma bandhus, three degrees removed from Venkaji. The learned Judge has decreed that they should take the suit property equally. Though some may think that this Court in deciding that all male bandhus should be preferred to female bandhus without regard to propinquity has gone too far, still there is no authority for the proposition that bandhus of different sex but of equal propinquity should take equally. It may be even noted that amongst those relations who have been held to be bandhus in decided cases as detailed in Mr. Gharpure's book on Hindu Law at p. 315 there is only one female, the father's sister who, it was held in Saguna v. Sadashiv (23), should be preferred to the mother's brother, and that decision must now be considered as virtually overruled by the decision of the Privy Council in Vedachela Mudaliar v. Subramania Mudaliar (15) (not yet reported), as their Lordships have expressed their disapproval of the preference given by the decisions of the Madras High Court to bandhus on the father's side to bandhus on the mother's side. I think, therefore, the 2nd defendant should be preferred to the plaintiff. But apart from the question of sex there is another very interesting question which has not been considered, and which does not seem to have arisen in any reported case. The direct descendants of the propositus through daughters though they are bandhus are not cognates. Even if paternal cognates are not to be preferred to maternal cognates it might plausibly be argued that direct descendants should be preferred to both. I for one must regret that the principles with regard to the inheritance of bandhus cannot be laid down more definitely, instead of it being left to their being discovered by a process of exhaustion as occasion arises for a decision between rival claimants.

(35) 23 Ind. Cas. 944; 38 B. 438; 16 Bom. L. R. 283.

Z. K. Decree set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 2061 OF 1920.

November 23, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walmsley and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

THE KUSHTIA LOAN OFFICE LIMITED—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ANNADA CHARAN CHAKRAVARTY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Acquisition of portion of mortgaged property—Compensation, appropriation of, towards payment of unsecured debts—Purchaser of equity of redemption, right of.

Where a portion of a mortgaged property is acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and the compensation money is, under an arrangement arrived at between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, appropriated towards the satisfaction of unsecured debts due from the mortgagor to the mortgagee and not towards a reduction of the mortgage-debt, a subsequent purchaser of the equity of redemption from the mortgagor is bound by the arrangement and cannot debit the amount of the compensation received by the mortgagee from the mortgage-debt. [p. 27, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Nadia, dated the 25th of June 1920, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge of that District, dated the 30th of September 1918.

Dr. Dwarkanath Mitter and Babu Manindranath Roy, for the Appellants.

Babus Brojolal Chakravarty and Preonath Dutt for Babu Hemendra Kumar Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Ghose, J.—The plaintiffs are the appellants in this case. The suit was brought for enforcing a mortgage executed by the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in favour of the plaintiff Company, in July 1913. Twenty-four items of property were mortgaged. Out of these, two items were acquired under the Land Acquisition Act in 1915 and the amount of compensation awarded was less than the mortgage-money. The plaintiffs were entitled as mortgagees to take the whole amount of compensation in satisfaction of their mortgage. But the mortgagors were not willing that the entire amount should be taken by the mortgagees in payment of that debt. The plaintiff Company had two unsecured debts due from the mortgagors. What the mortgagors wanted was that the compensation money should be appropriated in full payment of the unsecured debts and a portion of it should be taken by the mortgagees towards part satisfaction of the mortgage-debt. The mortgagees agreed to that and the unsecured debts were paid off with a portion of the compensation money. In 1916, the contesting defendants Nos. 4, 5, 6, 7 and 10 with some other defendants purchased the equity of redemption in some of the mortgaged properties subject to the mortgage and they have been impleaded in this suit as such purchasers. Their objection was that the mortgagees were bound to give credit for the entire amount of the compensation money in reduction of the mortgage-debt. The Court of first instance made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for the full amount of the mortgage-money due; but, on appeal by the contesting defendants, the lower Appellate Court has varied that decree and directed that the money due on the mortgage should be reduced by allowing credit for the amount that was paid in satisfaction of the unsecured debts due to the mortgagees. This view, in my opinion, is erroneous. A portion of the property had been acquired under the Land Acquisition Act before the contesting defendants had acquired any interest in the property. Reliance has been placed by the learned Vakil for the respondents on the principle that where the mortgagee receives any money by means or virtue of a security, it must be applied in reductions of the mortgage-debt. But that principle has no application here. Before any third person had acquired any interest in any portion of the mortgaged property, the mortgagees were entitled, if they so desired, to pay the whole amount of the compensation money to the mortgagors. They would thereby have reduced their own security and the interest of no other person would have been affected in any way. What happened in this case practically amounts to this that the mortgagees made over a part of the compensation money to the mortgagors and the mortgagors paid it back to the mortgagees in satisfaction of their unsecured debts. As this happeped before the contesting defendants had acquired any interest in the mortgaged property, they have no right to complain. The mortgagors themselves could not have after entering into the arrangement referred to above claimed that the mortgagees were bound to give credit for the amount in satisfaction of the mortgage debt which they had themselves asked the mortgagees to appropriate in satisfaction of some other debt. The appeal must, therefore, be allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court set aside and those of the First Court restored with costs in all Courts. As the period of redemption fixed by the Court of first instance has expired, that period will be extended by three months from this date.

Walmsley, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

Z.-K.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1299 OF 1921.

March 22, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rafique and Mr. Justice Lindsay.

Maulvi ZIA-UDDIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Maulvi ABUL HASAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Pre-emption— Pre-emptor and vendor equally entitled, rights of—Procedure.

Where in a suit for pre-emption based on the provisions of the Muhammadan Law, the Court finds that the pre-emptor and the vendee stand in the same degree towards the property sold, the property ought to be divided equally between them. [p. 29, col. 1.]

Muhammad Yakub v. Kanhai Lal, 64 Ind. Cas. 673; 19 A. L. J. 869; 44 A. 83; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 157, followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Budaun, dated the 2nd of July 1921.

Messrs. Iqbal Ahmad and Mukhtar Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ibn Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—It appears that one Moulvi Aziz-ud-din was the proprietor of a grove situate in the city of Budaun. The Moulvi died some time ago leaving him surviving three sons and a daughter by one wife and one son by another wife. The latter was called M. Mohammad Abul Hasan and was in judicial service in Hyderabad. The names of the children, by the first wife, were M. Mohammad Wahab-ud-din, Wahaj-ud-din Zia-ud-din and Musammat Afzal-un nissa. Some years ago Afzal-un-nissa sold her share to Abul Hasan. On the 2nd November 1920 Wahab-ud-din sold his share in the grove to Abul Hasan in lieu of Rs. 2,200. Zia-ud-din the own brother of the vendor brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen against the vendor and the vendee to recover the share sold on the ground of pre-emption. It was alleged in the plaint that after the death of M. Aziz-ud-din, the children by the first wife gave his share to Abul Hasan, the son by the second wife and separated from him. The plaintiff Zia-ud-din was employed in Government service at Aligarh when his brother Wahab-ud-din executed a sale-deed of his share in the grove on the 2nd November 1920 in favour of Abul Hasan. On the 10th November 1920 when Zia-ud-din went home he learnt of the sale. Immediately on coming to know of the sale he made the two demands required by the Muhammadan Law and, as the vendee declined to transfer the share to him the present suit had to be brought. The claim of the plaintiff was based on the allegation that a custom of pre-emption obtained in the city of Budaun under which he as the own brother of the vendor had a preferential right over the vendee. Another basis of the claim was that under the Muhammadan Law apart from any custom the plaintiff being the shafi Khalit had a better right of purchase than the vendee. The claim was resisted by the denial of the custom set up in the plaint and the allegation of the plaintiff being shafi khalit. It was pleaded for the defence that there had been a partition of the grove among all the children of M. Aziz-ud-din, each of them being in possession of his or her separate share. The plaintiff therefore had no better right to the property in suit than the vendee. The Court of first instance dismissed the claim holding that all the children of M. Aziz-ud-din had divided the grove prior to the disputed sale, that no custom of pre-emption obtained in Budaun, that the plaintiff was not a shafi khalit. On appeal the learned District Judge upheld the decree of the First Court.

In second appeal before us the plaintiff challenges the finding of the Court below with regard to the absence of the custom of pre-emption in Budaun and the status of the plaintiff as not being a shafi khalit. The finding of the court below with regard to the partition of the grove in question is admitted and indeed it could not be denied as the finding is one of fact. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-appellant has read to us the paragraph of the wajib-ul-arz upon the basis of which he contends that a custom of pre-emption prevails in Budaun. We have duly considered the language of that paragraph and we agree with the Court of first instance that it does not prove the custom set up on behalf of the plaintiff The real dispute in the case is as to the status of the plaintiff as owner of part of the grove, i. e. whether he is a shafi khalit. The case for him is that the vendee has got either a house or a bagia as is marked on the plan to the east of the grove in question. On account of his ownership of the said property he has a right of way over those portions of the grove which have fallen to the lot of the plaintiff and his two brothers. The share of the vendor therefore bears a servitude i. e. the liability to be walked over by the vendee. The same servitude is borne by the share of the grove of the plaintiff. In other words the statement is that the vendee is the owner of a dominant tenement while the pre-emptor and the vendor are the owners of two servient tenements. There is therefore a bond of union between the vendor and the plaintiff as both of them are the owners of servient tenements and thus the plaintiff is a shafi-khalit and has a superior right to purchase the share of the vendor to the vendee. The obvious reply to this argument is that qua the share of the vendor both the pre-emptor and the vendee are owners of dominant tenements for it appears from the plan on the record marked Exhibit A. and the evidence on the record, that in order to get to his portion of the grove, or away from it, the plaintiff has to pass through the share of the grove that belongs to the vendor which was sold on the 2nd November 1920. The vendee has also to pass over the same portion of the grove of the vendor. Thus both the pre-emptor and the vendee are as qua the share of the vendor, proprietors of dominant tenements. It is, however, argued that the vendor's share of the grove is a servient tenement qua the vendee as proprietor of the property to the east of the grove and the vendee is not an owner of any servient tenement. The plaintiff pre-emptor has a bond of union with the vendor inasmuch as his share and vendor's share are both burdened with the servitude of the right of way in favour of the vendee. The plaintiff pre-emptor has, it is true, an additional right, viz. the right of passing over the property sold. He has thus a twofold right to describe himself as a shafi khalit. The vendee on the other hand can base his claim to purchase on one right only, viz. that of being the owner of a dominant tenement. We think that the contention is not quite correct. The vendee stands in the same position as the pre-emptor. The vendee purchased the share of Afzal un-nissa some years prior to the disputed sale. The share of Afzal-un-nissa adjoins the share of the vendor on the west side. That portion of the grove which the vendee purchased from Afzal-un-nissa also bears the servitude of the right of way in favour of the plaintiff pre-emptor. The vendee can say that he also is the owner of a servient tenement, i. e. his property bears the same burden as the property that has been sold to him and is now in dispute. We thus find that both the plaintiff pre-emptor and the vendee stands in the same degree whether as owners of dominant tenements or as owners of servient tenements in respect of different portions of their properties. The contention for the plaintiff-appellant is that if this Court is of opinion that he and the vendee stand in the same degree, the property in dispute ought to be divided between him and the vendee. We think this contention is correct and is supported by authority Muhammad Yakub v. Kanhai Lal (1). We therefore allow the appeal, set aside the decrees of the Courts below and decree the claim of the plaintiff-appellant to half the property sold on the 2nd November 1920, on the payment of Rs 110 within two months from the date of the decree of this Court. As to costs parties will bear costs in proportion to failure and success throughout, including fees in this Court on the higher scale. In case the money is not deposited within two months from the date of the decree of this Court the claim of the plaintiff will stand dismissed with costs throughout.

Decree modified.

Z. K.

(1) 64 Ind Cas. 673; 19 A. L. J. 869; 44 A. 83; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 157.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1894 OF 1921.

March 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walmsley and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

UKILUDDI AKAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

ASMAT ALI MUNSHI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (XI of 1859), applicability of—Howla surrendered to Government—Karsha, whether can be sold for arrears of rent.

A Howladar holding a Howla under Government, Khasmehal surrendered the unexpired term of the Howla to the Government. There was a Karsha in the Howla, which fell into arrears and was sold at the instance of Government under the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act:

Held, (1) that the Karsha was liable for the rent payable to the Howladar, and the arrangement which the Howladar entered into with the Government had not the effect of changing the rent into revenue, thereby rendering the Karsha liable to sale under the provisions of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act; [p. 30, col. 1.]

(2) that the sale purporting to have been made under the Act was, therefore, without jurisdiction. [p. 30, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Bakargunj, dated the 26th of May 1921, affirming that of the Munsif, First Court at Barisal, dated the 24th of January 1921.

Babu Abinash Chunder Guha, for the Appellants.

Babus Gunoda Charan Sen and Prosanto Bhushan Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Walmsley, J.—This appeal is preferred by the plaintiffs and it is the result of a sale purporting to be held under the provisions of Act XI (B. C.) of 1859 and Act VII (B. C.) of 1868. The facts briefly stated are that a Howladar holding a Howla under Government Khasmehal regretted his bargain and asked Government to manage the Howla during the unexpired term. In the Howla there is a Karsha and, after the Howla had been placed in the hands of the Government by the Howladar, the Karsha fell into arrears and, to realise the arrears, a sale was held under Act XI of 1859 at the instance of the Government. The plaintiffs sought to have the sale set aside by appealing to the Commissioner; but in-vain. Consequently, they brought this suit.

I am unable to follow the reasoning of the learned Munsif, adopted by the learned Subordinate Judge and repeated before us on behalf of the respondents that section 3 of Regulation VII of 1822 has anything to do with the matter. The position was that the Karsha was liable for the rent payable to the Howladar. But I am unable to see that the arrangement which the Howladar entered into with the Government had the effect of changing the rent into revenue and thereby rendering the Karsha liable to sale under the provisions of Act XI of 1859. Consequently, in my judgment, the sale purporting to be held under Act XI of 1859 was made without jurisdiction and I think the plaintiffs are entitled to have that declaration made as requested, as also a further declaration that their right title and interest on the mortgage have not been affected by the sale; that is to say, the appeal is decreed, with costs in all Courts.

Ghose, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 3 OF 1922.

June 7, 1923.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Piggott.

RUHUL AMIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Lala SHANKAR LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 99, O. III, rr. 1, 2, O. IV, r. 1—Plaintiff, adult, treated as minor—Plaint presented by next friend—Irregularity, whether curable—Jurisdiction of Court to entertain plaint.

A Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit except upon a plaint properly presented. [p. 31, col. 2.]

Where the plaintiff in a suit is a major, but he is treated as a minor in the plaint and the plaint is presented on his behalf by a next friend the presentation of the plaint is not valid and the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The defect is not one which is curable under section 99 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 32, cols. 1 & 2.]

Sheorania v. Bharat Singh, 20 A. 90; A. W. N. (1887) 203; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 417; Basdeo v. John Smidt, 22 A. 55; A. W. N. (1899) 172; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1068, referred to.

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Stuart, dated the 6th December 1921.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Damodar Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The three connected appeals before us arise out of one single suit. This was filed by Ruhul Amin, the appellant before us, as long ago as the 24th of March 1916. The object was to set aside a transfer purporting to have been effected by a sale deed of November 16, 1906, executed by various persons and amongst others by the mother of the plaintiff, who purported to act on behalf of the plaintiff, then a minor, as his natural guardian. There was a long array of defendants including numerous subsequent transferees of the property concerned. In the written statements of at least two of these defendants the point was taken that the plaintiff had attained majority prior to the institution of the suit, and that the plaint purporting to be signed and verified on his behalf by a next friend, namely the father's sister's son of the plaintiff, was not valid in law, and that there had been no valid presentation of the plaint. It is impossible for us to say why the Trial Court ignored these pleadings at the time of the settlement of the issues. Both parties are to blame for not having insisted upon an issue being struck on a pleading of this nature which went to the very root of the case. The plaintiff in particular finding it alleged against him that the suit was not even lawfully before the Court, should have in our opinion taken prompt action. He could either have accepted the plea regarding his majority as true in fact and asked permission to present the plaint formally to the Court himself, after making the trifling amendment which would have been necessary, or if he desired to stand by the allegation of his minority he should have asked for an issue on the point. In the result the Trial Court went into the merits of the case and decreed a part only, though a substantial part, of the plaintiff's claim.

There were three appeals filed, one by the plaintiff himself, and one by each of two sets of defendants who were dissatisfied with the decision of the Trial Court. The defendants who appealed again made it a ground of objection in the lower Appellate Court that there had been no valid plaint presented to the Trial Court, and that the whole of the proceedings of that Court were vitiated by this defect. The lower Appellate Court entertained this plea. It went into the facts of the case and it found that the plaintiff had actually been born in the year 1890, so that he was over 25 years of age when the plaint was filed on his behalf by his father's sister's son. The learned Additional District Judge upon this state of facts held that there was an incurable defect in the whole of the proceedings in the Trial Court, that the decree of that Court in favour of the plaintiff was a bad decree. He dismissed the plaintiff's appeal, allowed the appeals filed by the two sets of defendants and dismissed the suit.

It is unnecessary to enquire whether the lower Appellate Court could or could not have substituted for the decree of the Trial Court an order returning the plaint to the plaintiff, to be presented again after proper amendment. There is some authority for the adoption of this course in a decision of the Madras High Court, which has been laid before us; but there is no decision of this High Court lending support to such a view of the law. If there was never any valid plaint before the Court, the proper order would seem to be one rejecting the petition tendered as a plaint and leaving it to the plaintiff to take such further action as he might think proper. In the present circumstances, the question hardly arises, because by the time the learned Additional District Judge came to dispose of the appeals before him the period of limitation, even reckoned from the date given in the plaint, had expired.

The suit having thus been dismissed the plaintiff filed three appeals in this Court which were disposed of by a learned Judge of this Court in a single judgment. The learned Judge held that the question of law sought to be raised was concluded, so far as this Court is concerned, by the decision in the case of Sheorania v. Bharat Singh (1.) He dismissed the appeals accordingly.

Various points have been raised in argument before us. The first was with reference to a later decision of this Court in the case of Basdeo v. John Smidt (2). There are expressions in the judgment in that case which are inconsistent with some of the principles on which the decision in Sheorania v. Bharat Singh (1) appears to proceed but the two cases are in their essence quite distinct. In Basdeo's case (2) the learned Judges were at pains to point out that there was before the Court a plaint which had been validly presented by an Advocate of the Court, in whose favour there existed a clear presumption that he had authority to present the plaint. This being so, the only question was whether an alleged defect in the matter of signature or verification was or was not curable under the provisions of section 578 of the then Code of Civil Procedure, corresponding with section 99 of the present Code. In the case before us the point taken against the plaintiff essentially was, and is, that his plaint had never been validly presented to the Court. That it had not been so presented seems obvious upon reference made to the provisions of O. IV, r. 1 and O. III, rr. 1 and 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A defect of this sort can scarcely be regarded as a defect in or proceeding in a suit within the meaning of section 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure and in any case it is a plea which affects the jurisdiction of the Court. The Trial Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit at all, except upon a plaint properly presented; and it ought to have gone into the question of the presentation of the plaint and determined it before it proceeded to try the suit.

The next substantial point argued before us is with reference to a petition, present-

(1) 20 A. 90; A. W. N. (1887) 203; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 417.
(2) 22 A. 55; A. W. N. (1899) 172; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1068.

ed on behalf of the plaintiff to the Trial Court, through Counsel purporting to be duly authorised on his behalf. The date of the presentation of this petition appears to have been the 13th of November 1917, though it is stated as the 13th of April 1917 in the order under appeal. The petition was to the effect that the plaintiff, having now attained majority, desired to prosecute the suit in his own name, and asked the Court to pass the formal orders necessary to enable him to do so. It was within the knowledge of the Trial Court that a certificate of guardianship had at one time been granted by the District Judge in favour of the plaintiff's mother in respect of the person and property of the plaintiff. One of the incidental difficulties in the case is that the plaintiff's age was grossly understated in the application on which this certificate of guardianship was ordered to issue. This, however, does not seem to have any essential bearing on the questions of law before us. What we are now taking note of is the fact that the issue of this certificate of guardianship had been brought to the notice of the Trial Court. When, therefore, that Court received the plaintiff's application to be permitted to prosecute the suit as a major, it passed an order that the plaintiff should produce for the inspection of the Court the certificate of guardianship or a certified copy of the same. The plaintiff took no further action and never produced the paper called for by the Court. The suit, therefore, went on to trial in the Court of first instance in a wholly irregular manner, without this important application on the part of the plaintiff having been formally disposed of either one way or the other. We are far from satisfied with the procedure followed by the learned Subordinate Judge who tried this suit in the first instance. But we are none-the-less satisfied that, a considerable degree of blame attaches to the plaintiff or to his legal adviser in that Court, for not prosecuting his own case with due diligence, and not obtaining proper orders from the Trial Court upon essential points. Under the circumstances we do not think it possible to give the plaintiff any relief at this stage.

It has been suggested to us that the plaintiff's petition of the 13th of November 1917 might be treated as a presentation of the plaint on his behalf by Counsel properly authorised by him. But we are of opinion that under the circumstances it would be stretching the law too far in the plaintiff's favour to take such a view of that proceeding. The presentation of that petition might have had an effect equivalent to a fresh presentation of the plaint, or might have led to some further proceeding or order on the part of the Trial Court, which would have had that effect, if it had been properly followed up by the plaintiff. But as the case stands we are unable to take this view.

The result is that this and the connected appeals fail and we dismiss this appeal with costs including fees on the higher scale

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 303 OF 1921.

February 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad and Mr. Justice Adami.

MR. A. H. FORBES—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HANUMAN BHAGAT AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Lease, construction of—Lease for erecting buildings—Presumption—Permission to erect buildings—Estoppel.

Where a lease granted for the purpose of erecting buildings does not mention any particular term, but the erection of pucca buildings is made subject to the permission of the landlord, the inference is that the lease is meant to be of a permanent character and not merely from year to year. But even if such a lease is to be construed as one from year to year it would be converted into a permanent lease where the lessor actually grants permission to the lessee for the erection of pucca buildings. [p. 35, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Purnea, dated the 3rd September 1920, confirming a decision of the Munsif, Araria, dated the 31st July 1919.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and Chandra Sekhar Banerji, for Mr. Lal Mohan Ganguli, for the Appellant.

Messrs. C. C. Das and N. K. Prasad II, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Jwala Prasad, J.—This second appeal arises out of a suit for ejectment. The Courts below have by concurrent findings dismissed the suit. The plaintiff is, therefore, the appellant before us. He is the Malik or proprietor of Forbesganj Bazar where the land in suit is situate. It measures 3 bighas odd, or 1.32 acres. The land was formerly held by one Gulab Chand under a lease (Exhibit H), dated 1892. The defendant-respondent purchased the rights of Gulab Chand. He also took lease of the land from the plaintiff (Exhibit 8-A) dated 20th Aghan 1307 (5th December 1899). The appellant commenced the present action by filing a plaint in the Court of the Munsif of Basantpur on the 22nd of June 1908. In the plaint he stated that the lease to the defendants was from year to year and that they were given no permanent right under the lease and that as the value of land of Forbesganj Bazar had increased and other tenants there under the plaintiff were paying rent at higher rate, the defendants were served with notices to take fresh settlement of the land as their existing rent was rather low, or to quit the same; but the defendants neither took any fresh settlement nor gave up the land. The plaintiff claimed khas possession of the land by ejecting the defendants from 1st Baisakh 1326 M. S. and also for arrears of rent amounting to Rs. 162-4-3.

The Courts below have given the plaintiff a decree for arrears of rent and this portion of the decree is not under appeal before us.

Therefore, the appeal before us is only against the decree refusing the plaintiff's relief for ejecting the defendants.

The defendants in resisting the plaintiff's claim asserted that the lease granted to them created a be maiyadi or permanent tenancy and not one from year to year; that in terms of the lease the defendants have constructed pucca buildings on the land at immense cost with the permission of the plaintiff and on payment of the nazrana to him and, therefore, the plaintiff is estopped from bringing the suit for ejectment. In the alternative the defendants pleaded that in case they be found liable to be ejected, they be awarded Rs. 32,000, as compensation for the pucca buildings erected by them.

Two questions were agitated in the Court below, namely :—

(1) whether the lease in favour of the defendants was a permanent lease in its inception, and

(2) whether the subsequent acts and conduct of the lessor and the lessees converted the lease into a permanent one; and if so, whether the plaintiff lessor is, therefore, estopped from bringing a suit for khas possession of the land in suit.

The Court below has decided both the issues against the plaintiff. Mr. Sen on behalf of the appellant impugns the finding of the Court below on both the issues.

Now, the plaintiff's suit will fail if any of the aforesaid issues is decided against him. The first issue depends upon the construction of the document in question. It is conceded that no definite term was fixed in the lease. That in itself will not show either that the lease was of a permanent character or that it was for a term of years. As to whether this indefinite term was intended to be perpetual or permanent depends upon the intention of the parties as gathered from the covenants in the lease. The learned Subordinate Judge has in his judgment summarised the terms. It is not necessary to refer to all of them for the purposes of this appeal. We may, however, refer to the following terms only :—

(1) The purpose of the lease was to enable the lessee to erect gola house and to purchase and sell all sorts of commodities therein or in other words to open his business therein;

(2) The lease was not limited for any definite period but that it was a be maiyadi lease or a lease without any term;

(3) That the lessee shall not have the power to construct any pucca building without the express and written permission of the lessor and if that stipulation be violated and pucca building be raised by the lessee without such permission of the lessor, he, the lessee, shall be liable to be evicted; and

(4) In case the lessee want to erect pucca building and to have a pucca well or indra he shall have to do so according to the advice of the lessor.

Now it is clear from the aforesaid terms that the lease was for the purpose of gola business and for building houses. It is also clear that the erection of pucca buildings for the business as well as for the purpose of residence was in the contemplation of the parties, with the condition that permission for erecting pucca structures will have to be taken from the lessor. Under these circumstances the inference is not unreasonable that the lease in question was meant to be of a permanent character and not from year to year. No doubt, as observed above, a be maiyadi lease or a lease without any term may in the circumstances of a particular case be shown not to confer any permanent grant, as was held in the cases relied upon by the learned Counsel on behalf of the appellant Birdi Prasad v. Prosonna Kumar Das (1), Mohim Chandra Sirkar v. Anil Bandhu Adhicary (2), Parshan Kuer v. Tulsi Kuer (3) and Kailaspati Chowdhury v. Muneshwar Chowdhury (4). The decisions in those cases were applicable to the particular facts decided and the leases concerned. The present case is very near the case reported in Promada Nath Roy v. Srigobind Chowdhry (5). Upon the facts in the present case and the lease in question we are not prepared to differ from the view of the Court that at its inception the lease was a permanent lease, and not one from year to year.

The respondents are on firmer ground upon Issue No. 2. Now it is undisputed that on the 29th of November 1907 the defendants applied for permission to erect pucca buildings on the land in question in terms of clause (3) of the lease and the permission was expressly granted on acceptance of nazrana of Rs. 21. The plaintiff has filed purwangis issued to the defendants in 1909 (Exhibits 18 and 18-A). These purwangis confirm the permission already granted stating that the permanent structures standing on the land were erected with the permission and sanction of the lessor. Now, before the foundation was laid the defendants applied for permission in 1907 and they were given that permission. The purwangis referred to above, which were granted two years after, indicate that the buildings had already been completed and the construction thereof was confirmed by the plaintiff. In none of these documents is there any indication of the plaintiff having demanded a higher rent as a condition for the erection of the pucca buildings on the land in question; nor is there any suggestion that the erection of such buildings would not confer upon the defendants the right to remain on the land permanently or that the construction of the buildings was to be at the risk of the defendants' liability to be ejected on the ground of the lease being only of a limited duration. The plaintiff in this case did not only acquiesce in the construction of the buildings in question by merely abstaining from interference, but he actually granted permission for erecting the buildings Therefore, even if the lease was of a temporary duration limited by terms, or a lease from year to year reserving the right of re-entry in the lessor,

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 152; 16 C. W. N. 564.
(2) 1 Ind. Cas. 66; 9 C. L. J. 362; 13 C. W. N. 513; 5 M. L. T. 297.
(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 658; 2 P. L. J. 180; 1 P. L. W. 447; (1918) Pat. 11.
(4) 43 Ind Cas. 965; 3 P. L. I. 576; 4 P. L. W. 109.
(5) 32 C. 648; 9 C. W. N. 463.

I am afraid the plaintiff would have been estopped from claiming the right of khas occupation by ejecting the defendants. The lease, even if originally for a limited term, would then have been construed to have been made permanent in the sense that the plaintiff would not have been entitled to re-enter. The original terms of the lease would then have been supplemented by a fresh contract by the conduct of the parties whereby the defendants would have acquired a right of occupation over the land in question. The learned Counsel on behalf of the appellant relies upon the case of Beni Ram v. Kundan Lal (6). In that case the term of the lease was defined and no express permission for building was given by the lessor. Under those circumstances, the observation of the Lord Chancelior in Ramsden v. Dyson (7) was applicable to the facts of the case, to the effect that if a tenant builds on the lands which he holds under a term he cannot acquire any right to prevent the lessor from taking any possession of the land and building when the lease determines; he knew the extent of his interest; and it was his folly to expend money upon a title which he knew would or might soon come to an end. On the other hand, Lord Watson in delivering the judgment of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee observed: "In order to raise the equitable estoppel which was enforced against the appellants by both the Appellate Courts below, it was incumbent upon the respondents to show that the conduct of the owner, whether consisting in abstinence from interfering, or in active intervention, was sufficient to justify the legal inference that they had, by plain indication, contracted that the right of tenancy, under which the lessees originally obtained possession of the land, should be changed into a perpetual right of occupation."

In the present case the Courts below have held that the plaintiff in the present case had actually given express permission to the defendants to construct buildings on the land in question and thereby he contracted that the right of tenancy would continue principally so as to confer upon the defendant the right of permanent occupation.

The case of Ralli v. Forbes (8), decided in this Court, does not seem to help theappellant. In that case the lease was from year to year, whereas in the present case the lease is without any term. On the other hand, the principle laid down in the above case as to the doctrine of estoppel seems to apply to the present case. Upon the circumstances, not very dissimilar to those of the present one, the learned Chief justice applied the doctrine of estoppel against the claim of Mr. Forbes to eject the defendants from the land leased to them.

We agree with the view taken by the Court below on both the issues and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Adami, J.—I agree.

z. k. Appeal dismissed.

(6) 21 A. 496; 1 Bom. L. R. 400; 3 C. W. N. 502; 26 I. A. 58; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 523; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1022 (P. C.).

(7) (1866) 1 H. L. 129; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 506; 14 W. R. 926; 149 R. R. 543.

(8) 67 Ind. Cas. 744; (1922) Pat. 209; 3 P. L. T. 467; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 43; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 258; 1 Pat. 717.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 215 OF 1922.

July 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

RAM GOVIND PANDE—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PANNA LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Pre-emption—Custom—Co-sharer in village—Purchaser of plot in defined share of mahal, whether co-sharer.

The purchaser of a plot of land comprised in a definite share in the village which is assessed separately to revenue and which is recorded separately in the khewat, is a co-sharer in the village and must be treated as such for the purposes of pre-emption. [p. 36, col. 2]

Safdar Ali v. Dost Muhammad; 12 A. 426; A. W. N. (1890) 117; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1016 (F. B.), followed.

RAM GOVIND PANDE v. PANNA LAL.

Dakhni Din v. Rahim-un-nissa, 16 A. 412; A.W. N. (1894) 134; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 268; Ali Husain Khan v. Tasadduq Husain Khan, 2 A. L. J. 612; 28 A. 124; A. W. N. (1905) 219 and Bidhata Ram v. Ram Cheri, 15 Ind. Cas. 251, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Azamgarh, dated 25th November 1921.

Messrs. P. L. Banerji and N. Upadhiya, for the Appellant.

Dr. S. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case may be briefly stated as follows:—On the 17th January 1919 one Panna Lal, who owned a 1 anna 6 pies share, sold a plot comprised in that share, namely, plot No. 177, together with two trees to Sahdeo and others defendants.

On the 20th September 1919 Panna Lal sold his entire 1 anna and 6 pies share to the same persons.

A suit for pre-emption was brought by the plaintiff appellant Ram Govind Pande for the purpose of pre-empting both these sales.

It has been held by both the Courts below that the plaintiff cannot pre-empt the first sale, that is to say, the sale of the isolated plot on the ground that he had notice of the sale and had an opportunity of exercising his right to pre-empt which he refused to avail himself of. It must be taken, therefore, for the purposes of the present decision that the first sale is not liable to pre-emption.

The question, therefore, remains whether the plaintiff is entitled to succeed in his suit for pre-emption so far as it concerns the sale of the 1 anna 6 pies share which, as we have said, was carried out on the 20th September 1919. The finding of the Court below is that the suit must fail on the ground that the vendees had already become co-sharers in the village by reason of their having purchased the Plot No. 177 under the sale-deed executed on the 17th January 1919.

It has been strongly contended here that this purchase did not give the vendees the status of co-sharers in the village (hissedaran mauza) to quote the words of the wajib-ul-arz.

There is a great deal of case-law in the decisions of this Court regarding the position of persons who have purchased isolated plots of land and the question has arisen time and again for decision whether or not the purchasers of such plots are for the purposes of pre-emption to be deemed co-sharers in the village. The cases fall into different categories which depend upon the nature of the land which is purchased. We have for example cases of purchases of plots of muafi land not assessed to revenue. Again we have other cases known as arazi dari; cases where sales have been made of certain isolated plots of land which are assessed to revenue but which nevertheless are outside the mahal.

And lastly, we have cases like the present where a plot sold is within the mahal and forms a portion of a defined share in the village, that is to say, a defined area of land forming part of a definite share assessed to revenue.

This latter class of cases has been dealt with in a series of decisions beginning with the Full Bench decision of the Court in Safdar Ali v. Dost Muhammad (1). In that case it was held that where a person purchased a plot of land situated within a share in a village he was to be deemed a co-sharer in the village and it was held in the case reported as Dakhni Din v. Rahim un-nissa (2) that such a person would be treated as a co sharer in the village even though his name did not appear in the revenue papers.

Another case on this point is to be found in Ali Husain Khan v. Tasadduq Husain Khan (3). That case is, so far as we can see, on the same footing as the case with which we are now concerned. It is not necessary for us to refer to the decisions on the other classes of cases for clearly they would not be applicable in the present instance. Here we are dealing with a plot of land comprised in a 1 anna 6 pies share which is assessed separately to revenue, and which is recorded separately in the khewat. That being so, the case falls within the principle laid down in Ali Husain Khan v. Tasadduq Husain Khan (3). It is true that there have been other decisions of this Court which seem to point in a contrary direction. One of these to which we have been referred is to be found in Bidhata Ram v. Ram Cheri (4). But there the facts are not fully set out and it is impossible to gather from the language of the report what was the particular nature of the plots in question in that case.

(1) 12 A. 426; A. W. N. (1890) 117; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1016 (F. B.).

(2) 16 A. 412; A. W. N. (1894) 134; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 268.

(3) 2 A. L. J. 612; 28 A. 124; A. W. N. (1905) 219.

We are satisfied, therefore, with the decision of the Court below in this particular case that the vendees who purchased this plot No. 177 on the 17th January 1919 were entitled to claim the status of hissedaran muza and that being so, we hold that the suit of the plaintiff was rightly dismissed. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(4) 15 Ind. Cas. 251.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 180 OF 1922.

July 4, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice Walsh and Mr. Justice Ryves.

TEJA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

TIKA RAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage suit—Personal decree passed erroneously—Failure to object, effect of.

Where a Court in execution of a decree for sale passed in a mortgage-suit erroneously passes a personal decree under O. XXXIV, r. 6 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the judgment-debtor neither objects to the decree nor appeals against it, he or anyone who stands in his shoes, cannot subsequently go behind the decree and challenge it. [p. 38, col. 1.]

Malkarjun v. Narhari, 25 B. 337; 5 C. W. N. 10; 2 Bom. L. R. 927; 27 I. A. 216; 10 M. L. J. 368; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 739 (P. C.), followed.

Darbari Mal v. Moola Singh, 56 Ind. Cas. 139; 18 A. L. J. 628; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 160; 42 A. 519, distinguished.

Appeal from an order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Aligarh, dated the 2nd of November 1922.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Appellant.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts, as now found, under which this appeal arises, are as follows :—

Narhe and Teja were brothers who together formed a joint Hindu family. They owned an ancestral house. On the 4th February 1908, Nanhe mortgaged the whole house to Tika Ram. Tika Ram sued on his mortgage and got a preliminary decree for sale in 1912. Before Tika Ram could get an order for sale under O. XXXIV, r. 5, Teja, the other brother, brought a suit to avoid the mortgage on the ground that Nanhe, as a member of an undivided joint Hindu family, could not make a valid mortgage of the ancestral house without his consent and in the absence of legal necessity, and for a declaration that the house could not be sold under the mortgage-decree. That suit was decreed on January 4th, 1913. Thereupon Tika Ram abandoned his rights under the mortgage, and asked the Court, then seized of the execution proceedings, to pass a decree under O XXXIV, r. 6, and that was done. The effect of that was to give Tika Ram a simple money-decree against Nanhe. It is to be noted here, that Nanhe was a party to these proceedings. He did not contest the application, nor did he appeal from the order passed. It is also to be noted that Tika Ram's suit was brought within six years of the mortgage, and that he was entitled, at the date of his suit, to get a simple money-decree, if the mortgage, on the basis of which he sued, was found to be for any reason invalid. In execution of that decree the right, title and interest of Nanhe in the house in suit was put up for sale and was purchased by Tika Ram, who then brought a suit for partition of half the house on the allegation that Nanhe's right, title and interest in the whole house amounted to half. Teja having failed to set aside the sale in the execution department, filed a counter-suit for a declaration that the auction-sale in favour of Tika Ram was invalid and that he (Tika Ram) was not entitled to partition the house. Both suits were tried together. The Trial Court decreed Teja's suit and dismissed Tika Ram's. Tika Ram appealed. The lower Appellate Court dismissed Teja's suit and remanded Tika Ram's suit to the First Court to carry out the partition. Teja appeals from that order of remand in this case, and in the connected second appeal which is also before us.

The main contention is that the decree passed under O. XXXIV, r. 6 was a nullity as being beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, and that it therefore conveyed no title to Tika Ram, on the ground that there having been no confirmation of the preliminary decree and no sale under O. XXXIV, r. 5, the Court had no jurisdiction to grant a decree under O. XXXIV, r. 6; and reliance was placed on a recent decision of this Court in the case of Darbar Mal v. Moola Singh (1). It seems to us that that case has no application here because in that case it was the judgment-debtor who objected to the passing of the decree under O. XXXIV, r. 6. In this case no doubt Nanhe might, if he had been so advised, have raised an objection to the Court passing this decree, or he might have appealed from that decree. But it seems to us that inasmuch as he (Nanhe) has accepted that decree, Teja cannot challenge it. We will assume that it is correct to say that a decree under O. XXXIV r. 6 should only be passed when there has been a sale over, and that the decree in this case under O. XXXIV. r. 6 was erroneous. It seems to us, however, that the well-known Privy Council case of Malkarjun v. Narhari (2) applies to this case. Here (as there), the Court passed an order which, it may be conceded, it should not have passed, having regard to the provisions of the Code. But it was seized of the execution of the case and it did pass that decree. Whether right or wrong that decree, not having been challenged by Nanhe, the party concerned, it seems to us that he, and any one who stands in his shoes, as we think Tika Ram does in this case, cannot go behind it. So far as the appellant is concerned, he challenges the title of Tika Ram to ask for partition or to stand in any way, so far as he, Teja, is concerned, in the capacity towards him of a co-sharer. But the result of the views expressed in the foregoing observations is that Tika Ram, although in the inception his title was impeachable, has now acquired an absolute title which is good against all the world, and therefore good against Teja.

Teja, in equity, has really no case. If Teja had asked to be joined as a defendant in Tika Ram's suit in 1912, as he could have done, and raised the same defence that he subsequently raised, Tika Ram might have abandoned the mortgage and asked for a simple money-decree against Nanhe as he was entitled to do, (the suit having been brought within six years of the bond), and if so, he probably would have got, as he was entitled to get a simple money-decree against Nanhe. In execution of that decree he could undoubtedly have attached and sold Nanhe's share in the house, and if he purchased it, he would have been entitled to partition the house. We cannot see under the actual circumstances of this case that Teja's interests are damnified. On a partition Teja is only entitled to half the house. Nanhe could have partitioned it, and Nanhe's representatives can do so also. No injustice is done to Teja. The half share of Teja in the house is not imperilled. But Teja cannot be allowed "to pull the chestnuts out of the fire" for Nanhe's benefit.

No doubt it is very inconvenient for Teja that the ancestral house should be partitioned, but to avoid this he has only to pay up the debt due by Nanhe, his brother. The learned Counsel for the respondent says that his client will not press his right to partition the house, if his debt is paid up in full to date. This seems to us to be most natural and satisfactory solution of a litigation, which does not impress us as being particularly honest on Teja's part.

The other points raised, though pressed by Mr. Haribans Sahai with his usual ability and pertinacity, are in our opinion untenable.

We dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale, if the certificate has been filed.

This judgment covers the connected second appeal, which we dismiss with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 56 Ind. Cas. 139; 18 A. L. J. 628; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 160; 42 A. 519.

(2) 25 B. 337; 5 C. W. N. 10; 2 Bom. L. R. 927; 27 I. A. 216; 10 M. L. J. 368; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 739 (P. C.).

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

REFERRED CASE NO. 19 OF 1922.

August 28, 1923.

Present:—Sir Walter Salis Schwabe, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter.

THE SECRETARY, BOARD OF REVENUE, LAND REVENUE AND SETTLEMENT (INCOME-TAX)—REFERRING OFFICER

versus

MESSRS. B. MUNISAMI CHETTY & SON —ASSESSEE.

Income Tax Act (VII of 1918), s. 9—Business profits, assessment of—Firm doing dual business —Adjustment of profits and losses—Assessee disputing correctness of assessment—Expenses, deduction of.

Where the business of a firm assessed to Income Tax is carried on in part by engaging in partnership with other firms and the subsidiary business so engaged in is connected with the main business and is a proper employment of the Assessee's capital and labour, for the purpose of assessment of income-tax, the subsidiary business thus carried on can be treated as part of the main business of the firm and loss incurred therein may be set off against profits made in the main business. [p. 39, col. 2.]

Under section 9 clause 2 (ix) of the Income Tax Act, the expenditure incurred in employing accountants and lawyers in disputes between the assessees and the Government as to the amount of excess profits duty payable and in arriving at the taxable income is not strictly "for the purpose of earning profits" and is not a legitimate allowance for deduction in arriving at the taxable income of a later year. [p. 40, col. 1.]

Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Warness & Co., Ltd., (1919) 2 K. B. 444; 89 L. J. K. B. 6; 121 L. T. 125; 35 T. L. R. 436 and Ward & Co., Ltd., v. Commissioners of Taxes, (1923) A. C. 145; 92 L. J. P. C. 33; 128 L. T. 436; 39 T. L. R. 90, followed.

Case stated under section 51 (1) of the Income Tax Act of 1918 by the Board of Revenue.

The Government Pleader, for the Referring Officer.

Messrs. King and Partridge, for the Assessee.

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe, C. J.—This case is referred under the Income Tax Act by the Board of Revenue for the opinion of the High Court. The question relates to the assessment for income-tax of the firm known as B. Munisami Chetty & Son and there are two distinct points referred.

1. B. Munisami Chetty & Son carry on business in piece-goods, the partners in the firm being B. Damodaram Chetty and P. V. Ramanujam Chetty, Damodaram Chetty having a much larger share. On the facts as now found it is clear that this firm engaged in business with other partners in two other firms, one called the Carnatic Import Co., and the other B. Damodaram Chetty & Co., whose business was of an allied character, in that they dealt in goods similar to those dealt in by Munisami Chetty & Son. B. Munisami Chetty and Son had a much larger share in those two other firms, there being in each case a partner with a small share to encourage him to take a real interest in the management of the business. In the year of assessment B. Munisami Chetty and Son made a profit and the other two firms made a loss. B. Munisami Chetty and Son claim that they are entitled, for the purpose of assessment, to set off their share of the loss in the other two firms against the profits made in their own firm. The Crown contends, on the other hand, that they must be treated separately and must pay income-tax on the profits of their firm; and that the only effect of the loss of the other two firms would be that these firms would not have to pay income-tax. In our judgment, the determination of this question depends upon whether it is a fact that the business of B. Munisami Chetty and Son is being carried on in part by engaging with partners in the other firms. Where the subsidiary business engaged in is connected with the main business and is a proper employment of the Assessee's capital or labour, it is in my judgment for the purpose of assessment to be treated as part of the business of the firm. If the firm in one branch makes a loss, that loss may be set off against the profits made in its head office or other branches. Applying that test to this case, I think it is clear that the contention of the assessee is right and that B. Muniswami Chetty and Son are entitled to have their assessment arrived at by taking into account the loss made by them in the other two firms.

II. They claim also in arriving at their profits for the tax year 1921-1922 to deduct certain expenditure incurred by them (a) in employing accountants and lawyers in the matter of dispute between them and Government as to the amount of excess profit duty payable by them for the year ending March 1920, the year in which the Excess Profits Duty Act applied and (b) similar expenses incurred by them in arriving at the income on which income-tax assessment was made or was to be made. These expenses are perfectly proper expenditure by the Company of the Company's money but whether they can be brought into account in arriving at the proper assessment of the income tax must depend upon the construction of section 9 (2) (ix) of the Income-Tax Act of 1918 which runs as follows: "Such profits shall be computed after making the following allowances in respect of sums paid, namely, in respect of any expenditure (not being in the nature of capital expenditure) incurred solely for the purpose of earning such profits." In my judgment, these moneys were expended not for the purpose of earning profits at all but for the purpose of, in one case, protecting profits from Government's claim to income-tax and in the other case of getting back from Government the excess profits duty claimed by or paid to the Government in respect of some past period. The words of this rule are much the same as the words of the rule in Schedule D of the Income Tax Act of 1918 in England and of the rule in Income Tax Act current in New Zealand, and there have been cases both in England, and in the Privy Council on appeal from New Zealand, which indicate the view of the English Courts which is to the effect that these and similar words are to be construed strictly, by ascertaining, whether or not the expenditure was for the sole purpose of earning profits. So the amount paid to the Government in the nature of the fine arising out of a matter connected with the business and costs incurred in resisting the imposition of such fine were held in Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Warness & Co., Ltd. (1) not to be charges that could be deducted. In Ward & Co v Commissioners of Taxes (2) their Lordships of the Privy Council held that no deduction could be made for monies spent by a company in printing and distributing literature directed against Prohibition, which expenditure was admitted to be in the interest of the preservation of the assessee's trade We were referred to the Excess Profits Duty Act X of 1910, section 20, and it was suggested that because the amount of the excess profits duty is to be allowed as a deduction in respect of the profits of a business for the purpose of income-tax, therefore the costs of arriving at the excess profits duty must also be so allowed. It is clear on an examination of the section that this has got to be for a specified year and does not apply to any later year nor do I think that apart from that limitation the fact that the excess profits duty is by Statute allowed to be deducted would make the costs of arriving at the excess profits duty also a deduction. If the Statute had desired to make it so, it would have been quite simple to have stated that the excess profits duty and any money expended in arriving at the right amount of excess profits duty shall be a deduction for the purpose of income-tax. The section does not say so and I see no reason why it should be implied.

I have come to the conclusion that on the first point the contention of the Assessee is right and on the second wrong. The first point is the main and the more important point, and I think that the Assessee must have his costs of this reference except in so far as they have been increased by adding a claim on the second point. Costs in this case will be taxed on the original side scale.

I think that it would be desirable at some future time on a suitable occasion with the assistance of the Vakils' Association, if they choose to assist in this matter, to consider the question of the taxation of costs, with a view to framing some rule or establishing some definite practice in such matters.

Coutts-Trotter, J.—Now that we have unambiguous findings, I do not entertain the slightest doubt about the first point which seems to me almost too plain for discussion. Indeed when Mr. Ananthakrishna Aiyar came to develop the argument, it was clear that the only way in which he could contend for the claim made by Government was by arguing that under section 9 (1) of the Income Tax Act of 1918 the profits of any business carried on by him, that is, the Assessee, have to be expanded into profits of any business carried on by him solely so as to exclude any business that he may carry on in conjunction with others. Here we have a Company part of whose business is to hold a share in a separate business. It takes this share in the course of its own business and it receives whatever profit it receives or loses whatever it loses in the course of its own business.

(1) (1919) 2 K. B. 444; 89 L. J. K. B. 6; 121 L. T. 125; 35 T. L. R. 436.

(2) (1923) A. C. 145; 92 L. J. P. C. 33; 128 L. T. 436; 39 T. L. R. 90.

With regard to the second point I feel more doubt. The section occurs in many acts of many countries and Mr Justice Rowlatt, a Judge of great experience and learning in revenue matters, has frankly said that he does not see his way to give a general definition of the true construction of the section, but that he is content to say about each case as it comes along whether in his view it falls within the section. This is to me a difficult case, more difficult than the one which that learned Judge had to deal with. I do not think that the expenses incurred here can be said, in any sense that a plain man would understand, to be correctly described as expenditure incurred for the purpose of earning profits. It seems to me that the expenditure was incurred after the profits had been earned. That appears to be sufficient to take the case out of the section

I agree to the order as to costs.

V. N. V.
N. H. Order accordingly.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 306 OF 1922.
July 31, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Baker, Officiating J. C.

Chaudhari MANOHARLAL—DEFENDANT NO. 1—APPELLANT
versus
Musammat AMANO AND ANOTHER—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Estoppel—Party signing award in token of assent—Family settlement—Form, defective, effect of.

The signature of a party on an award does not render the award any the more binding on him if it is otherwise invalid. But where a party signs an award in token of acceptance, and his doing so leads the other party to believe that he is not going to contest it, on the strength of which belief the latter allows a pending suit to be dismissed, he is estopped from contesting the validity of the award. [p. 43, col. 2]

Jagannath v. Rambux, 6 C. P. L. R. 95, referred to

It has been the policy of Courts of Equity to uphold family settlements even when they are not in legal form. [p. 43, col. 2.]

Mahomed Musa v. Aghore Kumar, 28 Ind. Cas 930; 42 C. 801; 17 Bom. L. R. 420; 21 C. L. J. 231; 28 M. L. J. 548; 19 C. W. N. 250; 13 A. L. J. 229; 17 M. L. T. 143; 2 L. W. 258; (1915) M. W. N. 621; 42 I. A. 1 (P. C.), relied on.

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshangabad, dated the 6th March 1922, in Civil Appeal No. 31 of 1920.

Mr. J. Sen, for the Appellant.

Messrs. M. Gupta and K. K. Gandhe, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The points in dispute in the present appeal are comparatively simple, but the litigation out of which the appeal arises has a long and complicated history. It will not be necessary to give the history in full. It will be found in Exhibit D-7, a judgment of a Bench of this Court in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 32 of 1917. There has been a long standing dispute between Musammat Draupadi (now deceased) widow of one Khubchand, Musammal Amano and Nanhi, widows of Khubchand's predeceased nephew Beharilal, and the appellant Manoharlal, a distant relation of Khubchand, who entered into possession of Khubchand's property after his death in 1910 under a claim of title.

The deceased Khubchand left another widow Musammat Dhani who was defendant No. 2, in the original suit, but was discharged and is not a party to this appeal.

The widows at first consented to appellant's taking possession of the property, but subsequently they quarrelled and the result was a bitter and protracted litigation in the Civil, Criminal and Revenue Courts, which has lasted many years and has already been before this Court several times in various forms.

The gist of the whole matter is that the dispute between the parties was referred to private arbitration and on an award being obtained the widows allowed their suit against Manoharlal to be dismissed, without the award being filed in Court or any reference to the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code.

An application to file the award was rejected and, after a remand by this Court, it was finally held by a Bench of this Court in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 32 of 1917 that as part of the award was invalid, and this could not be separated from the valid part of the award, the award could not be filed at all. In 1915 the Settlement Officer effected a compromise between the parties, by which the khudkasht land was handed over to the appellants. This compromise the widows attacked as being obtained by undue influence, a plea since withdrawn.

The principal question in this appeal is whether the plaintiffs can fall back on the award, but the matter is further complicated by the death of Musammat Draupadi, the widow of the last male-holder, pendente lite, and the fact that Manoharlal is admittedly reversioner to so much of her husband Khubchand's estate as she was entitled to at her death vide this Court's order of 29th June 1921 in Second Appeal No. 435 of 1920.

The suit out of which the present appeal arises is Civil Suit No. 11 of 1917 in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge, Hoshangabad. The plaintiffs (Draupadi, Amano and Nanhi) sued Manoharlal, Musammat Dhani and her daughter, on the strength of the award, to recover possession of lands Nos. 169/1 and 368 of the village of Pachlawara, alleging that the lands were in their patti and were let by them to tenants, and that the defendant No. 1 (Manoharlal) has wrongfully taken a surrender of these lands from the tenants and has wrongfully received a patta in the recent settlement showing these lands to be his khudkasht. The defendant No. 1 denied the validity of the award and pleaded that it was superseded by the compromise of 1915 by which the khudkasht lands were transferred to him, that the alleged tenants were not tenants of the land, that his signature was obtained on the award by fraud, and that he was the owner of the property under the will of Khubchand.

The First Court held that the award though invalid as an award, was valid as a contract between the parties and the defendant was estopped from contesting it; that the lands in suit were khudkasht of Khubchand and the tenants were plaintiffs' tenants, and Manoharlal had no right to take a razinama from them, and awarded the plaintiffs' claim as against him. The other defendants were discharged.

On appeal the District Judge reversed the decision, holding that as the award was invalid the plaintiffs cannot rest their title on it and that Musammat Draupadi cannot alone claim as widow of the last male-holder, as the co-widow Dhani was not joined as a plaintiff.

On second appeal to this Court my learned predecessor held that the view of the lower Appellate Court, that this Court in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 32 of 1917 had held that the award was invalid and unenforceable, was wrong. The validity of the award as an award was not considered, much less decided. The signatures on the award did not convert it into an instrument of partition, but the stamping of the document and the action taken upon it are important facts in connection with the contention that the defendant Manoharlal is estopped from contesting the validity of the award.

The appeal having been decided on a preliminary point was remanded to the lower Appellate Court for decision on the merits. After remand the District Judge found that the defendant was estopped from contesting the validity of the award, that the tenants were the tenants of the plaintiff and confirmed the decision of the First Court.

From this decision the present second appeal is preferred, and the questions for decision are first whether the appellant is estopped from contesting the validity of the award. Secondly, if he is not estopped, whether the award is valid between the parties. Thirdly, what is the effect of the death of the plaintiff Draupadi and the vesting of her rights in the appellant?

It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the question of the validity of the award has not been decided and the case must go back again. This, however, will depend on the question of estoppel. As regards estoppel I agree with the lower Appellate Court in holding that the appellant is estopped from contesting the validity of the award.

The award was passed during the pendency of Suit No. 24 of 1913 brought by the widows for possession of the estate. Defendant No. 1 being a reversioner could not succeed to the estate of Khubchand during the lifetime of Khubchand's widows, and his pleas of adoption and an oral Will have been given up. The dispute was referred to arbitration with the consent of both parties and both parties accepted the award. The result was that the widows believing that the defendant No. 1 would abide by the award, allowed the suit to be dismissed. Owing to parts of the award being illegal it was such as could not be filed in Court, but this does not make any difference. The lower Appellate Court has referred to paragraph 1 of the defendant's written statement, the lower Court's decision on Issue No. 1 and the evidence of defendant's witnesses Nos. 1 to 6.

The defendant has admitted that he did not abide by the award. By his submission to the arbitration he led the widows to believe that he would agree to the award, and, therefore, they allowed their suit to be dismissed. They are distinctly in a worse position than they would have been if they had continued with the suit, for as pointed out by the First Court, Draupadi at any rate as the widow of the last male-holder was entitled to the possession of the estate for her lifetime and her husband's reversioner could not come in till her death.

It is true that the fact that defendant No. 1 signed the award does not render it more binding on him, as laid down in Jagannath v. Ramlux (1) but his signing the award in token of acceptance led the widows to believe that he was not going to contest it, and in these circumstances I am of opinion that the defendant No. 1 is estopped from contesting it.

It is not necessary to consider the validity of the award as an award, as defendant No. 1 is estopped from contesting it. It evidences a family arrangement between the parties behind which the defendant cannot go.

It has always been the policy of Courts of Equity to uphold such family settlements, even when they are not in legal form. I may refer to Baldeo Singh v. Udal Singh (2) and the numerous cases, both English and Indian, quoted thereunder, as well as the remarks of the Privy Council in Mahomed Musa v. Aghore Kumar (3).

The award provides that 8 annas should go to the plaintiffs and 8 annas to Manoharlal and Musammat Dhani, the proportion allotted to Musammat Draupadi being 3 annas and that to Musammats Amano and Nanhi 5 annas in the 8 annas patti allotted to the widows.

The genealogy and the judgments in the case show that Khubchand and Beharilal were owners and that Beharilal pre-deceased Khubchand who thus became the sole owner. On Khubchand's death therefore his widows Draupadi and Nanhi as widows of the last male-holder were entitled to the whole estate, the widows of Beharilal being only entitled to maintenance. This is what would have happened had there been no award, but by the award the widows of Khubchand divested themselves of a portion of their interests in favour of the appellant and the widows of Beharilal and the widows of Khubchand were thus placed in a worse position than they otherwise would have occupied. It has been held by this Court in its order of 29th June 1921, in Second Appeal No. 435 of 1920, that the present appellant Manoharlal is reversioner to so much of Khubchand's estate as Draupadi would have been entitled to at her death. The award however provides that on the death of Draupadi her 3 annas share should come into the possession of Musammats Amano and Nanhi, widows of Beharilal, and as the appellant has been held to be estopped from contesting the validity of the award, the 8 annas patti given in the award to the widows passes to Amano and Nanhi, the remaining plaintiffs.

(1) 6 C. P. L. R. 95.
(2) 58 Ind. Cas. 732; 43 A. 1; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 202; 18 A. L. J. 877.
(3) 28 Ind. Cas. 930; 42 C. 801; 17 Bom. L. R. 420; 21 C. L. J. 231; 28 M. L. J. 548; 19 C. W. N. 250; 13 A. L. J. 229; 17 M. L. T. 143; 2 L. W. 258; (1915) M. W. N. 621; 42 I. A. 1 (P. C.).

With regard to the question at issue in this case, namely, whether the tenants were the tenants of the widows, the Courts below have found on the facts that they were tenants of the lands falling in the widows' patti and that the lands were leased to them by the widows. In the award the lands in dispute are not shown as khudkasht of either parties. The learned Judge below has relied on the jamabandi (Exhibit P-4) which shows that the tenants were the tenants of the plaintiffs.

In these circumstances the decree of the lower Appellate Court must be confirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE PATNA HIGH COURT.

July 5, 1921.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Phillimore, Sir John Edge and Sir Robert Stout.

Maharaja KESHO PRASAD SINGH —DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SIV SARAN LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Construction of document—Agreement to pay pension—Direction to executors to comply with terms of agreement, effect of—Contract, whether created.

A Hindu widow who was holding an impartible estate for life under the Will of her husband appointed the plaintiff manager of the estate under an agreement which provided that on resigning his post the plaintiff would get a certain monthly pension for life. The agreement wound up with the words "The heirs and representatives of me, the executant, and the holders and administrators of the estate should fully comply with the terms of this deed:"

Held, that the concluding words of the agreement were a mere recommendation and did not amount to a contract binding either on the executor or administrator of the executant or on the owner or administrator of the estate to pay the pension. [p. 46, col. 1.]

Appeal from a judgment and decree of Sir Edward Chamier, Kt., C. J. and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin dated the 27th July 1917, reported in 42 Ind. Cas. 122, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court at Arrah.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by Maharaja Kesho Prasad Singh against a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Patna. The High Court reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge of the Second Court at Arrah, which had dismissed the suit with costs. The suit was to recover Rs. 5,445 and the basis of the claim rests on an ekrarnama given by Maharani Beni Prasad Kueri, widow of Raj Sri Radha Prasad Singh Bahadur, K.C.I.E., gaddinashin and proprietress of Raj Reasat Dumraon (Dumraon estate) in pergana Bhojpur, District Shahabad, by caste an Ujjain Chatri and by occupation a zemindar.

The Dumraon Raj is impartible and the estate is an important one and of considerable extent. The family of the Maharaja trace their pedigree back for many centuries. The widow before named managed the estate after the death of her husband; it had been devised to her for the term of her life by the Will of her husband.

A great number of questions was raised before the Subordinate Judge, and no less than seventeen issues were framed. These issues were issues of law and fact. In the High Court these issues were reviewed, and a decree was made for the payment of the principal sum claimed with interest at 6 per cent., per annum, from the end of each month till realization; that the decree was to be executed only against the property of the Maharani in the appellant's hands, which had not been duly administered by him.

According, therefore, to this decree, the liability of the appellant was only as an administrator of the estate of the Maharani. The case has, however, been urged and the respondent has claimed that he is entitled to his claim against the appellant on one of two grounds:—That is to say, either against him as an administrator de son tort of the estate of the Maharani or as the owner of the Dumraon estate.

The case of the respondent rests on the ekrarnama, and it was contended that this document binds the administrator of the Maharani's estate and also the owner of the Dumraon estate.

The respondent was a Pleader of the Courts, and had, conversations with the Maharani about becoming the manager of the estate. At one or more of the interviews his statement is that she said that if he gave up his practice in Court, and became the manager of the estate, she would see that he should not be the loser by so doing. There is no mention of such a promise in the contract of employment. This was evidenced by the letter sent by the Maharani to the respondent and dated 29th May 1902. It reads as follows (omitting formal portions): "After expressing my desire to meet you I have to say that as Mr. Charles Fox, the manager, has resigned his post, I think it necessary that some competent man should live at my place and help me; so I write to you that you will please live at my place and execute the orders which I may issue to you and will pay you Rs. 1,200 per month as salary.'

The respondent entered on his work as manager, and on June 15, 1906 the ekrarnama was executed. The draft of this document was, before signature by the Maharani, seen by the respondent, and he seems to have made no objection to its terms.

After stating that the High Court adopted a translation of the material part of the ekrarnama differing from that adopted by the Subordinate Judge which translation was set out, the judgment continues.

The translation adopted by the High Court of this part of the document reads as follows:—"I, therefore, in order to safeguard against the loss which the said Munshi may sustain if perchance he vacates this post for any reason in future, think it just and proper that if in future the said Munshi gives up this service for any reason or he has to resign the service according to his wishes or against his wishes for any other reason and under any circumstances, justifiable or unjustifiable, he the said Munshi shall get Rs. 500 (Rupees five hundred) monthly, which amounts to Rs. 6,000 (Rupees six thousand) annually, as pension for life from the date he resigns the post of manager of Raj Reasat Dumraon, and I hope that by allowing this (torn) if perchance he, according to his desire, reverts to the profession of pleadership, he shall get to some extent compensation for the loss he may sustain for leaving his profession after (?for) a long time, and he will pass his old age in comfort. The heirs and representatives of me, the executant, and the gaddinashin and administrators of Raj Reasat Dumraon should fully comply with the (terms of) this deed."

There does not seem to be much difference in the language so far as the creation of a liability on the part of the administrator of the estate of the Maharani is concerned between the two translations. The respondent rests his case on the translation accepted by the High Court. The question, therefore is: Do the words used in the accepted translation show that the Maharani agreed or contracted with the respondent, that after her death, her executor or administrator should pay the pension named?

The ekrarnama provides that respondent is to get Rs. 500 monthly, for life, from the date he resigns his post as manager, and it goes on to say that the Maharani hopes that by allowing this sum, he will pass his old age in comfort; but then comes the next, and important sentence, as to who is to pay this and the words already quoted show that there are two different parties mentioned— ....namely, first, her heirs and representatives and secondly, the owner or administrator of the Raj Dumraon estate, and the ekrarnama says that these parties "should fully comply with the terms of this deed." Are these words a binding promise to pay such a pension, or are they only a recommendation by the lady to two different parties to comply with the deed.. ....i.e., to pay the pension. If it had been intended to provide that the pension was to be a right of the respondent to obtain this money, the words are surely insufficient to effect such an intention. In the accepted translation, the words are that they "should fully comply" with the terms of the deed. She did not treat, therefore the ekrarnama as an ordinary contract. It has to be noticed that the work which the respondent did was work for the estate, not personal work for the Maharani. Why then should her personal estate be bound to pay a pension to this servant of the estate, namely, the respondent?

Their Lordships are of opinion that the ekrarnama is not in terms a contract binding the executor or administrators of the Maharani to pay the pension, nor can it be said that it is a binding contract on the owner or administrators of the Raj Dumraon estate to pay such a pension. Being of this opinion it is unnecessary to consider whether the appellant was ever the administrator of the estate or the other questions raised in the appeal.

Their Lordships are of opinion that the appeal must be allowed with costs, both here and below, and that the decree of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the suit be restored. They agree with the opinion expressed by the Judges of the High Court, that in the Court below a mass of irrelevant matter was introduced, and that two documents specified have been printed that were irrelevant. The cost of printing these documents, (i. e., p. 274 to p. 348 and p. 351 to p. 481 in the printed record) must be borne by the appellant, and the Registrar of the Privy Council should disallow all costs of and incidental to these irrelevant documents when taxing the costs of the appeal incurred in England.

Their Lordships will humbly advise his Majesty accordingly.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

Solicitor for the Appellant—Mr. E. Dalgado.

Solicitors for the Respondent—Messrs. Barrow Rogers and Nevil.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 106 OF 1923.

October 8, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Baker, Officiating J. C.

KASHIRAM—DEFENDENT—APPLICANT

versus

BARKYA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—NON-APPLICANTS

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Two documents—One transaction—One document illegal—Illegality whether affects both documents—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Revision—Cause of action, decree passed without—Illegal exercise of jurisdiction.

If two documents are part and parcel of one single transaction and one of them is tainted with illegality, the other is also tainted with the same illegality and is void. [p. 47, col. 2.]

If a Court passes a decree in a case in which there is no cause of action, it acts in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally and interference in revision is justified. [p. 48, col. 1.]

A. promised to pay Rs. 300 in consideration of being a partner in a lease of land unauthorised by law and executed a pro-note in favour of a creditor of the lessor. The lease having fallen through, the creditor sued A. for recovery of the amount due under the note:

Held, that the note was invalid under law and no cause of action could be based thereupon. [p. 47, col. 2.]

Application for revision of the decree dated the 13th March 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 4 of 1923, decided by the Additional District Judge, Betul.

Mr. S. B. Gokhale, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Non-Applicants.

KASHIRAM v. BARKYA.

ORDER.—The facts of this case are somewhat unusual. Girdhari, the separated brother of the applicant Kashiram, had passed two bonds to the non-applicants and on accounts being made Rs. 600 were found due. It was arranged that a fresh advance of Rs. 270 should be made and for a total consideration of Rs. 870 Girdhari should execute a lease of his occupancy land for 20 years to the creditors. The present applicant agreed to pay half the Rs. 270, that is Rs. 135, to his brother and he passed a note to the creditors for Rs. 300, half the amount due by his brother to them. Subsequently, the lease fell through and the creditors, non-applicants, sued Kashiram on this note, the suit being framed as if he had undertaken to pay half his brother's liability. The defendant, however, pleaded that it had been agreed that he was to have a half share in the lease along with the plaintiffs and on that understanding he had executed the note. After some delay the plaintiffs ultimately admitted that it was so. The First Court dismissed the suit, holding that as he lease was void because occupancy land could not be let for more than a year under section 38 of the Tenancy Act, the consideration of the document in suit was illegal and it was accordingly void.

On appeal the additional District Judge, Betul, reversed the decision of the First Court on the ground that the note in suit was a transaction independent of the lease and that the defendant had undertaken to pay the Rs. 300 on behalf of his brother. He therefore awarded the plaintiff's claim. The defendant applies in revision.

The decision of the learned Additional District Judge appears to be based on the plaint and not on the subsequent pleadings. It has been clearly admitted by the plaintiffs that the defendant was liable to half the consideration of the agreement as a co-lessee of the plaintiffs and that the only reason for executing the document was that he joined the plaintiffs in equal rights as a lessee. It has been contended that by these pleadings the plaintiff's Pleader only meant that the defendant agreed to undertake half his brother's liability on condition of his being given a half share in the lease. But a reference to the agreement executed by Girdhari will show that the lease itself was executed in consideration of the full liability of Rs. 870, and there was, therefore, no necessity for the defendant to undertake any part of his separated brother's liability. It is thus clear that the consideration for the document was the fact of defendant being allowed to be a lessee along with plaintiffs.

Both documents are dated the same day and must be treated as one transaction. This being so, it appears to me that there is no consideration whatever for the document executed by the defendant. The lease is illegal and void and the contract is void. The defendant is not, therefore, liable on the note. No authority is necessary for this proposition. However I may refer to Laxmanlal v. Mulshankar (1) in which it was held that as the sale-deed and rent note, which latter was merely intended to secure interest on the principal sum, were part and parcel of one single transaction, the rent note was tainted with the same illegality which affected the sale-deed and, therefore, also void. This will apply to the present case where the note executed by the defendant was part and parcel of the transaction relating to the illegal lease.

It is contended that the Court has no power to interfere in revision with the finding of the lower Appellate Court. In the present case the lower Appellate Court has disregarded the admissions in the pleadings and the decision of the case is against the pleadings themselves. If it had been stated in the plaint that this note had been executed by defendant in order to make him a partner with the plaintiffs in the lease of occupancy land for 20 years, it would be apparent that the plaintiffs had no cause of action. In a similar case, where the plaintiff had no cause of action, the Allahabad High Court interfered in revision: cf. C. Ross Alston v. Pitambar Das (2) in which at page 523 the learned Chief Justice discussed this question and pointed out that in that case there was no cause of action and, therefore, the District Judge acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction illegally within the meaning of section 622 of the old Civil Procedure Code, now section 115. I am of opinion that these remarks apply to the present case and this Court has power to interfere.

(1) 32 B. 449; 10 Bom. L. R. 553.
(2) 25 A. 509; A. W. N. (1903) 104 (F. B.).

I, therefore, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and the plaintiffs' suit will be dismissed with costs in all Courts.

S. D.

Decree set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 295 OF 1922.

April 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Devadoss.

R. M. P. PERIANAN CHETTY—

PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

MARIAPPAN ASARI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 74, 75—Instalment bond—Whole sum due on default—Demand, failure to make, effect of—Waiver—Limitation, commencement of.

Article 75 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act gives an option to the promisee of a note or the obligee of a bond to waive the consequences of a default. Where no option of waiver is given, time begins to run from the date of default. [p. 49, col. 2.]

The Statute of Limitation runs from the time the plaintiff might have brought his action unless he was subject to any disabilities specified in the Statute. [p. 50, col. 2]

Where an instalment bond provides that if there is a default of payment of any one instalment, interest shall be charged for the entire amount remaining due from the date of default without reference to subsequent instalments and that the aggregate principal and interest shall be paid on demand, on the making of a demand, after default has been made in payment of any one instalment, the whole amount becomes due, and time runs from the date of the demand; but if no demand is made, the option given to the plaintiff is gone, and time begins to run in respect of each instalment as it becomes due. [p. 49, col. 2; p. 50, col. 1.]

Ramadh Bibi Ammal v. Kandasami Pillai, 51 Ind. Cas. 724; (1919) M. W. N. 82; 25 M. L. T. 154; 9 L. W. 479; and Seetharamayyar v. Munisami Mudaliar, 50 Ind. Cas. 87; (1919) M. W. N. 185; 37 M. L. J. 613; 9 L. W. 427, distinguished.

Hanmantram Sadhuram Pity v. Arthur Bowles, 8 B. 561; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 750 and Hemp v. Garland, (1843) 4 Q. B. 519; 12 L. J. Q. B. 134; 7 Jur. 332; 3 G. & D. 402; 62 R. R. 423; 114 E. R. 994, relied on.

C. R. P. No. 139 of 1922, not followed.

Petition under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Madura Town, in Small Cause Suit No. 1420 of 1921.

Mr. D. Ramaswamy Aiyangar, for the Petitioner.—The plaintiff in the lower Court is the petitioner here. The suit was on an instalment bond. The debt was payable in ten monthly instalments with a further provision that if there was default in the payment of any one instalment the plaintiff could "whenever he desired" demand payment of the whole of the balance then due irrespective of future instalments. My submission is that to such a bond Art. 75 applies. As there is an option reserved to the plaintiff he is entitled to make the demand at any time till the last date after which there can be no right to demand. See Ramadh Bibi Ammal v. Kandasami Pillai (1) (Spencer and Krishnan, JJ.) The word "on demand" ("Thangal vendumbodhu" has been considered in Seetharamayyar v. Munisami Mudaliar (2). In that case it was held that the obligee has a right to waive his claim to demand and time does not begin to run unless and until he exercises his option.

Unless the defendant proves that there was an earlier demand I am entitled to sue within 3 years of the date of the last instalment. This is recognised in C. R. P. No. 139 of 1922 a judgment of His Lordship, Mr. Justice Phillips who also held that plaintiff can waive payment by instalment in which case time will run only from the last instalment date.

(1) 51 Ind. Cas. 724; (1919) M. W. N. 82; 25 M. L. T. 154; 9 L. W. 479.

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 87; (1919) M. W. N. 185; 37 M. L. J. 613; 9 L. W. 427.

PERIANAN CHETTY v. MARIAPPAN ASARI.

See also Hanmantram Sadhuram Pity v. Arthur Bowles (3). At page 568 the observations are clearly in my favour. Else Arts. 74 and 75 could apply to identical cases. The scope of the two is different and that distinction would have full meaning only according to my contention.

See also Seetharamayyar v. Munisami Mudaliar (2), Ramadh Bibi Ammal v. Kandasami Pillai (1) and Mackenzie v. Tiruvengadathan (4).

JUDGMENT.—This is an application to revise the decree in S. C. S. No. 1420 of 1921 on the file of the District Munsif's Court, Madura Town. The plaintiff brought the suit for Rs. 90 due on an instalment bond dated the 11th September 1917 executed by the first defendant and the father of the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 for Rs. 50 payable in ten monthly instalments of Rs. 5. The District Munsif dismissed the suit in respect of nine-tenths of the claim as being barred by the law of limitation and gave a decree only in respect of the last instalment.

The respondents do not appear here. It is urged that time did not begin to run against the plaintiff till 11th July 1918, the date on which the last instalment fell due by reason of the provision in the bond that the whole amount shall be payable on demand if anyone of the instalments was not paid on the same date, and that Art. 75 of the Limitation Act is applicable to the case, and the suit filed on 4th July 1921 is within time.

Reliance is placed on two decisions reported in Ramalh Bibi Ammal v. Kundasami Pillai (1) and Seetharamayyar v. Munisami Mudaliar (2). In the first case the suit was upon an hypothecation bond in which there was a provision that interest should be paid every six months and the principal before a fixed date and in default "we shall pay, whenever you require, the interest accruing due for the days overdue at the aforesaid rate, and the principal amount." The mortgagor committed default in paying interest. Spencer and Krishnan, JJ., held that no demand was made for payment of the principal and, therefore, time did not begin to run from the date of the default of payment of interest. In the second case, Seshagiri Iyer, J., sitting as a Single Judge, made the following observation in regard to a provision in the bond that if there was a default in the payment of any instalment, the whole money would be payable on demand, "I think that the parties deliberately used the expression, because, although there was a liability to pay each of the instalments separately, they intended to make it a condition precedent that a demand should be made if the whole amount is to be asked to be paid at once." It is open to the obligee of a bond to waive his right to claim the whole amount in default of payment of an instalment where the provision is that the whole amount is payable on demand in case of default; time does not begin to run against him unless and until he exercises his option.

In this case the suit was brought nearly three years after the last payment became due. The plaintiff had an option till the last instalment fell due to claim the whole amount including the last instalment. But since the last instalment fell due the option was gone. To uphold the contention of the petitioner would be giving a longer period of limitation than that prescribed in Art. 74 of the Limitation Act. Article 75 is quite clear in its terms. It gives an option to the promisee of a note or the obligee of a bond to waive the consequences of a default. Where no option of waiver is given, time begins to run from the date of default. My attention has been drawn to a recent decision of Phillips, J. in C.R. P. No. 139 of 1922 in which he held that "it is open to plaintiff to waive the payment by instalments and in that case the principal would only be payable on 24th February 1918 and the suit is then within time." With great respect, I am unable to follow the decision. The provision in the bond here is "In the course of suc payment, should there be any default of payment on the due date in any month as aforesaid interest at one pie per rupee per day shall be charged for the entire amount remaining due from the date of default without reference to the subsequent monthly instalments and the aggregate sum of principal and interest so accruing due shall in cash be paid in lump by us to you on demand without any apportionment of liability being pleaded by us." The option is given here to the obligee to claim the whole amount on default of payment of an instalment without reference to subsequent instalments. Such a provision cannot be held to extend the period of limitation to three years from the date the last instalment fell due. The petitioner's Vakil reled upon Hanmantram Sadhuram Pity v. Arthur Bowles (3) as supporting his contention. But I do not think it helps him. Birdwood, J., observes at page 568: "The plaintiff could, under the bond, have exercised the option of delaying his demand for payment of the whole sum remaining due under it at any time so long as any monthly instalment remained in respect of which default could be made; and it is not alleged that at the time when demand was made in January 1884 the last instalment had become already overdue for more than a month, and that the whole amount had, therefore, become payable irrespective of any demand; for the making of which, indeed, no opportunity would thereafter have remained. Assuming, therefore, that so late as in January 1884, an instalment was payable,—an assumption which can safely be made, without entering into any exact calculation of the time when the last instalment would become due, inasmuch as 50 monthly payments would be required to clear off the principal debt alone,—I hold that it was only in January 1884 that cause of action was given. The plaint was admitted on the 28th April 1884." In the present case there is no evidence that any demand was made before the last instalment fell due. In paragraph 7 of the plaint the cause of action is said to have arisen on 11th July 1918, the date on which the last instalment fell due. I think the observations of Lord Denman in Hemp v. Garland (5) are applicable to the present case. "In this case there was default more than six years ago, and upon that the plaintiff might, if he pleased, have signed judgment and issued execution for all that remained due, or he might have maintained his action. If he chose to wait till all the instalments became due, no doubt he might do so. But that which was optional on the part of the plaintiff would not affect the right of the defendant. He might well consider the action as accruing from the time that the plaintiff had a right to maintain it. The Statute of Limitation runs from the time the plaintiff might have brought his action unless he was subject to any disabilities specified in the Statute, and as the plaintiff might have brought his action upon the first default, if he did not, to enter up judgment, we think that the defendant is entitled to the verdict upon the plea of the Statute of Limitation." According to the terms of the bond, on the making of a demand the whole amount becomes due, and time would begin to run from the date of the demand. If no demand is made the option given to the plaintiff is gone, and time begins to run in respect of each instalment as it becomes due. The District Munsif has rightly given a decree in respect of the last instalment which became due within three years of the date of plaint.

(3) 8 B. 561; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 750.
(4) 9 M. 271; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 585.

The petition is dismissed.

V. N. V. N. H. Petition dismissed.

(5) (1843) 4 Q. B. 519; 12 L. J. Q. B. 134; 7 Jur. 302; 3 G. & D. 402; 62 R. R. 423; 114 E. R. 994.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 277 OF 1922.

August 1, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Baker, Officiating J. C.

MULLA FAIZ ALI—DEFENDANT NO. 1—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat HARKUAR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT NO. 2—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI,

MULLA FAIZ ALI v. HARKUAR.

r. 63—Title suit—Burden of proof—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Fraudulent transfer—Intention to defeat and delay creditors—Hindu Law—Joint family—Gift by undivided co-parceners, validity of.

Under Hindu Law a gift even of his own share in joint family property by an undivided co-parcener is invalid. [p. 51, col. 2.]

Sobharam v. Makdu, 12 C. P. L. R. 63, relied on.

In a suit instituted after the summary rejection of a claim under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Civil Procedure Code, the onus of establishing that the transaction on which the suit is based was entered into in good faith lies on the plaintiff. [p. 51, col. 2.]

Ghunsham Das v. Uma Pershad, 50 Ind. Cas. 264; 15 N. L. R. 68; 17 A. L. J. 410; 36 M. L. J. 483; 21 Bom. L. R. 472; 23 C. W. N. 817; (1919) M. W. N. 513; 10 L. W. 511; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 86 (P. C.), followed.

When a transfer is made gratuitously and the effect of the transfer is to defeat or delay any creditor, the intention on the part of the transferor so to defeat or delay may be presumed. Where the available assets left after the conveyance are not sufficient to pay the debts of the transferor the law will infer an intention to defeat and delay creditors. [p. 52, col. 1.]

Seth Mohanlal v. Balmukand, 17 C. P. L. R. 24, followed.

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshangabad, in Civil Appeal No. 8 of 1922, dated the 11th April 1922.

Mr. J. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. N. G. Bose, R. B., for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are as follows:—The appellant Mulla Faiz Ali obtained a decree against defendant No. 2 Kaluram and in execution of it attached the property in suit as the property of Kaluram. The plaintiff-respondent, Musammat Harkuar, who is Kaluram's sister, filed an objection against the attachment but it was dismissed on the 22nd of January 1921. Thereupon she brought a suit, as required by O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, for a declaration that the property was her own and not liable to attachment. She claimed under a deed of gift, dated the 27th February 1919. The First Court found in the plaintiff's favour and passed a decree that the plaintiff was entitled to get possession, and an appeal by the defendant was dismissed by the District Judge of Hoshangabad. From this decree the present appeal is presented.

The Courts below do not appear to have applied the law correctly. The suit is one for a declaration and not for possession, hence the decree of the First Court for possession was clearly wrong. The plaint is based on a deed of gift by the defendant No. 2 to the plaintiff, dated the 27th February 1919, and the prayer is for a declaration that the land belongs to the plaintiff and not to the defendant No. 2 and is not liable to attachment and sale, and for an injunction against sale. Both the Courts below have found that the land was not the sole property of Kaluram who passed the deed of gift but belonged jointly to him, his father and brothers. They appear to think that the remainder of the family acquiesced in the gift. Now the plaintiff's case is not based on a gift to her by her father and brothers but on a gift by Kaluram alone. A gift even of his own share by an undivided co-parcener has been held to be invalid in Sobharam v. Makdu (1). However, this point is not of much importance as what the appellant seeks to attach is whatever interest Kaluram has in the property and on the pleadings in this case it is clear that whatever Kaluram had he purported to convey to his sister, the plaintiff. In such a case the only question is whether the transaction was intended to defeat the claims of creditors under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, a point which has not been referred to at all by the Courts below.

It has been held by the Privy Council in Ghunsham Das v. Uma Pershad (2) that in a suit instituted after the summary rejection of the claim under section 278 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, (O. XXI, r. 58 of the new Code), the onus of establishing that the transaction on which the suit is based was entered into in good faith lies on the plaintiff. The only evidence which the plaintiff has produced shows that there was a transfer of possession, which was admitted by the malguzar to whom she paid rent, and her name is entered in the village record. The fact that the requisites of a gift were complied with and that the proprietor of the village recognised her claim to the land in suit, does not at all affect the question at issue in the present case.

(1) 12 C. P. L. R. 63.

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 264; 15 N. L. R. 68; 17 A. L. J. 410; 36 M. L. J. 483; 21 Bom. L. R. 472; 23 C. W. N. 817; (1919) M. W. N. 513; 10 L. W. 511; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 86 (P. C.).

The appellant applied for an injunction restraining Kaluram from disposing of the property during the pendency of the suit. The injunction was refused on 17th February 1919, and the deed of gift is dated 27th February 1919. It is not disputed that Kaluram had no property other than that which he transferred to the plaintiff, his sister. The case is on all fours with that in Seth Mohanlal v. Balmukand (3) where it was laid down that where a transfer is made gratuitously and the effect of the transfer is to defeat or delay any creditor, the intention on the part of the transferor so to defeat or delay may be presumed. If the available assets left after the conveyance were not enough to pay the debts of the transferor, then the law would infer an intention to defeat and delay. In the present case when the deed was executed, the appellant was a creditor of the donor. The mere fact that he had not at that time obtained a decree is immaterial: cf. Ishvar Timappa Hedge v. Devar Venkappa Shanbog (4). The gift had the effect of defeating or delaying him. The plaintiff could only disprove the intention to defeat or delay by showing that over and above the property gifted the donor possessed available assets sufficient for the discharge of his debts. Admittedly he had no other assets and he shortly afterwards became insolvent. In these circumstances the intention to defeat and delay would be presumed, and the transaction is voidable at the option of the appellant who has been so defeated or delayed.

The result is that the appeal must be allowed. The decrees of the lower Courts are set aside and the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed with costs throughout. Respondent No. 2 to bear his own costs.

Appeal allowed.

G. R. D. & Z. K.

(3) 17 C. P. L. R. 24;
(4) 27 B. 146; 5 Bom. L. R. 19.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1595 OF 1920.

May 4, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Gokul Prasad.

SHEO BALAK AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

GAYA PRASAD AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 35—Entry in deceased chaukidar's register, whether admissible—Proof that entry was made by deceased.

An entry in the register of a deceased chaukidar, not shown to have been made by the deceased, is not admissible in evidence under section 35 of the Evidence Act.

Jiwan Bakhsh v Khan Bahadur Khan, 19 Ind. Cas. 528, followed.

Sampat v. Gauri Shankar, 10 Ind. Cas. 713; 14 O. C. 68, referred to.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Cawnpore, dated the 30th July 1922.

Messrs. P. L. Banerji and Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellants.

Messrs. U. S. Bajpai and Damodar Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question raised in this appeal is as to the admissibility in evidence of the register of births and deaths kept by a village chaukidar.

The lower Appellate Court has come to the conclusion that it has not been shown that the entry had been made by the chaukidar himself, and the chaukidar being dead, the entry could not be admitted in evidence under section 35 of Indian Evidence Act. In support of this view the learned Judge has cited the case of Sampat v. Gauri Shankar (1). That case has not only been consistently followed in that Court but has also met with the approval of this Court in the case of Jiwan Bakhsh v. Khan Bahadur Khan (2). We are bound to follow this last-mentioned case and no argument has been advanced before us to make us come to a different conclusion. We, therefore, think that the decree of the Court below was correct. This appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 713; 14 O. C. 68.
(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 528.

MAUNG LU GALE v. MAUNG LU PO.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 270 OF 1921.

August 8, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Brown, A. J. C.

MAUNG LU GALE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MAUNG LU PO AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Succession—Death of parent—Marriage of surviving parent—Death of latter—Partition, right of—Causes of action, separate—Partition suit—Mesne profits whether can be claimed—Plaint—Mesne profits, amount of, whether must be stated—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 2, applicability of.

So long as a Burman Buddhist husband and wife are alive their property, from whatever source derived, forms one estate, in which all members of the family have an interest, but which is under the control of the husband and wife. If one of the couple dies and the surviving partner marries again, the property is ordinarily treated as the property of the second marriage during the continuance of that marriage, and forms one estate together with property acquired during the second marriage. It is only on the death of the surviving spouse of the first marriage that the manner in which the property is acquired becomes important. [p. 54, col. 1.]

Similarly when, after the death of the common spouse, the surviving widower or widow retains the property still intact and no partition takes place the estate is still one estate only. It is only when the claim to partition is made that the importance of the manner in which the property is acquired arises. [p. 54, col. 2.]

The children of the first marriage have a right to sue for partition on the death of the first parent but if they fail to exercise that right, the estate remains an undivided family estate and a fresh cause of action accrues to them on the death of the surviving parent. [p. 54, col. 2.]

Where a plaintiff in a suit for partition is not in possession of any of the joint family property, he can claim mesne profits from the date of the suit. [p. 55, col. 2.]

The rule laid down in O. VII, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code which requires a plaintiff to state in the plaint the approximate amount of mesne profits claimed does not apply to a case where mesne profits are claimed only from the date of the institution of the suit. [p. 56, col. 1.]

Ramkrishna v. Bhimabai, 15 B. 416; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 283, relied on.

Appeal against the decree of the District Court, Magwe, passed in Civil Appeal No. 4 of 1922.

Mr. A. C Mukerjee, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Tha Gywe and Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs-respondents are the children and grand-children of Maung Kyauk Ke and Ma Ka, deceased. Ma Ka died many years ago and some years after her death Maung Kyauk Ke married Ma Thit. Ma Thit had been married before and had children by her former marriage. She also had children by Maung Kyauk Ke. The appellants-defendants are children by the two marriages of Ma Thit. Maung Kyauk Ke died about the year 1264, and Ma Thit in the year 1281. The plaintiffs claim that the land in suit was the ancestral property of Ma Ka, and sue for possession of it, and for mesne profits. The facts may now be taken practically to be undisputed. In the Trial Court the plaintiff Maung Po Thit only was examined as a witness, and the parties apparently agreed to accept what he stated as true. In any event no evidence of any sort is brought to contradict his evidence. He is old enough to have personal knowledge of the history of the land, and his statements may be accepted to the effect that the land in suit was the ancestral property of Ma Ka. It may also be accepted from his statement that Ma Thit left on her death, besides the land, certain joint properties of her marriage with Maung Kyauk Ke. Both the lower Courts have given the plaintiffs a decree for possession of the land and for mesne profits, and the principal ground of attack taken against these decrees in this Court is that the suit was barred by limitation. It is contended on behalf of the appellants that the cause of action arose on the death of Maung Kyauk Ke which occurred considerably more than twelve years before the filing of the suit. The plaintiffs might, had they so wished, have sued Ma Thit and her children for partition of the estate in accordance with the rules laid down in section 229 of Volume I of the Ex-Kinwunmingyi's Digest. But they did not do so, and the question for decision is whether a fresh cause of action arose on the death of Ma Thit, and whether they are entitled now to sue for partition in accordance with the rules laid down in section 238. It is contended on behalf of the appellants that from the very nature of the suit it is clear that Ma Thit is not a joint owner of the property with the plaintiffs. If she were her children would be entitled to a share in the property. The plaint as drafted does lend some colour to this contention. The plaintiffs do not in their plaint ask for partition at all. They state that the land in suit was the ancestral property of Ma Ka, and they claim that they are entitled to it exclusively. They do mention certain other property which they say belonged to their parents, but they do not make it clear in their plaint what their claim is with regard to this property. Their suit does, therefore, at first sight appear to be a suit for the possession of certain property which they claim to be theirs entirely to the exclusion of Ma Thit's children, and they make no claim whatever to partition of any property. In spite, however, of the form in which the plaint is drawn up, it would appear that the suit is in reality a suit by the plaintiff to establish the rights accruing to them under section 238 of the Digest. They have subsequently waived any rights they may have to any of the rest of the property. And in fact it is doubtful whether under the rules laid down in that section they would have any right to a claim to any of the property other than such property as was brought by their father to the marriage with Ma Thit. So long as a Burman Buddhist husband and wife are alive their property from whatever source derived forms one estate, in which all members of the family have an interest, but which is under the control of the husband and wife. If one of the couple dies and the surviving partner marries again, the property is ordinarily treated as the property of the second marriage during the continuance of that marriage, and forms one estate together with property acquired during the second marriage. It is only on the death of the surviving spouse of the first marriage that the manner in which the property is acquired becomes important. The rules laid down in section 229 provide for the partition of what is treated as one estate in such an eventuality. Similarly when, after the death of the common spouse, the surviving widower or widow retains the property still intact and no partition takes place the dhammathats appear to contemplate the estate as still one estate only. It is only when the claim to partition is made that the importance of the manner in which the property is acquired arises. It appears to me, therefore, that although under the rules set forth in section 238 the children of the first marriage obtain the whole of the property of the first marriage, and no share in the rest of the property, they are still suing for a partition of an estate. And in this case although the claim is for the sole possession of certain land, the suit is nevertheless in essentials a suit for partition of an estate in which both the plaintiffs and the children of Ma Thit have a joint interest. In this view of the case the right to claim partition on the death of Ma Chit under the rules in section 238 arises independently of any right that may have arisen on the death of Maung Kyauk Ke. The plaintiffs could, if they had chosen, have sued for a partition of the property on the death of Maung Kyauk Ke. They did not do so, and the estate still remained an undivided family estate in which all the various heirs had rights vested or unvested. The estate having remained undivided a new cause of action arose on the death of Ma Thit. It is suggested that the provisions of Buddhist Law cannot override the provisions of the Statutory Law of Limitation, but it does not appear to me to be a question of overriding such a law. If the plaintiffs are to be considered as suing for a distributive share of the property of their father within the meaning of Art. 123 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act, the share for which they sue did not become payable until the death of Ma Thit and, therefore, limitation did not begin till then. What they are suing for is a share of the undivided estate left with Ma Thit in accordance with a right which accrued to them only on the death of Ma Thit. Any claim they might have made to a share in their father's estate on his death may be barred by limitation. But the Buddhist Law gives them a right to share in the family estate left with Ma Thit on her death, and it is that right which they are now suing to enforce. On the death of his father an orasa son is entitled to claim one-fourth of the property. But if he does not exercise that right and his mother does not die till more than twelve years after the death of his father, I do not think it would be suggested that he was barred by the Law of Limitation from claiming a share of inheritance on the death of his mother. Similarly I see no reason why the failure of the plaintiffs to exercise their right to partition on the death of their father should debar them from claiming an entirely separate right on the death of Ma Thit. Extracts from a very large number of dhammathats are quoted in section 238, and in not one of these extracts is there any suggestion that the rules as to partition there laid down are in any way dependant on which of the partners of the last marriage died first. It is not suggested that the children only of the last surviving parent can claim. It appears to me that the dhammathats contemplate the case in which the family property is, as a matter of fact, kept undivided until the death of the last of the parents, in whatever order they may have died. I am of opinion that the cause of action in the present case arose only on the death of Ma Thit and that the suit was not barred by limitation. As regards the share which the plaintiffs are entitled to claim I do not understand it to be seriously contended that the law has been wrongly interpreted by the lower Courts. The majority of the dhammathats quoted in section 238 including the Manugye lay down that if there is joint property of the last marriage the children of the first marriage each take the property brought by their parent to the subsequent marriage. In one or two passages it is laid down that if one of the parents brings no property to the second marriage, then the children of the other parent by his or her first marriage do not get all the property brought by that parent to the second marriage. But the authority for this rule is slight. The great majority of dhammathats lay down that the rule which has been followed in the present case should be followed if there is property of the last marriage. I am of opinion, therefore, that the plaintiffs have rightly been given a decree for possession of the land in suit.

The question remains whether the plaintiffs should have been given a decree for mesne profits. The term "mesne profits" is defined in section 2 (12) of the Code of Civil Procedure as "those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits . . . . ." In an ordinary suit for partition the question of mesne profits can hardly arise. Where there is property in possession of both sides, and the Court has to adjudicate as to how this property is to be partitioned, it can hardly be said that either party is in wrongful possession of any of the property. But in the present case there is no allegation that the plaintiffs are in possession of any of the property belonging to the estate, and if the finding that they are entitled to the land in dispute be correct, then they were entitled to possession as soon as they filed the suit. The plaint in the present case does not say from what date mesne profits are claimed. But presumably they claim mesne profits only from the date of institution of the suit. In any case they do not appear to have established their right to any such profits prior to the institution. If from the date of institution the plaintiffs were entitled to possession, then they were entitled to the usufruct of the land from that date, and in refusing to allow the plaintiffs to have possession the defendants must be held to have been in wrongful possession. The plaint sets forth that the four appellants are in possession of the property, and this is not denied in the written statement. It is not and never has been the case for the appellants that they were willing to make over that possession when required. They still claim that they are entitled to retain possession. I see no reason, therefore, to interfere with the order for mesne profits from date of institution of the suit. But it does appear to me that the order as passed by the Trial Court is wrong. Under the provisions of r. 12 of O. XX of the Code of Civil Procedure the Court may include in the decree for possession a decree directing an enquiry as to rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession to the decree-holder, the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through the Court, or the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever may occur first. But the question of mesne profits cannot now be decided in execution. After the enquiry has been held a final decree has to be passed under the provisions of the second clause of r. 12.

It is objected that under the provisions of r. 2 of O. VII of the Code of Civil Procedure, when a claim is made in a plaint for mesne profits, the plaint should state approximately the amount sued for. But it does not appear to me that this rule can apply to a case where mesne profits are claimed only from date of institution of the suit. It is obviously impossible to state even approximately the amount of such mesne profits, as that depends entirely on the period that may elapse between the date of institution and the delivery of the land. This was the view taken under the old Code in the case of Ramkrishna v. Bhimabai (1). The procedure to be adopted in dealing with claims for mesne profits has been considerably altered in the new Code, and such matters can no longer be dealt with in execution. But the wording of r. 2 is not greatly altered in the Code of 1908, and it must be presumed that the plaintiff is not required to perform an impossibility. The decree passed by the Trial Court appears to me to be substantially correct, and to need amendment only in form.

I alter the decree of the lower Courts into a decree for possession of the land in suit and for an enquiry under the provisions of r. 12 (1) (c) of O. XX of the Code of Civil Procedure as to the mesne profits accruing from date of institution of the suit. After completion of the enquiry the Trial Court will pass a final decree in accordance with the provisions of r. 12 (2), for such mesne profits as may be found to be due from that date.

The appellants will pay the plaintiffs their costs throughout.

Z. K. Decree altered.

(1) 15 Bo. 416; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 283.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 505 OF 1921.

May 23, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Justice Ryves and Mr. Justice Stuart.

RAM SAMUJH AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHEORAJ TEWARI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Redemption—Suit by transferee of mortgagor—Term for redemption, validity of, whether can be challenged.

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage brought by a transferee of the mortgagor it is not open to the latter to raise the plea that the term for redemption fixed in the mortgage-deed is excessive.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Benares.

Dr. K. N. Katju and Mr. Harnandan Prasad, for the Appellants.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit to redeem two mortgages executed in 1883 and 1888 respectively. The mortgages were for a term of sixty years. The lower Appellate Court has dismissed the suit on the ground that it is premature. In appeal the only point strongly urged before us is that the term of sixty years was excessive having regard to the value of the property and the necessities of the family. This suit was not brought by the mortgagors but by the vendees and we do not think it is open to them to raise this plea. In our opinion the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 305 OF 1921.

July 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

Musammat MAHRANA KUNWAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versu

Mr. E. V. DAVID, OFFICIAL RECEIVER OF THE PROPERTY OF RAM DUTT AND OTHERS, INSOLVENTS, AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 4, 68, scope of—Stranger aggrieved by act of Receiver—Remedy—Civil suit, maintainability of—Leave of Court, whether necessary—Hindu Law—Property purchased in name of wife—Presumption.

Per Curiam:—Section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not confer exclusive jurisdiction on the Insolvency Court, and it cannot be said that the only remedy open to an aggrieved stranger is to apply to that Court. [p. 58, col. 2.]

Where a person has made no attempt to bring the matter up before the Insolvency Court and there is no order of that Court which can be pointed out as amounting to a decision within the meaning of sub-clause (2) of section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, he is at perfect liberty to have recourse to the ordinary Civil Courts. [p. 58, col. 2; p. 59, col. 1.]

Section 68 of the Provincial Insolvency Act provides a speedy remedy to which recourse can be had if the person aggrieved chooses to seek it. But it is not the only remedy open to him. [p. 59, col. 1.]

If a person applies under section 68 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, he is subject to the time limit prescribed therein, but if he wants to enforce his claim in the Civil Courts in the ordinary way, his rights would be those of an ordinary person. [p. 59, cols. 1 & 2.]

It is open to a third person whose property has been taken possession of by the Receiver, and who does not claim title through the insolvent, to treat the Receiver as a trespasser and maintain his claim in a Civil Court. There is no provision in the Provincial Insolvency Act other than that contained in section 4 of the Act, which in any way takes away the jurisdiction of a Civil Court to try such a suit. [p. 59, col. 2.]

There is no statutory authority for the proposition that a person who is suing a Receiver appointed under the Insolvency Act has to obtain the permission of the Insolvency Court. [p. 63, col. 1.]

Per Sulaiman, J.—A Receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure merely holds the estate on behalf of the Court. The estate does not vest in him, nor does he in any way represent it and leave of the Court is necessary in order that by impleading him the estate may be bound. Without leave of the Court he represents nobody; after leave he represents the real beneficiary. A Receiver under the Provincial Insolvency Act holds a different capacity altogether. He is more than a mere officer of the Court. Under section 28 (2) of the Act the insolvent's estate vests in him. He alone, and no one else, represents the estate. He, therefore, is the proper party to be impleaded in the action. No leave is accordingly necessary for suing him. [p. 60, col. 1.]

Under section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, if a question of title is actually raised by a stranger to the insolvency and decided by the Insolvency Court, the decision is final, and the question cannot be re-opened. [p. 58, col. 2.]

There is no presumption that property standing in the name of a Hindu woman, even though purchased in her name, belongs to her husband. [p. 60, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decree of the Second Subordinate Judge, Cawnpore, dated the 25th of June, 1921.

Mr. G. W. Dillon for Messrs. B. E. O'Conor and Ramnama Prasad, for the Appellant.

Dr. K. N. Katiu, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Sulaiman, J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for a declaration that she is the owner in possession of a certain house situated in the City of Cawnpore; and that the insolvent defendant No. 2 had no concern with it, and it is not liable to be attached by the Official Receiver. The house in question was purchased on the 29th of May 1914 under a registered sale-deed in the name of the plaintiff. Some years afterwards, in 1919, Chhote Lal defendant, the plaintiff's husband, entered into a partnership with one Ram Dutt—a commission agency business—which ultimately failed in 1920. On the petition of certain creditors the firm was adjudicated an insolvent, and the Official Receiver took charge of the insolvent's estate. On the 6th of November 1920 he attached the house in question as property belonging to the the insolvent Chhote Lal. The report of the Receiver says that the present plaintiff protested and stated that the house belonged to her parents.

It is important to note that she made no attempt to seek redress in the Insolvency Court, but filed this regular suit for declaration on the 21st of February 1921.

The Official Receiver, who mainly contested the suit, pleaded that the house belonged to the insolvent and not to the plaintiff. It was further urged that the plaintiff not having raised any objection at the time of the attachment was estopped from suing; that her only remedy was to file objections in the Insolvency Court within 21 days of the attachment and the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try this case, and, lastly, that the permission of the Insolvency Court was necessary before the institution of the suit.

The insolvent, as might be expected in either view of the matter, supported the plaintiff's claim.

The learned Subordinate Judge decided the three legal issues in favour of the plaintiff, but on the question of fact came to the conclusion that the house in dispute belonged to Chhote Lal and not to the plaintiff.

The plaintiff has come up in appeal to this Court and on her behalf the finding of fact arrived at by the Court below is challenged. The learned Advocate for the defendant-respondent has not only supported the decree on the finding of fact, but also on the legal pleas decided against him.

As the questions of law come first in logical sequence, I propose to dispose of them first.

The plea of estoppel raised in the Court below has not been pressed at all, and it may be said at once that there was manifestly no substance in it.

The points which have been very strongly pressed in appeal are: (1) that under the new Provincial Insolvency Act, V of 1920, exclusive jurisdiction is conferred on Insolvency Courts with the result that no regular suit on the civil side is maintainable as against the Official Receiver, and (2) that in any case no such suit without the permission of the Insolvency Court can lie.

The argument is that an Official Receiver under the Insolvency Act is an officer of the Court, that, therefore, the act complained of must be deemed to be an act of the Court and the person aggrieved thereby should have recourse to that Court and to no other Tribunal. But the present plaintiff not claiming title through the insolvent was a stranger to the proceeding and was in no way represented therein. It is difficult to see how her rights can in any way be prejudiced by an act done by the Receiver in spite of her protest. It is suggested that the policy of the act is to expedite matters and not to permit claims to be brought after a number of years, and it is argued that it was with this object in mind that section 4 was enacted which in effect means that the question should forthwith be disposed of finally by the Insolvency Court.

In my opinion section 4 of the Act is an enabling section and confers full power on the Insolvency Court to decide all questions of title or priority or of any nature whatsoever which arise before it, or which it may deem necessary to decide. Sub-clause 2 makes "such" decision final and binding for all purposes on all claimants against him. In reality section 5 gives to the Insolvency Court the powers of a Civil Court.

It is to be noted that prior to the passing of this Act there was a conflict of opinion between this Court and the Calcutta High Court, the view prevailing in the latter Court being that questions of title could be disposed of by a regular suit only. Obviously the enactment of section 4 gives effect to the view which prevailed in this Court. I accept the contention of Dr. Katju that under the new Act if a question of title has been actually raised by a stranger to the insolvency and decided by the Insolvency Court the decision is final and the question cannot be re-opened in a separate regular suit.

This, however, does not mean that exclusive jurisdiction has been conferred on the Insolvency Court, and that the only remedy open to the aggrieved stranger is to apply to that Court. In my opinion where a person has made no attempt to bring the matter up before the Insolvency Court and there is no order of the Insolvency Court which can be pointed out as amounting to a decision within the meaning of sub-clause (2) of section 4, he is at perfect liberty to have recourse to the ordinary Civil Courts. In the present case the plaintiff never appeared before the Insolvency Court nor put her case before it, nor was any evidence led nor any adjudication of her rights made. How then can it be said that there is a "decision" against her which precludes her from suing? The act of attachment was an act of the Receiver and not necessarily an act of the Court, much less was it a "decision" by the Court.

The act of the Receiver may be compared to the act of the Civil Court Amin who wrongly attaches the property of a third person in execution of a decree. Such an act is done as much under the authority of the Execution Court as the act of a Receiver under that of the Insolvency Court. No special sanctity attaches to the acts of the Receivers under the Act. It is true that in certain particulars and subject to certain conditions the decision of the Court is final and absolute against third parties also and in that way the proceeding differs from proceedings in execution where the order disallowing the objection is not final. But in other respects the similarity certainly exists. In the absence of such decision the Civil Court remedy is not barred.

Reliance was also placed on section 68 of the Act which says that if the insolvent or any of the creditors or any other person is aggrieved by any act or decision of the Receiver, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may confirm, reverse or modify the act or decision complained of, and make such order as it thinks just. It is strongly contended that the word "may" in the section should be read as "must" and that, therefore, the only remedy open to the aggrieved person is by way of an application under this section In my judgment this contention is untenable. Section 68 provides a speedy remedy to which recourse can be had if the person aggrieved chooses to seek it. It is not the only remedy open to him. Of course if a person applied under that section, he would be subject to the time limit prescribed therein. But if he wanted to enforce his claim in a Civil Court under section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, his rights would be those of an ordinary person. I am of opinion that it is open to a third person who does not claim title through the insolvent, to treat the Receiver as a trespasser and maintain his claim in a Civil Court. There is no provision in the Act other than that contained in section 4 which in any way takes away the jurisdiction of a Civil Court to try such a suit.

In the case of Bhairo Prasad v. S. P. C. Dass (1) which came under the old Act, the opinion was expressed that a stranger to the insolvency may, at his option, seek his redress in the ordinary Civil Court. The effect of section 4 of the new Act has in no way been to alter the law so far as this point is concerned.

The next point urged is that before instituting the suit it was necessary to obtain the leave of the Insolvency Court. It is conceded that there is no statutory provision under which such leave is necessary. On the other hand, it may be pointed out that whatever provision there is in the Act relating to the grant of such leave is confined to claims of creditors. Reference may be made to section 28 sub-clause (2) which provides that no creditor to whom the insolvent is indebted shall commence any suit or other legal proceeding, except with the leave of the Court and on such terms as the Court may impose. If leave were necessary in all suits, this provision would be altogether superfluous. I may also point out that under section 28 (6) the power of a secured creditor to realise or otherwise deal with his security remains unaffected. Much less can then the rights of a stranger who claims an independent title be prejudiced. The utmost that can be said is that an Official Receiver is a public officer within the meaning of section 2 sub-clause (17) (d) of the Civil Procedure Code, and that notice under section 80 is necessary In the present case it is not disputed that such notice was sent before the institution of the suit.

It is, however, very strongly urged that on general principles it should be held that an Official Receiver is merely an officer of the Court and that no suit can be maintained against him unless the leave of the Court which appointed him has first been obtained. Reliance has been placed on some cases of the Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and Patna High Courts in support of this contention. None of the cases cited, however, are cases arising out of insolvency proceedings. A Receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure merely holds the estate on behalf of the Court. The estate does not vest in him, nor does he in any way represent it. Leave of the Court is necessary in order that by impleading him the estate may be bound. Without leave of the Court he represents nobody; after leave he represents the real beneficiary. A Receiver under the Insolvency Act holds a different capacity altogether. He is more than a mere officer of the Court. Under section 28 (2) the insolvent's estate vests in him He alone, and no one else, represents the estate. He, therefore, is the proper party to be impleaded in the action. No leave is accordingly necessary for suing him.

(1) 51 Ind. Cas. 113; 17 A. L. J. 787; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 118.

It should also not be overlooked that there is a distinction between the case where the plaintiff suing the Receiver had been represented in the previous proceeding and where he was not represented. For instance a creditor in an insolvency proceeding, a share-holder in the liquidation proceedings of a Company or a party to a litigation is represented in the proceeding when a Receiver of the property is appointed. In cases of this kind it may be that a party to that proceeding having himself submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court cannot subsequently challenge it, and start a fresh proceeding against the Receiver appointed in that litigation without having first obtained the leave of that Court. The position may, however, be quite different where a person who was a stranger to the proceeding in which the Receiver was appointed wants to sue the Receiver.

In certain Acts an express provision is made that no suit shall be instituted against an officer appointed by the Court; for instance section 171 of Act VII of 1913 so provides. It is conceded that there is no such provision in the present Act And independently of a statutory provision I can find no rule of law under which a suit against a receiver in insolvency can be thrown out on the mere ground that no leave of the Insolvency Court had been obtained This disposes of the questions of law raised in the appeal.

Coming to the merits of the case I can say without hesitation that it is impossible to uphold the finding of the Court below. The learned Subordinate Judge recorded a finding that the property in dispute belonged to Chhote Lal and not to the plaintiff. The question whether the plaintiff has succeeded in proving that the property belongs to her, I shall consider presently. But there can be no question that there is no evidence whatsoever on the record to support the finding that the property in dispute belonged to Chhote Lal. Undoubtedly as the plaintiff came to Court asking for a declaration of title the burden lay on her to establish a prima facie case that the property belonged to her. But after she had proved that the title-deeds stood in her name, that her name was entered in the Municipal registers and she had been paying the Municipal rates and taxes and had been assessed as owner, and that for all practical purposes she was the ostensible owner of the property, then if the defendant wanted to prove that she was a mere benamidar, the burden shifted on to him to show that the purchase money had been found by her husband. I wholly disagree with the view expressed by the Court below that there is a presumption that property standing in the name of a Hindu widow, even though purchased in her name, belongs to her husband.

In this case, as I have already remarked, the sale-deed of the 29th of May 1914 stood in her name. There had been a number of previous transfers which need not be mentioned, except the mortgage-deed dated the 13th of May 1913, executed by Kali Charan and Musammat Alpi, the previous owners, in favour of Dip Chand and Shimbhu Dat for a sum of Rs. 900. When the sale-deed of 1914 was executed, the amount due under this document was left in the hands of the vendee for payment to the previous mortgagees. Shimbhu Dat, one of the mortgagees, was an attesting witness to the sale-deed and he also admittedly received the mortgage-money after the sale-deed had been executed.

The plaintiff has produced a building permit dated the 5th of May 1918 which shows that an application for making some new erections was made by her to the Municipal Board and permission was granted on that date. There are also receipts for payment of water and house taxes standing in the plaintiff's name. At the time when the Receiver went to attach this house the plaintiff admittedly was occupying a part of the house, the other portion being let out to certain tenants. These circumstances in themselves make out a sufficient prima facie case in favour of the plaintiff. In addition to these pieces of documentary evidence, the plaintiff produced a number of witnesses in support of her claim. She herself went into the witness-box and stated that the house had been purchased by her father and uncle some seven years ago. Then she said that the money was paid by her father and the sale transaction was carried out by Mathura Prasad. In a later portion of her statement she said that the money was given to the vendee by Mathura Prasad. In paragraph No. 1 of the plaint she had alleged that the house was purchased by her father with his own money. One of the points pressed on behalf of the contesting defendant is that there is a gross inconsistency in these statements. In my opinion there is no inconsistency or contradiction whatsoever. It is an admitted fact that the plaintiff's father and uncle were members of a joint family. The plaintiff's mother died when she was an infant and she was brought up in the house of her father and uncle. If the property was purchased with the money belonging to the family the money may be said to have belonged to either of the two or to both. She next stated that on account of some quarrel with the relations of her husband she had to leave her husband's house, and this was why her father and uncle thought o getting a house for her.

Her father was dead when the suit was brought. Her uncle, Mathura Prasad, went into the witness-box and swore that he had provided the money for the purchase of this house. Mathura Prasad owns some zemindari property, he also carries on some business, and is a Lambardar in one of the villages. He stated that he had Rs. 1,000 in the village and brought the amount to the city for payment to the vendee. It is true that he said that there were no account books kept by him, and that he was not in a position to produce any documentary evidence to prove the payment. He produced two witnesses, Mahadeo and Hanuman, to show that he actually brought the money from the village. It is unnecessary to comment on the evidence of these witnesses who are men of no status. But there is the evidence of Babu Chhote Lal, Vakil, a distant relation of the plaintiff, to the effect that before the sale-deed in question was executed, Mathura Prasad had gone to him and shown him some papers relating to the house and consulted him. His evidence certainly shows that Mathura Prasad was in some way or other connected with the transaction. Two witnesses, Gaya Din and Raghunath, were examined to prove that the rents were paid to the lady by them, and that the house taxes were also paid by the plaintiff. The evidence on behalf of the defendant Receiver is practically nil. No circumstances are shown which would make it at all probable that Chote Lal was the real purchaser and that the property had been obtained fictitiously in the name of the plaintiff. For instance it is not shown that in the year 1914 Chhote Lal had any motive to enter into a benami transaction, or that he was contemplating the starting of any business and it was with a view to cheat the future creditors that the property was purchased in the name of his wife. In fact it was many years after the sale that he entered into the partnership business which failed. The oral evidence produced by the defendant consists of three persons, Gur Dayal, Kanhaiya Lal and Jhabu Lal, whose statements are mainly to the effect that Chote Lal was in a position to advance Rs. 1,000 towards the acquisition of this house. They also tried to prove that Chote Lal, after the sale-deed was executed, made some statements alleging himself to be the real owner. Such a statement even, if true, is of no value against the plaintiff. Gur Dayal is a general attorney of one of the petitioning creditors. The sale-deed was not executed in his presence nor is he able to say where the purchase-money came from. Kanhaiya Lal is himself a creditor. Jhabu Lal is a general attorney of another creditor. In the presence of neither of these the sale transaction took place. In my opinion, therefore, the evidence adduced by the defendant is wholly insufficient to overweigh that adduced by the plaintiff. The documentary evidence is entirely in favour of the plaintiff and there are no circumstances which in any way throw any suspicion on the transaction. The burden which lay on the plaintiff of establishing a prima facie case was sufficiently discharged by her evidence and no rebutting evidence worth the name has been adduced on behalf of the defendant. In this view of the matter the finding of the learned Judge must be overruled. I would, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below and decree the plaintiff's suit with costs.

Lindsay, J.—I agree with my learned colleague that this appeal should be allowed. There are no merits in the case of the respondent. I wish, however, to say a few words regarding the legal points which have been raised in the case. The questions which arise for decision are simple questions of the interpretation of Act V of 1920 and it does not appear to me necessary to resort to any previous decision or authority for the purpose of construing the relevant sections

So far as section 68 is concerned it cannot, in my opinion, be maintained on the language of that section that a person who is aggrieved by any act of a Receiver is under an obligation to apply to the Court for relief. What the section says is that such a person "may apply" to the Court, and it is further provided that if he exercises his option of applying to the Court he must make an application within 21 days from the date of the act complained of. On the face of it the language of the section is permissive, not mandatory. The person aggrieved has the choice either of applying to the Court or of seeking his ordinary remedy under the civil law.

It is argued that because of the provisions of section 4 of Act V of 1920, whereby jurisdiction has been conferred upon Insolvency Courts to determine questions of title arising in insolvency cases, it must necessarily follow that any person who has a question of title to raise must apply to the Insolvency Court; in other words it must be assumed from the provisions of section 4 that because these powers of deciding questions of title have been conferred upon Insolvency Courts, therefore, the Insolvency Court has exclusive jurisdiction. That appears to me to be a deduction which cannot be made from the language of section 4. All that the section intended to provide was that if a question involving title is raised before an Insolvency Court, then the Insolvency Court is to be deemed to have power to decide that question of title. I must not be taken to subscribe to the view that has been expressed by my learned colleague regarding what follows if an aggrieved person does elect to make an application to the Insolvency Court. I am not prepared to take the view that a decision under sub-section 2 of section 4 would be binding upon a stranger, like the plaintiff in the present case, who, in my opinion, is not making any claim against the debtor or the debtor's estate. What the plaintiff in the present suit is saying is that the property about which the dispute exists does not belong to the debtor's estate and never did belong to it, and so I cannot see how it can be said that she in the present proceedings is claiming against the debtor or his estate. That question, however, does not arise for decision and these observations are consequently obiter. I have only made them in order that I may not be supposed to hold the opinion that a decision under sub-section 2 is binding upon all parties including parties who are entire strangers to the insolvency proceedings.

It being settled, therefore, that the plaintiff in the present case had the ordinary civil remedy which was open under the law, the further question arises why she would be bound in any way to solicit the sanction of the Insolvency Court before she brought the suit against the Official Receiver. There is no statutory provision for such sanction being asked or given, and on principle I fail to see why any such authority is required. The Official Receiver may be an officer of the Court; but no special sanctity attaches to his office when he is brought in contact with a person who is an entire stranger to the proceedings in the Insolvency Court. I can well understand the position that so far as the insolvency proceedings are concerned the Receiver or Official Receiver stands in a peculiar relation to all parties who are interested in the proceedings, that is to say, the insolvent himself or the creditors or other persons, who are seeking satisfaction out of his estate. But he has no particular status as against parties who are entire strangers to the proceedings in the Insolvency Court, and it under colour of his office as Receiver or Official Receiver he commits an act of trespass, it is difficult to understand on what principle the person against whom the trespass is committed is under any obligation to ask permission of the Insolvency Court to bring an action against the Receiver. The remedy of the person complaining is the ordinary remedy at law and no question, therefore, of any sanction arises. It may, of course, be that in cases where the defendant has an official status notice of the suit must be given to him as required by the Civil Procedure Code. In the present case I understand that such notice was necessary and was actually given.

It is admitted, as I have said, that there is no statutory authority for the proposition that a person who is suing a Receiver or Official Receiver appointed under the Insolvency Act has to obtain the permission of the Insolvency Court. There have been, no doubt, numerous cases in which it has been laid down that proceedings against a Receiver should not be taken without the leave of the Court. Where a Receiver has been appointed in the course of a suit it seems reasonable enough that all parties to that suit should be bound by the order appointing him and consequently, being subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, should not be allowed to question the acts of a Receiver without the Court's permission. But there is, in my opinion, no authority for the proposition that, where in a suit a Receiver has been appointed, no person who is a stranger to the suit can question an act of the Receiver without the sanction of the Court. That seems to be an absolutely untenable proposition and opposed to all principle. In the present case I am satisfied (1) that the plaintiff was under no obligation to seek any relief in the Insolvency Court; (2) that she had the ordinary remedy under the civil law against the Official Receiver; and (3) that for the purpose of maintaining the suit she was under no obligation to seek any sanction from the Insolvency Court.

By the Court—The order of the Court is that the appeal is allowed, the decree of the Court below is set aside and the plaintiff's suit is decreed with costs in both Courts including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CHIEF COURT OF LOWER BURMA.

July 6, 1922.

Present:—Lord Buckmaster and Lord Parmoor.

MA THAN THAN—APPELLANT

versus

MA PWA THAN—RESPONDENT.

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Adoption—Publicity and notoriety—Ceremony, whether required—Practice—Witness, credibility of—Witness believed by Trial Court—Appellate Court, position of.

There is no special ceremony in Burmese adoption but the adoption must be a matter of publicity and notoriety. Where an alleged adopted daughter has lived continuously in the house of her alleged adoptive father from her babyhood for twelve or thirteen years and the latter is entered in the register of the school in which she studied as her parent and has paid for her fees and clothing, it is strong evidence of the publicity and notoriety of the adoption. [p. 65, col. 1.]

Where a Judge, who has seen a witness, and has heard his evidence, comes to the conclusion that the witness is credible, that is to say, a witness who to the best of his recollection intends to tell the truth, it requires circumstances of exceptional character to justify a Court of Appeal in coming to a different conclusion. It is not a question of the weight of evidence but of the attitude and trustworthiness of the witness, and of the effect of his whole demeanour in the witness box. [p. 65, col. 2.]

Appeal from the judgment and decree of the Chief Court of Lower Burma reversing the judgment and decree of Mr. Justice Robinson of the same Court.

MA THAN THAN v. MA PWA THAN.

Messrs. A. M. Dunne and E. B. Raikes, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Montgomery and Dube, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Parmoor.—The question involved in this appeal is whether the appellant is the keittima adopted daughter of Ko Po Kyaw and Ma Nyun. Ko Po Kyaw died at Edward Street in Rangoon, on the 27th October 1916, leaving considerable property, worth from Rs. 1,00,000 to Rs. 1,50,000. Ma Nyun was the first wife of Ko Po Kyaw, The appellant claims that she was adopted as keittima daughter in or about 1893, after the deceased and his first wife had been married 16 years without children. The respondent was the fifth of the six wives of the deceased. She was married to the deceased about 1906, was divorced from him about six months later, but resumed living with him after the death of his sixth wife, and was living with him at the time of his death. The appellant was born in 1892, being the daughter of Ma Gyoke, who was a cousin of Ko Po Kyaw and married to Ko Maung Gale. In the First Court the Judge, Mr. Justice Robinson, gave judgment in favour of the appellant, but this judgment was set aside in the Court of Appeal.

At the trial of the action, there was a considerable conflict of evidence between the witnesses, called respectively on behalf of the appellant and respondent. Mr. Justice Robinson held that implicit trust might be placed in the evidence of Maung So Naing, who had joined Ko Po Kyaw in business many years ago, and was the trusted manager of the business. He lived in Ko Po Kyaw's house, and was treated like a brother. There is no doubt of the importance of the evidence of Maung So Niang, but in the Court of Appeal his evidence was treated as unreliable, and the Chief Justice regrets that he cannot agree with the learned Judge's opinion of this man's impartiality. Before further considering the weight that should be given to the evidence of Maung So Niang, it will be well to state shortly certain facts which are either not disputed, or which in the opinion of their Lordships, have been clearly established.

Ko Po Kyaw and Ma Nyun took the appellant, when she was a child, aged about one year, away from her parents, and she lived in the house of Ko Po Kyaw in Edward Street for the next thirteen or fourteen years. She was taken to Ko Po Kyaw's house with the consent of the natural parents, and Ma Gyoke, the natural mother, states that she was taken to be adopted by Ko Po Kyaw and Ma Nyun; and this statement which alone might be of little value, is in accord with the subsequent sequence of events. From the time that the appellant was taken to the house of Ko Po Kyaw she appears to have been brought up publicly as his daughter, and to have lived openly and continuously under his protection. Their Lordships attach much importance to the evidence of Maung Po Lun, who kept a school in Rangoon, and who entered the appellant's name in the School Register for the month of March 1899, according to the regulations prescribed for the students' name in native schools. The entry in the register was produced, and in the column in which the name and occupation of parent or guardian is entered, the name entered is:—

"Maung Ba Kyaw.
Trader,
Edwards, Street."

In the first place, it is clear that the name entered in the register is not the name of the natural parents, and secondly, their Lordships see no reason for doubting that the name actually entered was that of Ko Po Kyaw, although some doubt is thrown on this in the judgment in the Court of Appeal. Evidence was further given that the school fees were paid by Ko Po Kyaw during the time that the appellant remained at school. A further exhibit from the school register was produced containing the entry of the appellant's sister, Ma Than Kin, and in this case name entered as parent is that of the natural father Mg. Mg. Gale. After the appellant had left school she continued to sleep in Ko Po Kyaw's house, until she was about fourteen years of age, after which she slept in the house of her natural mother Ma Gyoke. The reason given for this change is that, at this time, Ko Po Kyaw brought Ma Pwa Gya as a wife from Mandalay, and that, as she often went up to Mandalay, there was no female companion for the appellant at Edwards Street. The appellant did not cease to visit Ko Po Kyaw's house frequently, and it is not suggested that, if she had become his adopted daughter, there was any action which denoted repudiation of her adoption, even if such repudiation is possible, a matter not before their Lordships, and on which their Lordships give no opinion.

The facts stated above point directly to the conclusion that Ko Po Kyaw did adopt the appellant as his keittima daughter. There is no special ceremony in Burmese adoption, but the adoption must be a matter of publicity and notoriety. It is strong evidence of such publicity and notoriety that the appellant lived continuously in the house of Ko Po Kyaw from her babyhood for twelve or thirteen years, and that he was entered on the register of the school as her parent, and paid the school fees. Moreover, there is evidence that the appellant was given jewelry by Ko Po Kyaw to wear, and that Ko Po Kyaw also paid for her clothes. It is, however, suggested that this evidence is consistent with Ko Po Kyaw taking over the charge of the daughter of his relative, Ma Gyoke, and bringing her up in his house, as an assistance to his relative, but without the intention of adopting her as his keittima daughter. It is in reference to this suggestion that it becomes necessary to consider shortly the more important evidence adduced at the hearing. Undoubtedly the most important witness is Maung So Niang. Mr. Justice Robinson, who saw Maung So Niang and heard his evidence, held that he was a credible witness, that is to say, a witness whose evidence could be trusted, and who intended, within the best of his recollection, to tell the truth.

It may well be that although a witness is credible, yet that his recollection of a particular incident is not of such a character as to carry much weight, but in this instance, if Maung So Niang is to be accepted as a credible witness it is hardly possible to reject the evidence which he gives as to the adoption of the appellant. He states that he was present at the time of adoption, together with the members of the household of Ko Po Kyaw and that a Kimmoodat ceremony was pre ormed, and that the Phoongyis were invited and fed. If this evidence has been invented for the purpose of the case, Maung So Niang could not be regarded as, in any sense, a credible witness: and the Court of Appeal in rejecting it have directly differed from Mr. Justice Robinson on the question of credibility. In the Court of Appeal certain inconsistencies in the evidence of Maung So Niang were referred to in support of the view that he was not a credible witness, and he was further criticised for his conduct in withholding the key of the safe after the death of Ko Po Kyaw, but it appears to their Lordships that, in this respect, he acted rightly, and in accord with the responsibilities which he came under at the death of Ko Po Kyaw. Where the Judge, who has seen a witness, and has heard his evidence, comes to the conclusion that the witness is credible, that is to say, a witness who to the best of his recollection intends to tell the truth, it requires circumstances of exceptional character to justify a Court of Appeal in coming to a different conclusion. It is not a question of the weight of evidence but of the attitude and trustworthiness of the witness and of the effect of his whole demeanour in the witness-box. In the opinion of their Lordships there are no such exceptional circumstances in the present case, and accepting Maung So Niang as a credible witness, it is clear that the appellant lived in the house of Ko Po Kyaw as his adopted daughter, and was publicly recognised by him as his adopted daughter. Evidence was given on behalf of the respondent by three near relatives of Ma Nyun and by U. Maung Gyi, a Pagoda Trustee, and rice miller, who state that they knew nothing of the adoption of the appellant by Ko Po Kyaw, but if the evidence of Maung So Niang is believed this negative evidence has little value.

AMRIT BIBI v. MUSTAFA HUSAIN.

There is a further incident in the case to be considered. It is said that the dispute was referred by the parties to the arbitration of four Lugys, or elders, each party nominating two elders and that on the 10th November 1916, the parties executed an agreement of reference. There is a question as to what were the matters in dispute to which the deed of agreement referred, but on the same day the Lugys made and delivered what purported to be an award, finding that, under the Buddhist Dhammathats the keittiama daughter, Ma Than Than, is entitled to a fourth share of the estate of Ko Po Kyaw, or Rs. 30,000, and that in accordance with this award the defendant, Ma Pwa Thit, shall, at the time of registration, in the Registration Office at Rangoon, pay the said sum in full into the hands of the keittima daughter, Ma Than Than. On the following day a sum of Rs. 30,000 was paid to the appellant by the respondent and a deed of release was executed by the parties in the presence of witnesses. What is the effect of his award and release? Mr. Justice Robinson held that the arbitrators acted collusively with the respondent, and that, by reason of such collusion, the award was invalid. It was not thought necessary to give any decision on this point in the Court of Appeal. but, in the opinion of their Lordships, the evidence is amply sufficient to maintain the finding of Mr. Justice Robinson. The result is that the award must be regarded as invalid. The finding in the award, that the appellant was the keittiama daughter of Ko Po Kyaw is not a finding on which the appellant can rely, and the payment of Rs. 30,000 under the terms of the award cannot be regarded as a valid release of the claims of the appellant against the estate of Ko Po Kyaw. This sum is part of the terms of an award based on the collusive action of the arbitrators, and such an award is necessarily wholly invalid owing to their misconduct. Their Lordships are unable to attach importance to the subsequent inconsistent evidence given by the Lugys at the trial, and agree with Mr. Justice Robinson that the release fails by reason of the decision that the award itself is vitiated by the collusive misconduct of the arbitrators.

In the result their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be set aside with costs, and the judgment of Mr. Justice Robinson restored. In the Court of Appeal the appellant is entitled to costs, and in addition to the ordinary costs, special advocate's fees of ten gold mohurs a day for each day's hearing after the first. The respondent will pay the costs of the appeal.

N. H. Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. Sanderson and Orr Dignams.

Solicitors for the Respondent:—Messrs. Waterhouse & Co.

— · —

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 50 OF 1921.

July 3, 1923.

Present:—Sir P. C. Banerji, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Piggott.

Musammat AMRITBIBI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MUSTAFA HUSAIN—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Shia School—Will in favour of heir, validity of.

The Will of a Muhammadan governed by the Shia Law is valid to the extent of one-third of the property even without the consent of the heirs; if it is a Will of the entire property in favour of an heir, it would not be valid even to the extent of one-third unless the other heirs assent to it. [p. 69, col. 1.]

Fahmida Khanum v. Jafri Khanum, 30 A. 153; 5 A. L. J. 169; A. W. N. (1908) 55, followed.

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Allahabad, dated the 14th of January 1921.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Haider Mehdi, Raza Ali, A. Sanyal and Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This and the connected Appeal No. 178 of 1921 arise out of a suit instituted by the plaintiff-respondent for possession of immoveable as well as moveable properties of various descriptions. The bulk of this property is alleged to have belonged to one Abid Husain, who died in the year 1909. He left surviving him his widow, Musammat Amrit Bibi, the first defendant, a grand-daughter Musammat Umme Habiba (the daughter of a deceased daughter) and three grandsons of one of his sisters. These grandsons are the defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4.

Abid Husain is said to have made a Will in the year 1907 when he was going to Karbala. Musammat Umme Habiba died in 1919. The plaintiff is her husband and he claims a share in the property which, according to him passed to Umme Habiba. If Abid Husain did not make a Will 14 annas of his property would go under the Shia Law, to which sect he belonged, to Musammat Umme Habiba and 2 annas to Musammat Amrit Bibi. Accordingly it is stated that Musammat Umme Habiba inherited 14 annas of the property, and the plaintiff as her husband is entitled to half of the aforesaid 14 annas, that is, to 7 annas out of 16 annas. The plaintiff denies the alleged Will, and he also claims a declaration that the Will was never made, and that if it was made it was invalid and could not have any operation under the Muhammadan Law.

The property claimed was of five descriptions. There was some zemindari property which is specified in Schedule A annexed to the plaint. There was some house property mentioned in Schedule B. Schedule C specifies certain deposits in the Allahabad Bank and also in the Post Office Savings Bank. In Schedule D is specified certain jewellery and other moveable property which is alleged to have belonged to Umme Habiba. And Schedule E is property which the plaintiff alleges belonged to him, being cricket gear and articles of a similar nature. Out of the property mentioned in Schedule D the plaintiff claims an eight annas share.

The Court below has dismissed the claim in regard to the property mentioned in Schedules D and E, and has granted the plaintiff a decree for the share claimed by him out of other properties.

Appeal No. 500 of 1921 has been preferred by Musammat Amrit Bibi; and the connected Appeal No. 173 of 1921 has been preferred by defendants Nos. 2, 3, and 4. The plaintiff has filed cross-objections in respect of the portion of the claim which has been dismissed by the Court below.

We shall deal now with each description of property claimed by the plaintiff. First of all as to the zemindari property Musammat. Amrit Bibi's defence was that her dower amounted to Rs. 51,000 and that she was in possession of the property in lieu of her dower. The Court below has found that the dower of the lady did not exceed Rs. 5,000 and that this Rs. 5,000 has already been realised by her out of the usufruct of the property, which she has been enjoying since the death of her husband. The evidence as to the amount of the dower being in excess of Rs. 5,000 is very meagre. After the death of her husband an application was made by her for Probate of the Will of her husband, to which we have referred above. With the application for Probate she filed an inventory and an affidavit, and in the affidavit she stated the amount of her dower to be Rs. 5,000. No doubt she denies in the present suit that she had any knowledge of the contents of the affidavit or of the application. But it has been clearly proved that she did put her thumb impression to the affidavit, and that she swore it before an Honorary Magistrate, and was identified by a Mukhtear who has given evidence in the case. There is no reason to disbelieve the evidence of this Mukhtear and the Court below has believed him. It is clear that the lady admitted her dower to be Rs. 5,000; and that being so, the usufruct of the property was more than sufficient to wipe off the amount of her dower.

Her contention in regard to the house mentioned in list B is that it is her own property, and that the house which belonged to Abid Husain was appropriated by the East Indian Railway when the Railway line was first constructed. There is no evidence to show that the house of Abid Husain was appropriated by the Railway; on the contrary in the schedule of property, to which we have referred, she stated that the house belonged to Abid Husain. Furthermore there is the evidence of her own witnesses that the house was re-constructed by Abid Husain. So that there can be no doubt that the house did belong to Abid Husain and not to the defendant Amrit Bibi.

As regards the property mentioned in Schedule C, that property consists of a deposit of Rs. 7,000 and odd in the Allahabad Bank, and of a further deposit of Rs. 1,100 in the Post Office Savings Bank. As regards the amount deposited in the Allahbad Bank, it has been clearly proved that Musammat Amrit Bibi went to the Bank in an ekka, affixed her thumb impression to the receipt granted to the Bank for the amount payable under the deposit receipts, one of which originally stood in the name of Abid Husain alone, and the other jointly in her name and in the name of Abid Husain, and she directed the Bank clerks to make over the amount to the plaintiff who accompanied her to the Bank and identified her before the Bank Officials. The Bank Officials proved that the money was actually handed over to the plaintiff. It is however stated on behalf of Musammat Amrit Bibi that the plaintiff himself appropriated the Rs. 7,000 and odd realised from the Bank and never paid it over to her; against the statement of Musammat Amrit Bibi is the statement of the plaintiff himself in which he swears that he handed over the notes received from the Bank to Amrit Bibi and that she locked them up in her iron safe subsequently. It is most unlikely that the plaintiff was allowed to take away this large sum of Rs. 7,000 especially as at the time when the money was withdrawn the plaintiff was only a student in the College, and was quite a young man. On the other hand it is more probable that the lady herself kept the money in her iron safe. It is true there is no evidence to show what was the necessity for withdrawing the money from the Bank but the fact remains that the money was withdrawn and handed over by the Bank Officials to the plaintiff and afterwards remained in the custody of Amrit Bibi. This is further shown by the fact that one of the currency notes for Rs. 500 received from the Bank was lent by her to one Mital Prasad upon a promissory-note. Mital Prasad has given evidence, and in his account-book is mentioned the number of the note which he had received. The promissory-note was in favour of Musammat Amrit Bibi and Mital Prasad has sworn that he got the money, namely the currency note for Rs. 500 from Musammat Amrit Bibi's karinda. He has re-paid the money, and he is in possesion of the promissory note. It is suggested that the plaintiff returned the promissory-note to him, and he has obtained a discharge in order that he might give evidence in favour of the plaintiff to the prejudice of the defendant. There is no valid reason for accepting this suggestion. The promissory-note has been partially torn up and handed over to him. He deposed that he had in all probability made an entry of the re-payment in his account-book. That account book of course was not produced but we have the sworn statement and we have the other circumstance to which we have referred. The Court below has preferred to believe the statement of the plaintiff in this respect and we see no reason to come to a different conclusion.

As regards the amount of one of the fixed deposit receipts which stood in the names of Abid Husain and his wife Musammat Amrit Bibi, it was urged that all of that amount must be deemed to have belonged to Musammat Amrit Bibi herself. There is nothing to justify this contention: on the contrary in the written statement she admitted that the moneys mentioned in list C belonged to Abid Husain.

As for the Rs. 1,100 in deposit in the Post Office Savings Bank, it was said in the plaint that Amrit Bibi had witdrawn that amount. There is no evidence that she did so but the fact that the money was in deposit was admitted by her in her written statement, and if it is still in the Bank and has not been realised by her. She will be entitled to widhdraw the whole of it from the Savings Bank, and the passing of a decree against her for recovery of the plaintiff's share of the amount of that deposit will in no respect prejudice her in this suit. We therefore see no reason to disturb the decree of the Court below as regards deposit of Rs. 1,100 in the Post Office Savings Bank.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmad on behalf of Musammat Amrit Bibi raised a contention that the claim in regard to the deposits must be held to be time-barred inasmuch as the money was withdrawn in 1915 and Musammat Umme Habiba was alive till 1919 and never claimed it. In the first place this contention was never put forward in the Court below. In the next place it is manifest from the evidence that the two ladies Amrit Bibi and Umma Habiba lived jointly and on most amicable terms. The possession of the money by Amrit Bibi was equivalent to possession by Musammat Umme Habiba. There was no conflict of interest between them and there was no occasion for her to demand this money from Musammat Amrit Bibi. In fact Musammat Umme Habiba had never been excluded from the ownership of this money and in her lifetime her right had never been denied by Amrit Bibi. As regards this part of the claim therefore the appeal has in our opinion no force.

As regards the cross-objections filed on behalf of the plaintiff, the evidence is not satisfactory, and it has not been shown to our satisfaction that the finding of the Court below is erroneous.

The result, therefore, is that the Appeal No. 50 of 1921 as well as the cross-objections filed in that appeal must fail.

As regards Appeal No. 178 of 1921, it relates to the question of the Will alleged to have been made by Abid Husain in 1907. The fact of the Will is no longer denied and it must be taken for the purposes of this case that as a matter of fact the Will was executed by Abid Husain. By that Will he provided that Musammat Amrit Bibi should be in possession of the whole of the estate for her life time, and that after her death Musammat Umme Habiba would be the owner (malik) of the property; that after her, her male issue and, failing male issue, female issue would get the property, and failing these the defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4, the grandsons of the sister of Abid Husain, would get it. Under the Shia Law the Will would be valid to the extent of one-third even without the consent of the heirs; if it was a Will of the entire property in favour of an heir it would not be valid unless the other heirs assented to it. The point was considered by this Court in the case of Fahmida Khanum v. Jafri Khanum (1). In that case it was held that if a bequest was made of one-third only it would be valid; but if the bequest was of the entire property it would not be valid even as regards one-third unless it was assented to after the death of the testator by the other heirs. In the present case the bequest was clearly one of the entire property. It is true that a life-estate was given to Musammat Amrit Bibi but it was a life-estate in the whole of the property. Where as if no Will had been made she would have only got a 2 anna share and the granddaughter of the testator would have got 14 annas. The effect of the Will was to deprive the granddaughter of the testator of the 14 annas share which she would have at once inherited and to postpone her right to the fourteen annas to the death of Amrit Bibi. This was an exclusion of the granddaughter from a very considerable share of the property; and therefore the Will in the present case must be deemed to be a Will of the entire property to the exclusion of one of the heirs. Unless therefore Musammat Umme Habiba can be held to have assented to the Will it would not be valid even as regards one-third. It is said that the assent to the Will was given on her behalf by her father Jawad Husain. In the first place there is nothing to show that Jawad Husain ever assented to this Will. It is true that as Mukhtear of Amrit Bibi he got the Will registered and subsequently proceedings were taken for obtaining Probate of the Will; but he does not seem to have acted in his capacity as guardian of the minors and in those proceedings to have given his assent to the Will, either expressly or impliedly. Musammat Umme Habiba was herself a minor about ten or twelve years of age, at the time of the death of Abid Husain. She lived till she was about 22 years of age. But during this period she does not appear to have given her consent to the Will, or to have in any other manner acquiesced in the Will. There is nothing to show that she had any knowledge of the Will or that she had ever seen it or heard of its contents. Two witnesses were no doubt examined who stated that the lady had said that she had no objection to her grandfather's Will. The lower Court has disbelieved these witnesses and we are not in a position to say that the conclusion of the Court below in that respect was erroneous. We think it very unlikely that Umme Habiba stated in the presence of these witnesses that she had no objection to the Will and that she assented to it.

(1) 30 A. 153; 5 A. L. J. 169; A. W. N. (1908) 55.

The appeal filed on behalf of the defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4, namely Appeal No. 178 of 1921, also fails.

The result is that we dismiss both the appeals and the cross-objections with costs which in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Z. K.

Appeals and Cross-objections dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL NO. 67 OF 1923.

September 17, 1923.

Present:—Sir Walter Salis Schwabe, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

Hajee SHAKOOR GANI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

T. S. SABAPATHY PILLAI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Tariff Act (VIII of 1894), as amended by Act IV of 1916, s. 10—Duty payable how ascertained—Benefit of reduction in tariff value—Seller and buyer—Excess payment under protest, if voluntary.

The plaintiff entered into a contract in December 1922 for the purchase by him from defendant of certain Java sugar to arrive by a named ship about the end of the year at Rs. 20 a cwt., "ex godown." At the time of the contract the duty was payable on sugar at 25 per cent. on the "tariff value," which was fixed annually by notification by the Governor-General and was fixed the previous year at Rs. 26-4-0. The method adopted in fixing was to take on the date fixed, the average of the market prices ruling during the previous 12 months ending in September, the practice being to bring the new tariff valuation into operation from the beginning of January. In this case, when the goods arrived, the tariff valuation had been reduced from Rs. 26-4-0 to Rs. 16-4-0, the rate of duty remaining the same at 25 per cent. The amount of duty payable thus became less but on the defendant seller refusing the plaintiff buyer the benefit of the reduction, the plaintiff buyer had to pay the full contract amount and thereafter sued to recover back the excess amount paid;

Held, (1) that the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of section 10 of the Tariff Act; and

(2) that the excess amount having been paid to defendant under duress was legally recoverable.

The word 'duty' in section 10 of the Tariff Act refers to the amount payable and is arrived at by taking into account the tariff value and the rate of duty and in the latter part of the section what can be recovered is the "duty" paid which cannot be arrived at without taking into account the tariff value. [p. 72, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree and judgment, dated the 14th August 1923, of Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court in Civil Suit No. 109 of 1923.

Messrs. A. Krishnaswami Iyer and V. Tyagaraja Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. V. V. Srinivasa Iyengar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe, C. J.—This case, which is a test case, raises an interesting question as to the true meaning of section 10 of the Tariffs Act now in force, Act VIII of 1894 as amended by Act IV of 1916.

The facts of the case are quite simple. The plaintiff entered into a contract in December 1922 for the purchase by him from the defendant of certain Java sugar to arrive by a named ship due somewhat about the end of the year at a price working out at about Rs. 20 a cwt. "ex godown." At the time of the contract, duty was payable on sugar at 25 per cent. on what is known as the "tariff value." This tariff value is fixed annually in practice, though by this Statute, section 3 (2) "the Governor-General in Council may, by notification fix, for the purpose of levying duties, the tariff values of any articles enumerated in the Schedule,' and no time is fixed for the issuing of such notifications. In this case the tariff value had in fact, been fixed about a year previously at Rs. 26-4-0, and it is accepted in this case that the method used by the Governor-General in Council in fixing tariff values is to take at the date when they are fixed the average of the market price ruling during the previous twelve months ending in September and the practice being to bring the new tariff valuation into operation from the beginning of January. In this case, when the goods arrived there had been a notification of an alteration of the tariff valuation of sugar by reducing it from Rs. 26-4-0 to Rs. 16-4-0, the rate of duty payable remaining the same at 25 per cent. The effect of this was that the actual duty paid in respect of these goods was Rs. 2-8-0 per cwt. less than it would have been if the old tariff value had remained in force. As the sale was ex godown the result, of course, was that the seller paid so much less duty, while the buyer would have to pay to the seller a fixed price which included duty, and the seller would be, if his contention referred to hereafter is right, Rs. 2-8-0 per cwt. better off than he would have been if the delivery had taken place before the alteration of the tariff value. The Tariff Act makes provision by section 10, the object of which is to protect parties to contracts for future delivery of goods, from having to pay more duty than, in fact, is current at the time of delivery, or being able to escape the payment of such duty. The principle, no doubt, is that merchants dealing in commodities may be quite willing to take the risk of a rise and fall in the market price of the commodity between the contract date and delivery date, as being a matter which is their business, but merchants are not, as a rule, prepared to take the risk of the sudden alteration of prices of the commodities in which they deal by reason of the Act of the Legislature in imposing increasing, reducing or remitting the duties payable in respect of those commodities.

Section 10 runs, "In the event of any duty of customs or exciseor any article being imposed, increased, decreased or remitted after the making of any contract for the sale of such article without stipulation as to the payment of duty, where duty was not chargeable at the time of the making of the contract, or for the sale of such article duty-paid where duty was chargeable at that time,—(a) if such imposition or increase so takes effect that the duty or increased duty, as the case may be, is paid, the seller may add so much to the contract price as will be equivalent to the duty or increase of duty, and (b) if such decrease or remission so takes effect that the decreased duty only or no duty, as the case may be, is paid, the purchaser may deduct so much from the contract price as will be equivalent to the decrease of duty or remitted duty." It is argued on behalf of the seller that the word "duty' in the first part of the section refers to 'rate of duty" and rate of duty only and that for the purpose of seeing whether that section applies or not, we are not entitled to look at an alteration of the tariff value. It is argued that tariff value is merely a convenient way of arriving at the market value, that, where ad valorem duty is imposed, it has to be paid on market value, and that the buyer or the seller, as the case may be, takes the risk of the rise or fall in the tariff value in the same way as he takes the risk of the rise and fall of market value in cases where there is no tariff value. I confess that, at first sight, I was much impressed with the argument in favour of that construction but on a close examination of the Statute and particularly looking at the history of this section I have come to the conclusion that the contention is not right. In the Tariff Act of 1894, before amendment, this clause i. e., section 10 was contained and there was power then, under section 22 of the Sea Customs Act which was then in operation, for the Governor-General in Council from time to time by notification to fix, for the purpose of levying tariff duty, the value of goods, and in Schedule II to the Act one finds that, in the case of many articles, including sugar, there was a tariff valuation in the second column and a rate of duty in the third column; so that at that time, in order to ascertain the duty payable, one had to take the tariff valuation fixed by the Statute itself and take the rate per cent. on that tariff valuation also so fixed; and, indeed, that was the way of ascertaining the duty payable in most of the dutiable goods in the Schedule to that Act. It seems to me that the duty payable depends just as much on tariff valuation as on the rate of duty. The tariff valuation is not the real value; in fact, it is agreed that it is based on a value of an entirely different period, namely, the preceding year, and the Legislature has chosen to say, in effect, that the duty payable shall be, e. g., 5 per cent. per. cwt., a cwt. being taken to be of the hypothetical value, whatever the real value may be, of Rs. 10. The rate of duty payable per cwt. is to be ascertained and it could only be ascertained by working out that sum, and it seems to me that, if the Governor-General in Council makes an alteration of the tariff valuation, he is acting with the power of Legislature delegated to him for this purpose and the position is exactly the same as if a new Statute or a new schedule was brought in by the Legislature to alter the tariff valuation fixed in the Original Schedule by increasing or decreasing it: and, in such a case, I think it would be very difficult to argue that there has not been an increase or decrease, as the case may be, in the duty payable. The Act of 1916 brought into the Tariff Act the power of the Governor-General in Council to fix the tariff values and at the same time altered the form of the schedule by substituting for tariff value merely a unit, or the words "ad valorem." As far as sugar was concerned, it became 25 per cent. ad valorem; but, by reason of the amendment to section 3 referred to above, that meant, as there was a tariff value in existence, the same thing, namely, 25 per cent. of the tariff value. I can find no reason for supposing that it was the intention of the Legislature in any way to alter the rights of contracting parties under section 10 and I think they remain as before. In my view the word "duty" in that section must refer to the amount payable and arrived at by taking into account (a) the tariff value and (b) the rate of duty. It is to be observed that in the latter part of that section what can be recovered is the duty paid and that cannot be arrived at without taking into account the tariff value. This anomaly does remain that after the making of a contract, in cases where there is no tariff value and there is a fluctuation in the market price, the duty in fact that is payable will be more or less according as the market price has risen or fallen, and on a contract ex godown, such as this, the effect would be that, on a fall in the market price, the seller, if he can show that the market price has fallen, would get the benefit for himself really at the expense of his purchaser. But that results from the fact that the Legislature in section 10 is only contemplating things that follow from the Acts of Government. The words used are "being imposed, increased, decreased or remitted," showing quite clearly that it considered only the imposition or alteration of duty by Government, leaving it to the parties in cases where duty is payable on real market value, to make their own arrangements by their contracts. It is not uninteresting to observe that section 10 of the Tariff Act is based on section 20 of the English Customs Consolidation Act of 1876, the existing version of which is to be found in the Finance Act 1901, section 10. It was perhaps not a very happy idea in drafting the Indian Statute to take the section bodily from the English Act, when the method of levying customs in England and in India is totally dissimilar; for in England there is no duty payable on tariff value, or, indeed, on any value, real or otherwise. The duties, as far as I know, are all imposed there by weight or measure, and the sort of question that has arisen in this case and as far as I know has arisen for the first time in this case, could not have arisen in England. Section 10 might, in my judgment, well have been made much clearer, so that this question could not have arisen. Giving the best consideration I can to the words themselves, I have come to the conclusion that the plaintiff in this case is right.

A second point was taken, namely, that this was a voluntary payment and, therefore, cannot be recovered back. The learned Judge has found on the evidence before him, and there was ample evidence to support the finding, that the plaintiff had to pay the full contract amount, in order to get the goods, though he asked to be allowed to clear the goods on payment of an amount less than the contract price by reason of the alteration in the tarih valuation; but that the defendant had refused and insisted, as a condition of getting the goods, on his paying the full amount. On those facts, it is quite clear law that that amounts to money by duress. It is common in such cases and advisable to pay in terms under protest, in which case no question can arise. But the principle of law does not depend on the protest being made or not, that is merely evidence of the fact that an excess demand was made and that the plaintiff meant to retain his rights to claim back the excess. But the real question to consider is whether or not it was a voluntary payment, or whether it was a payment extorted by the other party using, no doubt, as he thought legitimately, his hold over the goods to make the plaintiff pay what the defendant considered it was his right to have, but it cannot be said under those circumstances, that the payment was a voluntary payment. That being so, as the defendant was wrong in his contention, as we hold in this case, he must re-pay to the plaintiff the amount claimed, that is to say, the amount of over-payment as money had and received to the use of the plaintiff.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Krishnan, J.—I entirely agree that this appeal fails. The judgment of the learned Trial Judge is right and it must be upheld on both the points that have been taken before us. As the learned Chief Justice has dealt with the questions fully in his judgment, I think it is unnecessary to add anything of my own in the case. I, therefore, content myself by saying that I agree to the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice.

V. N. V. Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1067 OF 1921.

June 28, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir Jwala Prasad, KT., and Mr. Justice Ross.

RANG LAL SAHU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Babu KALI SHANKAR SAHAI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 70—Tenure, sale of—Payment of rent-decrees by purchaser—Amount, whether can be recovered from tenant.

The purchaser of a tenure purchases the property with the incumbrance of rent due from the original tenant with respect to the tenure in question at the date of his purchase, the rent being the first charge on the property. He must be deemed to have knowledge of the prior incumbrances and the existence of an incumbrance must have affected the price which he offered at the auction-sale. The liability to pay the rent for a period previous to the purchase is, therefore, that of the purchaser, and in discharging the rent charges or in paying off rent-decrees, he simply discharges his own liability and not that of the original tenant, and has no right to recover the payments made by him from the original tenant. Sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act have no applicability to such a case. [p. 74, col. 2; p. 75, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal from a decision of the Judicial Commissioner, Chota Nagpur, dated the 11th January 1921, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Ranchi, dated the 10th November 1919.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and S. N. Palit, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. S. Prosad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Jwala Prasad, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit to recover Rs. 1,546-14-5 with interest at 24 per cent. per annum aggregating to Rs. 2,210-6-5.

The learned Subordinate Judge had decreed the suit. On appeal the learned Judicial Commissioner set aside the decision of the Subordinate Judge and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. Hence the plaintiff has come in second appeal.

The facts are admitted. Plaintiff Ranglal Sahu purchased the tenure which belonged to the defendant Kali Shanker Sahai in execution of a mortgage-decree on the 7th March 1916. Prior to this plaintiff's superior landlord, the Maharaja of Chota Nagpur, had obtained a decree for rent and cess against the original tenure-holder Kali Shankar Sahai for the years 1966-1969 (corresponding roughly to 1909-1912). That decree was dated the 19th September 1913. In execution of that decree the tenure was advertised for sale and the plaintiff Ranglal Sahu paid the dues under that decree, Rs. 824 odd, on the 17th March 1916 and thus saved the tenure from being sold in execution of the decree. The landlord had obtained another decree for arrears of rent for the years 1914 to part of 1916, that is, prior to the purchase of the plaintiff, against the original tenure-holder. The decree was put into execution and the tenure was attached. On the 8th September 1917, plaintiff Ranglal, however, filed a petition on the strength of his purchase under the mortgage-decree and got his tenure released from attachment. At that time Ranglal's name was mutated in place of the original tenant in the landlord's book. The landlord then sued Ranglal for arrears of rent for the same period, that is, 1914-1916, excepting the first year which was barred by limitation, and obtained a decree on contest on the 15th July 1918. In execution of this decree the tenure was advertised for sale, and Ranglal prevented the sale of the property by putting into Court the sum of Rs. 722-5-9, the amount due under the decree. On the 4th March 1919, plaintiff commenced the action out of which this appeal has arisen for recovery of the aforesaid two sums of Rs. 824 odd and Rs. 722-5-9, which he had paid in order to protect the property from sale. The said sums represent the arrears of rent due from the tenure when the original tenant Kali Shankar Sahai was in possession of it, that is, prior to the purchase of the tenure by plaintiff under the mortgage-decree.

The sole question for determination in this appeal is whether plaintiff can get himself re-imbursed of the aforesaid sums from the original tenant, Kali Shankar Sahai, the defendant in the present case.

Learned Counsel on behalf of the appellant has invoked the aid of sections 69 and 70 of the Indian Contract Act in support of his contention that the plaintiff is entitled to recoup the said sums from the defendant. The Court below has overruled this contention and has held that the provisions of the aforesaid sections do not apply to the present case. In this view the learned Judicial Commissioner is supported by the decisions in the cases of Srimati Moharanee Dasya v. Harendra Lal Roy (1), Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nundi v. Jamaher Kumari Bibi (2) and Peary Mohan Mukhopadhya v. Sreeram Chandra Bose (3). It is not disputed by Mr. Sen that the aforesaid authorities apply to the present case. The first two cases are on all fours with the present one. In the case of Srimati Moharani Dasya v. Harendra Lal Roy (1), as in the present case, the plaintiff had purchased the tenure in execution of his mortgage-decree and then paid the money due under the decree obtained by the landlord against the tenure-holder for arrears of rent for a period anterior to the confirmation of sale. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the money paid by him for satisfying the rent-decree. Similarly in the case of Peary Mohan Mukhopadhya v. Sreeram Chandra Bose (3), the plaintiff purchased a putni taluk in execution of a rent-decree and subsequently paid the decree for rent obtained by the landlord for a period anterior to that of the rent-decree in execution of which plaintiff had purchased the property. It was held in that case that the purchaser was not entitled to contribution from the original tenant against whom the rent-decree was obtained. These cases lay down that the purchaser of a tenure purchases the property with the incumbrance of rent due from the original tenant with respect to the tenure in question at the date of his purchase, the rent being the first charge. He must be deemed to have knowledge of the prior incumbrances and the existence of an incumbrance must have affected the price which he offered at the auction-sale. The case of Srimati Giribala Debia v. Srimati Ranee Mina Kumari (4), goes to the length of saying that the arrears of rent due in respect of the property sought to be sold is a

(1) 1 C. W. N. 458.
(2) 9 C. W. N. 670; 32 C. 643.
(3) 6 C. W. N. 794.
(4) 5 C. W. N. 497.

material fact which must be notified at the time of the sale of the property. The purchaser therefore purchases the property with the liability of the prior rent charges. In short, the trend of the view expressed in the case referred to above seems to be that the liability to pay the prior rents, due for a period prior to the purchase (as in the case of the plaintiff in the present case) is that of the purchaser and in discharging the rent charges or in paying the rent decrees, he simply discharges his own liability and not that of the original tenant. Therefore the purchaser is not entitled to recover the prior rent charges paid by him from the original tenant.

Mr. Sen virtually says that the aforesaid authorities were wrongly decided and in support of his contention, he refers to the following cases, Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy (5), Mahatha Harsankar Sahai v. Bandhu Sahu (6), Mohendra [Suchand Ghosal] v. Bhuban [Balaram Mardana] (7), Prosonno Kumar Basu v. Jamaluddin Mahomed (8) and Serafat Ali v. Issar Ali (9).

In Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy (5), the plaintiff obtained possession under the decree of the High Court, of a rent paying estate and he paid the rents and cesses in default of which payment the estate would have been sold. The High Court decree was afterwards reversed by the Privy Council. In 1885 the defendant obtained possession of the estate in execution of the High Court decree, and the plaintiff claimed the revenue and cesses paid by him while he was in possession of the property. Lord Macnaghten in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee observed:—"It seems to their Lordships to be common justice that when a proprietor in good faith pending litigation makes the necessary payments for the preservation of the estate in dispute, and the estate is afterwards adjudged to his opponent, he should be recouped what he has so paid by the person who ultimately benefits by the payment, if he has failed through no fault of his own to reimburse himself out of the rents." There can be no doubt that the plaintiff in that case had paid the revenue and cess believing the property to be his own and with a view to protect it from being sold for arrears of Government revenue. The payment was to save the estate from sale, and the defendant having ultimately been adjudged to be the rightful owner of the estate was therefore benfitted by the same. The plaintiff was interested in the payment because at the time when he made the payment he believed to be—and in fact he was under the decree of the High Court—the rightful owner of the property. The tenure in the present case has been lost for good to the defendant and the preservation of the tenure by payments of the rent-decrees in question benefitted not the defendant but the plaintiff who had, prior to the payments, acquired title in the property. Therefore the important element which is essential for the application of the principles of sections 69 and 70 of the Indian Contract Act and on the basis of which the plaintiff in the aforesaid Privy Council case was declared entitled to recover from the defendant the sums paid by him, is wanting in the present case. The case of Mohendra [Suchand Ghosal] v. Bhuban [Balaram Mardana] (6), was really case of a co-sharer having discharged the liabilities on the property, and he was therefore held entitled to recover the sums paid by him which benefited his co-sharers. In that case the entire tenure was sold in execution of rent-decrees obtained against only some of the co-sharer defendants. The plaintiff co-sharer who was not made a party in the rent-suit deposited under section 310 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with the approval of the Court, the entire sums due under the decrees and thus had the sale set aside. This was a case of contribution. The case of Prosonno Kumar Basu v. Jamaluddin Mahomed (8) is again one of a co-sharer; so also are Serafat Ali v. Issar Ali (9) and Sakal Singh v. Chanderdip Lal (10) cases of contribution among co-sharers.

(5) 21 C. 142; 20 I. A. 160; 17 Ind. Jur. 576; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 366; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 727 (P. C.).
(6) 22 Ind. Cas. 720.
(7) 6 Ind. Cas. 810; 38 C. 1; 14 C. W. N. 945; 12 C. L. J. 566.
(8) 15 Ind. Cas. 55; 18 C. W. N. 327.
(9) 42 Ind. Cas. 30; 45 C. 691; 27 C. L. J. 607; 22 C. W. N. 347.
(10) 49 Ind. Cas. 627.

RANG LAL SAHU v. KALI SHANKAR SAHAI.

In a case of contribution the principles of the very sections of the Indian Contract Act, namely, sections 43 68, 69, 70 and 72 would apply. The present case is not one of a co-sharer nor is it a suit for contribution.

The case of Mahatha Harsankar Sahai v. Bindhu Sahu (6) relied upon by the learned Counsel does not seem to support him so far as section 69 is concerned, for it was held that the claim of the purchaser to recover from the outgoing tenant the amounts under the prior rent decrees could not be supported by section 69 of the Act. Their Lordships, however, allowed the claim under section 70 of the Indian Contract Act. No reason has been given for this view, nor the cases referred to in the earlier part of this judgment, in which a contrary view was taken seem to have been noticed in the case. Whereas the facts of the cases relied upon by Mr. Sen are not similar to those of the present case, the facts of the cases upon which the learned Judge has relied are on all fours with the present case. Therefore if this case was to be decided upon the authority of decided cases, there is no doubt that the contention of Mr. Sen must fail.

It appears to me. however that upon a true construction of sections 69 and 70, there is hardly any room for doubt that they do not afford any assistance to Mr. Sen in his contention that the present case is governed by the provisions therein contained. True, a decree for rent binds not only the tenure but also the holder thereof for the payment of the same, and the decree-holder may at his option proceed against the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor instead of against the tenure concerned. If in the present case the landlord had proceeded against the person and other properties of the tenant defendant then no question would have arisen that the plaintiff who had purchased the tenure was not in any way interested in the payment of the said decrees. That event, however, did not occur. The landlord proceeded against the tenure itself. Having elected thus to proceed against the tenure he precluded himself from in any way proceeding against the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor so long as the tenure was not sold and the amount fetched at the sale was not sufficient to pay off the decrees in question. The latter event also did not happen because the plaintiff paid off the decrees before the properties were sold. But for aught we know from the result of the sale in the mortgage decree in which the plaintiff purchased the property, it was a very valuable property worth about Rs. 35,000, and the rent decrees in question would have very easily been paid off out of the sale-proceeds without driving the landlord to the necessity of proceeding against the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor, for the balance of any decretal amount left unrealised by the sale-proceeds of the tenure in question. The landlord in the present case proceeded against the tenure and advertised the same for sale, and thus all danger to the person and other properties of the judgement-debtor ceased. Therefore he was not interested in the payment of the rent-decrees in order to protect his person and other properties. In the tenure itself certainly he was not interested. his entire interest having ceased by the purchase thereof by the plaintiff. Therefore the defendant was not interested in the payment of the rent-decrees, and the plaintiff paid the same simply to protect his own propeity which he had already purchased. As has already been shown the plaintiff was bound in law to pay the prior rent decrees and charges with the incumbrances of which he purchased the property in question. Therefore the important element of section 69, namely, that defendant should have been bound by law to pay the sums of the decrees which the plaintiff paid is wanting in the present case. Now as to the benefit by the payment in question, the tenure was saved; defendant was not interested in the tenure; therefore, no benefit accrued to him, and unless any benefit accrued to the defendant by the payment made by the plaintiff the defendant was not liable under section 70 of the Indian Contract Act. Consequently section 70 has no application.

I, therefore, agree with the views expressed in the decisions relied upon by the learned

Judicial Commissioner and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Ross, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1746 OF 1920.

March 30, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Cuming and Mr. Justice Panton.

Mirza DILBAR HOSSAIN AND OTHERS—PRINCIPAL DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SADARUDDIN CHOUDHURI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND OTHERS—Pro forma DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 35 (ii)—Suit to recover value of trees cut under claim of right—Court of Small Causes, jurisdiction of.

A suit to recover the value of trees cut down by the defendant under bona fide claim of right does not fall under Art. 35 (ii) of Schedule II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and is not, therefore, excluded from the cognizance of a Small Cause Court.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Malda, dated the 22nd of March 1920, reversing that of the Munsif, Second Court at Malda, dated the 5th of August 1919.

Babu Santi Moy Mazumdar, for the Appellants.

Dr. Jadu Nath Kanjilal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In the suit out of which this appeal has arisen the plaintiffs sued for recovery of Rs. 25 on account of the price of trees which they alleged have been wrongfully cut away by the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 from a plot of land in their possession and which they had recently purchased from the pro forma defendants Nos. 5 to 7. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 contested the suit and their case was that the land belonged to defendant No. 5 alone, the defendants Nos. 6 and 7 had no concern with the land, that they had taken lease of this land from defendant No. 5 and were in possession of the land as tenants, and further that they had purchased the trees alleged to have been cut from defendant No. 5 for Rs. 11. The Trial Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal the lower Appellate Court found that defendants Nos. 6 and 7 had interest in the land in suit; that the interest of defendant, No. 5 was not that of a sole owner, and that, therefore, the defendant No. 5 had no right to sell the entire trees to defendants Nos. 1 to 4. He decreed the plaintiffs' suit for Rs. 8-12-0.

The defendants Nos. 1 to 3 appealed. A preliminary objection has been raised by the respondent that in accordance with the provisions of section 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure no appeal lies in the present case. His contention is that the present suit is a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes as the amount of the subject-matter does not exceed Rs. 500. The appellants on the other hand contend that the suit is one coming with the provisions of Art. 35 (ii) of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. This Article runs as follows: "For an act which is, or save for the provisions of Chapter IV of the Indian Penal Code would be, an offence punishable under Chapter XVII of the said Code." It appears that the defendant was prosecuted by the plaintiffs for the cutting o these trees and acquitted Now it has been found that the defendants had right to some portion of trees. The mere taking of the trees by the defendants would not of itself amount to theft or criminal misappropriation unless this was done with dishonest intention. The criminality of the act of the defendants will, therefore, depend on the intention with which this act was done and not whether the particular act is saved by the provisions of Chapter IV. We are of opinion that the present case does not come within Art. 35 (ii) of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Court Act and, therefore, no second appeal lies.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

BHOLA NATH v. RASOOL BAKSH.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NO. 9 OF 1923.

May 15, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

BHOLA NATH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RASOOL BAKSH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Stifling prosecution of non-compoundable offence—Pro-note executed by accused—Debt otherwise due—Consideration, whether unlawful.

Defendant who was indebted to the plaintiff passed a hundi to the latter which was dishonoured. The plaintiff, who believed the hundi not to be genuine, instituted a prosecution against the defendant for forgery. Pending prosecution the parties came to terms and the defendant executed a pro-note, on the plaintiff promising to withdraw the prosecution :

Held, that the stifling of a criminal prosecution for a non-compoundable offence was the object of the execution of the pro-note and that the fact that the debt was otherwise due was no answer to the consideration being void. [p. 78, col. 2.]

Lachman Das v. Narain, 25 Ind. Cas. 409; 17 O. C. 213; 1 O. L. J. 553, Jai Kumar v. Gauri Nath, 28 A. 718; 3 A. L. J. 506; A. W. N. (1906) 212, Sukhdeo Dass v. Mangal Chand, 41 Ind. Cas. 812; 2 P. L. J. 630; 2 P. L. W. 140, Kessowji v. Hurjivan Mulji, 11 B. 566; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373, distinguished.

Appeal against an order of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 23rd November 1922, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 4th January 1922.

Messrs. A. P. Sen and H. K. Ghosh, for the Appellants.

Mr. Niamat Ullah, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from a remand order under O. XLI, r. 23 of the Code passed by the learned District Judge of Lucknow. I am not in agreement with him on the point of law, but his order of remand must be maintained.

The plaintiff brought his suit for the recovery of money due to him and acknowledged by a pro-note dated the 19th May 1919. The learned Subordinate Judge, who tried the suit, was of opinion that the consideration for the pro-note was vitiated by the fact that it was given for the stifling of a criminal prosecution. Even so the mistake made by him was to overlook the fact that the consideration was not a new one according to the plaint allegation but an existing one. The consideration did not originate on the 19th of May 1919. Money was due to the plaintiff on bahikhata accounts, and the pro-note secured that amount. Under the circumstances even if the pro-note failed, as for instance it would have failed for want of a receipt stamp, an enquiry is necessary whether any money was due to the plaintiff from the defendant and whether a claim for the recovery of that money was within time at the date of the institution of the suit. Those points have not been determined and for the determination of those points a remand to the Trial Court is necessary.

Next as to the whether the pro-note itself is void or not, I am of opinion that it is void under the provisions of section 23 of the Contract Act. The mortgage-deed of even date narrates how this pro-note came to be executed. Bahikhata debts were due to the plaintiff whereupon the defendant passed two hundis for Rs. 6,000. The hundis were dishonoured and were believed by the plaintiff not to be genuine. The plaintiff thereupon instituted a prosecution of one defendant, Murlidhar, for forgery. While the prosecution was pending the parties came to terms and the defendants executed the pro-note and the mortgage-deed, on the plaintiff promising to withdraw the prosecution against Murlidhar. There is no doubt, in my mind, that the stifling of a criminal prosecution of an offence which could not be compounded was the object of the execution of the pro-note. It is true that the debt was otherwise due to the plaintiff, but that is not a sufficient answer to the consideration being void. Illustration (k) to section 23, Contract Act lays down: "A promises B to drop a prosecution which he has instituted against B for robbery, and B promises to restore the value of the things taken. The agreement is void, as its object is unlawful." Here the value of the things was due from B to A and still the promise of A to drop the prosecution against B rendered the agreement to re-pay the value of the things unlawful. Mr. Niamat Ullah pointed out that here the promise of restoration was invalid under section 214 of the Indian Penal Code and, therefore, the agreement was held to be void. I am afraid I cannot accept that view. The consideration which is void is the stifling of the prosecution and not the agreement to restore the property in consideration of the concealment of the offence. In my opinion, though the facts of some of the cases quoted by the learned Judge of the lower Court are similar to those of the present case the reasoning in every case is in favour of the defendant-appellant. Possibly, the facts of the case reported in Lachman Das v. Narain (1) cannot be distinguished from the facts of the present case, but the reasoning on which the judgment proceeded was that the stifling of the prosecution was no part of the consideration in that case. On the face of it the facts seem to indicate that that was the consideration, but the learned Judge seems to have held otherwise on the facts. In Jai Kumar v. Gauri Nath (2) no prosecution had been launched and "there was even a doubt as to whether there had been any embezzlement. In such a case no question of stifling of a criminal prosecution can arise. In Sukhdeo Dass v. Mangal Chand (3) one learned Judge observed at page 633*: "That does not mean that the consideration for the agreement into which they entered was a promise not to prosecute Moni Lal. In fact, there is no evidence that any such promise was made." The facts of that case therefore were not similar to those of the present case where I hold it as a fact that the stifling of the criminal prosecution was the consideration of the pro-note. The same considerations apply to a case quoted by the respondent's learned Counsel and reported as Kessowji v. Hurjivan Mulji (4). There the learned Judge insisted on the proviso that the person in whose favour a guarantee was executed did not, in consideration of such guarantee, agree not to prosecute. In all these cases the application of law appears to depend on the interpretation placed on the facts of the case. I hold the pro-note to be void.

The remand order is upheld and the Trial Court is directed to try the suit in accordance with the directions given in the first paragraph of this judgment. The plaintiff shall be permitted to amend his pleadings, if he so desires, and the parties given every opportunity to state their different cases in view of the removal of the pro-note from evidence. I pass no opinion as to the use that can be made of the pro-note under section 19 of the Limitation Act. Costs here and heretofore shall abide the result. This order amounts to a dimissal of the appeal with modification of directions to the Trial Court

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 409; 17 O. C. 213; 1 O. L. J. 553.
(2) 28 A. 718; 3 A. L. J. 506; A. W. N. (1906) 212.
(3) 41 Ind. Cas. 812; 2 P. L. J. 630; 2 P. L. W. 140.
(4) 11 B. 566; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373.
*Page of 2 P. L. J.—[Ed.]

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 123 OF 1922.

March 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C. and Mr. Dalal A. J. C.

Thakur RAMNARAIN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAM SUKH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Transfer of under-proprietary rights—Perpetual lease or sale—Pre-emption.

An under-proprietor transferred his under-proprietary rights in a village by a document described as a deed of perpetual lease. Under the terms of the deed the lessee was given heritable and transferable rights. The rent was fixed at Rs. 53 per annum, out of which Rs. 52 were payable to the superior proprietor. The premium paid by the lessee was Rs. 5,000. Provision was made for the recovery of Re. 1 reserved for himself by the lessor but the lessee was in no case to be ejected from the property. There was nothing to show that the parties had really agreed upon a sale or that the agreement as to the payment of Re. 1 per annum to the lessor was fictitious:

RAMNARAIN SINGH v. RAM SUKH.

Held, that the transfer was a lease and not a sale so as to give rise to a right of pre-emption. [p. 81, col. 1.]

Moorooly Ram v. Baboo Hurree Ram, 8 W. R. 106; Babu Baldeo Prasad v. Shaikh Ali Husain, 10 O. C. 348, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 16th January 1922, upholding that of the Subordinate Judge, Partabgarh, dated the 25th July 1921.

Mr. Hari Kishen Dhaon holding brief of Hardhian Chandra, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Radha Krishna and Bisheshar Nath, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal and Second Civil Appeal No. 170 of 1922 have been referred to a Bench under section 8 (c) of the Oudh Courts Act (XIV 1891). The suit in the First Court was one for pre-emption. The transaction which has given rise to the suit for pre-emption is described in the document of transfer as a perpetual lease of an 8 anna under-proprietary share in the village of Pura Murli in the Partabgarh District. The transferor Amarjit Singh has transferred half his under-proprietary interest in the village. It was alleged in the plaint that the transaction was really a sale but that with a view fraudulently to prevent pre-emption the sale price was noted as nazrana and a fictitious sum of Re. 1 was entered as rent payable by the lessee to the lessor. The terms entered in the document are that the lessees shall have heritable and transferable rights under the perpetual lease on payment of Rs. 53 as rent out of which Rs. 52 would be payable to the superior proprietors. The premium paid by the lessees was Rs. 5,000 Provisions is made for the recovery of Re. 1 reserved for himself by the lessor, but in no case are the lessees to be ejected from the property. The document is to be construed in accordance with its terms; there is no evidence to prove that the parties had really agreed upon a sale or that no rent was really payable to the lessor and the payment of Re. 1 per annum was fictitiously entered in the deed.

Both the subordinate Courts dismissed the suit and the plaintiff has appealed. The appellant's learned Counsel rightly argued that transactions of this nature could be divided into two classes (1) where by a contrivance the transaction falls short of a sale and (2) where the intention of the parties is to make an effective sale and yet the deed is thrown into another form in order to avoid pre-emption. In the first class of cases there would be no pre-emption but it will be allowed in the second class of cases. It has been held in two Bench decisions of this Court that it is not forbidden to a person to circumvent the law of pre-emption by taking a transfer which falls short of a sale, but which may eventually have the same effect as a sale [Badri Singh v. Chandika Baksh Singh (1) and Majida Bibi v. Malik Fazl Karim (2).] These were cases of mortgage in which the conditions were so onerous that there was a very remote chance of redemption.

The present case is one of a transfer of an under-proprietary interest and must be distinguished from cases where a superior proprietor carves out an under-proprietary interest. Where the transfer of the under-proprietary interest is made by the superior proprietor in the form of a lease, but the rent reserved for payment to the superior proprietor is equal to or slightly more than the revenue, such a transaction is held to be a sale giving rise to a right of pre-emption In section 4 of the Land Revenue Act III of 1901 an under-proprietor is defined as a person possessing a heritable and transferable right in land who is liable to pay rent thereof. According to that definition, a person possessing a heritable and transferable right in land will be an under-proprietor even where he pays rent to the proprietor far in excess of the revenue. But the distinction has been long established in this Court that, where in a lease by a superior proprietor, the rent reserved is equal to or only nominally in excess of the revenue the transfer will be considered to be one of an under-proprietary interest, while in the case where the rent reserved is considerably in excess of the revenue, the transfer would be a lease as it purports to be:— Ram Faqir v. Sheo Ratan (3), Ram Autar

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 8; 15 O. C. 1.
(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 679; 16 O. C. 9.
(3) 8 O. C. 121.

v. Drigpal (4), Ram Suchit v. Sheo Sewak Singh (5), Zulfan Khan v. Sant Bakshi Singh (6) and Saheb Bakhsh Singh v. Thakur Din Singh (7).

The question does not arise here and we are not called upon to consider the validity of this long established distinction.

The difference between a transfer by a superior proprietor and one by an under-proprietor is explained in Zulfan Khan v. Sant Bakhsh Singh (6) (third paragraph).

The case-law so far as it goes is in favour of construing the document in suit as a lease. In 1867 it was held by the Calcutta High Court in Moorooly Ram v. Baboo Hurree Ram (8) that a lease in perpetuity, however small the reserved rent, is not a sale for the purposes of pre-emption. In that case also an annual rent of Re. 1 was reserved. In Babu Baldeo Prasad v. Shaikh Ali Husain (9) the transaction in suit was described as a patta istimrari dawami (perpetual lease) executed by under-proprietors. The consideration for the lease was the payment of a sum of Rs. 700 and the lease further reserved a sum of Rs. 18-13 yearly as rent payable to the lessor. The lease purported to confer full rights of enjoyment of the property so leased on the lessee and his heirs and it was stipulated that the lessee would not be ejected from the holding. It is not clear whether the sum of Rs. 18-13 included the rent payable to the superior proprietor or not. In that case the transfer was held to be a perpetual lease as it purported to be and not liable to pre-emption. In the present case the premium is Rs. 5,000 the rent payable to the superior proprietor Rs. 52 and the rent payable to the lessor Re. 1. It is not possible to compare the rents in the two cases as the facts of the reported case are not full. The Court quoted with approval the opinion of a Judge of the Punjab Court that a perpetual lease did not give rise to the right of pre-emption merely on the ground that it was tantamount to a sale. In the Punjab also pre-emption is based on Statute Law. In the case in Badri Singh v. Chandrika Baksh Singh (1), referred to above, two Judges of this Court quoted with approval the opinion of another Judge of the Punjab Court on the construction of a mortgage transaction. "It is not safe for the Courts to attribute meanings to the terms of deeds other than those plain on the face of them. If such a course were generally adopted, any mortgage, the terms of which were at all onerous, or which it was not probable the mortgagor would be able to redeem, might be construed as a sale. The decisions of the Courts would be based on surmise, and there would be a wide divergence of opinion as to how onerous a mortgage must be in order to be held to be a sale." We may enumerate the points in which the transaction in suit falls short of a sale:

(1) Rent of Re. 1 is payable annually to the transferor by the transferee.

(2) The transferee does not become a member of the village community and does not acquire any right of pre-emption under section 9 of the Oudh Laws Act; in the present case the transferor has transferred only half his property and so his right to pre-empt other property in the village remains with him, but, even if he had transferred his entire property, a lease which falls short of a sale would reserve to him his right of pre-emption.

(3) If rent is not paid to the superior proprietor by the transferee the transferor would be liable for the rent to the superior proprietor who can recover it by suit against the transferor and sale by the property, without notice, to the transferee.

We agree with the observations of the learned Judge of this Court, Mr. Daniels in Zulfan Khan v. Sant Bakhsh Singh (6) that Courts should not go out of their way to encourage perpetual leases which have the inconvenient effect of permanently divorcing title and possession. At the same time pre-emption has been held in various decisions of this Court to be a weak right and has been refused in the

(4) 8 Ind. Cas. 725; 14 O. C. 41.
(5) 56 Ind. Cas. 629; 23 O. C. 50.
(6) 65 Ind. Cas. 97; 24 O. C. 310; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 81.
(7) 68 Ind. Cas. 966; 9 O. L. J. 334; 4 U. P. L. R. (O) 85; (1928) A. I. R. (O.) 229.
(8) 8 W. R. 106.
(9) 10 O. C. 348.

case of an exchange [Abid Ali v. Arab-un-nisa (10), Raj Kishore v. Raghu Nath Parshad (11), and Lachhman Prasad v. Mir Fida Husain (12)] and in mortgages with onerous conditions (15 Oudh Cases quoted above).

Having regard to the Statute and the case-law on the subject, we are unable to hold the lease in suit to be a sale. The inconvenience of perpetual leases can only be prevented by an alteration in the Statute.

We dismiss these appeals with costs.

N. H. Appeals dismissed.

(10) 1 O. C. 75.
(11) 4 O. C. 169.
(12) 30 Ind. Cas. 232; 18 O. C. 109; 2 O. L. J. 220.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 85 OF 1923.

July 18, 1923.

Present:— Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

RATI RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

BIRMAJIT AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 63, applicability of—Suit by unsuccessful claimant against judgment-debtor for return of purchase-money, nature of.

Order XXI, r. 63 of the Civil Procedure Code is a bar only to a subsequent suit, instituted to establish the right which the plaintiff claimed to the property which was in dispute, in the proceeding in which the objection was raised. It has no application to a suit by the unsuccessful claimant, who had purchased the property from the judgment-debtor, to recover from the judgment-debtor the sale consideration paid by him to the latter. [p. 82, col. 2.]

Civil revision from an order of the Judge of Small Cause Court, Mainpuri, dated the 24th of February 1923.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Applicant.

Mr. Baleshwari Prasad, for the Opposite Parties.

JUDGMENT.— This is a revision under section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act from a decree of the Judge of Small Cause Court, Mainpuri, dismissing the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff's case in the plaint was that the defendants had executed a sale-deed of certain crops on the 9th of February 1921, in his favour, that one Kirat Singh attached these crops and an objection being preferred to the attachment by the plaintiff the Execution Court dismissed his objection on the 13th of May 1921; that after that the defendants took away the crops and also refused to return the sale consideration; hence the suit.

In their written statement the defendants pleaded that the whole of the sale consideration had not been paid. They also said that it was the plaintiff himself who had appropriated the crops and that no part of the crops came into the possession of the defendants; it was further pleaded that the attachment in favour of Kirat Singh had fallen to the ground for want of payment of expenses of the sale. The amount of the sale consideration was also challenged and lastly it was contended that the sale-deed had been found by a Court to be invalid and no suit on the basis of it was maintainable. Then there were general pleas that the plaintiff was not entitled to any money or relief. The learned Judge of the Court below has thrown out the suit on the preliminary ground that the objection having been dismissed on the 14th of May 1921 and the present suit having been brought more than a year after that order, it was not maintainable. He relies on a ruling of this Court which has a bearing on O. XXI, r. 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

There has been a gross irregularity in this case as there has really been no proper trial on the merits. Order XXI, r. 63 is a bar to a subsequent suit instituted to establish the right which the plaintiff claimed to the property which was in dispute in the proceeding in which the objection was raised. It is manifest that in the present suit the plaintiff did not put forward any claim to the property which was then in dispute. He was suing for refund of sale consideration and not possession of the property. Order XXI, r. 63, therefore, had no application and nor has the ruling cited by the Court below. A case of this kind is not governed by one year's rule of limitation.

The learned Vakil who appears for the respondents sought to support the decree on a slightly different ground. His point was that the order of the 14th of May 1921 was conclusive between the parties and that it is not now open to the present plaintiff to go behind the finding on which that order was based. That finding according to his contention means that the sale transaction was a fictitious one This matter has not been gone into by the Court below and, therefore, I do not propose to go into it now in revision. I may, however, point out in passing that it is not quite clear whether the judgment-debtor was a party to the proceedings relating to the previous objection, that is to say, whether any notice had been issued to him and he had appeared in Court. It has been held in the case of Krishnasami Naidu v. Somasundaram Chettiar(1) that a judgment-debtor, who is not in fact a party to the claim proceedings, does not in the eye of law become such by reason solely of his being the judgment-debtor. Further more according to the plea raised in the written statement the attachment itself fell through because of non-payment of the expenses of sale. If the attachment was released it is difficult to say why the objector should have been compelled to institute a suit to establish his right As I have pointed out above the case has not been decided by the Court below on the merits. It has simply thrown it out on the preliminary ground that it was brought more than a year after the order passed in the execution department. I accordingly allow the application, set aside the decree of the Court below and remand the case to that Court for disposal according to law. Costs here and hitherto will abide the event.

Z. K. Application allowed.

(1) 30 M. 335; 17 M. L. J. 95; 8 M. L. T. 116 (F. B.).

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION APPEAL NO. 22 OF 1922.

ORIGINAL SUIT NO. 5265 OF 1921.

July 21, 1922.

Present :—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Marten.

DADABHOY FRAMJEE CAMA—PLAINTIFF No. 3—APPELLANT

versus

COWASJI DORABJI PANDAY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS NOS. 1 AND 2 AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Settlement deed—Gift to person and his male heirs—Estate conferred—Maintenance clause, effect of—Estate unknown to law, whether can be created—Originating summons—General questions whether can be asked—Opinions of Counsel, whether relevant—Trustees, position of—Practice—Appeal—Order appealed against, whether must be produced.

A Parsi widow executed a deed of settlement by which she settled certain properties upon trustees for her benefit for her life, then for her son, Rustomji, for his life and then for Rustomji's sons and their male heirs absolutely and in equal proportions as tenants-in-common. One of the clauses of the deed was as follows :

"Provided . . . that from and after the decease of the said Rustomji if the sons of the said Rustomji or the heirs male of any of them shall be under the age of eighteen years then..it shall be lawful for the trustees..during every such minority to receive the rents...of the...hereditaments and premises..or the share or shares therein respectively to which such infant son or sons or his or their male heirs shall be so entitled as aforesaid and to pay and apply the same or...part thereof...for.....the maintenance and education of the person aforesaid for the time under the age of eighteen years;"

Held, (1) that the words "and their male heirs," did not import any limitation on the estate given to the sons of Rustomji ; [p. 86, col. 2.]

(2) that the maintenance clause did not in any way curtail the estate given to the sons of Rustomji; [p. 87, col. 1.]

(3) that, therefore, the estate given to the sons of Rustomji under the deed was absolute and not limited. [p. 86, col. 2.]

Per Marten,—J. Ordinarily co-plaintiffs cannot sever at the trial and must appear by the same Solicitors and Counsel. [p. 87, col. 2.]

The same person cannot be made a plaintiff and a defendant in one proceeding. [p. 87, col. 2.]

Rustomji v. Purshotamdas, 25 B. 606 at p. 612; 3 Bom. L. R. 227, followed.

On an originating summons the Court should not be asked to give its opinion on general questions when specific questions can easily be framed. [p. 87, col. 2.]

In re Harman, Lloyd v. Tardy, (1894) 3 Ch. 607 at p. 614; 63 L. J. Ch. 822; 8 R. 549; 71 L. T. 401; relied on.

DADABHOY FRAMJEE CAMA v. COWASJI DORABJI PANDAY.

The better practice is not to plead opinions of Counsel on an originating summons; in general they are no more relevant on an originating summons than in an ordinary suit. [p. 88, col. 1.]

On an originating summons trustees should not submit that certain beneficiaries of their are barred by limitation or otherwise. That is for the Court to decide. Trustees should not take sides. [p. 88, cols. 1 & 2.]

An appeal lies not from what a Judge says but from what he orders; and that what he orders is to be found in the sealed or signed formal order which is entered in the records of the Court. Apart from urgency or some special ground, no appeal should be determined without the production of the formal order under appeal. [p. 88, col. 1.]

A gift to a man and his male heirs is an attempt to create an estate unknown to Indian law, and such a gift must be construed as conferring an absolute estate on the donee. [p. 90, col. 1.]

Estates tail or in tail male are unknown to Indian Law. [p. 90, col. 1.]

Novel estates unknown to the law of India can no more be introduced into Bombay by Parsi settlors than they can be by Englishmen or Hindus. [p. 90, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of Kanga, J., on an Originating Summons for the construction of a deed of settlement.

Mr. Coltman, for Defendant No. 10 Appellant.

Mr. Kania, for Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 Respondents Nos. 3 and 4

Mr. B. J. Wadia, for Defendant No. 4 Respondent No. 6.

Mr. Jayakar for Mr. Rao, for Defendants Nos. 5 and 6 Respondents Nos. 7 and 8.

Mr. Taleyarkhan, for Plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Mr. Gupte, for Defendants Nos. 7, 8 and 9 Respondents Nos. 9, 10 and 11.

Mr. Bahadurji, for Defendant No. 3 Respondent No. 5.

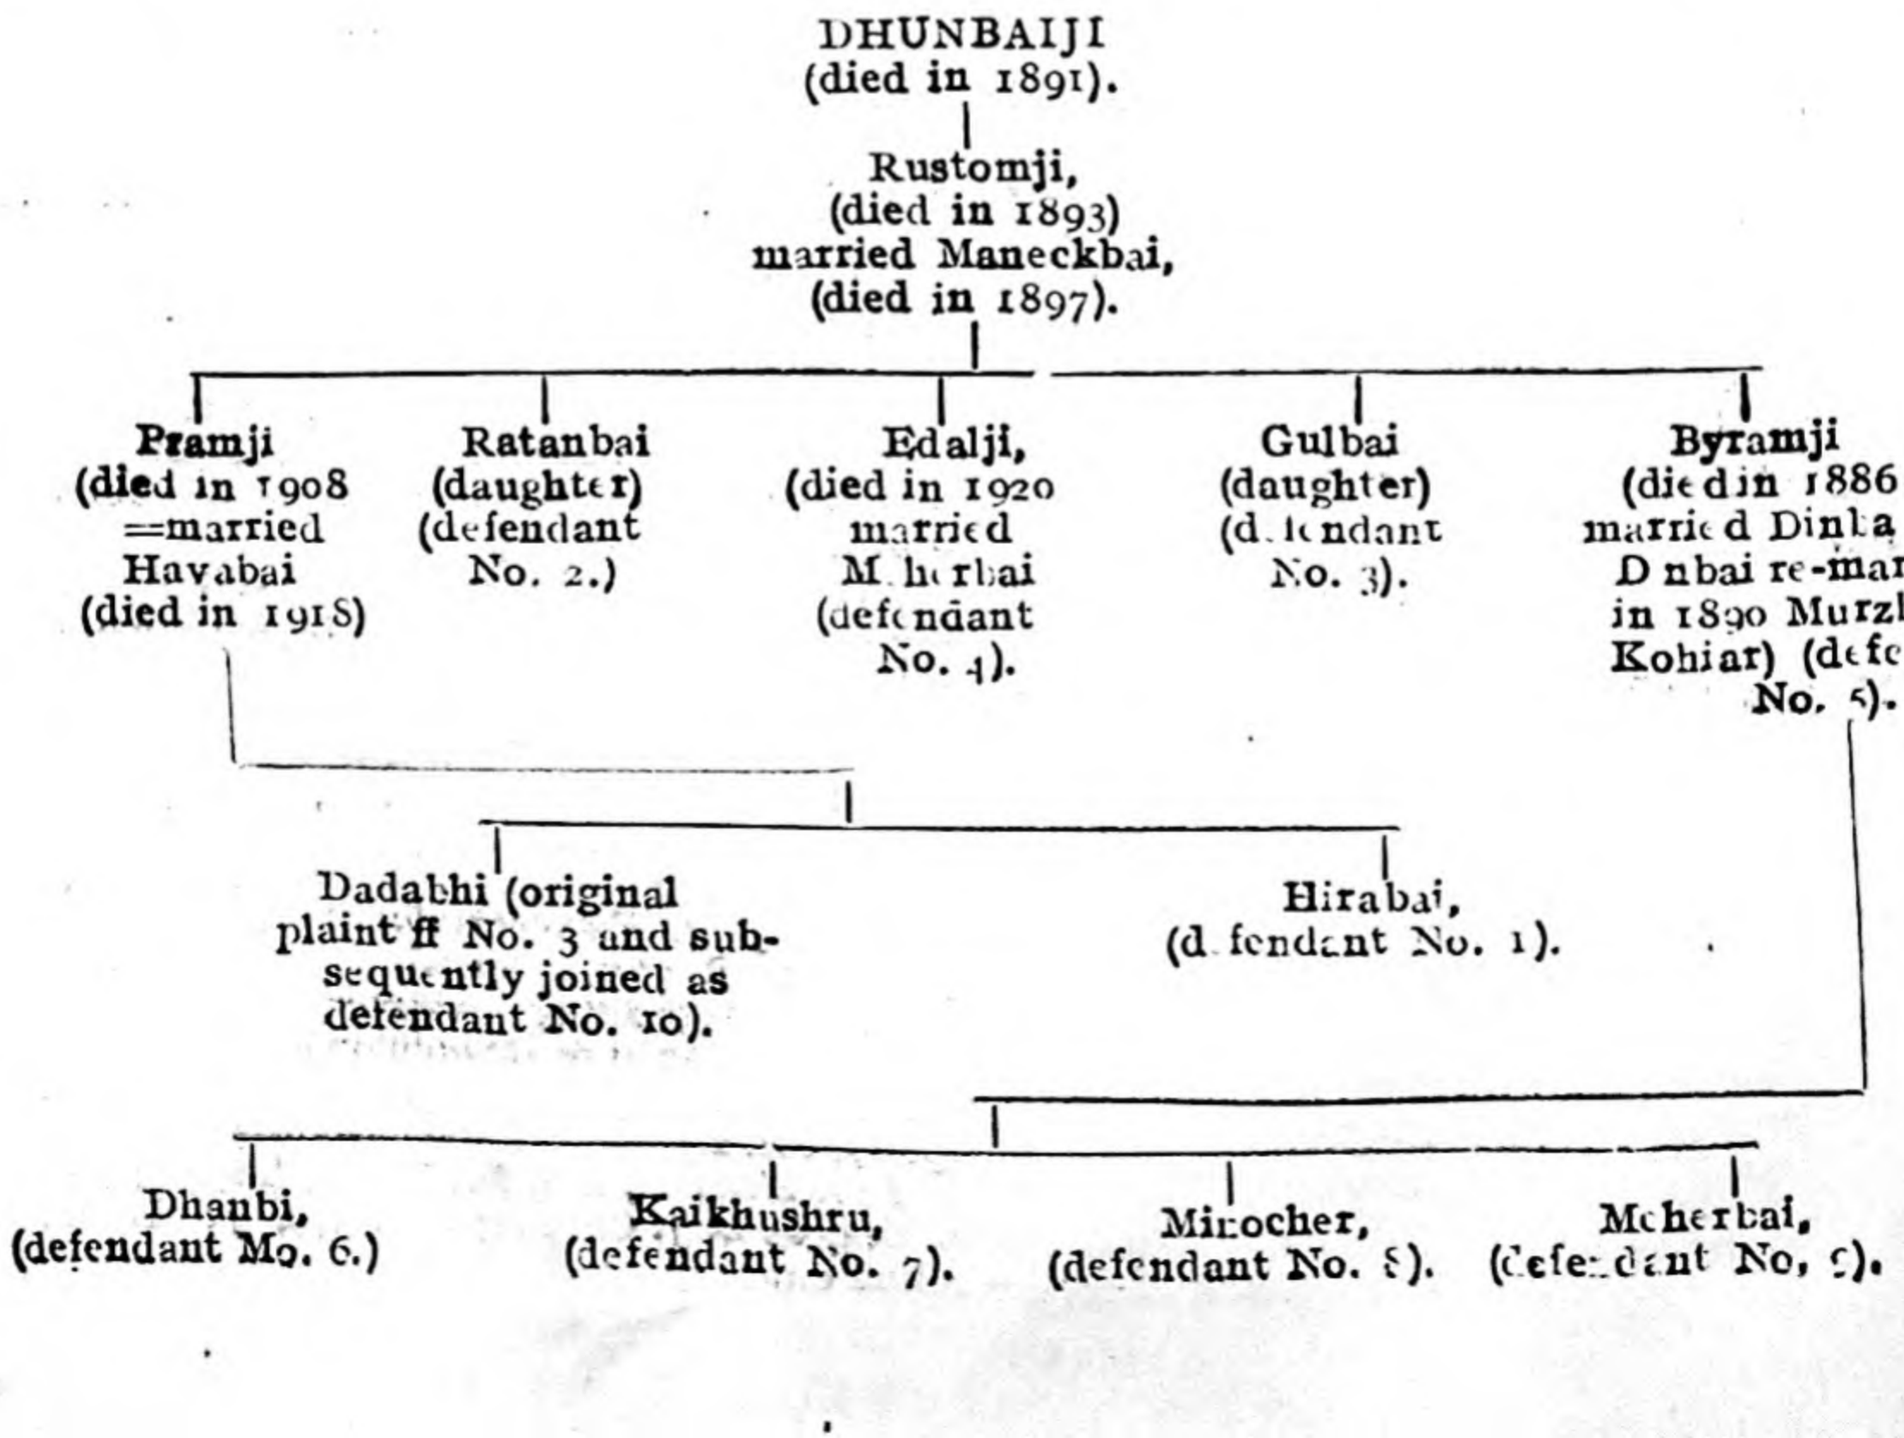
JUDGMENT.

Shah, Ag. C. J.—This appeal arises out of an Originating Summons taken out by the trustees for the construction of two deeds, one of August 13, 1879, and the other of July 19, 1888. The original summons stated the questions in a general form; but the questions for decision are stated in the judgment of Mr. Justice Kanga, and we have ordered the summons to be so amended as to indicate in terms the points which we have to decide. On a further hearing of this appeal, we have directed further amendment of the summons, and as a result of that two more questions have been raised.

It will be convenient to show in a tabular form the relationship of the parties interested in these questions:—



DADABHOY FRAMJEE CAMA v. COWASJI DORABJI PANDAY.

The plaintiffs, including Dadabhoy, son of Framji, obtained the summons as trustees but in view of his personal interest in the estate Dadabhai has been joined as defendant No. 10.

Dhunbaiji executed a deed of settlement in August 1879, by which she settled certain properties upon trustees for her benefit for her life, then for Rustomji for his life, and then for Rustomji's sons and "their male heirs" (Exhibit B.) Rustomji in his own right and as a trustee, and Muncherji Cama as the co-trustee were parties to this deed. Byramji died in 1885 without any issue, but left a widow Dinbai. In 1888 another deed was executed by Dhunbaiji, Rustomji and his two sons, Framji and Edulji, and the trustees under the first deed (Exhibit 1 C). This deed in terms purports to revoke the first deed and to settle the same properties in trust upon the same trustees for the benefit of Dhunbaiji, then for her son Rustomji and after his death for the benefit of his sons, Framji and Edulji, in equal shares and for division and distribution, in the manner stated therein, after their deaths. Rustomji and his two sons, Framji and Edulji, and the trustees under the first settlement were parties to this deed of revocation. It dealt with the whole property described in the first deed and Government Promissory Notes of the face value of Rs. 10,000.

Dhunbaiji died in 1891 and Rustomji in 1893. Rustomji left a widow Manekbai, who died in 1897. She left a Will under which her daughter Gulbai is the residuary legatee. Dinbai, widow of Byramji, remarried during the interval. She died in 1901 leaving her second husband and children by the second husband. Framji died in 1908 leaving his widow Havabai, who died in 1918, and a son Dadabhoy and a daughter, Hirabai. Edulji died in 1920 leaving a widow, Meherbai.

The original trustees were succeeded by different trustees as detailed in paragraphs 12 and 13 of the plaint. The plaintiff No. 3, though one of the trustees, is interested in his own right under these deeds. The other trustees seek the directions of the Court as to the administration of the trusts.

Defendant No. 1 is the sister of Dadabhoy and is interested like her brother in the estate under the second deed. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are the daughters of Rustomji but their interests are not identical so far as Manekbai's share is concerned; defendant No. 4 is Meherbai, the widow of Edulji.

The other defendants Nos. 5 to 9 are the second husband and children of Dinbai. The Originating Summons was taken out in December 1921. The questions raised at the hearing and now stated in the summons are as follows:—

(1) Whether on a true construction of the deed of August 13 1879 the three sons of Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama after the death of their father, Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama, took the trust properties absolutely in equal shares, as tenants-in-common or whether they were entitled to a life interest in the said properties?

(2) Whether the trusts created by the deed of 1879 are validly revoked and whether the deed of 1888 is a valid trust deed?

(3) Whether the claims of defendants Nos. 3 and 5 to 9 to the immoveable properties comprised in the trust deed of 1879 are barred by the law of limitation?

(4) Whether the words "the said trust property", where they appear in the following passage of the deed of revocation and re-settlement of July 19, 1888, refer to the whole of the trust estate or to the share therein only of the grandson of the settlor dying without issue, viz., "And if either of them the said Framji Rustomji Cama and Edulji Rustomji Cama shall die without issue then and in such case the said trust property shall go to and be divided between the sons and daughters, &c.?"

(5) In what proportions the income accruing up to the death of Edulji ought to have been distributed among the parties entitled thereto?

(6) Whether the widows of Framji and Edulji took absolute interest under the gift over contained in the deed of 1888 or for widowhood only or at all?

The learned Judge came to the conclusion—(a) that the three sons of Rustomji took absolutely the trust properties after the death of Rustomji in equal shares as tenants-in-common :

(b) that the deed of 1879 was not revocable but the interests of the consenting parties only were validly settled under the deed of 1888 ; but the interests of the heirs of Byramji, not parties to the deed, i. e., Dinbai (the widow) and Manekbai (the mother), were not affected thereby, whose shares in the one-third share of Byramji were one-half and one-sixth of that one third, i. e., one-sixth and one-eighteenth of the whole property respectively according to the rules of Parsi intestate succession :

(c) that the claims of Gulbai claiming under Manekbai and of defendants Nos. 5 to 9 claiming under Dinbai under the deed of 1879 were not time-barred : and

(d) that the words "the said trust property" in the particular clause of the deed of 1888 meant the whole trust property, including the Government Promissory Notes, with accumulated interest effectively settled by that deed.

As regards question 5 it appears that the question of the distribution of the income of the trust property was left over for decision hereafter, but at the hearing of the appeal to-day the question has been put in a definite form, and it is clear that the point as thus stated can be dealt with by us.

As regards the 6th question, though the opinion of the learned Trial Judge is indicated in the judgment, the point does not appear to have been specifically raised.

From this judgment Dadabhai, son of Framji, has appealed, and Meherbai, the widow of Edulji, has filed cross-objections. All the questions have been argued before us on behalf of all the parties according to their respective interests.

I shall deal with these questions in the order in which they are stated.

As regards the first question, the material passage in the deed of 1879 is as follows :—

"Upon trust for the said Dhanbaiji for and during her life..and after the decease of the said Dhanbaiji widow, upon trust for the said Rustomji.....and after his decease upon trust for his sons and their male heirs absolutely in equal shares and proportions as tenants-in-common."

It is urged on behalf of the appellant that the use of the words "male heirs" imposes a limitation upon the interests of the sons of Rustomji and in support of the contention reliance is placed upon the clause about maintenance in the deed.

Looking at the main clause without reference to the maintenance clause, I do not feel any doubt that the estate given to the sons of Rustomji is absoluteand not limited. The use of the expression "male heirs" means no limitation upon it. The words "absolutely in equal shares and proportions as tenants-in-common" appear to me to negative the idea of any limitation upon the estate given to the sons of Framji.

Further, the use of the words "male heirs" does not import any limitation. According to the rule of construction laid down in section 84 of the Indian Succession Act as to Wills, such an expression in a Will will be rejected as having no effect in the absence of any indication of a contrary intention. I do not see any reason why a different effect should be given to that expression in a deed. It may be that under the English Law there is some reason for interpreting the same expression differently when used in a Will and in a deed. I express no opinion on that point. But I do not see any reason for such differentiation under the Indian Law. Apart from that if the expression is taken literally, it will create an estate which is anomalous and uncertain in its operation. It will include male heirs among collaterals and exclude females in the descending line. No authority has been cited to show that such a construction is permissible. On the contrary it appears from Doe d. M'Kenzie v. Pestonji (1), decided so far back as 1852 by Sir Erskine Perry, C. J., that the grant to "master builders and their sons" and to "their family and descendants" was held to be an absolute estate; and the contention of the son of the grantee that the alienation by the grantee was invalid was disallowed. Though it was a grant by the Crown it was held that it did not create an estate tail and that no revertion to the Crown was reserved.

(1) (1852) Perry O. C. 531 at p. 534; 4 Ind. Dec (O. S.) 485.

Further even according to English Law the use of this expression in deeds imports no limitation. As pointed out in Williams on Real Proporty at page 90 (21st Edition) and Norton on Deeds, pages 305, and 306, Edition of 1906) under a gift to A and his male heirs, A takes the fee simple.

Lastly, I do not think that the words used in the maintenance clause curtail in any way the absolute estate to the sons of Rustomji nor do they indicate any intention to the contrary. I do not think that the clause was intended to have or that it can have any such effect even if it be construed as suggested by Mr. Coltman on behalf of the appellant. But in fact it appears as if the clause has been copied from some precedent without any relation to the requirements of the deed in question. I do not think that in fact anything more than "the sons of Rustomji" is meant by the expressions "the heirs male" and "his or their male heirs" used in that clause. I have not considered it necessary to quote the clause here. It is to be found at the top of page 4 of Part III of the paper-book. Even assuming that, for the purpose of maintenance and education, if any son of Rustomji died leaving a minor son that minor son would have a legal right to claim some interest in the share of his father at the discretion of the trustees, I do not think that it could be said to curtail the gift to the sons of Rustomji in the prior clause which I have already dealt with. On the contrary it would be rejected as being repugnant to the absolute gift in the prior clause in favour of the sons of Framji, if the clause as to maintenance is read in that sense. I think, therefore, that the view of the learned Judge is right and the appellant's contention must be disallowed.

[The remaining portion of the judgment is not material for the purposes of this report.]

Marten, J.—This is an appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Kanga on an Originating Summons taken out by the then plaintiffs as trustees, and asking the following two questions, viz.:—

(1) On the true and proper construction of the deed of settlement of August 13, 1879, and the deed of revocation and appointment, dated July 19, 1888, who are entitled to the immoveable properties set out in the said deeds and in what proportions?

(2) Who are entitled to the funds mentioned in the deed of revocation and appointment and the accretious thereto and in what proportions?

Unfortunately, the parties have given the Court a good deal of unnecessary trouble by disregarding ordinary rules of procedure. In the first place, mere general questions like these should not be asked, when specific questions can easily be framed. See In re Harman, Lloyd v. Tardy (2). Accordingly, we directed the Originating Summons to be amended so as to raise the exact questions which the Court was asked to decide.

Nor should the third plaintiff have been joined as such. It is true that he is one of the trustees, but his interests as a beneficiary are distinct and substantial, and cannot be represented by any of the other parties. This is exemplified by the fact that he is the sole appellant. There is the further difficulty that, speaking generally, co-plaintiffs cannot sever at the trial but must appear by the same Solicitors and Counsel. Accordingly before us the proceedings were amended by striking out the appellant as the third plaintiff and adding him as the tenth defendant. The original draftsman of the plaint and Originating Summons had fallen into the opposite error of making the appellant both a plaintiff and defendant, although Sir Lawrence Jenkins had long ago pointed out that this cannot be done. Rustomji v. Purshotamdas (3). The Trial Court remedied this mistake, but unfortunately the amendment then made was to strike out the appellant as defendant No. 10, and to retain him as plaintiff No. 3. Hence the further amendment ordered by us.

(2) (1894) 3 Ch. 607 at p. 614; 63 L. J. Ch. 822; 8 R. 549; 71 L. T. 401;

(3) 25 B. 606; at p. 612; 3 Bom. L. R. 227.

Then the preparation of the paper book leaves much to be desired. It does not contain the formal order of the learned Judge: and it now appears that the order was never drawn up, and that we were allowed to hear this appeal without our attention being drawn by any body to this material omission. The explanation now given to us is, that this was thought unnecessary, because, after the question of construction was decided in the Appellate Court, the Trial Judge would decide certain further subsidiary points. It is, however, elementary practice both on the Original Side and in the English High Court that an appeal lies not from what a Judge says but from what he orders, and that what he orders is to be found in the sealed or signed formal order which is entered in the records of the Court. Apart then from urgency or some special ground, no appeal should be determined without the production of the formal order under appeal. And, in my opinion, there was no adequate excuse in the present case for departing from this well established practice.

So, too, the notes of hearing before the Trial Judge were not printed. Consequently one cannot tell what has been put in evidence and what not. All one can say is that the alleged Exhibit numbers in the paper-book do not correspond with the actual Exhibit marks on the documents produced to us. We have taken steps to put all these matters in order, and also to supplement the evidence by a pedigree and by two deeds of appointment of new trustees, but in my opinion this is not work which Appellate Judges should find it necessary to do.

One other matter I will mention. No doubt in course of time practitioners in this Court will get more familiar with the procedure by Originating Summons; but with reference to paragraph 15 of the plaint, I think the better practice is not to plead Counsel's opinions. In general, they are no more relevant on an Originating Summons than they are in an ordinary suit. So, too, as regards paragraph 11, trustees should not submit that certain beneficiaries of theirs are barred by limitation or otherwise. That is for the Court to decide. The trustees should not take sides.

Turning to the facts, the parties to the suit are all Parsis, and the deeds in question were settlements executed by Dhunbaiji, a Parsi widow, in favour of herself and her only son Rustomji and remoter issue and others. The settled property is all in Bombay, and is stated by Counsel to be now worth some twelve lacs. We are entitled to know the exact position of her family at the dates of these two deeds, and accordingly we directed a pedigree to be put in to supplement the evidence in the Court below. This pedigree shows that at the date of the 1879 deed Rustomji had three sons Framji, Edulji, and Byramji, and two daughters, Ratanbai and Gulbai. Framji and Edulji had both married, but had no issue: Edulji and Byramji were both minors. At the date of the 1888 deed, Byramji had died a minor without issue, leaving a minor widow Dinbai. Framji had meanwhile had two children, viz., the appellant and Hirabai, the first defendant. Edulji had no issue. The subsequent events were that Dhunbaiji, the settlor, died in 1891, Rustomji her son in 1893, Framji her grandson in 1908, and Edulji her surviving grandson in 1920. Framji had only the above two children, viz., the appellant and his sister, Hirabai. Edulji never had any issue. Framji's widow, Hawabai, predeceased Edulji, but Edulji's widow, Meherbai, is still living, and is defendant No. 4. Byramji's widow Dinbai died in 1901, and his and her interests are represented by defendants Nos. 5 to 9 who are her second husband and her children by him. Rustomji's daughters, Ratanbai and Gulbai, are still living, and are defendants Nos. 2 and 3. Rustomji's widow, Manekbai, died in 1897, and her interests have passed to her daughter, Gulbai, defendant No. 3.

On the first point raised on the Originating Summons the decision of the learned Judge was as follows:—

"The first question is, whether on a true construction of the deed of August 13, 1879, the three sons of Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama, after the death of their father Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama, took absolutely the trust properties in equal shares, as tenants-in-common, or whether they were only entitled to a life-interest in the said properties.

"The trusts as regards the said three sons of Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama are as follows:—

"From and after his (Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama) decease, upon trust for his sons and their male heirs absolutely in equal shares and proportions as tenants-in-common.

"It has not been contended before me that Parsis in the Island of Bombay are not subject to English Law generally and that the English Law does not apply to this case. According to English Law, a gift or devise to a man and his heirs gives him the fee. The words "his heirs or his male heirs" are regarded as words of limitation and not of purchase. They are not taken as conferring any estate on the heir, but simply as showing or making out the estate the ancestor takes.

"On the construction, therefore, I hold that the three sons of Rustomji Dadabhoy Cama took absolutely the trust properties after the death of their father in equal shares, as tenants-in-common."

I concur in the result which the learned Judge arrived at, but for somewhat different reasons. The real difficulty arises here from the maintenance clause which runs:—

"Provided...that from and after the decease of the said Rustomji if the sons of the said Rustomji or the heirs male of any of them shall be under the age of eighteen years then...it shall be lawful for the trustees...during every such minority to receive the rents...of the... hereditaments and premises..or the share or shares therein respestively to which such infant son or sons or his or their male heirs shall be so entitled as aforesaid and to pay and apply the same or.. part thereof... for...the maintenance and education of the person aforesaid for the time being under the age of eighteen years."

Then follows a trust for accumulation of the surplus rents and to stand possessed thereof upon the trusts therein declared "concerning the trust premises or the share or shares therein from which the same shall have respectively proceeded."

Now this maintenanse clause contemplates the heirs male of a son being "entitled" to a share under the trusts of the settlement. If, however, the true view is that the son takes absolutely then his share would pass either to his assigns inter vivos, or on his death to his devisees or his heirs general. In no event, therefore, would the heirs male as such take the son's share. Further, if they took at all, they would take as on the intestacy of the absolute owner (viz., the son), and not as persons "entitled" under the trusts of the settlement. Further, this limitation to the sons and their male heirs may be contrasted with the limitations elsewhere in the deed to the trustees and their heirs.

It is consequently argued that this maintenance clause must be read along with the main clause quoted by the learned Judge, and that these two clauses when read together show an intention on the part of the settlor that the heirs male should succeed to the sons. Assuming, for the sake of argument, that that is so, I fail to see how the settlor's alleged intention can be carried out except by construing the limitations as conferring an estate in tail male. But this proposed construction raises many difficulties and to my mind they are insuperable. In the first place, even if this was an English deed of settlement, the gift is to the "sons and their male heirs" and not to "the sons and the male heirs of their bodies" Nor are there any other provisions confining this male heirship to descendants of the sons. Consequently, the first requisite for an estate tail is wanting. As is put in Coke upon Littleton, 9 b: "If a man devise land to a man et sanguino suo, that is a fee simple; but if it be semini suo it is an estate taile" [see Halsbury, Vol. XXVIII, p. 767, note (h)]: The word "devise" there means by deed. In those old days its use was not confined to Wills as nowadays.

The cy-pres doctrine is an instance of how this may sometimes be done (see Halsbury, Vol. XXVIII, p. 672). Another example will be found in Halsbury, Vol. XXVIII, p. 764, where it is said: "The context may show that by 'heirs' was meant 'heirs' of the body, so that an estate tail only is created."

Next, if one confines the limitation to male heirs generally, this limitation as such is unknown to the law. Under English Law in a deed a gift to a man and his heirs confers an estate in fee simple: and a gift to a man and the heirs of his body or the heirs male of his body gives him an estate in fee tail or tail male as the case may be. But a gift to a man and his male heirs is an attempt to create an estate unknown to the law. Consequently, English Law rejects the word "male" as being repugnant, and construes the gift as if it were to the man and his heirs simpliciter, viz., as a gift in fee simple (see Norton on Deeds, page 305, and Williams on Real Property, 22nd Edition, page 148.)

Another example will be found in Peerage cases. Thus the limitation in the Letters Patent must be to the future heirs of the patentee and the limitation must be one known to the law. The usual limitation is to the heirs male of the body. But, as stated in Halsbury, Vol. XXII, p. 268: "A limitation to heirs male, as distinguished from heirs male of the body, is void in England, but not in Scotlahd," [See also Wiltes Claim of Peerage (4).] Then at Halsbury, ib. page 269, it is said: "A peerage is an incorporeal hereditament, inalienable and descendible according to the words of limitation contained in the grant. A limitation to a man 'and his heirs' will not carry it to collateral heirs. For the purposes of descent, therefore, this limitation is practically equivalent to 'heirs of the body." It can be understood, therefore, that in a Peerage case there would be a strong reason for construing the limitation as one to the heirs of the body, for otherwise the limitation would practically fail. That reason does not, however, exist in English Law in a grant of land by deed similar to the one we have to deal with. Such a grant of land would vest an absolute estate in fee simple in the grantee.

But English Law draws a distinction between gifts by deed and gifts by Will. In an English Will there is authority to show that a devise to a man and his male heirs would be construed as giving an estate in tail male [see Williams on Real Property, 22nd Edition, page 259; Theobald on Wills, 7th Edition, page 400, and see Crumpe v. Crumpe (5).]

But in the present case we have to deal with a deed. If then one applies English Law to the present settlement, the word "male" in the main gift and also in the maintenance clause would I think be rejected. And this construction would be aided by the word "absolutely" in the main gift. Under those circumstances the main gift would confer an estate in fee simple, and in my opinion the maintenance clause quoad the heirs would be rejected as being repugnant to the prior absolute gift.

But the difficulties of the appellant do not stop there. The settled land is Indian land and must devolve according to the lex loci. But estates tail or in tail male are unknown to Indian Law, and may they always remain so. To introduce into this country the mixed Common and Statute Law on the subject, and to refer to the Statute De Donis and to recoveries, and fines, disentailing deeds and protectors of settlements would indeed be a calamity. I am, therefore, unable to concur in the view of the learned Judge that Parsis are subject to English Law generally, and that English Law applies to this case. In my opinion novel estates unknown to the law of India can no more be introduced into Bombay by Parsi settlors than they can be by Englishmen or Hindus. As was pointed out by Mr. Kania for defendant No. 2 the illustrations to section 84 of the Indian Succession Act make it quite clear that in Wills governed by that Act, gifts which under English Law would confer an estate tail confer under Indian Law an absolute estate. A fortiori, therefore, the same result would follow in a settlement effected by deed and not by Will. So in effect, both under Indian Law as well as under English Law, the result would be the same in a settlement effected by deed and not by Will, viz., an absolute estate.

(4) (1869) 4 H. L. 126.

(5) (1900) A. C. 127; 69 L. J. P. C. 71; 82 L. T. 130.

I, therefore, reject entirely the suggestion that the sons took an estate in tail male.

I also reject the applicant's argument that on the death of Rustomji in 1893, the persons to take were a class to be ascertained at that date, and consisting of (a) his then surviving sons, and (b) such of their heirs presumptive then living as were male. This contention appears to me to be a hopeless one. For one thing, it introduces the element of survivorship of Rustomji, which the settlement itself does not stipulate for. For another, it gives part of the property to persons who on no construction of the settlement can possibly take as specified beneficiaries. Heirs presumptive are not necessarily the heirs at law. Nemo est hoeres viventis.

Question (1) will accordingly be answered by declaring that the three sons took the trust property comprised in the 1879 deed absolutely in equal shares as tenants-in-common.

[The remaining portion of the judgment is not material for the purposes of this report—Ed.]

Z. K. Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 58 OF 1922

October 24, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

DURGA PRASAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

HET RAM AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree, application to set aside—Adjournment of suit—Notice to parties—Court, duty of.

When a Court finds it necessary to adjourn a pending suit, it is part of the duty of the Court to see that the date fixed for the adjourned hearing is communicated to the parties concerned, or to their legal representatives, or, at any rate, to such of them as are present or represented in Court when the adjournment takes place. [p. 92, col. 1.]

A suit for partition was compromised and a preliminary decree was passed in accordance with the compromise. A Commissioner was also appointed to make a report as to the actual division of the property. On the date fixed for the consideration of the Commissioner's report one of the defendants, who had no notice of the date, was absent and an ex parte decree was passed against him;

Held, (1) that in the absence of notice of the date of hearing to the defendant an ex parte decree should not have been passed against him; [p. 92, col. 1.]

(2) that the absence of notice was a sufficient cause for setting aside the ex parte decree. [p. 92, col. 1.]

First appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Aligarh, dated the 9th December 1921.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree. We have had to hear the appeal ex parte, the respondents having entered no appearance. So far as we can ascertain from the record before us, the appellant has a very strong case. The suit was one for partition and the parties had compromised it, to the extent, that they had agreed upon the form of the preliminary decree to be passed. What was left for the Court to do was to carry out in detail the division of the property concerned in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree. There was property situated in two different districts to be dealt with, and certain arrangements were made for the partition of the property in the Moradabad District to be carried out on commission. After sundry adjournments, a definite date, namely, 20th December 1920, was fixed for the return of the Commissioner's report and, no doubt by implication, for the consideration of that report by the Court in the presence of the parties. So far as the record shows, neither Durga Prasad nor his Pleader received any notice of the fact that this date had been fixed. Durga Prasad was absent on that date and, in his absence, a final decree for partition was drawn up against which Durga Prasad contends that he has valid objections to offer. When he applied to have the ex parte decree set aside and his objections judicially considered, his application was rejected. The only reason given is that Durga Prasad, as a party interested in the suit, ought to have kept himself informed of all dates which the Court might fix for hearing. It is true that in the order under appeal the learned Subordinate Judge has also remarked that Durga Prasad produced no evidence to corroborate his own sworn statement that he did not know that the partition suit was dowa for hearing before the Court on the 20th of December 1920. It is not easy to see what oral testimony Durga Prasad could have produced in support of this negative assertion; but what makes the appellant's case harder is that the Court below has actually believed his statement. The learned Subordinate Judge records his finding that Durga Prasad did not in fact know that the 20th of December 1920 had been fixed for the hearing of the suit, though he still maintains that for this Durga Prasad was to blame. We are not prepared to endorse this view. When a Court finds it necessary to adjourn a pending suit, it is part of the duty of the Court to see that the date fixed for the adjourned hearing is communicated to the parties concerned, or to their legal representatives, or, at any rate, to such of them as are present or represented in Court when the adjournment takes place. In the present instance there have been a number of orders of adjournment and the record shows that the successive dates fixed were communicated to the Pleaders representing parties other than Durga Prasad. Why or how the Court failed to communicate these orders to Durga Prasad or his Pleader, the record does not explain. Under the circumstances we think Durga Prasad has shown sufficient cause for his failure to appear on the date on which the Court finally disposed of the suit. We think he was entitled to have the ex parte decree set aside and any objection which he had to offer to the partition proposed by the Commissioner appointed by the Court taken into consideration and judicially determined. We allow this application. We set aside the order under appeal and in lieu thereof we pass an order setting aside the final decree for partition passed by the Court below. The record will be returned to that Court in order that the partition suit may be re-admitted on to the pending file and taken up at the precise stage which it had reached when the case was called upon on the 20th of December 1920. A further date should be fixed of which proper information is given to all the parties concerned, and, on that date, the parties should be heard in respect of any objection which they may take to the manner in which it is proposed to carry out the preliminary decree into final effect. As this appeal has been heard ex parte, we leave the costs of this appeal, including fees on the higher scale, to be dealt with by the Court below when it passes its final decree.

Z. K.

Application allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 31 OF 1921.

February 21, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

MAHADEVAPPA alias CHANSOMAPPA DESAI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KASHIRAO bin SOMAPPA AND OTHERS DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 TO 6, 8 AND 9 —RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11 Expl. IV—Res judicata—Causes of action different—Amendment of plaint, refusal to allow, effect of—Hindu Law—Custom—Primogeniture, rule of —Deshgat vatan—Burden of proof—Impartibility—Presumption.

Plaintiff sued to recover his share in his father's property under a partition effected by the father in his lifetime and under the father's Will. At a late stage of the suit he applied for leave to amend the plaint and claim partition in the alternative. Leave to amend was refused and the suit was dismissed on the ground that the partition effected by the father was unequal and unfair. Plaintiff subsequently sued for partition of the property:

MAHADEVAPPA v. KASHIRAO.

Held, that the plaintiff's claim to partition was not res judicata inasmuch as

(a) the causes of action in the two suits were different and the plaintiff was not bound to claim partition in the alternative in the earlier suit; [p. 94, col. 1.]

(b) the plaintiff's failure to claim partition in the earlier suit was due to the action of the Court in refusing leave to the plaintiff to amend the plaint. [p. 94, col. 1.]

Where a certain claim is omitted from the plaint and the plaintiff realising his mistake before the record is closed asks for leave to amend; which is refused, though the omission of the claim from the plaint is due to the plaintiff, the rejection of the prayer for amendment is the direct cause of the omission of the claim from the suit. [p. 94, col. 1.]

The question whether a Deshgat is impartible and subject to the rule of primogeniture must be determined in each case, but in the Southern Maratha country, a Deshgat Vatan almost always descends according to the rule of primogeniture. [p. 94, col. 2.]

Timmangavda v. Rangangavda, (1878) P. J. 240; Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa, 4 B. 494: 7 I. A. 162; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 154; 3 Suth P. C. J. 757; 4 Ind. Jur. 421; 3 Shome L. R. 206; 7 C. L. R. 1; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 838 (P. C.), followed.

In the case of an ancient Deshgat Vatan in the Southern Maratha country which has never been divided, lands being given to the Kumar for maintenance and reverting to the eldest branch when their lines of descendants became extinct, the Court is justified in holding that the Vatan is impartible and descends according to the rule of primogeniture. [p. 95, col. 1 & 2.]

Per Crump, J.—A custom of primogeniture, if clearly proved, supersedes the general Hindu Law of descent. [p. 96, col. 1.]

Sindhojirav v. Naikojirav, 10 B. H. C. R. 228 followed.

Such a custom as the above is not, however, an unusual feature of Deshgat Vatans in the Southern Maratha country, but it is for the party who sets up the custom to establish it in each case. [p. 96, col. 1.]

The best evidence of impartibility is that over a long period of years there has been no partition. [p. 96, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Bijapur, in Suit No. 41 of 1918.

Mr. G. N. Thakor, (with him Mr. V. D. Limaye), for the Appellant.

Mr. H. C. Coyajee, (with him Mr. H. B. Gumaste), for Respondents Nos. 1 and 8.

Mr. G. R. Madbhavi, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.

Mcleod, C. J.—The plaintiff filed Suit No. 41 of 1918 in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Bijapur to recover his one third share by partition of the property specified in Schedules A to E to the plaint, to get a declaration that the alienation of the property in Schedule D by his father by an award decree in Suit No. 2 of 1906 in the Bijapur District Court was null and void after his father's death and to get a declaration that he was entitled to a one-third share in the property in Schedule E after the death of defendant No. 6 together with past and future mesne profits.

Somappa his father had three sons, Krishnarao, defendant No. 1, Krishnappa defendant No. 2 and Maladevappa, the plaintiff. During his lifetime he divided the plaint property into 4 shares and gave each of his sons one share, keeping one for himself. Subsequently he willed away his own share in favour of his sons. In Suit No. 221 of 1913 filed by the Plaintiff in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Bijapur to recover his share under the partition and under his father's Will, it was held that the partition was unequal and unfair so the Court dismissed the suit. It was contended by the present defendant No. 1 in that suit that the property in suit was impartible, but no finding was recorded on that issue.

With regard to the property in Schedule D, an award decree was passed in Suit No. 2 of 1906 filed by the plaintiff's father whereby it was decided that defendants Nos. 3, 4 and 5 should get possession of the property and remain in possession until March 2, 1926. Defendant No. 6 was the mother of Somappa and the property in Schedule D was held by her for her lifetime only. The plaintiff claimed that all these properties were joint family properties, in which he was entitled to a share by partition.

The 1st defendant pleaded that the property in suit was impartible, that there was a custom in the Gani Deshgat that the property descended by primogeniture, the junior members of the family being entitled to maintenance only, and this is the main issue in the case. It was also contended that the plaintiff's claim for partition was barred by res judicata by reason of Suit No. 221 of 1913 in which the plaintiff might and ought to have asked, as an alternative, for partition.

The 2nd defendant in his written statement admitted the plaintiff's claim and asked that his one-third share should be awarded on the partition. Defendant No. 5 claimed to be in possession of the lands in Schedule D under a lease from defendant No. 4 and that he was entitled to enjoy them in pursuance of the decree in Suit No. 2 of 1906. Moreover the plaintiff's claim was barred by section 4 (a) of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act as the Collector refused to restore the lands to the plaintiff when he applied under section 5 of the Vatan Act.

Defendant No. 6 claimed the property in Schedule E as her absolute property.

I cannot agree with the learned Judge that the plaintiff's suit is barred by res judicata.

The cause of action in Suit No. 221 of 1913 was the partition deed executed by his father and there was no obligation on him to sue in the alternative for a partition of the property as joint family property. He certainly might have done so and he even asked the Court for leave to amend his plaint at a later stage but his application was rejected by the Court. In the first place I do not see myself why the plaintiff was bound to claim equal partition. He may very well have been content, if the Court declined to give effect to the partition made by the father, which was extremely favourable to him, to remain joint with his father. Secondly, if the Court refused to allow his amendment and referred him to a separate suit for partition, it is difficult to see how it can be said that the omission to have the question of equal partition decided was not due to the action of the Court. If a plaintiff realises his mistake before the record is closed and asks for leave to amend, though the omission of the claim from the plaint was due to the plaintiff, the rejection of the prayer for amendment would be the direct cause of the omission from the suit. On the question of the impartibility of the property as Deshgat Vatan, we had recently in F. A. No. 3 of 1920 to consider the same question with regard to a Deshgat Vatan in the District of Belgaum. My learned brother, as he stated in his judgment in that case, has considerable familiarity with the Vatans of these hereditary offices in the Southern Maratha country and apart from that there is the experience acquired in the cases which have come before this Court that the evidence is generally conclusive in each case that the Deshgat Vatan descends according to the rule of primogeniture. Though as pointed out by the Privy Council in Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa (1) the question must be determined in each case whether the Deshgat is impartible, it is impossible to exclude from one's mind the fact that impartibility is the rule rather than the exception, and as pointed out by this Court in Timmangavda v. Rangangavda (2) evidence is admissible to show that the custom exists in other families, not as being in any way conclusive by itself, but as assisting to show that the custom set up in the particular case before the Court was not an unusual one in the district in which the parties resided. The evidence in this case is all on the side of the 1st defendant. As plaintiff was unable to prove any previous partition in the family, he could only rely on the fact that his father had attempted to divide the property. But considering the inequality of the division he made, it would appear as if he had attempted to divide the property before his death as if it were his own instead of dividing it as if all were equally entitled as members of a joint family.

The 1st defendant relies on the various exhibits which have been put in from the records of the Inam Committee; Exhibit 148 is the statement made by Kasappa, father of Somappa. The earliest sanad he produced was granted in 1077 Hijri 1666 A. D. and as in 1855 the whole of the Vatan was entered in Kasappa's name that is evidence that the Vatan had never been divided. That, of course, would not be sufficient to prove impartibility, but there is considerable body of evidence to show that when there were opportunities for division no division was made, and that at various times lands were given to the Kumars or members of the junior branches of the family for maintenance and not as representing their shares. Exhibit 149 is the pedigree of the family produced from the records of the Inam Committee. The 1st defendant detailed in his evidence how lands were given to Bhaubands for maintenance, and what lands were in the possession of living Bhaubands. He said in cross-examination that such lands were to be continued to the Bhaubands till the line of male decendants become extinct when they reverted to the Desai. He was willing to give lands to the plaintiff and defendant No. 2 for maintenance, Witnesses (Exhibits 119 and 120) Kshtriya Desais of Achali and Patalkal State deposed as to the custom of impartiblity existing in their families. Exhibits 121 and 122 were acquainted with the family in suit and deposed to the fact that lands were given to the Kumars for maintenance. Exhibit 131 was Bhimrao, one of the Kumars. He was the great-grandson of Kallappa, brother of Narsappa Naik in Exhibit 149 and had four lands in his possession which had been given to his ancestors, though in cross-examination he said they were given to his father by Somappa. This witness's name appears in Exhibit 116 which was a list of survey number given for enjoyment to Kumars purporting to have been written by one Venkaji Krishna and was Exhibit 105 in Suit No. 221 of 1913. Venkaji, who is now dead, was examined in that case and his evidence has been put in as Exhibit 139 under section 32 of the Evidence Act.

(1) 4 B. 494; 7 I. A. 162; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 154; 8 Suth. P. C. J. 757; 4 Ind. Jur. 421; 3 Shome L. R. 206; 7 C. L. R. 1; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 838 (P. C.).
(2) (1878) P. J. 240.

That evidence was very important as Venkaji was the mukhtiar of Somappa. Appellant's Counsel contended very strongly that his statement and the list were inadmissible in evidence, but it is difficult to see how they can be excluded. Venkaji was called by the plaintiff in Suit No. 221 of 1913 to prove the will made by Somappa and was apparently hostile to defendant No. 1. He had to admit, however, in cross-examination that lands were given to the Kumars and that he had written the list Exhibit 105.

I think that as the suit property is very ancient Deshgat Vatan in the Southern Mahratha country which has never been divided, lands being given to the Kumars for maintenance and reverting to the eldest branch when their lines of descendants became extinct, the learned Judge was justified in holding that it was impartible. I think that the appeal fails and should be dismissed with costs.

Crump, J.—The parties to this suit are the three sons of one Somappa, and the plaintiff seeks for patition of the family property claiming to be entitled to a share of one-third. The property in question forms part of a Deshmukhi Vatan, and defendant No. 1 who is the eldest son, claims that the succession is by lineal primogeniture. The only substantial question in the appeal is whether defendant No. 1 has established the defence which he sets up.

There is no possible doubt as to the nature of the estate. It was suggested in argument that this was not a service-tenure, but the evidence is conclusive to the contrary. Though the sanad is not produced, it is clear from Exhibit 148 that Kasappa, the grandfather of the parties, appeared before the Inam Committee in 1855 when proceedings were being taken for the commutation of the Vatan. From his statement it would appear that the original grant was made in the 16th century and that it was as remuneration for services to be rendered as hereditary Deshmukhs of the Chimalgi Pargana. The word "Chawrat" (Vide Exhibit 116) shows at once the nature of the property. The matter is not open to any doubt. It is common ground that the lands were held by plaintiff's ancestor in the capacity of Desais or Deshmukhs and a Desai or Deshmukh in the Southern Mahratha country is a hereditary District Officer. Their duties were to collect the revenue in the pargana or revenue division, and as every one knows, the British Government introduced a settlement whereby these services were dispensed with on payment of a judi or quit rent amounting to four to six annas in every rupee of the assessment. These settlements received legislative sanction by clause (2) of section 15 of Bombay Act III of 1874. The property continues to be Vatan property within the meaning of section 4 of the Act, and subject to the restrictions which that Act or Act II of 1886 enacts as to succession or alienation. Those restrictions do not, however, touch the point before us but I have thought it well to preface my judgment by these remarks in view of what was said in argument.

For the purposes of the present question there is, I apprehend, no distinction between the various classes of District Hereditary offices. Whether it be a case of a Desai, a Deshmukh, a Nadgowda, or a Deshpande, the general rule must be taken to be that such Vatans are ordinarily partible and impartibility is an exception which may be established by evidence. It has been so decided by the Privy Council. [Adrishappa v. Gurushidappa (1)]. A custom of primogeniture, if clearly proved, supersedes the general Hindu Law of descent. [Sindhojirav v. Naikojirav (3)]. There can, however, be little doubt that such a custom is not an unusual feature of these Vatans; it has indeed been judicially recognized by this Court in more than one instance, the latest in the case of the Deshgat, which came before us in First Appeal No. 3 of 1920. It is not indeed surprising that this should be so if it is remembered that the lands were originally the emoluments of an hereditary office. Nevertheless, it is for the party who sets up the custom to establish it in each case.

The best evidence of impartibility is that over a long period of years there has been no partition. If at the same time it appears that the eldest member has succeeded to the bulk of the property, and that comparatively trifling portions have been assigned to the younger members, then we have an ordinary feature of these Vatans. There may be a practice in a Vatan family of long standing to lease the performance of the services of the Vatan in the hands of the elder branch and to provide the younger branches with maintenance only. When the practice is the result of an established custom, it will not be affected even if the services of the Vatan are dispensed with. [Savitriava v. Anandrav (4), Ramrao Trimbak Deshpande v. Yeshvantrao Madhavrao Deshpande (5).]

(3) 10 B. H. C. R. 228.
(4) 12 B. H. C. R. 224.
(5) 10 B. 327; 11 Ind. Jur. 24; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 606.

The pedigree of the family was produced by Kasappa in 1855. He was the tenth holder from the original grantee Kenchappa, and the heir by lineal primogeniture. At that date there were many branches in the family but the bulk of the estate was with Kasappa and he says "The vahivat came into my hands because I was the heir." The plaintiff admits that so far as he knows there has never been any partition in the family, and there is evidence that distant collateral members are in possession of small grants of land "for maintenance", which are far less than would have fallen to their share, had the ordinary Hindu Law of succession been applicable. One of these, Bhimraya is a witness, He is the grandson of Basappa, son of Kallappa, who is shown as living in the pedigee of 1855. He says "I have four lands in my possession; they have been given to me for maintenance. I do not know if I have any share in the Deshgat Vatan." In a previous suit between the parties one Venkaji was called as a witness for the plaintiff. He is dead and his evidence has been placed on the record in this suit [Exhibit 139]. He was the agent of Somappa the father of the parties and was instrumental in drafting the partition deed which led to this litigation. He stated that defendant No. 1 objected on the ground that the property was impartible. He was hostile to defendant No. 1. He said "I do not know whether the Deshgat property in dispute is partible or not." If Achutappa and Somappa (these are collateral members) were to get lands according to their shares they would have obtained more than this," that is to say, more than they actually hold. This witness was constrained to admit that Exhibit 105, now 116, was a statement in his handwriting. It appears that the members of the junior branches are styled "Kumars," and this statement is entitled "List showing the survey numbers given for enjoyment to the Kumars;" the statement shows that if any "Kumar" dies without an heir the lands revert to the Desai. It also shows that the lands are given for maintenance.

This evidence affords in my opinion prima facie proof that there is a family usage whereby the lands of this Desbgat are held by the eldest male member alone. There is evidence further that this is a local usage in the case of such tenures. The plaintiff has adduced no evidence whatever to the contrary and in my opinion the finding of the lower Court on the point is undoubtedly correct.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 238 OF 1920.

July 3, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh and Mr. Justice Ryves.

RAM DAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat BASANTI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92—Trusts, public and private, distinction between—Dedication, proof of—Test.

In private trusts the beneficial interest is vested absolutely in one or more individuals who are, or within a given time may be, definitely ascertained. On the other hand, a public trust has for its object the members of an uncertain and fluctuating body, and the trust itself is of a permanent and indefinite character and is not confined within the limitation prescribed to a settlement upon a private trust. A man can create a private trust by building a temple and an idol and endowing it with funds or income for strictly private purposes, not merely retaining the management and control in the hands of himself and his family but restricting the enjoyment to himself and his family or other individuals, and he may out of the warmth of his heart allow other persons outside the original beneficiaries to enjoy from time to time the advantages thereby created. On the other hand, a private individual may construct out of his private purse a private temple and idol retaining the control and management in his own hands and in that of his family or some other selected individuals and yet so conduct himself as to provide conclusive evidence of dedication by implication and by conduct. Once he has shown his intention to dedicate, the matter passes out of his hands and the beneficiaries to whom the use is dedicated have a right in such use. Where there is no express deed of dedication or document creating the trust, the Court has to depend almost entirely upon the history of the place and the user by people generally from time to time to decide whether it is a private or was intended to be a public trust. [p. 97, col. 2; p. 98, col. 1.]

In construing a dedication there is a broad difference between conduct which shows that the owner of the property is giving express permission from time to time to particular individuals and conduct which shows that he intends certain members of a class whom he desires to benefit to act indiscriminately without permission, that is to say, as of right. A useful test for a Judge to apply to see whether the evidence satisfies the conditions of the private trust, is to ask himself whether any of the acts testified to by the witnesses could have been prevented or penalised by proceedings for trespass. [p. 98, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Bareilly, dated the 23rd April 1920.

Mr. Umi Shankar Bajpai, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. P. Gosh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—We have come to the conclusion that the learned Judge has misdirected himself in this case as to what really is a public trust and that he has failed to appreciate the strong points in the evidence. The respondent has not been represented, but perhaps in view of the overwhelming character of the evidence it is not surprising. The suit is brought alleging that a certain temple and idol constituted a public trust, having been built and dedicated for the use and benefit of the Hindu public. That it was built and dedicated by the original owner out of his private purse, and as his private property, to be used for religious purposes, there can be no doubt whatever. No doubt also a man can create a private trust by building a temple and an idol and endowing it with funds or income for strictly private purposes, not merely retaining the management and control in the hands of himself and his family but restricting the enjoyment to himself and his family or other individuals, and he may out of the warmth of his heart allow other persons outside the original beneficiaries to enjoy from time to time the advantages thereby created but in such cases especially with a temple and idol publicly constituted and publicly accessible in which the appearance may be what one may describe as ambiguous, one would expect and ought to insist upon clear evidence of permission given or license given and permission withheld because it is equally true that a private individual may construct out of his private purse a private temple and idol retaining the control and management in his own hands and in that of his family or some other selected individuals and yet so conduct himself as to provide conclusive evidence of dedication by implication and by conduct. Once he has shown his intention to dedicate, the matter passes out of his hands and the beneficiaries to whom the use is dedicated have a right in such use. Where there is no express deed of dedication or document creating the trust, the Courts have to depend almost entirely upon the history of the place and the user by people generally from time to time, to decide whether it is private or was intended to be a public trust. The words "public" and "private" in this connection do not bear the same significance that they do in popular language: A public trust for worship by, for example, Hindus may be as private a place as well as can be conceived. Perhaps the best statement of the distinction between public and private trusts is to be found in Lewin on Trusts in Chapter II, page 18 of the 12th Edition. By public must be understood such as are constituted for the benefit either of the public at large or some portion of it answering a particular description. "In private trusts the beneficial interest is vested absolutely in one or more individuals who are, or within a given time may be, definitely ascertained. On the other hand public trust has for its objects the members of an uncertain and fluctuating body, and the trust itself is of a permanent and indefinite character and is not confined within the limits prescribed to a settlement upon a private trust." An equally useful definition is to be found in the notes to section 92 in Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's Commentary on the Code. "Private trusts," they say, "concern only individuals or families for private convenience or support. By public trust may be understood such as are constituted either for the benefit of the public at large," and for the rest of the definition they follow the notes precisely as in Lewin. There are passages in the learned Judge's judgment which show that he has confused this issue in his own mind.

There is a broad difference, when one comes to construe a dedication, between conduct which shows that the owner of the property is giving express permission from time to time to particular individuals and conduct which shows that he intends certain members of a class whom he desires to benefit to act indiscriminately without permission, that is to say, as of right. A useful test of a Judge to apply to see whether the evidence satisfies the conditions of the private trust, is to ask himself whether any of the acts testified to by the witnesses could have been prevented or penalised by proceedings for trespass. It is impossible to suppose, after reading the large body of evidence of respectable persons in this record, that anybody thought for a moment that they were committing acts of trespass. There is evidence that Kanhaiya Lal the father of the principal witness gave a house to Sri Ram the pujari not as his own, for he was prohibited from selling it, but as a residence for himself as pujari for the time being instead of living in the temple. This witness says that his father and grand-father used to contribute monthly expenses and also that his father did some formal act by way of appointing Sri Ram pujari. One witness said that lectures were held for Hindus on religious subjects. Other witnesses say that Hindu festivals were recognised and attended by members of the Hindu public in the neighbourhood. Others testify to a practice from time immemorial not merely of giving offerings of food which might be expected in any event but to definite subscriptions or periodical contributions for the purpose of repair and white-wash. One old gentleman in the service of the Raja Saheb says that the Raja Saheb used to contribute to the up-keep. A Bania who was called said that an account-book was kept, a fact which is not alleged by anybody else, but which would appeal to him. This same bania explains that they used to present the present pujari not merely with money but with brickbats, which probably means something different from what it sounds to be and which we imagine must have been building material. So far as we know this evidence was uncontradicted. At any rate it stands very high as evidence which is palpably true in the main and given by persons of position and good caste and many of them of advanced age with no possible interest, and the conclusion is inevitable that, however much the property might have been in private ownership and the control intended to remain in private ownership, the use and benefit of the temple was dedicated and intended for the use and enjoyment of the Hindu community, and the case must, therefore, go back for trial upon the remaining issues.

Unfortunately we cannot leave the matter here. The learned Judge has not settled the issues satisfactorily and it being found to be a public charity one or two nice questions remain to be decided on which we propose to give some further directions. The remaining issues which have not been disposed of strike us as embarrassing in form. Indeed the issues generally in the case were not well conceived. It being now decided that it is a public trust the next question that arises is in whom is the appointment of the pujari vested. Probably little remains to be decided on this question. Everything points to its being vested in the family of the donor and having rightly descended to the present occupant, Musammat Basanti. That may be treated as the second issue.

The third issue then arises whether the present occupant has conducted herself improperly in such matters as to constitute a breach of trust. The evidence before us is all one way although not going into much detail, but if it is at all true that she is of bad character, or has allowed wine to be introduced into the temple, or has left it and gone away, or has wilfully excluded Hindus who have a right to worship there, she is clearly not a fit and proper person. Her absence today and the absence of anything helpful from her point of view on the record rather looks as though she has not got much to say, but it is possible that it is due to the Judge having taken a strong view on the legal question in her favour. If this third issue is decided in her favour, that is to say, if the Judge thinks she is a proper person to administer this trust and to act as pujari, then it seems that this suit must fail and no further step can be taken until she dies either childless or any member of the family claims to succeed her. But if this issue is determined against her then the fourth issue arises; "what is the best direction for the Court to give with a view to filling the vacancy in accordance with the intention of the donor." Upon this issue the plaintiffs were in an obvious difficulty apparently not having cleared their own minds or having obtained advice upon the subject. They suggested in their claim for relief that "some" other person may be appointed pujari and mutwalli and necessary directions may be given in that behalf. This is really, if the plaintiffs had had the courage to ask for it, asking the Court under section 2 (g) to settle a scheme and we think the Court must take this duty upon itself; that is to say, having come to the conclusion, if it does, that the last successor and present occupant is unfit and that there is no fit person answering the description of the donor's original intention, then he must by his decree formulate a scheme which will result in the appointment of a fit person most nearly approaching the wishes of the donor, and so frame his decree as not merely to dispose of the present crisis but to appoint the future pujari in such a way that no dispute can subsequently arise as to the legal title of the person appointed either by him or under his new scheme. It is not possible for us to formulate a scheme. We can do no more than suggest a convenient and useful way of providing for such an emergency, namely, by the appointment of a small committee of electors or trustees, always providing for an odd number in case of contest, who shall by a majority of votes appoint the new pujari and in such scheme the Judge may, if satisfied on proper materials with the individual, start the ball rolling by selecting an individual as pujari as the first successor, subsequent appointments to be made under the scheme. We may add that the Judge must do his best when formulating his scheme to put it into the decree in such a form that everybody can understand it; that it is decisive and simple so as to be workable not by those only who have heard and understood the case, but by those who come after and have nothing to guide them except the Judge's decree. The appeal must be allowed and the case remitted to the lower Court for re-hearing on the remaining issues in lieu of of what we have stated under O. XLI, r. 23, the fresh issues to be settled not necessarily in the exact words but as near as possible approximately in the following form, (1) In whom according to the intention of the original donor, is the office of the pujari vested? (2) Is the defendant Musammat Basanti a fit and proper person to remain pujari of this public trust? (3) If not what is the best scheme most nearly approximating the original intention of the trust for providing for the existing and future vacancy in the office of the pujari?

MAHARAJA OF KOLHAPUR v. SHRI BALA MAHARAJ.

The costs of this appeal and of the first hearing to abide the result of the suit.

Z. K. Re-trial ordered.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEALS FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

June 12, 1923.

Present:—Lord Chancellor, Viscount Haldane, Lord Parmoor, and Lord Phillimore.

THE MAHARAJA OF KOLHAPUR—APPELLANT

versus

SHRI BALA MAHARAJ AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

SHRI BALA MAHARAJ—APPELLANT

versus

THE MAHARAJA OF KOLHAPUR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), ss. 4, 12, scope of—Summary Settlement, question of—Reference to High Court—Lands held by Shri Tatya Maharaj, whether subject to Summary Settlement.

A claim that certain lands were not validly subjected to Summary Settlement falls within the purview of section 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act and can, therefore, be validly referred for decision to the High Court under section 12 of the Act. [p. 106, col. 2; p. 107, col. 1.]

The application in or about the year 1864 of the Summary Settlement under Bombay Acts II and VII of 1863 to lands then held by Shri Tatya Maharaj was valid and legal. [p. 107, col. 2.]

Consolidated appeals from the judgment of the Bombay High Court.

Sir J. Simon, K. C., Messrs. DeGruyther, K. C., Lowndes, K. C., Raikes and Remsay for the Appellant.

Messrs. Upjohn, K. C., Luxmon, K. C., and Parikh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Haldane—These are consolidated appeals from a decision of the High Court at Bombay on a question referred to it by the Government of Bombay, under section 12 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876). The question referred was whether the application in or about the year 1864 of the Summary Settlement under Bombay Acts II and VII of 1863 to certain lands then held by Shri Tatya Maharaj, which subsequently devolved on the late Baba Maharaj, was valid and legal. These Acts provided for the settlement of claims to exemption from payment of land revenue and for the guarantee of a title in perpetuity to the holder of the land, his heirs and assigns, without restriction by Government as to adoption, succession or transfer The Acts applied to holders of land the freedom of which from payment of land revenue had not been the subject of formal adjudication, where the holders had consented to submit the terms and condition of holding to Summary Settlement. But the Acts were not to apply where the land was held under treaty or was granted or held as a jagir or saranjam, or similar political tenure, which was defined to mean tenure created from or dependent on political considerations, the existence of which was to be determined by the Government.

Section 12 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act of 1876 gave the Government a general power to refer questions arising in the investigation of claims, which, but for the passing of that Act, could have been tried by a Civil Court, to the High Court at Bombay for decision.

MAHARAJA OF KOLHAPUR v. SHRI BALA MAHARAJ.

The circumstances under which the question which has arisen was referred to the High Court were these. Baba Maharaj died in 1897 In 1901 a dispute arose between the second appellant in the present appeals, Shri Bala Maharaj, as claimant to the lands the title to which is in controversy, and the first respondent, Shri Jagannath Maharaj, as to which of them was the validly adopted son of the late Baba Maharaj. Jagannath, who was then a minor, brought a suit in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Poona against Bala, who claimed to be the properly adopted son, to establish his own title. The special purpose of the suit was to have it determined that Jagannath had been validly adopted by Baba's widow, and that it was consequently impossible for her to make, as she had endeavoured to do, a second adoption of Bala less than two months later. A point relied on by the latter in his written statement was that the approval of His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur was necessary to such an adoption, and that such approval not having been given, the earlier adoption was void. In July 1906 the Subordinate Judge decided in favour of Jagannath holding that he had been validly adopted as the son of Baba. It was held, as the consequence, that no title or interest in the property of Baba had passed in Bala, and he was restrained by injunction from interfering with Baba's property. The High Court at Bombay reversed this, but the Privy Council, differing, restored the judgment of the Subordinate Judge.

To these proceedings the Maharaja, who was no party to them, finally took exception, and he and Bala made representations to the Government of Bombay to the effect that, as the adoption of Jagannath had not received the approval of His Highness, the adoption could have conferred no title to the propeity of Baba, and that it must go to Bala whose adoption the Maharaja had approved.

The Bombay Government thereupon referred the point raised by this claim to the High Court under section 12 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act of 1876. This section provides, as already stated, that if on the trial or investigation of any suit, claim or objection which but for the passing of the Act might have been entertained by a Civil Court, there arises any question on hich the Government desires the decision of the High Court, it may cause a statement to be prepared and refer the question for such decision. But by section 4 it is provided that no Civil Court is to exercise jurisdiction, inter alia, in the matter of any claim against the Government relating to lands held under treaty, or to lands granted or held as jagir or saranjam or on other political tenure, or to lands declared by Government, or by any officer duly authorised in that behalf, to be held for service. Unless, therefore, the claim in the case before their Lordships falls within these words, it is said that, as a Civil Court might have exercised jurisdiction, the Government had no power to refer the question which arose to the High Court.

Passing for the moment from the consideration of the point as to jurisdiction which arises under this section, it will be convenient to refer in the first place to the history of the dispute This is explained with sufficient accuracy in the statement submitted to the High Court by the Government of Bombay when defining the question referred. The history of the events which led to the reference to the High Court appears from the following abridgment of that statement:—

Shri Tatya Maharaj was a grandson of Shri Sidheshwar Maharaj, a learned and saintly man who at some date previous to 1800 was appointed by Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj III, the then ruler of Kolhapur, to be his spiritual preceptor. For the maintenance and dignity of the family of Shri Sidheshwar Maharaj hereditary grants of land had been made and hereditary honours, including the hereditary title of "Maharaj," conferred upon him by the said Maharaja of Kolhapur.

Upon the death of Shri Sidheshwar Maharaj in 1800, his property originally acquired from the Maharaja of Kolhapur was divided amongst his three sons, Baba, Nana and Bhau.

Between 1813 and 1821 Bhau Maharaj (Sidheshwar's youngest son) took an active part in Kolhapur politics, being then the Prime Minister of Kolhapur, and rendered valuable services to both the British Government and the Maharaja.

Upon the downfall of the Peshwa, Sir Thomas Munro, in 1818, when settling the Southern Mahratha Country which had fallen into the hands of the British Government, returned to Baba Maharaj (Sidheshwar's eldest son) three villages in Chikodi, which were previously held by him, and by sanad dated the 2nd August 1818, granted to Bhau Maharaj, as "inam dharmadaya," hereditarily three villages and one hamlet. The sanad stated that he was "great, worthy and a well-wisher of the Company's Government." The villages and hamlet so granted were Kerur, Hebal, Kadapur and Kochari, in the Talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee. This grant was subsequently confirmed on the 24th October 1819 by a sanad in the same terms signed by the Honourable Mountstuart Elphinstone.

In a letter dated the 28th June 1818 addressed to the Honourable Mountstuart Elphinstone, Sir Thomas Munro referred to the above grant (which he was then proposing to make) as "the new jahagir," and in his subsequent report to the same officer on the state of the Southern Mahratha Country, dated the 28th August 1818, Sir Thomas Munro stated that the villages were given to Bhau Maharaj as a "jahagir."

By a private letter dated the 2nd August 1818, Sir Thomas Munro informed His Highness the Maharaja of Kalhapur that Bhau Maharaj being a particular friend of the Honourable Company, it had been deemed necessary to make him the above grant.

On the 2nd August 1818, Sir Thomas Munro wrote an official letter to His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur referring to the above grant and the assistance given by Bhau Maharaj, and in a letter dated the 15th August 1818 and also addressed to His Highness the Maharaja, the Collector of Dharwar also referred to the services of Bhau Maharaj and characterised him as "a very worthy man indeed."

On the 25th October 1818 His Highness the Maharaja [rewarded] Bhau Maharaj for his political services by a gift of a lakh of rupees.

In 1818 the said Talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee were made over by Sir Thomas Munro to His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur subject (inter alia) to the grants made as above stated.

In 1821 His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur granted to Bhau Maharaj ten villages, several of which were within the said Talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee.

On the 24th January 1826 a treaty was concluded between the British Government and His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur which, after reciting that a treaty had been concluded in 1812 and that certain misunderstandings had arisen, declared, with a view to the removal of such misunderstandings and to the confirmation of the alliance, that the British Government acknowledged that the Districts of Chikodi and Manowlee which had been transferred to His Highness by a sanad under the signature of Sir Thomas Munro, were ceded to His Highness in full sovereignty, His Highness the Maharaja engaging on his part to respect the rights and privileges of the zemindars, inamdars and watandars of those districts. The treaty further declared by Article 7 as follows:—

"The Raja of Kolhapur promises to continue to Bhau Maharaj and Baba Maharaj their respective lands and rights agreeably to the Schedule annexed. The guarantee of the British Government to the enjoyment of the above lands and rights shall only continue during the life time of the above-mentioned persons, but the rights of their descendants as founded on sanad or custom shall not be prejudiced by the cessation of the said guarantee."

This treaty was ratified by the Governor-General in Council on the 10th March 1826. The Schedules, a copy of which was sent to Bhau Maharaj, included the villages granted to him by Sir Thomas Munro in 1818 and the villages granted to him by His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur in 1821.

Nana Maharaj (the second son of Sidheshwar) had died without issue in 1816 leaving a widow. By order dated the 31st January 1826, the Sir Collector and Political Agent, Dharwar, dealt with the succession to the share of Sidheswar's property which came to Nana upon partition after the death of the former. The order laid down that the widow was entitled to enjoy the property during her life but that she had no right to deal with it by way of gift, sale or mortgage; that she was not to make any adoption, and that after her death the property was to go to Baba Maharaj and Bhau Maharaj and their sons. This property was included in the Schedule to the Treaty of 1826.

A further treaty between the British Government and the Maharaja of Kolhapur was signed on the 23rd October 1827. The treaty recited the treaty of 1826 and stated that His Highness had uniformly evinced a total disregard of the friendship of the British Government and in violation of the conditions contained in Art. 4 of the treaty of 1826 had repeatedly infringed the rights of the inamdars and watandars of the Talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee, and that it, therefore, became necessary that His Highness should give back to the British Government the said Talukas "in the same state in which he received them" and that His Highness thereby agreed so to do. Article 3 provided as follows:—

"In the seventh Article of the said Treaty the possessions of Bhau Maharaj and Baba Maharaj were guaranteed to them for the terms of their respective lives only (provisions being made that the rights of their descendants, as founded on sanad or custom, should not be prejudiced by the cessation of the said guarantee). As, however, His Highness has never ceased to annoy and distress these persons by seizing their villages and other property, it has been deemed necessary to extend the guarantee of the British Government to their descendants, and His Highness accordingly engages never to molest them."

The Talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee accordingly passed into the possession of the British Government, but the Political Agent raised the question whether Government should retain the whole benefit of Article 2 of the treaty of 1827, which provided that the two Talukas should be given back to the British Government in the same state in which His Highness received them, or whether subsequent grants were to be considered valid, and he submitted a list of inams which according to the strict letter of the treaty might have been resumed, but which he had allowed to remain in the possession of the proprietors. That list included the villages granted to Bhau Maharaj and Baba Maharaj by the Maharaja between 1818 and 1827, while the Talukas were under his sovereignty, and it stated that they were given up "as being included in the Schedule of their possession guaranteed by the Honourable Company," i.e., the Schedule to the Treaty of 1826. The Government of Bombay, by letter dated the 23rd May 1828, approved of the Political Agent's proposals and authorised him to carry them into effect.

Bhau Maharaj died in 1837, and on the 4th January 1838, Government inquired of the Agent for Sardars whether the deceased held any possession resumable at his death. The Agent replied, on the 3rd March 1838, that all the possession held by Bhau Maharaj were guaranteed by the third Article of the Treaty of 1827, and that from all the sanads and other documents which he had examined, it appeared that all such possessions were hereditary and not resumable at his death. The Agent further reported that Bhau Maharaj left two sons, Huree Hur Pandit (alias Tatva Maharaj) and Vishwumbhur Pandit (alias Dada Maharaj).

In 1828 Bhau Maharaj had petitioned Government to be allowed to exchange one of the villages granted to him by Sir Thomas Munro (supra) for others situated near Poona, where he usually lived. The exchange was effected (after Bhau Maharaj's death) by sanad dated the 7th February 1838 signed by the Principal Collector of Poona, whereby the villages of Vadgaum, Koarlee, Pimpulgaum and Kassgaum (together with other lands) in the Poona District, were granted to Bhau's sons in exchange for Keyroor, one of the villages granted by Sir Thomas Munro.

In 1844 the widow of Nana Maharaj in spite of the order referred to (supra) purported to adopt one Appa, a grandson of Baba Maharaj, but the Government ruled in 1857 that "the consent of the Kolhapur Government not having been obtained to the adoption, and the difficulty of proof as to the consent of Tatya Maharaj to the arrangement are facts which are fatal to the claim of Appa Maharaj."

During the years 1851 to 1864, which covered the period of inquiry into the titles to Inam Estates in the districts in question, Raoji Maharaj was the representative of the elder branch of the family of Shri Sidheshwar Maharaj and Tatya Maharaj, the representative of the younger branch. In 1851 Tatya Maharaj submitted his kaifiat, or written statement, to the Inam Commission, Poona, in which he stated that the sanads relating to his lands had been scrutinised and signed by Mr. Baber, the Political Agent and Collector at Dharwar, who had also registered the schedules of possessions and sent the schedule to him. The Assistant Inam Commissioner afterwards inspected the sanads and returned them.

On the 11th June 1857 Tatya Maharaj wrote to the Assistant Inam Commissioner, Belgaum, who had called for the sanads, stating that they had been sent to him. The letter went on to point out that the grants had been enjoyed under the guarantee of the Company's Government and that inquiries had already been held about them many times.

In 1859 an inquiry was held as to the succession to the villages in the Poona District which had been exchanged for the villages of Keyroor in 1838 (supra) and the Sub-Assistant Inam Commissioner reported that Tatya Maharaj's (Huree Hur Pandit's) claim appeared to be firmly based on the recognised competency of the grantor and the guarantee of the British Government under the treaties above referred to. Acting upon such report, the Acting Inam Commissioner decreed that the property "be continued in Inam for so long as there may be in existence any male lineal descendant of Wasudeo Pundit, alias Bhau Maharaj."

In 1861 Summary Settlement was being proposed and Tatya Maharaj objected to its application to his possessions of the ground that they were held "under treaty." The Revenue Commissioner, Southern Division, on the 1st February 1862, referred to the Government of Bombay for decision under the Summary Settlement Reules XX (Clause C), the question whether Tatya Maharaj held any of his possession within the dominions of the British Government on political tenure. The Revenue Commissioner was informed in reply by letter dated the 6th March 1862 that His Excellency in Council

"does not consider that a prima facie case has been made out for excluding Tatya Maharaj's lands from the benefit of the Summary Settlement on the ground of their being held on political tenure. His Excellency in Council accordingly directs that the terms of the Summary Settlement be offered to Tatya Maharaj If he refuses to accept the unassailable title thus offered it will remain for further consideration whether any and what inquiry should be instituted into the title on which he holds the lands."

On the 28th March 1862 the Collector of Poona wrote to Tatya Maharaj requesting him to state in writing whether he agreed to the Summary Settlement being applied to his Inam holdings in British territory. He replied on the 29th March 1862 that since the time of his father the villages and lands had been continued to him through the friendship and favour of Government and this had been communicated in detail to the Agent for Sardars and the Revenue Commissioner, and continued: "In spite of it Government are passing the order and it cannot be helped. I therefore agree to the Summary Settlement being applied to the Inam villages and land, etc.....

In June 1862 Raoji Maharaj and Tatya Maharaj were served jointly by the Collector of Belgaum with formal notice giving them the option of either having the titles to their properties in the Belgaum District inquired into and adjudicated upon or of paying quit rent and nazarana and getting an absolute property in the holdings.

By letters dated respectively, the 14th and 25th August, 1862, Raoji Maharaj objected to paying quit rent and nazarana on the grounds that the titles had been already investigated by Government officers and that the holdings were guaranteed by treaty. He asked that the notice might be withdrawn.

The Summary Settlement Act (Bom. Act II of 1863) was passed on the 9th April 1863.

On the 19th April 1863 the Collector of Belgaum informed Raoji that the Government had ruled that the Irams were not of such a nature as to preclude the application to them of the Summary Settlement Act (supra) and that it would, therefore, be applied.

By his reply dated the 10th June 1863 Raoji referred to the objections already put forward and stated that he was about to make a submission to Government in the matter.

On the 19th June 1863 the Collector of Belgaum again wrote to Raoji referring to the decision of Government that the Summary Settlement was applicable to his Inam holdings and informing him that notice had been served and that if he was unwilling to accept the Summary Settlement and desired an investigation into title under Act XI of 1852 he would have to furnish due security.

Raoji then, on the 6th July 1863, wrote setting out in detail his grounds of objection and submitting a prayer to Government that as the villages were guaranteed the title should not be investigated.

On the 2nd November 1863 the Revenue Commissioner, Southern Division, requested Colonel Etheridge, the Settlement Officer, Southern Division, "to prepare for submission to Government a comprehensive report indicating all the villages held by the family affected by the order contained in paragraph 3 of Government letter No. 860, dated 6th March 1862, and stating how the offer of Summary Settlement had been received by the holders."

Colonel Etheridge accordingly wrote to Raoji Maharaj on the 30th November 1863 and to Tatya Maharaj on the 2nd December 1863. As the result of his letters both Raoji and Tatya agreed to accept a Summary Settlement.

The Summary Settlement was accordingly applied to all the possessions of Raoji Maharaj and Tatya Maharaj in British India.

The Settlement was so applied without reference to or the consent or approval of His Highness the Maharaja of Kolapur.

In 1866 Tatya Maharaj died, and there were various claimants to his estate, one of whom was Baba Maharaj, who claimed to be an adopted son. The then Maharaja of Kolhapur was a minor and the British Government had assumed the administration of the State. The various claimants submitted their claims to British Government and the matter was referred to the Political Agent to report. Upon receipt of his report the Government of Bombay in the Political Department passed a Resolution No. 2105, dated the 24th June 1867, of which the following are the material paragraphs:—

"(12) The main question being whether the adoption should be recognised by Government, it is necessary first to obtain a clear idea as to the meaning and effect of its recognition by Government."

"(13) The recognition of the adoption can have effect merely as regards the right of the adopted son to succeed to the Inam lands, and here it must be mentioned that these lands are situated partly in British territory and partly in Kolhapur territory."

"(14) Now the lands in British territory have been included in the Summary Settlement under Bombay Act II of 1863 and the recognition by Government of the heir of the deceased Sirdar can, as regards these lands, have no meaning beyond a determination to whom the Government should primarily look for the payment of the nazarana commutation and quit rent due to Government under that Summary Settlement. As for the rights of any persons to succeed to these lands, whether by adoption or otherwise, their recognition by Government can have no effect whatever."

"(15) But as regards the holdings within the Kolhapur State, the recognition of the adoption by Government would have a distinct legal effect, inasmuch as under the laws of that principality the recognition by the Raja is essential to the validity of the adoption as entitling to continuance of the Inam holdings, and the Government is now in the place of the Raja."

The Resolution proceeded to order that the matter should be sent back to the Political Agent for a further report.

After receipt of the further report the Government of Bombay passed a final Resolution (No. 2610, dated the 21st November 1867) the material parts of which are as follows:—"The Governor in Council considers that the objections put forward by the various petitioners to the adoption of Wassoodeo Pandit (Baba Maharaj) by the late Tatya Maharaj have been satisfactorily disposed of. The adoption should, therefore, now be recognised on the part of the Kolhapur State....." "With reference to paragraph 26 of the Political Agent's report, care should be taken not to sanction any adoptions save from lineal male descendants of Shidesh-war Maharaj." (Paragraph 26 of that report dealt with a claim by the widow of a nephew of Tatya Maharaj that the right to adopt an heir rested with her.) This Resolution received the approval of the Secretary of State for India in Council in a despatch dated the 14th May 1868.

The acknowledged representatives of the family of Shri Sidheshwar Maharaj still bear the honorific title of "Maharaj" and are held in high reverence and esteem by His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur.

Baba Maharaj died in 1897 possessed of villages and lands both in British India and in Kolhapur, being those mentioned in the schedule aforesaid, the villages and lands in British India being part of those to which Summary Settlement was applied, as before stated. He left a Will whereby he appointed five trustees (one of whom declined to act) and directed his widow, Tai Maharaj, in certain events, which happened, to adopt a son. On the 28th June 1901 the widow purported to adopt Jagganath, whose adoption was supported by the four trustees who acted but did not receive the approval and sanction of His Highness the Maharaja of Kolhapur. On the 10th August 1901 the widow purported to adopt Bala Maharaj. His Highness the Maharaja approved of the latter adoption and sanctioned and recognised it. Jagganath filed a suit for a declaration that his adoption was valid; and it was ultimately decided by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 1914, as already stated, that Jagganath was the validly adopted son of Baba Maharaj.

It was stated to the High Court in the present refererce that His Highness the Maharaja and Bala Maharaj contended that no adoption which had not received the sanction and approval of His Highness could confer a title to the property in question, and that succession to the same would have to be determined in accordarce with the terms of the guarantee in the treaties and the orders of Government based thereon, i.e., the property in question should have to go to Bala Maharaj, whose adoption was sanctioned by His Highness.

The High Court held that it had jurisdition to entertain the reference, and the question referred was accordingly dealt with by Macleod, C. J., and Pratt and Fawcett, JJ. These learned Judges decided that the lands in question were not held either under treaty or on political tenure, and that the application of the Summary Settlement to the lands in question had been valid.

Reverting to the point as to jurisdiction under the Act of 1876, to which their Lordships have made reference earlier, they think that the High Court held rightly that it had jurisdiction to decide the question referred. This in substance turned on whether there was actually a claim against the Government relating to lands held under treaty, or as saranjam or on other political tenure. The Maharaja of Kolhapur had himself, in their Lordships' opinion, a claim coming within the language of the Act. He was seeking to have it declared that the lands in question were not subject to the Summary Settlement and should, therefore, go to Bala, whose adoption he had sanctioned. There was accordingly a claim against the Government, jurisdiction as to which under the Act of 1876 was excluded by section 4. this claim being that the lands were held under treaty or as saranjam or on other political tenure; and as the Maharaja's position and rights on the question of adoption were not affected by the result of the proceedings which were disposed of by the decision of the Privy Council, for to these proceedings he had not been a party, the real question is whether power to answer the question referred to by the Government did not come to the High Court because the case was one of the cases excluded by section 4. Their Lordships agree with the High Court of Bombay in thinking that the claim in question was one of those excluded by section 4, and was, therefore, referable to that Court. They agree also with the conclusion at which the High Court arrived upon the merits.

They are of opinion that the nature of the title of Bhau Maharaj was really defined by the sanad of the 2nd August, 1818 and the later confirmatory sanad of 24th October 1919 referred to in the statement of the question laid before the High Court. In the first of these sanads Sir Thomas Munro, when settling the Southern Mahratha Country, which had fallen into the hands of the British Government, granted to Bhau three villages and a hamlet forming the bulk of the lands in question. The grant was made to Bhau as Inam Dharmadaya and was to be hereditary. The siginfication of such a grant is that it was made on grounds of religion, and not on political grounds. Their Lordships agree with the learned judges of the High Court that the mere fact that in occasional correspondence the grant is referred to as "jagir" or "saranajam", i. e., political cannot derogate from the effect of the language of the grant itself. They also think that the question whether the tenure was political was one which was for determination by the Government under the provisions of the interpretation section (16) of the Summary Settlement Act II of 1863, and that, by treating the title as one to which the Act applied, the Government must be taken to have determined that the tenure was not political. It appears, moreover, from a formal letter which was before the High Court that on the 6th March 1862, just before the Summary Settlement Acts were passed, the Governor in Council had determined that no prima facie case had been made out for the exclusion of the lands from the settlement on the ground of their being held on political tenure.

Nor do their Lordships think that the lands can be properly said to have been held "under treaty." It is true that the treaty of 1827 referred to in the statement extended the guarantee of Bhau's title by the British Government to his descendants. But the correspondence with the Government at the time, also referred to in the statement, shows that Bhau's original title was not disturbed when action was taken against the Maharaja by the Government. Bhau, therefore, remained entitled under the terms of the original grant. Their Lordships agree on this point with the view taken of the effect of the treaty of 1827 by the learned Judges of the High Court.

As the result of the lands being thus brought under the Act of 1863 they became under section 2 the "heritable and transferable property of the holders, their heirs and assigns, without restriction as to adoption, collateral succession or transfer" in perpetuity.

It was, therefore, not only competent to the Bombay Government to refer the question they did to the High Court but the decision given on that question was well founded.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeals should be dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeals dismissed.

Solicitors for Appellants:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for Respondent—Messrs. Downer & Johnson.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 145 OF 1921.

May 8 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Gokul Prasad and Mr. Justice Stuart.

JETHU MISIR—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GODAWARI DUTT AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O.

JETHU MISIR v. GODAWARI DUTT.

XXI, rr. 58, 63—Decree for possession, failure to execute, effect of—Admission of decree-holder's title by judgment-debtor—Suit, fresh, whether barred—Adverse possession—Claim proceeding—Notice to judgment-debtor, absence of—Judgment-debtor, whether bound by order.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for possession of a house against the defendant but failed to execute it as the latter admitted his title and paid the costs of the suit. Subsequently the defendant asserted an adverse title to the house and plaintiff again brought a suit for possession of the house:

Held, (1) that in view of the admission by the defendant of plaintiff's title subsequent to the decree in the previous suit the present suit was not barred by the provision contained in section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(2) that defendant's possession after the admission made by him was not adverse to the plaintiff.

Where a judgment-debtor has no notice of any claim made by a third person to property attached in execution of the decree, he is not adversely affected by any order passed on the claim.

Mannu Lal v. Harsukh Das, 3 A. 233; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 99, followed

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Allahabad, dated the 1st November 1920.

Mr. S. D. Sinha, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. N. Malaviya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for possession of a house.

The defence pleaded was (1) adverse possession (2) that as the plaintiffs' father had already obtained a decree for possession against the defendant and had failed to execute it, therefore, no second suit lay, and (3) that, when this house had been attached by one Baijnath a creditor of Godawari Dutt, the defendant appellant, put in an objection under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Civil Procedure Code, and succeeded in it and as Godawari Dutt brought no suit within one year under r. 63, so the title of the appellant to the property became absolute. All these pleas were found against the defendant by both the lower Courts which have decreed the claim. The defendant comes here in second appeal. The first plea argued before us was that of adverse possession. This is disposed of by the lower Appellate Court with the finding that Mania Lal, the former owner of the house, admitted the plaintiffs' title on the 15th of February 1908 when he sold the remaining portion of the house to the plaintiffs. The present defendant, Jethu, did not set up any title adverse to the plaintiffs independently in himself but claimed to be in possession with the permission of Mania Lal so that there was no adverse assertion of title by the present defendant up to the year 1907 when the suit between the present plaintiffs' father and Mania Lal was fought. It appears, however, that he did raise a question of adverse title in the year 1913 when he objected to the attachment and sale of this property in execution of the decree of Baijnath against Godawari Dutt. That portion of the claim was within 12 years from the date of the institution of the present suit. The plea of adverse possession was rightly repelled by the Court below and we disallow it.

The next question is that the present suit is not maintainable because of the previous suit of 1907 as the finding of the lower Appellate Court is that, after the decree of 1907, Mania Lal, the original owner of the house, admitted the plaintiffs' title and paid the costs of the suit. This was in 1908. In these circumstances we do not see how the present suit is barred by section 37 of the Code of Civil procedure. The then judgment-debtor admitted the plaintiffs' title and paid the costs of the litigation. The present suit is, however, based on the allegation that the defendant-appellant denies the plaintiffs' title and sets up a title in himself. Section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code is, therefore, no bar to the present suit.

The third point argued before us was that the title of the defendant-appellant had become complete because of the failure of Godawari Dutt, the then judgment-debtor to question the order passed under O. XXI, r. 58, Civil Procedure Code, by a suit under rule 63. There is nothing on this record to show that the judgment-debtor had any notice of the objection made by Jethu Misir and having regard to the case of Mannu Lal v. Harsukh Das (1), with which we see no reason to differ, the present suit is not time barred by r. 63. These are the only points raised in this appeal. They have all failed. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

(1) 3 A. 233; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 99.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 163 OF 1922.

April 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

DURGA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JAMNA PRASAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6 (a)—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Reversionary right, transfer of—Possession not delivered—Future conveyance—English decisions, application of.

An immediate transfer by a next reversioner of his reversionary rights, being in contravention of section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, is unlawful and void with reference to section 23 of the Contract Act. [p. 112, col. 1.]

A transfer by a next reversioner of his reversionary rights, where the deed of transfer declares that the vendee has become absolute owner of the transferred property and been put in possession, is not to be interpreted as a contract for conveyance in future when the estate fell into possession, merely because immediate possession could not be given at the time of the transfer.

Harnath Kuar v. Indar Bahadur Singh, 71 Ind. Cas. 629; 50 I. A. 69; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 403; 9 O. & A. L. R. 270; 9 O. L. J. 652; 44 M. L. J. 489; 37 C. L. J. 346; 45 A. 179; 27 C. W. N. 949; 18 L. W. 383; 26 O. C. 223; 33 M. L. T. 216 (P. C.), followed.

Bisheshar Dayal v. Har Raj Kuar, 66 Ind. Cas. 622; 8 O. L. J. 346; Khurshaid Ali v. Rashid Husain, 9 O. C. 331, Raj Mohkam Singh v. Raja Rup Singh, 15 A. 352; 20 I. A. 127; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 327; 17 Ind. Jur. 376; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 943 (P. C.), Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi, 21 C. 496 at p. 502; 21 I. A. 26; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 399; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 134; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 961 (P. C.) and Shiam Sundar v. Dilganjan Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 540; 20 O. C. 155; 4 O. L. J. 380, distinguished.

The principle that an executant is bound in foro conscientiae to make good his promise when he obtains the estate in possession is not applicable to India. [p. 111, col. 1.]

Courts in India are bound to give effect to plain provisions of the Statute Law, instead of following a course of English decisions, which are based on long established practice rather than on principle. [p. 111, col. 2.]

Kakaralapudi Lakshmi Narayana v. Kandukuri Veera Sarabha, 29 Ind. Cas 241; 39 M. 554; 17 M. L. T. 419; 28 M. L. J. 650; (1915) M. W. N. 626, relied upon.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 4th March 1921, setting aside the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 12th January 1920.

Messrs. Haider Husain and Bisheshar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellants.

Mr. Zahur Ahmad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Prag and Chandika, plaintiffs, purchasers from Biru, defendant, sued for possession of a one-fourth share of the property in suit. Their suit was dismissed by the Trial Court of the Subordinate Judge of Rai Bareli. The appeal of the plaintiffs was first dismissed on preliminary issues by the District Judge of Rai Bareli, but on remand by this Court on second appeal the plaintiffs' suit was ultimataly decreed by the lower Appellate Court. The defendants, Durga and Badal, have thereupon brought this second appeal.

The property in suit belonged to Ghissa; and the following pedigree will show his successors-in-interest and the dates of their deaths:—

GHISSA

Kali Charan, died 1897, widow Musammat Gulaba, died 28th October 1915.	Durga Prasad, died 1898. widow Musammat Menda, died February 1918
	Badri Prasad, died 1899, widow, Musammat Phulla died 1910.

The defendant Biru and one Narain were the next reversioners in equal degree to the property of Kali Charan, son of Ghissa and Badri Prasad his grandson. While the property was in the possession of Musammat Gulaba, widow of Kali Charan, and Musammat Menda, mother of Badri Prasad, they transferred the shares in their possession—Menda to her brother Mewa Lal (defendant No. 2 here) and Musammat Gulaba to her son-in-law Sukhnandan. For the purposes of the appeal here there is a finding of fact binding on this Court that Musammat Menda was own mother of Badri Prasad and not a step mother. Biru and Narain had no means to start a protracted litigation and recover property from Sukhnandan or Mewa Lal, so on 13th December 1916 they sold half the property to the defendants Durga, and Badal, under a sale-deed (Exhibit C-4) for a sum of Rs. 2,000. At the time the estate of Kali Charan had fallen into possession, but Musammat Menda was alive. The vendors, however, did not accept Musammat Menda as Badri Prasad's own mother and claimed that she was a trespasser. No action was taken by the purchasers to oust Sukhnandan and Musammat Menda till after the death of Musammat Menda in February 1918. In March of that year the vendors and vendees applied for mutation and finally the names of Narain and Biru were entered. On 16th January 1919 Durga and Badal brought a civil suit against Biru and Narain for possession of the property sold to them. The copy of the order sheet (Exhibit C-2), dated 21st January 1919, shows that the defendants to this suit were called upon to file a written statement on 25th February while the hearing was fixed for the 27th. In the meantime Biru was run in for theft of a tree and put in the lock up. The plaintiff Chandika stood surety for him and got him released on 19th February. On 25th February the plaintiffs, Prag and Chandika, obtained a sale-deed of one-fourth of the property in suit, that is, half of Biru's share from Biru for a consideration of Rs. 1,000. The suit brought by Durga and Badal continued after that and on 7th March it was compromised and a decree was passed in favour of Durga and Badal against Biru and Narain for their claim with the exception of a certain grove, which they released under the compromise. There was also a suit by Biru, Narain, Durga and Badal against Mewa Lal and this was decreed on 19th November 1919 (decree Exhibit C26).

On 26th July 1919 Prag and Chandika brought the present suit against Biru, Mewa Lal, Durga and Badal for recovery of possession of one-fourth of the property in suit on the basis of the sale-deed of 25th February 1919. As stated above the suit was dismissed by the Trial Court and afterwards by the Court of Appeal. The District Judge held that the bargain evidenced by the sale in suit was hard and unconscionable and that it was obtained by the exercise of undue influence. These findings render the agreement voidable and so the sale in favour of the plaintiffs and consequently their suit failed. On second appeal a learned Judge of this Court disagreed with the findings of the lower Appellate Court and remanded the appeal to it for trial of the other issues. On this remand the learned District Judge held (1) that the sale in favour of the defendants, Durga and Badal, was vitiated by the provisions of section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act and (2) that the compromise between Biru on one side and Durga and Badal on the other in the suit brought by Durga and Badal was collusive and so it did not operate as a bar against the plaintiffs' claim, as it would otherwise have done, under section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act.

These two findings are now attacked in appeal here by the defendants, Durga and Badal, who alone have appealed.

There was a third argument which, in my opinion, can no longer be urged. It was alleged that the consideration of the contract in favour of the plaintiffs was unlawful as it was opposed to public policy. The consideration of the sale was the probable expense of the litigation which Prag and Chandika had undertaken to launch against Mewa Lal and Sukhnandan. It was admitted that borrowing money for the purposes of litigation on a promise by the vendee to run a lawsuit was not unlawful. It was, however, urged that the contract became unlawful and against public policy because it was hard and unconscionable. It was pointed out that though the sale consideration was Rs. 1,000 the plaintiffs had spent nothing in litigation. I shall not enter into the merits of this issue because this Court has already held the contract not to be hard and unconscionable.

This Court has mentioned this argument in its judgment, dated 17th November 1921 and repelled it for reasons given therein. The same argument is advanced here again under the guise of the contract being contrary to public policy, but in essence it is the same.

It was argued on behalf of the appellants that the transfer in their favour was not an immediate sale, but an agreement to transfer property in future and that, therefore, the provisions of section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act had no operation here. The following rulings were quoted in support :

Bisheshar Dayal v. Har Raj Kuar (1), Kanhaiya Lal v. Gajadhar Prasad, First Civil Appeal No. 79 of 1910 decided on 4th July 1910, Khurshaid Ali v. Rashid Husain (2), Raja Mohkam Singh v. Raja Rup Singh (3), Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shalukz Bibi (4). Except in the unreported case the bar of section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act was not considered in any of these cases. They all relate to the interpretation of the documents produced in those cases. As regards the unreported case the learned Judge who decided it held that the terms of the document produced before him showed that the transaction was in reality nothing more nor less than an agreement to convey property in future. It is true that he went on further to say "Agreements of this nature are not void because they happen to be made at a time when the interest of the executant is merely one in expectancy, and Courts in England as well as in this country have enforced them on the ground that the executant is bound in foro conscientiæ to make good his promise when he obtains an estate in possession." Whatever the law in England may be, it may be said with great respect that the principle will not be applicable in India. The same learned Judge (now Mr. Justice Lindsay) refused to apply this principle of equity some years later in 1917 in Shiam Sundar v. Dilganjan Singh (5). In the case reported as Kakarlapudi Lakshmi Narayana v. Kandukuri Veera Sarabha (6) the learned Chief Justice rightly said that Courts in India are bound to give effect to the plain provisions of the Statute Law, instead of following a course of English decisions, which are based on long established practice rather than on principle. On page 558* of the report the learned Chief Justice said: "On this question looked at apart from authority, I should not entertain any doubt as it seems futile to forbid such transfers of expectancies in contracts to transfer them are to be enforced as soon as the estate falls into possession." In my opinion the consideration of the sale-deed in favour of the defendants-appellants was unlawful because it was of such a nature that, if permitted, it would defeat the provisions of section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act. (See section 23, Contract Act.)

It is true that in the documents there are some words that the parties to the contract shall take possession in equal shares after success in litigation, and that the vendors shall not compromise any suit without the permission of the transferees. At the same time there are other words making over possession immediately to the transferees from the date of the transfer. It is declared that the vendees had become absolute owners of half the property, over which they have been put in possession. If every such document where immediate possession cannot be given is to be interpreted as a contract for a conveyance in future, when the estate falls into possession, the definite object of section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act would be frustrated. It would be possible to evade prohibition by representing that possession was not possible at the time of the transfer and could only

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 622; 8 O. L. J. 346.
(2) 9 O. C. 331.
(3) 15 A. 352; 20 I. A. 127; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 327; 17 Ind. Jur. 376; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 943 (P. C.).
(4) 21 C. 496 at p. 502; 21 I. A. 26; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 399; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 134; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 961 (P. C.).
(5) 39 Ind. Cas. 540; 20 O. C. 155; 4 O. L. J. 380.
(6) 29 Ind. Cas. 241; 39 M. 554; 17 M. L. T. 419; 23 M. L. J. 650; (1915) M. W. N. 626.

*Page of 30 M.—[Ed.]

take effect when the expectancy of the vendor matured into title. As regards the sale-deed in suit it has to be remembered that the estate of Kali Charan had already fallen into possesssion and there was no bar to the transfer of half of that estate. It was only Durga Prasad's estate which was in expectancy at the time because of the life-estate of Musammat Menda. As regards that property also the parties to the contract believed that Musammat Menda was a trespasser and not a rightful owner. In Harnath Kuar v. Indar Bahadur Singh (7) a Hindu next reversioner sold half his estate in reversion, declaring by the sale-deed that when he succeeds he would put the vendee in proprietary possession. Both the Courts in India and the Privy Council held this to be a transfer of an expectancy and, therefore, void under section 23 of the Contract Act. In this case possession was to be given when the estate fell into possession, yet the transaction was not treated as a contract for sale to take effect in future. I uphold the finding of the lower Appellate Court that what was sold to the defendants with respect to Durga Prasad's estate was a chance of reversion and that, therefore, the sale was invalid under section 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act and 23 of the Contract Act.

There is a finding of fact of the lower Appellate Court against the defendant-appellant that the compromise of 7th March 1919 was collusive. It was argued on behalf of the appellants that this was based on conjecture and not supported by any evidence. The learned Judge, however, has given satisfactory reasons in support. He has pointed out that Biru did enter into a contest by filing a written statement on 25th February and that he was won over by the defendants-appellants by the bribe of a grove which they released in his favour. A defence to the suit of the defendants-appellants was possible as regards half the property included in that suit because as regards that property the transfer was of an expectancy. A finding of fact based on sound reasons is binding on this Court.

All the three grounds of appeal are untenable and I dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

N. H.

(7) 71 Ind. Cas. 629; 50 I. A. 69; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 403; 9 O. & A. L. R. 270; 9 O. L. J. 652; 44 M. L. J. 489; 37 C. L. J. 346; 45 A. 179; 27 C. W. N. 949; 18 L. W. 383; 26 O. C. 223; 33 M. L. T. 216 (P. C.).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 303 OF 1919.

May 23, 1922.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Gokul Prasad.

SANWAL DAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 20, 31—Apportionment of compensation—Secretary of State, whether party—Parties interested.

Under section 20 (c) of the Land Acquisition Act, the Secretary of State is only interested in the amount of compensation which the Collector, or the Court, on reference by the Collector, awards. He is not interested as a party in the distribution or apportionment of the compensation. His interest ceases when he has placed at the disposal of the Court the total amount of compensation. Any dispute as to the distribution or apportionment of the amount must be fought out between the parties who claim a share in the compensation. [p. 113, col. 1.]

First appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Cawnpore.

Messrs. G. W. Dillon and S. N. Mukerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. Lalit Mohan Banerji, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is connected with First Appeal No. 258 of 1919 which we have just decided. It is an appeal by Sanwal Das, the owner of part of the land and he claims that he was entitled to the whole of the compensation for 1 bigha 2 biswas of land and the price of the trees and buildings standing thereon. His claim is directed against Debi Din who has been awarded compensation for the major portion of this land. The learned Judge did come to the conclusion that the claim of Sanwal Das was allowable against Ganga Prasad and Debi Din (zemindars) but owing to a mistake has allowed him compensation for 12 biswas 15 biswansis only and has further omitted to give him Rs. 99 odd on account of the trees and buildings. He has allowed the balance to Debi Din which is against the finding he has arrived at. Sanwal Das in this appeal has made the Secretary of State for India in Council the only respondent and has not impleaded Debi Din against whom his main relief is directed. So far as the Secretary of State for India in Council is concerned, we have already given our reasons in detail in the connected appeal for coming to the conclusion that the total amount of compensation awarded was correct, so that this appeal on the question of the inadequacy of compensation must fail. The relief claimed is really sought against Debi Din but we cannot grant it because Debi Din is not a party to this appeal. Under section 20 (c) of the Land Acquisition Act, the Secretary of State is only interested in the amount of compensation which the Collector or the Court on reference by the Collector awards. He is not interested as a party in the distribution or apportionment of the compensation, see section 31 (2) proviso 3. His interest ceases when he has placed at the disposal of the Court the total amount of compensation. As Deb Din is no party to this appeal and cannot be made a party now because of the bar of limitation, we cannot help the appellant. It was his own fault that he did not implead Debi Din against whom his claim was really directed. Under these circumstances we dismiss this appeal also with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1608 OF 1920.

May 8, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

SURAT SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

UMRAO SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 144, 148—Mortgage—Redemption by co-mortgagor—Suit by co-mortgagor to recover his share—Suit to recover property subject to charge—Limitation:

Where one of several co-mortgagors redeems a mortgage, the other co-mortgagors can bring a suit for redemption against the redeeming mortgagor within sixty years from the date of the original mortgage. [p. 114, col. 2.]

Ashjaq Ahmad v. Wazir Ali, 14 A. 1; A. W. N. (1891) 211; 11 A. 423; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373, followed.

The period for the redemption of a charge is twelve years and not sixty years as in the case of a mortgage. [p. 115, col. 1.]

An award directed that plaintiff was entitled to obtain a certain share of property "A" from the defendant on payment of a proportionate share of the mortgage money paid by the defendant for redemption of the property and a certain share of property "B" on payment of a certain sum of money to the defendant. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the respective shares of the properties from the defendant:

Held, (1) that in respect of his share in property "A" plaintiff had a period of sixty years from the date of the original mortgage within which to bring a suit for its recovery; [p. 114, col. 2.]

(2) that in respect of his share in property "B" defendant had a possessory charge on it for the sum made payable to him on the award, and the plaintiff had, therefore, twelve years from the date of the award to sue for its recovery. [p. 115, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jhansi, dated the 31st of July 1920.

Messrs. P. L. Banerji and Mangal Prasad Bhargawa, for the Appellants.

Messrs. E. A. Howard and K. R. Dang, for the Respondents

JUDGMENT.—The only question with which we are concerned in this second appeal is the question of limitation. It arose in the following way. It seems that two cousins named Sughar Singh and Kesari Singh were the owners jointly of a 1 anna 7 pie 10 karant share in the village of Atagaon. It has been found that this property was joint family property.

The plaintiffs in the present suit are the descendants of Sughar Singh, while the principal contesting defendants are the descendants of Kesari Singh.

In the year 1872 it is found that Kesari Singh as head of the joint family made a mortgage with possession of a 9 pie 15 karant share out of the joint share already mentioned. This mortgage was made in favour of Sughar Singh son of Risal Singh.

The Settlement of the district took place in the year 1885 and it is shown that after Kesari Singh's death the entries in the revenue papers stood as follows with regard to the 1 anna 7 pie 10 karant share above mentioned:—One-half of this share was entered in the name of a lady called Mohan Kunwar while the other half was recorded in the name of Arjun Singh and Durjan Singh who are the sons of Kesari Singh.

We have no clear information as to who the lady Mohan Kunwar was.

It appears that in the year 1885, however, a dispute arose between the two branches of this family. An agreement to refer to arbitration was executed and we have before us that agreement and the award which was made by the Arbitrators on the 23rd December 1885. It is this award really which determined the rights of the parties and it is on terms of this award that the present litigation must be decided.

The arbitrators laid down in that award.

(1) that the descendants of Sughar Singh (now represented by the plaintiffs) would be entitled to half of the 9 pie 5 karant share which has been mortgaged on payment of one-half of the mortgage money;

(2) As regards the remaining 9 pie 15 karant share which had formerly stood in the name of Mohan Kunwar, the descendants of Sughar Singh (now the plaintiffs) were to be entitled to recover half of this share on payment to Arjun Singh of a sum of Rs. 150. It is an admitted fact that the share which was mortgaged in the year 1872 was redeemed in the year 1904 by proceedings which were taken under the special Bundelkhand Act, and it is established that that redemption was obtained on application made to the Special Judge by the defendants. It is further established that the Special Judge held that the mortgage had been satisfied by the appropriation of the usufruct and that no sum was payable for redemption.

The defendants set up limitation as regards this part of the claim but on the rulings of this Court we think both the Courts below were right in holding that so far as this portion of the property in dispute is concerned, the plaintiffs' claim was within time. It has been held by this Court that where one of several co-mortgagors redeems a mortgage, the other co-mortgagors can bring a suit for redemption against the redeeming mortgagor within sixty years from the date of the original mortgage. That is laid down in the case reported as Ashfaq Ahmad v. Wazir Ali (1).

We have it that the date of the mortgage is the 12th of June 1872 and consequently this suit was well within the statutory period of sixty years.

As regards the other portion of the property in dispute, however, the situation appears to us to be quite different. We have pointed out that the arbitrators in their award of the 23rd December 1885 stated that the descendants of Sughar Singh could obtain possession of a half share of the remaining 9 pie 15 karants on payment of the sum of Rs. 150 to Arjun Singh.

There is nothing on the record to show how this sum of money came to be payable to Arjun Singh or what was the nature of Arjun Singh's claim against this property which the arbitrators recognized by their award, but it seems to us that the award on this part of the case may properly be treated as declaring that Arjun Singh was entitled to retain possession of a half share in 9 pies 15 karants as security for the sum of Rs. 150.

In their plaint the plaintiffs admit that they have never paid this sum of Rs. 150 to Arjun Singh but they claim their right to pay it now and obtain redemption saying that they are mortgagors of this portion of the property while Arjun Singh is the mortgagee. If that were a correct statement of the relations between the parties, then no doubt the suit brought by these plaintiffs, so far as this portion of the property is concerned would be well within time. But we are unable to find in the plaintiffs' favour that they are the mortgagors and that Arjun Singh or his representatives are the mortgagees of this portion of the property. We have said already that all we can find is that Arjun Singh was declared to have a possessory charge of this portion of the property on the basis of the award which was made on the 23rd December 1885. Therefore, the plaintiffs had a right to redeem this charge and the period for redemption of a charge is 12 years and not 60 years as in the case of a mortgage.

(1) 14 A. 1; A. W. N. (1891); 211; 11 A. 423; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 373.

Both the Courts below in dealing with the question of limitation have treated the case as if it were one which is governed by Art. 113 of the Schedule to the Limitation Act. That Article provides the period of limitation for specific performance of a contract. In our opinion this has got nothing whatever to do with the present case. The award which declared the rights of the parties is in no sense a contract between the parties for which specific performance could be sought. It follows, therefore, that this appeal must succeed in part. We are clearly of opinion that as regards the property referred to in paragraph 5 (b) of the plaint the claim of the plaintiffs is time-barred. As regards the other property, for the reasons we have already given, the claim was within time and the decree of the Court below is affirmed. We, therefore, allow the appeal in part and direct the plaintiffs' claim to be dismissed with regard to the property specified in clause (b) of paragraph 11 of the plaint. The parties will bear their own costs in all three Courts.

Appeal partly allowed.

Z. K.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 135 OF 1922.

December 12, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

BINDA PRASAD—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

BANARSI DAS AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Revision, application for—Inordinate delay.

An application for revision made more than a year after the order complained of was passed, cannot be entertained unless some good reason can be shown for the delay.

Application for revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge, Hardoi, dated the 25th August 1921.

Messrs. Ram Prasad and Girja Saran Lal, for the Applicant.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order rejecting objections to an award made in a pending suit on the ground mainly that the Court did not grant an adjournment to the applicant to produce his evidence. The order rejecting these objections was passed on 31st August 1921. The present application was filed on 23rd September 1922, more than a year afterward and after the decree based on the award had been passed and executed. The applicant offers no explanation whatever for the inordinate delay with which the application has been filed, and this alone is a sufficient reason for dismissing it without entering into the merits. I am not prepared to entertain an application for revision made more than a year after the order complained of was passed unless some good reason can be shown for the delay and I accordingly dismiss this application with costs.

Revision rejected.

W. C. A.

MOLAR v. KANAHAYA LAL.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION No. 500 OF 1921 IN CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2480 OF 1921.
March 24, 1922.
Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol.
MOLAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
—PETITIONER
versus
KANAHAYA LAL AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIX, r. 6, O. XLI, r. 6—Attachment in execution—Suit for declaration—Dismissal—Appeal—Stay of sale—Injunction.

Where the suit of a person for declaration of title to property attached in execution of a decree between third parties is dismissed and he prefers an appeal, he cannot ask for stay of sale under O. XLI, r. 6 of the Civil Procedure Code as that provision is applicable only where the appeal is pending against the decree which is to be executed. Such a person can, however, take action under O. XXXIX of the Code and pray for a temporary injunction.

Application under O. XLI, r. 5, Act V of 1908, for stay of execution proceedings, in Case No. 144 of 1918, in the Court of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Delhi, and in Case No. 4 of 1915, in the Court of the District Judge, Delhi, pending the decision of the appeal case noted above by the High Court.

Lala Balwant Rai, for the Petitioner.
Mr. Badr-ud-din Qureshi and Lala Sardha Ram, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—The petitioner claimed a portion of a house against which two sets of plaintiffs had obtained decrees on mortgages executed by the ostensible owners.

The petitioner lodged objections in execution and on their failure instituted a suit for declaration of his title, failing in that, he has lodged an appeal in this Court and now asks for stay of sale in the decrees to which he is not a party.

His Counsel relies on O. XLI, r. 6 but that applies not to the present case, but only to cases where an appeal is pending from the decree which is to be executed.

Such is not the case here. The petitioner could have taken action under O. XXXIX and prayed for a temporary injunction, but he has not taken that course and if he had, I do not think, having regard to the convenience of both sides, that the balance would incline in favour of stay of sale.

The petitioner's case is prima facie a very weak one and respondents are willing to risk the success of his appeal and all that that implies.

I dismiss the petition with costs.

Petition dismissed.

N. H.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

EXECUTION OF DECREE APPEAL NO. 29 OF 1922.
October 5, 1922.
Present:—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.
BINDA PRASAD—DECREE HOLDER—APPELLANT
versus
Babu BANARSI DAS—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR
—RESPONDENT.

Pre-emption—Decree in pre-emption suit—Deposit of pre-emption money—Costs deposited beyond time—Compliance with pre-emption decree—Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876), s. 15.

A obtained a pre-emption decree with costs subject to payment of pre-emption money, which he deposited duly, but later attached and withdrew out of it the amount awarded to him on account of costs. The Appellate Court increased the amount of pre-emption money ordering the parties to bear their own costs in the suit and gave fresh period to A, to deposit the balance of the pre-emption money fixed by it, deducting the amount already deposited. A complied with the order within time as regards the balance of pre-emption money but the amount which he had withdrawn on account of his costs was deposited by him after time when the discrepancy was brought to his notice:

Held, that it was sufficient compliance with the decree to entitle A to be put in possession of the property.

Ali Husain v. Amin Ullah, 15 Ind. Cas. 337; 34 A. 596; 10 A. L. J 153 and Bhagwana v. Goru 6 Ind. Cas. 954; 56 P. R. 1910; 133 P. L. R. 1910, referred to.

Appeal against an order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Hardoi, dated the 17th May 1922, confirming that of the Munsif, Bilgram, dated the 1st September 1921.

Mr Girja Saran Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ram Bharose Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal in connection with an application under section 144, Civil Procedure Code. The respondent obtained a pre-emption decree subject to payment of Rs. 80 which he duly deposited. He was awarded his costs by the Court of first instance and he subsequently attached and withdrew on account of the amount due to him for costs a sum of Rs. 22 out of the amount he had deposited. An appeal was filed against the decree and the final decree of this Court increased the amount payable for the property to Rs. 106-6-0 and directed "that the plaintiff do pay into Court the balance within one month from the date of this decree after deducting what had already been deposited by him in compliance with the decree of the Court below." He accordingly paid the balance of Rs. 26-6-0 and obtained possession of the property. The appellant's contention is that this was not a sufficient compliance with the decree, that the whole suit should stand dismissed with costs and that the appellant is entitled to recover possession of the property. It may be noted that under the decree both parties were to pay their own costs in the event of the plaintiff complying with the decree. On the matter being brought to notice the plaintiff paid in the amount of Rs. 22 which he had withdrawn but not within the one month allowed by the decree. Both the Courts below have held that there was a sufficient compliance with the decree to entitle the plaintiff to be put in possession of the property. They cite a number of authorities in support of this view. Two later authorities on the same side have also been cited before me, namely, Ali Husain v. Amin Ullah (1) and Bhagwana v Goru (2). No authority to the contrary has been shown. There is I believe no case of this Court directly in point but I agree with the Courts below in accepting the view which has been consistently taken on this point by the Allahabad High Court. The appellant seeks to differentiate these rulings by the fact that in Oudh the right of pre-emption is a statutory right and payment is made in accordance with section 15 of the Oudh Laws Act. This, however, does not affect the question. Section 15 says that the amount due must be paid into Court. In fact it was paid into Court although the plaintiff treating it as money in deposit to the credit of the defendant subsequently withdrew part of it on account of costs due to him in the same case.

The appeal fails and it is accordingly dismissed with costs.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 15 Ind. Cas. 337; 34 A. 596; 10 A. L. J. 153.
(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 954; 56 P. R. 1910; 133 P. L. R. 1910.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 486 OF 1920.

April 3, 1922.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Shah.

YEKNATH NARAYAN KULKARNI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

LAXMIBAI KESHO GOPAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Bombay, Presidency — Widow

YEKNATH NARAYAN KULKARNI v. LAXMIBAI KESHO GOPAL.

succeeding as gotraja sapinda— Adoption, power of.

In the Bombay Presidency a Hindu widow who succeeds to an estate not her husband's but as a gotraja sapinda of the last male holder, and in consequence of the absence of nearer heirs, cannot make a valid adoption so as to defeat the rights of reversioners. [p. 120, col. 2.]

Ramkrishna v. Shamrao, 26 B. 526; 4 Bom. L. R. 315, Madana Mohana Ananga Bheema Deo v. Purushothama Ananga Bheema Deo, 46 Ind. Cas. 481; 20 Bom. L. R. 1041 at p. 1046; 35 M. L. J. 138; 5 P. L. W. 179; 8 L. W. 167; 16 A. L. J. 725; (1918) M. W. N. 621; 24 M. L. T. 231; 28 C. L. J. 403; 41 M. 855; 23 C. W. N. 177; 45 I. A. 156 (P. C.), Datto Govind Kulkarni v. Pandurang Vinayak, 32 B. 499; 10 Bom. L. R. 692 and Lallubhai Bapubhai v. Cassibai, 7 I. A. 212; 5 B. 110; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 164; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 795; 4 Ind. Jur. 533; 3 Shome L. R. 245; 7 C. L. R. 445; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75 (P. C.), followed.

Yadao v. Namdeo, 64 Ind. Cas. 536; 48 I. A. 513; 24 Bom. L. R. 609; 17 N. L. R. 145; 30 M. L. T. 53; 26 C. W. N. 393; 42 M. L. J. 219; 15 L. W. 565; 20 A. L. J. 481; 49 C. 1; (1922) A. I, R. (B.) 216 (P. C.) and Mallappa v. Hanmappa, 55 Ind. Cas. 814; 44 B. 297; 22 Bom. L. R. 203, distinguished.

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Satara, in Suit No. 115 of 1919.

Mr. K. N. Koyajee, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nadkarni, (with him Mr. P. B. Shingne), for the Respondent.

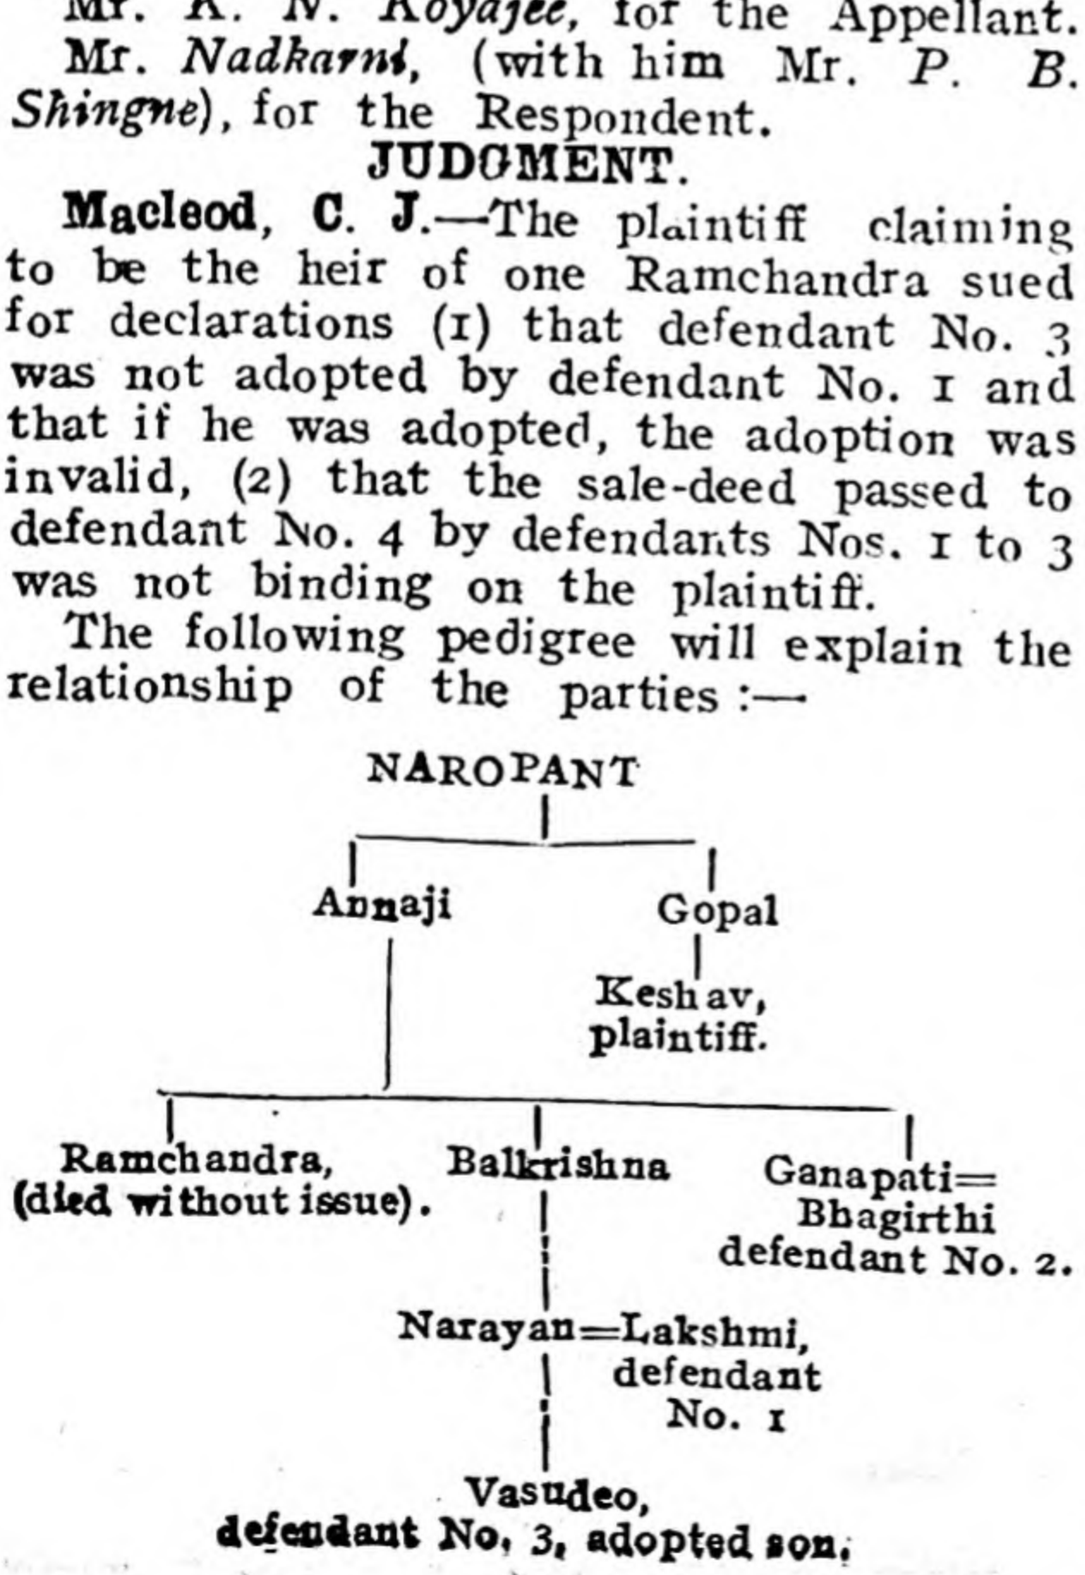
JUDGMENT.

Macleod, C. J.—The plaintiff claiming to be the heir of one Ramchandra sued for declarations (1) that defendant No. 3 was not adopted by defendant No. 1 and that if he was adopted, the adoption was invalid, (2) that the sale-deed passed to defendant No. 4 by defendants Nos. 1 to 3 was not binding on the plaintiff.

The following pedigree will explain the relationship of the parties :—



Annaji died in the first half of 1899 leaving him surviving his son Ramchandra, his grandson Narayan by a predeceased son Balkrishna and Bhagirthibai the widow of a predeceased son Ganapati. Ramchandra and Narayan died on the 1st of November 1899. If Narayan survived Ramchandra then he would be the last male holder of the family property, and his widow Lakshmibai would have taken a widow's estate. In 1915, she adopted the present defendant No. 3. The plaintiff who was a separated nephew of Annaji filed this suit in 1919 against Lakshmibai, Bhagirthibai, the third defendant and the fourth defendant, an assignee from the third defendant. He contended that the property belonged to his cousin Ramchandra; that on Ramchandra's death Bhagirthibai as the widow of Ganapati, a gotraja sapinda, succeeded, while Lakshmi had only a right to maintenance, and had, therefore, no right to adopt the third defendant.

The learned Judge who decided the case unfortunately did not see the witnesses as the evidence was recorded by his predecessor. Therefore, in dealing with the question of fact he was in no better position than we are, as we have the same written record before us as the learned Judge. He came to the conclusion on the evidence that Ramchandra died last. The evidence of Exhibit 53 and Exhibit 55 supports the story that Ramchandra died last while the evidence of Exhibits 61, 62, 64, 66 and 67 supports the defendants' case. It must be remembered that all these witnesses were talking of what happened twenty years ago, and all of them were likely to make mistakes quite honestly. But the plaintiff placed great reliance on the Village Death Register which showed that Narayan died on the 1st November and Ramchandra on 2nd November. Now it is admitted that both of them died on the 1st, one early in the morning, the other in the afternoon, and the evidence of the defendants' witnesses shows that they were both cremated on the same day, so that in any event the Register is incorrect. I do not see any reason why the Court should attach such importance to the Register, as to hold that what it states must be absolutely correct. When a village has been attacked by an epidemic of plague, it is probable that all the officials would be fully occupied, and it may very well be that the information they received with regard to births and deaths would not be accurately recorded.

On a careful perusal of the evidence, therefore, I do not see any reason why we should believe the witnesses for the plaintiff rather than the witnesses for the defendants, while I may point out that one of the witnesses, Exhibit 55, for the plaintiff actually went so far as to say that Ramchandra died at least two days after Narayan. Thereafter, the name of Lakshmibai was entered in the Vatan Register, but the suggested explanation of the preference given to her is not sufficiently convincing. It is just as probable that Lakshmi was considered by the authorities to be the rightful heir as the widow of the last male holder, as that the daughter-in-law of the senior son was preferred to the widow of the junior son. It seems to me, therefore, that as we are in the same position with regard to the appreciation of evidence as the learned Judge, there is no sufficient reason for holding on the evidence that Ramchandra died last. I think, that some importance must be given to the fact that Narayan was considerably the younger man. He was only eighteen compared with Ramchandra who was sixty—therefore, when the evidence on the question who died first is so evenly balanced I think, we are entitled to say that the probabilities are in favour of the younger man surviving the elder.

That is also a desirable conclusion to arrive at as otherwise the property would go away from the family. Our finding that Narayan died last is sufficient to dispose of the case. But an interesting question was raised, whether if Ramchandra died last, the adoption of the third defendant by Lakshmi could defeat the rights of the plaintiff. In Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (1) it was decided that where a Hindu dies leaving a widow and a son, and that son himself dies leaving a natural born or adopted son or leaving no sons but his own widow to continue the line by means of adoption, the power of the former widow is extinguished and can never afterwards be revived. That decision was approved by the Privy Council in Madana Mohana Ananga Bheema Deo v. Purushotha ma Ananga Bheema Deo (2).

Then in Datto Govind Kulkarni v. Pandurang Vinayak (3) it was held, that a Hindu widow who succeeds to an estate not her husband's but as a gotraja sapinda of the last male holder under the rule established by Lallubhai Bapubhai v. Cassibai (4), and in consequence of the absence of nearer heirs, cannot make a valid adoption.

That decision would be binding upon us unless it has been reversed. But that decision was based on the decision in Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (1) which, as I have already stated, has since been approved by the Privy Council.

The appellants, however, relied on the case of Yadao v. Namdeo (5). There was a joint Hindu family consisting of Pundlik, his cousin Namdeo, and the two sons of Namdeo. On Pundlik's death his senior widow, Champabai, acting under the authority of her husband, adopted Pandurang, one of Namdeo's sons. Pandurang died in childhood unmarried, but it was held that at the time of his adoption there was a separation between Pandurang on the one hand, and Namdeo and his remaining son on the other. On his death, therefore, his estate vested in Champabai who then adopted the plaintiff. Namdeo disputed the capacity of Champabai to adopt but it was held that, as her husband had not forbidden her to adopt if the boy named was not available or died, she had the power to adopt the plaintiff. The head-note to the case says:

"In the Maratha country of the Bombay

(1) 26 B. 526; 4 Bom. L. R. 315.

(2) 46 Ind. Cas. 481; 20 Bom. L. R. 1041 at p. 1046; 35 M. L. J. 138; 5 P. L. W. 179; 8 L. W. 167; 16 A. L. J. 725; (1918) M. W. N. 621; 24 M. L. T. 231; 28 C. L. J. 403; 41 M. 855; 23 C. W. N. 177; 45 I. A. 156 (P. C.).

(3) 32 B. 499; 10 Bom. L. R. 692.

(4) 7 I. A. 212; 5 B. 110; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 164; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 795; 4 Ind. Jur. 533; 3 Shome L. R. 245; 7 C. L. R. 445; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 75 (P. C.).

(5) 64 Ind. Cas. 536; 48 I. A. 513; 24 Bom. L. R. 609; 17 N. L. R. 145; 30 M. L. T. 53; 26 C. W. N. 393; 42 M. L. J. 219; 13 L. W. 565; 20 A. L. J. 481; 49 C. 1; (1922) A. I. R. (P.) 216 (P. C.).

Presidency and in Gujarat a Hindu widow whose husband has not expressly forbidden her to adopt a son to him, has power to do so, without the consent of her husband's kinsmen, whether or not her husband's estate is vested in her, and whether he died joint or separate in family."

The Bombay Full Bench decisions in Ramji v. Ghamau (6) and Dinkar Sitaram Prabhu v. Ganesh Shivram Prabhu (7) were disapproved. In those cases the widow of a deceased co-parcener who had not the family estate vested in her and whose husband was not separated at the time of his death sought to adopt without the authority of her husband and without the consent of the surviving co-parceners. The case of an adoption by a widow who has succeeded to the estate of her son, and she can only do so, if he was separated from the family, would appear to be different. By such an adoption the widow does not bring a new member into the family, she merely endangers the expectations of the reversioners. Their Lordships, however, appear to have considered the question of the validity of an adoption by a Hindu widow made as a religious duty to her husband apart from the question whether the adopted son would acquire thereby any rights to property, so that in the event of a case coming before this Court in which surviving co parceners dispute an adoption by the widow of a deceased co-parcener, the question at issue will probably be, whether the adopted son acquired, by virtue of his adoption, any rights in the joint family property and not whether the adoption was valid.

In Mallappa v. Hanmappa (8) the facts were very similar to the facts in Yadao v. Namdeo (5) except that the deceased son was the natural son of the husband and not an adopted son. It was decided that the rights of the widow to adopt did not definitely come to an end, because a natural son was born, so that if that natural son died without leaving a son or a widow and the mother succeeded as his heiress, her rights to adopt to her husband which had been in suspense revived. Then in Dattatraya Bhimrao v. Gangabai Ganeshbhat (9) my brother Shah expressed the opinion, that the principle underlying the ruling in Ramkrishna v. Shamrao (1), and Datto Govind Kulkarni v. Pandurang Vinayak (3) was not in any way affected by the observation in Yadao v. Namdeo (5).

It cannot be said, therefore, that the decision of this Court that a widow of a gotraja sapinda cannot adopt so as to defeat the rights of the reversioners has in any way been shaken by the decision in Yadao v. Namdeo (5).

If, therefore, Bhagirathi, though she took a life-estate as a widow of a gotraja sapinda, had no power to adopt so as to defeat the rights of the reversioners, it equally follows that Lakshmi, who in the lifetime of Baghirathi had only a right of maintenance, had no power to adopt so as to exclude the reversioners. The question whether these widows could have adopted so as to secure religious benefit to their husbands is an entirely different question from the one whether by such adoption they could defeat rights of inheritance. We think, therefore, that the appeal must be allowed and the plaintiff's suit dismissed with costs throughout.

Shah, J.—I concur.

N. H. Appeal allowed.

(6) 6 B. 498; 6 Ind. Jur. 587; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 787 (F. B.).

(7) 6 B. 505; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 792 (F. B.).

(8) 55 Ind. Cas. 814; 44 B. 297; 22 Bom. L. R. 203.

(9) 77 Ind. Cas. 17; 24 Bom. L. R. 69 at p. 72; 46 B. 541; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 321.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 310 OF 1922.

July 4, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

Babu RAM NARESH SINGH—PLAINTIFF —APPELLANT

versus

DALPAT SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 3 (10), 48—Tenant, who is—"Heir of tenant", whether includes heir of successor of tenant;

RAM NARESH SINGH v. DALPAT SINGH.

The heir of a tenant who succeeds the tenant becomes "tenant" within the definition of the term in section 3 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act. Therefore when the heir of a tenant has succeeded to the tenancy, his heir becomes "the heir of a tenant" within the meaning of section 48 of the Act and is entitled to the protection of that section.

The expression the "heir of a tenant" in section 48 of the Oudh Rent Act does not exclude the heir of the heir of a tenant. The word "heir" is used to denote the sense of representation of the first tenant through his successors in inheritance for the whole term of the tenancy.

Second appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 17th August 1922, reversing a decree of the Munsif, Sultanpur, dated the 29th November 1921.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Bisheshar Nath and Radha Krishna Srivastava, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Sultanpur dated the 17th August 1922, which reversed the decree of the Munsif of the same place dated the 29th November 1921. The appellant's suit was decreed by the last mentioned Court. The suit was one for possession of a cultivatory holding which was originally under the tenancy of one Sukhdeo Singh. He died in November 1919. It is common ground that Sukhdeo Singh died during the currency of the tenancy and a portion of the 7 years term still remained unexpired at his death. It is also common ground that he was succeeded by his son, Bikramajit Singh. Bikramajit Singh died within a month of the death of his father. The holding was since the death of Bikramajit Singh in the possession of Dalpat Singh and Pirthi Singh, the defendants to the suit out of wich this appeal has arisen.

The plaintiff's case was that the defendants were trespassers. The defence with which I am now concerned in this appeal was to the effect that they or at least one of them was in occupation of the holding as a matter of right in virtue of the provisions of section 48 of the Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886.) Dalpat Singh and Pirthi Singh were collateral relations of Sukhdeo Singh. The finding of the lower Appellate Court is that Pirthi Singh was joint in cultivation both with Sukhdeo Singh and his son Bikramajit Singh. This being so, the conclusion of law arrived at by the Court below is that Pirthi Singh was lawfully in possession of the holding under the provisions of section 48 of the Oudh Rent Act. For the purpose of this appeal we must take the finding of fact arrived at by the lower Appellate Court as limited to this that Pirthi Singh was sharing in the cultivation of the holding with Bikramjit Singh, son of Sukhdeo Singh.

The learned Counsel for the appellant argued that Pirthi Singh was not entitled to the occupation of the holding because Bikramajit Singh, with whom he was sharing in the cultivation of the holding was not a tenant but only the heir of a tenant. I do not agree with this construction of section 48. The word tenant is defined in sub-section (10) of section 3 of the Oudh Rent Act as meaning any person, not being an under-proprietor, who is liable to pay rent. The heir who succeeds under section 48, is clearly a person who is liable to pay rent as is indicated by the terms of the section itself. Bikramajit Singh, therefore, when he succeeded to the tenancy as an heir of his father became a tenant in his relation to the landlord of the holding by virtue of his liability to pay rent for it. Pirthi Singh was, therefore, the heir of Bikramajit Singh, who was a tenant as I have just now stated, and entitled to retain occupation of the holding for the unexpired portion of the period of the tenancy. This construction is borne out by reference to several sections of the Act, particularly the sections relating to the ejectment of the tenants. I am, therefore, of opinion that the expression "the heir of a tenant" does not exclude the heir of the heir of a tenant. In my opinion the word 'heir' is used to denote the sense of representation of the first tenant through his sucessors in inheritance for the whole term of the tenancy.

Pirthi Singh died during the pendency of the appeal in the Court below. His sons were brought on the record in his place. The learned Counsel for the appellant has argued that whatever might have been the rights of Pirthi Singh, his sons are not entitled to claim the advantage of the provisions of section 48. This argument is answered by the observations which I have just now made. When Pirthi Singh died he was a tenant, within the meaning of the Act, of the holding in dipute. His sons are therefore clearly entitled to come in under section 48 in the occupation of the holding for the unexpired portion of the period of the tenancy and consequently they are not tres-passers. In support of his argument the learned Counsel for the appellant repeatedly referred to the recent amendments made by the Local Legislature in the Oudh Rent Act particularly dealing with the subject-matter of section 48. I do not think I can legitimately use the amendments as aid in interpreting the law as it stood before the amendment and with which only I am concerned in the present appeal.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 165 OF 1920.

June 21, 1922.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Piggott.

MAHADEO PRASAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

DHIRAJ SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Mortgage by conditional sale—Post diem interest—Construction of deed.

A mortgage by way of conditional sale contained the following covenant:—

It is covenanted that I shall continue to pay interest at the rate of 11 annas per cent. per mensem annually. In case of default in payment of interest, it shall be added to the principal, and I shall pay interest thereon as well at the aforesaid rate. I, or my heirs, or representatives, shall have no objection to it, nor shall I mortgage or sell the property to any other person until the payment of the mortgage-money. In case of breach of promise and expiry of the stipulated period, the mortgagee shall become the absolute owner of the property mortgaged, and, I, or my heirs, or representatives, shall have no objection whatever:

Held, that having regard to the terms of the whole document, its general tenor implied an obligation on the part of the borrower on the making of default to be liable for the subsequent interest at the rate mentioned in the bond up to the date of payment or suit. [p. 124, col. 2.]

Mathura Das v. Raja Narindar Bahadur, 19 A. 39; 23 I. A. 138; 1 C. W. N. 52; 6 M. L. J. 214; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 25 (P. C.); Bindesri Naik v. Ganga Saran Sahu, 20 A. 171; 2 C. W. N. 129; 25 I. A. 9; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 273; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 471 (P. C.) and Sarala Dasi v. Jogendra Narayan Basu, 25 C. 246; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 165, relied on.

The question whether under a mortgage by way of conditional sale the mortgagor is or is not liable to pay post diem interest must primarily be decided on the terms of the deed.

First appeal from a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Cawnpore, dated the 28th of February 1920.

Dr. Surendra Nath Sen, for the Appellants.

Munshi Girdhari Lal Agarwala (with him Mr. B. E. O'Conor), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The question which is in controversy between the parties in this appeal is whether in a mortgage by way of conditional sale the mortgagor is bound to pay interest at the agreed rate from and after the day upon which he should have discharged his obligations under the deed. In other words, is interest during the post diem period, though not expressly provided for, to be calculated under the particular provisions of the deed at the same rate as that stipulated for during the agreed period of the currency of the bond?

The position very shortly is as follows:—The borrower should have re-paid, but did not re-pay, the principal and interest in December 1907, and though certain payments of interest were made, the account at the commencement of this action on the 20th of October 1919, showed that Rs. 8,000 principal and Rs. 10,581 interest were due. This was based upon the calculation that the express stipulation as to interest covered the whole period from the 8th of December 1902, down to the date of the institution of the suit. Whilst it is, of course, proper that we should refer to and pay regard to decided cases; the main and important matters for our consideration are the exact terms of the document itself. When those have been considered, it is proper to see whether there are any decided cases so similar in their terms that the canons of construction that have been used by other Courts will be of assistance to us. If so, it is our duty to avail ourselves of them.

The document, dated the 8th of December 1902, was executed by Mathura Prasad, who was the father of the defendants (appellants). It stated that he had for a period of five years mortgaged without possession a certain property in lieu of Rs. 8,000 to Raja Dhiraj Singh, that the money was to be applied in satisfaction of a decree, and then follow the words which have given rise to this question :—

"It is covenanted that I shall continue to pay interest at the rate of 11 annas per cent. per mensem annually. In case of default in payment of interest, it shall be added to the principal, and I shall pay interest thereon as well at the aforesaid rate. I, or my heirs, or representatives shall have no objection to it, nor shall I mortgage or sell the property to any other person until the payment of the mortgage-money....In case of breach of promise and expiry of the stipulated period, the mortgagee shall become the absolute owner of the property mortgaged, and, I, or my heirs, or representatives, shall have no objection whatever....But if in any year I pay something towards principal in addition to the amount of interest, it will be not less than Rs. 500. I have, therefore, executed these few presents by way of a mortgage-deed by conditional sale, so that they may stand as authority and be of use when required."

The first point which stands out clearly is that for five years the rate of interest was defined with precision. Nowhere in the document is there any direct reference to what was to happen as regards interest if the mortgagor did not pay punctually or if in that event the mortgagee abstained from taking any proceedings for foreclosure. As regards default in payment of interest during the period between 1902 and 1907, he stipulates that he will not offer objection to interest being added to principal, and interest being paid on both, and in the same sentence he couples up a promise not to mortgage or sell the property to any other person until the payment of the mortgage-money. A few lines above he had agreed to "continue" to pay interest at the rate of 11 annas per cent. per mensem annually.

It is difficult to believe that the parties could have had any other intention than that if the mortgagor failed to pay in December 1907, the stipulations in the deed would remain in force and that the mortgagor would be bound to continue to pay interest at the agreed rate, calculated up to the time of tender or payment of principal and interest or the institution of a suit by the mortgagee. There is no suggestion that any lesser rate was agreed upon to come into force upon default. Nor is there any logical reason to think that the mortgagee would be willing for his money after 1907 to bear a smaller rate of interest. He could, on default have commenced a suit, but he was not bound to do so. Dr. Sen, however, contends that on the 8th of December 1907, the agreed interest at once stopped running and that there was, as between mortgagor and mortgagee, a definitely ascertainable debt, and that from that date the lender acquired a new and different right, namely, the right to bring a suit for foreclosure. We do not agree with this interpretation of the document and we are of opinion that the mortgagee's rights as regards principal and interest, as apart from proceedings against the property, continued. The first case to which we may refer is that of Mathura Das v. Raja Narindar Bahadur (1). In that case the material words of the deed were that the amount of the loan in full, principal as well as interest, would be paid within a year. It is said in the deed :

"Until the payment in full of this amount, principal and interest, I shall not transfer either directly or indirectly the mortgaged property to any one else ; and if I do, such a transfer should be deemed to be false and inadmissible."

(1) 19 A. 39; 23 I. A. 138; 1 C. W. N. 52; 6 M. L. J. 214; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 25 (P. C.).

MAHADEO PRASAD v. DHIRAJ SINGH.

No payment was made, and some eight years after the deed the suit was commenced for the usual mortgage-decree. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree for the sum of Rs. 22,813. It was the amount of the principal alone with one year's interest; and, therefore, he disallowed the claim of the plaintiff to the remaining seven years' interest at the rate stipulated in the deed. The plaintiff came to the High Court and the decision of the Subordinate Judge was affirmed, and in that state of the case the plaintiff appealed to the Privy Council. Their Lordships held without hesitation, that although there was no express term carrying on the obligation to pay interest at the agreed rate of 1-6 per cent. per mensem, that, nevertheless there was an obligation upon the defendant to make that payment and that on the ordinary construction of the words, they were in accordance with the usual intention of the parties to a simple mortgage. If, in the present case under consideration, on the ordinary construction of the words they are in accordance with the usual intention of the parties to a simple mortgage, as we believe them to be, we shall be coming to a right decision in holding that the defendants (appellants) must pay after the 8th of December 1907, interest at the same rate as they had agreed to pay before that date. We are of opinion that this case of Mathura Das v. Raja Narindar Bahadur (1) is a very useful authority, which gives us clear and distinct guidance.

Now we come to the case of Bindesri Naik v. Ganga Saran Sahu (2), another Privy Council case, and again from a decision of this High Court. It possesses this additional advantage that the documents which came up for consideration were mortgages by way of conditional sale. When referring to the decision of this Court, their Lorships of the Privy Council said:

"Their Lordships do not think that, according to the tenor of the mortgage-deeds, it was intended that the capital sums should cease to bear interest, upon the arrival of the time stipulated for their payment."

Then after stating that the Judges of this High Court had confined their attention to a single passage in the document rather than taking into consideration the whole provisions of the deeds, their Lordships continued:—

"In the present case, by the deed of the 21st of August 1875...it is stipulated in general terms that interest at 18 per cent. per annum is to run upon the principal sums advanced, without any limitation as to the period of its currency. And it is also stipulated that in default of punctual payment at the end of each year the creditors are to be at liberty to treat interest as principal and to recover it from the mortgaged property."

Therefore, in that case there being no express provision as to what were to be the mutual rights and obligations after the date fixed for payment, the rate of interest was held to continue throughout the currency of the whole liability.

Finally, we may refer to the case of Saral Desi v. Jogendra Narayan Basu (3). In that case a mortgage-deed contained a covenant to pay principal and interest at a fixed rate in two years, and a further covenant not to transfer the mortgaged property until payment of principal and interest, and also on failure of payment of interest for one year to treat the amount after the lapse of that year as principal. The Calcutta High Court held, following the case of Mathura Das v. Raja Narindar Bahadur (1) that the obligation continued so long as mortgage subsisted.

We are therefore of opinion that having regard to the terms of the whole document, its general tenor implies an obligation on the part of the borrower on the making of default to be liable for subsequent interest of the rate mentioned in the bond. There being no dispute as to the amount, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(2) 20 A. 171; 2 C. W. N. 129; 25 I. A. 9; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 273; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 471 (P. C.).

(3) 25 C. 246; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 165.

JAI GOBIND SINGH v. ABHAIRAJ SINGH.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 164 OF 1922.

February 26, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C. and Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

JAI GOBIND SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ABHAIRAJ SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Adverse possession—Equity of redemption, adverse possession of—Usufructuary mortgagor's interest, nature of—Mortgage—Several mortgagors—Integrity of mortgage broken—Redemption.

There can be adverse possession of the interest of a usufructuary mortgagor and it will depend on the facts of each case whether the person claiming title through such adverse possession has established his claim or not. [p. 127, col. 2.]

Case-law reviewed.

The right of ownership in usufructuarily mortgaged property does not pass to the mortgagee, leaving only the equity of redemption to the mortgagor. The right of ownership together with the right of redemption remains with the mortgagor, and until the property is actually foreclosed and the sale becomes absolute, the right of ownership does not pass. The doctrine is equally applicable to conditional sales and usufructuary mortgages. [p. 127, col. 2.]

Suadut Alee Khan v. Collector of Saran, (1858) Beng. S. D. A. 841; 17 Ind. Dec. (o. s.) 617, approved;

Although the possession of usufructuarily mortgaged property by a trespasser can be adverse to the mortgagor, the burden of proving when it became so rests on the former. Prima facie, by his act of possession the trespasser merely ousts the mortgagee who is entitled to hold the property. [p. 128, col. 1.]

Peria Aiya Ambalam v. Shunmuga Sundaram, 22 Ind. Cas. 615; 38 M. 903; 15 M. L. T. 122; 26 M. L. J. 140; 1 L. W. 119; (1914) M. W. N. 417, approved.

In the case of a mortgage by several persons, where the mortgagee purchases the equity of redemption in a portion of the mortgaged property, the integrity of the mortgage is broken up and any one of the mortgagors cannot redeem any portion of the mortgaged property besides his own against the wishes of the mortgagee. [p. 129, col. 1.]

Munshi v. Daulat, 29 A. 262; 4 A. L. J. 74; A. W. N. (1907) 49, followed.

Per Simpson, A. J. C.—There can be prescription against a mortgagor, but ordinarily there can be no prescription against him unless he is entitled to immediate possession. Contra non valentem agere nulla currit praescriptio. The fact that he would be entitled to bring a suit for declaration is of no consequence. A party is never bound to bring a suit for declaration. [p. 129, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Gonda, dated the 31st January 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, Utraula, dated the 13th September 1920.

Messrs. Haider Husain and Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for Respondent No. 1.

ORDER OF REFERENCE TO THE BENCH.

Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.—I am desired by the Counsel for both the parties in the case to refer the appeal to a Bench of two Judges for decision. It is said that, on the point of law involved in the case there is a conflict of opinion between a Single judge ruling of this Court in the case of Hubdar Khan v. Gajahar Chaute (1) and the decision arrived at by the Allahabad High Court in the case of Kunwar Sen v. Darbari Lal (2). The broad question of law is whether the equity of redemption which legally vested in the plaintiff-appellant in respect of the property in suit on the death of a Hindu widow, Musammat Hardei, in the estate of her husband was lost by the adverse possession of one Musammat Lagandei, who was Musammat Hardei's daughter-in-law, and who had no title to the estate.

The facts of the case are few and simple. Musammat Hardei had on the 30th September 1891 mortgaged the property in suit to the predecessor-in-interest of the defendant No. 1. The mortgagee entered into possession. The mortgage was redeemable in 1907. On the 5th November 1898 Musammat Lagandei executed another deed of mortgage with regard to this property in favour of the same mortgagee superseding the earlier mortgage of the 30th September 1891. On the 22nd September 1911 Musammat Lagandei sold the equity of redemption to the son of the defendant No. 1. Thereupon the defendant No. 1 brought a suit for pre-emption and obtained a decree. The suit out of which the present appeal arises is one for redemption. The defence is that the article applicable to the case is Art. 144 of Schedule I of the Indian Limitation Act and that under that Article the claim is time barred. The Court of first instance following the decision in the case of Kunwar Sen v. Darbari Lal (2) overruled the defence and

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 600; 17 O. C. 294.
(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 171; 14 A. L. J. 498; 38 A. 411, gave a decree for redemption. The lower Appellate Court following the decision in the case of Hubdar Khan v. Gajadhar Chaube (1) reversed the decree of the Court of first instance and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. I agree with the learned Counsel for the parties that the question involved in this appeal is one of general importance and the case is a fit one to be decided by a Bench of two Judges. I certify accordingly.

JUDGMENT.

Dalal, A. J. C.—This was a suit for redemption in the Court of the Munsif of Utraula. It was decreed by that Court but dismissed on appeal to the District Judge of Gonda. The second appeal has been heard by a Bench of two Judges on a certificate granted by a learned Judge of this Court under section 8 of the Oudh Courts Act (XIV of 1891).

The mortgage sought to be redeemed was executed by Musammat Hardei and Jai Sri Singh on 30th September 1891; half the property belonged to Sarju, deceased husband of Musammat Hardei, and half to Jai Sri Singh. The following pedigree will show the relationship between the mortgagors, the plaintiff, and their relations whose names appear on the record as pro forma defendants. Musammat Lagandei was widow of a predeceased son of Sarju; She is still alive.

ANUP SINGH

Sheoratan Singh	Thakur Bakhsh	Harihar Bakhsh	Sarju = Musammat Hardei widow
Jai Gobind (plaintiff.)	Raghuraj	Jai Sri Singh	Kashi Bakhsh = Musammat Lagandei.
	(defendants Nos. 7 to 9.)	(defendants Nos. 4 to 6.)

After the death of Musammat Hardei, Lagandei and Jai Sri Singh mortgaged the same property on 5th November 1898, paying off the prior mortgage of 1891 out of the consideration of the second mortgage. On the death of Musammat Hardei the name of the plaintiff Jai Gobind was entered in the village records as owner of the equity of redemption, but on 9th June 1899 his name was removed under the orders of the Revenue Court and that of Musammat Lagandei substituted on an application made by Musammat Lagandei for mutation. On 22nd September 1911. Musammat Langandei and Jai Sri Singh sold the equity of redemption to a son of the mortgagee whereupon the mortgagee pre-empted this interest in the property on 30th November 1911. The contesting defendants to this suit are sons of the original mortgagee.

Their defence was that they had been in adverse possession of the equity of redemption since 9th June 1899 and that therefore the plaintiff's suit for redemption instituted on 18th March 1920 was time-barred under Art. 144 of the Limitation Act.

The learned Judge who made the reference was of opinion that there was conflict of authority between this Court and the Allahabad High Court as regards the acquisition of title to equity of redemption by prescription. In our opinion the conflict is confined to the amount of evidence necessary to establish adverse possession in a case of this nature, In the case of this Court, Hubdar Khan v. Gajadhar Chaube (1), it was held that adverse possession can legally exist over a right of equity of redemption and similarly in the Allahabad Bench case, Kunwar Sen v. Darbari Lal (2) the learned Judges stated in the judgment. "There can be no doubt that an equitable estate, as distinct from a legal estate, can be bound by time."

The distinction between the two cases is noticeable when we come to examine the evidence on which the two Courts came to different findings on the two cases before them. In the Oudh case the facts do not appear to us to be correctly reported. The property in suit in that case was that of Manorath, Kalka and Chhutkau. In 1891 Manorath and the heir of Chhutkau transferred the entire interest of all the three mortgagors in the equity of redemption to one Hubdar Khan who redeemed the mortgage and claimed to be owner of the equity of redemption by adverse possession when Gajadhar brought a suit to redeem the mortgage in 1912. It is stated in the report that Gajadhar was a son of Manorath, but that appears to us to be a mistake. In that case questions of Hindu Law, such as legal necessity, etc., would have arisen when the managing member of a Hindu family made the transfer and the son came to Court to redeem the mortgage. No such questions are discussed in the judgment. Kalka has been frequently mentioned in the judgment. It appears to us therefore that Gajadhar was the son of Kalka. The learned Judge himself was not certain whether Kalka was alive or not in 1891. If Kalka had been alive and had notice of the transfer there would be sufficient evidence to start adverse possession in 1891. If, however, the learned Judge held that the mere transfer of the equity of redemption under a registered instrument without notice to the mortgagor was sufficient to establish adverse possession as against Gajadhar we are not prepared to go so far.

In the Allahabad case the plaintiffs, who claimed ownership by right of adverse possession alleged that mutation was made in their favour on the death of the mortgagor Dula Rai and that they had made collections of rent from the mortgagee according to the condition of the mortgage. The learned Judge examined the evidence in the case and held that the allegation regarding collection of rent was false. In their opinion mere mutation of names was not sufficient to start adverse possession in favour of the plaintiffs. Possibly the enunciation of the law to the effect that it seems to them impossible that any person could be in possession of the right to redeem a mortgage, where under the terms of the mortgage the mortgagee is entitled to the actual possession and is in fact in possession thereunder, is too wide. The learned Judges themselves inquired into the fact whether the plaintiffs had or had not received rent from the mortgagee, and possibly if they had held that he had, the result of the appeal would have been different. We think that the principle of law has been correctly stated in Chinto v. Janki (3). In that case land was mortgaged usufructuarily to A. In 1856 A was ousted from possession by B a trespasser, who subsequently held the land and dealt with it as his own for 40 years. The mortgagor sued both A and B for redemption. In appeal on a plea of adverse possession by B, the plaintiff contended that B's possession was not adverse to him, because he as mortgagor had no right to possession during the term of the mortgage. The learned Judges held that the suit fell under Art. 144 of the Limitation Act and that it lay upon B to prove that his possession for twelve years prior to the suit was adverse to the plaintiff mortgagor. The case was thereupon remanded for a finding on the question whether B's possession had become adverse to that of the plaintiff twelve years prior to the institution of the suit.

This view accords with the accepted notion of the interest of a mortgagor who has mortgaged his property with possession. As far back as 1858 in a decision of the Bengal Sadar Dewani Court these were the observations made in speaking of usufructuary mortgages:—"The right of ownership in the mortgaged property does not pass to the mortgagee, leaving only the equity of redemption to the mortgagor. The right of ownership together with the right of redemption remains with the mortgagor, and until the property is actually foreclosed and the sale becomes absolute, the right of ownership does not pass. The doctrine is equally applicable to conditional sales and usufuctuary mortgages; it follows that the mortgagees in the present case, who, whatever the nature of the mortgage, were in possession, were simple usufructuaries and as such enjoyed no right of ownership." Saadut Alee Khan v. Collector of Sarun (4). There can be adverse possession of such an interest and it will depend upon the facts of each case whether the person claiming title through such adverse possession has established his claim or not.

The ruling in the case Chinto v. Janki (3) was explained in a ruling of the same High Court. Tarubai v. Venkatarao (5).

(3) 18 B. 51; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 542.

(4) (1858) Beng. S. D. A. 841; 17 Ind. Dec. (o. s.) 617.

(5) 27 B. 43; 4 Bom. L. R. 721.

After an examination of various decisions Batty, J., observed. "It does not follow that so long as the mortgagor is entitled only to equity of redemption, there can be no invasion of his interest."

This view has been adopted by the Calcutta and Madras High Courts and recently by the Allahabad High Court as well. In Lalla Kanhoo Lal v. Manki Bibi (6) the Court held the possession of a trespasser to be adverse to the mortgagor where the trespasser recovered rent from the mortgagee in possession. In Gobinda Nath Shaha Chowdhry v. Surja Kanta Lahiri (7) this principle was approved. In the Madras High Court the cases are reported as Ittappan v. Manavikrama (8) and Peria Aiya Ambalam v. Shunmugasundaram (9). In the former case Ittappan v. Manavikrama (8) Subramania Ayyar, J., discussed the Bombay ruling at page 165 of the report and after referring to other rulings held that the possession would not be adverse to the mortgagor unless and until the mortgagor had notice of it. In the latter case Peria Aiya Ambalam v. Shunmugasundaram (9) Sankaran Nair, J, quoted with approval from the judgment of Fulton, J. in the Bombay case "I think that, although the possession of a trespasser may undoubtedly be adverse to the mortgagor, the burden of proving when it became so rests on the former. Prima facie by his act of possession he merely ousts the mortgagee who is entitled to hold the property." In the Allahabad High Court the view prevailed at first that there could be no adverse possession where the mortgagor is not entitled to immediate possession. Muhammad Husain v. Mul Chand (10). In Nandan Singh v. Jumman (11) the Court quoted the observation of Mr. Justice Markby that by adverse possession is meant possession by a person holding the land on his own behalf or on behalf of some person other than the true owner, the true owner having a right to immediate possession, and held that there could be no adverse possession where the person against whom it is pleaded has no right of immediate possession. In 1920 however that principle of the Bombay ruling was followed. In Ram Piari v. Budhsain (12) the learned Judges observed "In Chinto v. Janki (3) it was similarly held that where the land was mortgaged with possession to a certain person, and that person was ousted from possession by another who remained in possession of the said land and dealt with it as his own for 40 years, a suit for redemption brought by the mortgagor or his legal heirs, would not fall under Art. 148, but will be governed by Art. 144 of the Limitation Act, and would fail if the person in possession succeeded in proving that his possession was adverse to the mortgagor for more than twelve years prior to the suit."

We have now to examine whether in the present case the mortgagee-defendants have succeeded in proving adverse possession. The sale of the equity of redemption by Musammat Lagande was within twelve years of the institution of the present suit. The incidents pointed out as starting adverse possession were the the mortgage of 1898 and the mutation proceedings of 1899. There is no evidence that the plaintiff had any information of the mortgage of 1898. There are on the record copies of the order in the mutation case and of the statement of the plaintiff Jai Gobind. They indicate the reason why Jai Gobind permitted the substitution of the name of Musammat Lagandei in place of his own in the village records. His impression was that Musammat Lagandei being the daughter-in-law of Musammat Hardei had a life-interest in the equity of redemption and he explained that he had obtained mutation at first because he desired to safeguard the equity of redemption and prevent Musammat Lagandei from transferring it.

(6) 6 C. W. N. 601.
(7) 26 C. 460; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 897.
(8) 21 M. 153; 8 M. L. J. 92; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 465.
(9) 22 Ind. Cas. 615; 38 M. 903; 15 M. L. T. 112; 26 M. L. J. 140; 1 L. W. 119; (1914) M. W. N. 417.
(10) 27 A. 395; A. W. N. (1905) 41; 1 A. L. J. 725.
(11) 17 Ind. Cas. 632; 34 A. 640; 10 A. L. J. 278.
(12) 61 Ind. Cas. 546; 43 A. 164; 18 A. L. J. 995; 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 332.

Thus in the mutation proceedings Jai Gobind did not set up any title to the interest of the equity of redemption and acted under the mistaken belief that Musammat Lagandei had a life interest therein. Under the circumstances there was no occasion for him to bring a suit for declaration against her. If the transfer by Musammat Lagandei had been made to the knowledge of the plaintiff more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit there would have been reason for holding that the present suit was time-barred. We hold that the mortgagees have not been in adverse possession for over twelve years prior to the institution of the suit.

One point remains to be decided. The share of Jai Gobind in the mortgage is one sixth and the Court of first instance permitted him to redeem the shares of the two other branches of the family making up one-half in all.

It was argued here on behalf of the mortgagee-respondents that the plaintiff can redeem only his share of the mortgage, that is one-sixth, because the integrity of the mortgage has been broken. It will be remembered that the mortgagors were Jai Sri Singh and Musammat Hardei and the transfer of the equity of redemption by Jai Sri Singh of his own one-half share on 22nd September 1911 was valid. As the mortgagee purchased the equity of redemption in a portion of the mortgaged property the integrity of the mortgage has been broken up. The Allahabad High Court in Munshi v. Daulat (14) held that under such circumstances the mortgagor cannot redeem any portion of the mortgaged property besides his own against the wishes of the mortgagee. The learned Judges relied on the Privy Council ruling of Nawab Azimut Ali Khan v. Jowahir Singh (15) in which their Lordships held that co-mortgagors who were entitled to a portion of the mortgaged property could not redeem against the will of the mortgagee any portion of the mortgaged property save their own village. We think that we should follow the principles laid down in the Allahabad case and hold that the plaintiff is entitled to redeem only one-sixth of the property in suit.

In the result we set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and decree the plaintiff's suit for redemption of the one-sixth of the property in suit on payment of Rs. 154-2-8. A decree in the usual form under O. XXXIV, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, shall be passed. Six months' time from to-day shall be given for deposit of money in the lower Court and on non-deposit the portion of the property shall be sold. The plaintiff shall receive proportionate costs of all the Courts.

Simpson, A. J. C.—I agree and have very little to add. There can be prescription against a mortgagor, but ordinarily there can be no prescription against him unless he is entitled to immediate possession. Contra non valentem agere nulla currit præscriptio. The fact that he would be entitled to bring a suit for declaration is of no consequence. A party is never bound to bring a suit for declaration. I wish to express my adherence to the pinciples laid down in the Allahabad Bench case; Kunwar Sen v. Darbari Lal (2). If the case Hubdar Khan v. Gajadhar Chaube (1) lays down any different principle I am not prepared to agree with it, but apparently there is a donbt as to what the facts were in that case.

Appeal allowed.

N. H.

(14) 29 A. 262; 4 A. L. J. 74; A. W. N. (1907) 49.
(15) 13 M. I. A. 404; 14 W. R. P. C. 17; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 346; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 573; 20 E. R. 602.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1527 OF 1921.

June 12, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

BADR-UD-DIN—OBJECTOR—APPELLANT

versus

MUHAMMAD HAFIZ AND ANOTHER—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch I, Art. 182 (5), Expl. I—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of BADR-UD-DIN v. MUHAMMAD HAFIZ.

1908), s. 145—Execution of decree—Sureties—Application against judgment-debtor, whether saves limitation against surety.

Where a surety undertakes to satisfy a decree in the event of the judgment-debtor failing to satisfy it, an application for execution of the decree by the arrest of the judgment-debtor operates to save limitation against the surety also either under Explanation I or under clause (5) of Art. 182 of the Schedule I to the Limitation Act.

Cholappa v. Ramchandra Anna Pai, 53 Ind. Cas. 187; 44 B. 34; 21 Bom. L. R. 861, referred to.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Agra, dated the 10th August 1921, confirming a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Agra, dated the 11th July 1921.

Munshi Sarkar Bahadur Johari, for the Appellant.

Munshi Narain Prasad Asthana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal represents a further stage in certain execution proceedings which have been once already before this Court, vide the case of Mohammad Hafiz v. Mohammad Ibrahim (1). The appellant now before us, Sheikh Badr-ud-din Khan Bahadur, is one of the two sureties who bound themselves for the satisfaction of a certain decree. One of the points taken in appeal before us is as to the interpretation of the security bond and the nature of the obligations thereby undertaken by the sureties. We do not say, for a moment, that Sheikh Badr-ud-din Khan Bahadur, who was not a party to the appeal before the Court in the reported case referred to, is not entitled to be heard on this point, but, having heard him, we are still of opinion that the terms of the security bond were rightly interpreted by this Court when delivering the aforesaid judgment. The result is that one of the obligations, jointly and severally assumed by the two sureties, was the satisfaction of the entire decree, in the event of the judgment-debtor, Muhammad Ibrahim, failing to satisfy it. The only further question that can be raised is one of limitation. It has been pointed out to us that the first time when proceedings were taken against the present appellant was in the month of October 1920. We have already decided in the reported case that an application for execution, dated the 6th of March 1918, where execution was sought by arrest of the person of the judgment-debtor, was not barred by limitation on the date on which it was made. We are still of the same opinion. Now the question is whether that application saves limitation for the application of the 25th of October 1920, in which the prayer was for recovery of the amount of the decree by arrest of the judgment-debtor in the first place, or, failing satisfaction by that means, by proceedings against the persons of the two sureties. If that application was in time, then the application now before us is also in time. The question really depends on the manner in which the provisions of section 145 of the Civil Procedure Code are to be applied to those of Art. 182 of the Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908). We are of opinion that the view taken in the reported case was correct and that it practically governs also the case now before us. It has been noted by us that the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court have since then, in the case of Cholappa v. Ramchandra Anna Pai (2), distinguished against the previous decision of the same Court which has been referred to before us in argument as supporting the case for the appellant. The case against the appellant really admits of being stated in the form of a dilemma. Either the effect of section 145 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to make the decree, in a case like the present, equivalent to a decree passed jointly against the original judgment-debtor and the surety or the sureties, or it has not that effect. If it has, then the case is covered by the closing words of Explanation (1) to Art. 182 of the Schedule, and an application for execution against a judgment-debtor or against any one of the sureties affords a starting point for a fresh period of limitation, even though the application next made be against a different surety. On the other hand, if the effect of section 145 of the Civil Procedure Code be not as suggested above, then the words of Explanation (1) aforesaid have no application whatsoever to a case like the one now before us and must altogether be excluded from consideration. In that case we are driven back to the words of clause (5) of Art. 182 itself. The point we have to decide is whether the application of the 6th of March, 1918, was or was not an application in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution of the decree, or to take some step-in-aid of execution of decree. We cannot answer that question otherwise than in the affirmative. We think the appeal fails and it is dismissed with costs.

(1) 58 Ind. Cas. 794; 43 A. 152; 18 A. L. J. 988; U. P. L. R. (A.) 376.

(2) 53 Ind. Cas. 187; 44 B. 34; 21 Bom. L. R. 861.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 5 OF 1920.

February 23, 1923

Present:—Mr. Justice Pratt and Mr. Justice Fawcett.

BABAJI RAMLING GURAV AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

APPA VITHAVJA SUTAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Easements Act (V of 1882), ss. 7, 17, 27—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114—Underground channel—Presumption—Easement, infringement of.

Defendants constructed an underground drain fourteen feet from the outlet of certain springs in respect of which the plaintiffs enjoyed a right of easement and thus diminished the supply of water in the spring:

Held, that from the proximity of the drain to the outlet of the springs the Court was entitled to presume that there was a direct channel between the top of the drain and the outlet and that the construction of the drain, therefore, amounted to an infringement of the plaintiffs' right of easement. [p. 132, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

Letters Patent Appeal from the decision of Macleod, C. J., in Second Appeal No. 663 of 1918, confirming a decree passed by the Assistant Judge, Ratnagiri, in Appeal No 135 of 1907, confirming a decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Rajapur, in Suit No. 69 of 1915.

Mr. S. R. Bakhale, for the Appellants.

Messrs. G. S. Rao and B. V. Desai, for Respondents Nos. 2 to 5, 7 to 9 and 11 to 17.

JUDGMENT.

Pratt, J.—The plaintiffs are held to have acquired an easement to water flowing from springs in defendants' land through the small watercourse S O T into the larger watercourse L J M and thence to their own lands.

Defendants had obstructed this easement by daming the mouth of S O T at A B and by cutting a channel A C whereby the water held up behind the dam was conducted to their fields on the other side of the main watercourse.

The easement is admitted before us and there is no complaint as to injunction granted as regards the dam A B and the channel A C.

Two points, however, are raised in this appeal (1) as to the trench H I G, (2) the underground drain F E D.

Now I do not understand why there should be any complaint about H I G. When defendants dammed the small watercourse S O T at A B, it was necessary to provide another outlet. Otherwise the accumulated water in S O T might have overflowed. With this object the trench H I G was cut. Now that the dam A B is removed the trench H I G must be useless. This was an unauthorized diversion of S O T and merely a work ancillary to the illegal dam A B. The injunction as to H I G must stand.

But as to the underground drain F E D the case is more difficult. This was constructed by the defendants during the hearing of the suit. This underground trench takes off from a point fourteen feet away from the outlet of the springs which pour into S O T.

The learned Chief Justice treats the construction of this drain as an interference with the easement of water prohibited by section 27 of the Indian Easements Act. This was so held in Dudden v. Guardians of Clutton Union (1) and Mostyn v. Atherton (2), where water was taken at the springhead although it had not entered the channel from the top of the spring.

It is, however, contended that as the drain takes off fourteen feet from the outlet of the spring the defendants have merely tapped subterranean water not flowing in a defined channel which cannot be the subject of an easement under section 7 of the Indian Easements Act. If this were so, then under Chasemore v. Richards (3) and Mayor &c. of Bradford v. Pickles (4), the owner of the soil may do as he pleases and if in constructing a drain he intercepts water which would have otherwise reached a spring he cannot be made responsible.

But the drain takes off so very near the outlet that even if it is not the actual water of the spring as in Dudden v. Guardians of Clutton Union (1) yet there can be little doubt that there must be a direct channel between the top of the drain and the outlet. This is an underground continuation of the watercourse which is the subject of plaintiffs' easement and, therefore, an infringement of right. That the existence of this subterranean channel was known to the defendants is proved by the furtive manner in which they constructed the drain.

I, therefore, think the judgment of Macleod, C. J. is right and would confirm it and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Fawcett, J.—I concur.

The principle on which water percolating through the soil under the surface in unknown or undefined channels cannot be the subject of an easement is clearly laid down in Acton v. Blundell (5). I refer to the part of the judgment commencing "But in the case of a well sunk by a proprietor in his own land, the water which feeds it from a neighbouring soil does not flow openly in the sight of the neighbouring proprietor, but through the hidden veins of the earth beneath its surface". It depends ultimately on the absence of knowledge enabling the Court to say to what extent, if at all, the supply of water to a well, spring or stream, is affected by any water percolating from one piece of land to another (cf. the opinion of the Judges in Chasemore v. Richards (3). This principle clearly applies to cases like those dealt with in the last named case, and Mayor &c. of Bradford v. Pickles (4) where the diversion complained of was a considerable distance off the spring or stream, whose water was said to be diminished by the diversion. But, when the diversion takes place at or in close proximity to the source of a spring, there arises a different case altogether, as is shown by the authorities cited in my learned brother's judgment. In the present case the abstraction of water begins only fourteen feet from the sources of five springs, and there is clear justification for presuming under section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act that there is a direct and defined channel by which the water sought to be tapped finds its way to the adjacent springs. The close proximity favours a direct connection between the flow tapped by the defendants and the springs, and there is no room for the uncertainty and indefiniteness, which underlie the principle followed in Mayor &c. of Bradford v. Pickles (4). It may be added that the Indian Easements Act, sections 7 and 17, only speak of underground water not passing "in a defined channel." There is, therefore, no occasion to apply the rule laid down in Bradford Corporation v. Ferrand (6) that the course of the channel must also be "known" and that if this cannot be ascertained except by excavation, the water (though flowing in a defined channel) must be treated as in the same

(1) (1857) 1 H. & N. 627; 26 L. J. Ex 146; 156 E. R. 1353; 108 R. R. 752.
(2) (1899) 2 Ch. 360; 68 L. J. Ch. 629; 81 L. T. 356; 48 W. R. 168.
(3) (1859) 7 H. L. C. 349; 29 L. J. Ex 81; 5 Jur. (N. S.) 873; 2 W. R. 685; 11 E. R. 140; 115 R. R. 187.
(4) (1895) A. C. 587; 64 L. J. Ch. 759; 11 R. 286; 73 L. T. 353; 44 W. R. 190; 60 J. P. 3.
(5) (1843) 12 M. & W. 324 at p. 350; 13 L. J. Ex. 289; 152 E. R. 1223; 67 R. R. 361.
(6) (1902) 2 Ch. 655; 71 L. J. Ch. 859; 51 W. R. 122; 87 L. T. 388; 18 T. L. R. 890; 67 J. P. 21.

position as water percolating through the soil. That is a strictness of view which is not, I think, authorized by anything in the Indian Law of easements. And in any case there would be ground here for saying that the places concerned are so close to one another, that knowledge of the course of the channel can be presumed, just as it is in a case like that of the river Mole (see at page 665 of the report).

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

MATRIMONIAL REFERENCE NO. 9 OF 1922.

June 12, 1922.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Piggott and Mr. Justice Walsh.

A. A. GARLINGE—PETITIONER

versus

IRENE REBECCA GARLINGE—RESPONDENT AND ANOTHER—CO-RESPONDENT.

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), s 10—Divorce proceedings—Petition of divorce—Particulars—Procedure—Costs of defence—Husband, liability of—Court, duty of.

Where a petition for divorce is filed by the husband, and the wife enters an appearance and denies the allegations against her, she has an absolute right to require her husband to furnish her with funds sufficient to enable her to make a full and satisfactory defence, and to obtain such assistance from Counsel as is reasonable under the circumstances, and the Court should take upon itself the duty of seeing that this is done. [p. 134, col. 1.]

General allegations of misconduct against the wife in a petition for divorce should not be allowed to remain on the record, and if the petitioner is unable to furnish particulars the allegations ought to be struck out. [p. 134, col. 1.]

Mr. C. Thompson, for the Petitioner.

Babu Saila Nath Mukerji, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference from the Court of the District Judge of Ajmer-Merwara, under section 17 of the Indian Divorce Act No. IV of 1869. The petitioner is Alfred A. Garlinge, described as a guard in the employment of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway. The respondent is his wife, Irene Rebecca Garlinge, and the co-respondent is Joseph William Prior, employed in the Locomotive Shops at Ajmer.

The fact that the petitioner and the respondent were married on the 16th day of May 1910, and the further fact that one child was born of the marriage, a daughter, in the month of December 1910; are admitted. The said daughter is still living and is referred to by the name of Dorothy in the evidence.

In the third paragraph of the petition it is alleged in general terms that soon after the marriage the respondent began to misconduct herself and continued in her evil conduct in spite of repeated promises to reform. A general allegation of this kind should have been struck off the record, nor should the Judge have permitted the petitioner, when giving evidence, to mention the names of two men with whom the respondent was said to have committed adultery in 1912, when he had not made that charge against her in the petition. Again, the Judge ought to have struck out the latter part of paragraph 4 where he says that by his absence in Mesopotamia his wife "found further opportunities for her misconduct."

These general allegations are unfair and the Court should have protected the respondent by an order in these words:—"Paragraph 3 and the last eleven words of paragraph 4 to be struck out, unless within seven days the petitioner gives particulars in writing of the alleged misconduct, stating when, where and with whom the said misconduct took place."

From 1915 to 1920 the petitioner was on active service in Mesopotamia and returned to India in January 1920, and admittedly came to Ajmer about the 27th of that month. There was a difference of opinion between the parties as to whether or not the wife should go and live with the husband when he received an appointment which made his headquarters station Abu Road, whereas the wife, the respondent, desired to remain at Ajmer. A suggestion has been put forward on her behalf that her only reason for refusing to go to Abu Road was that she was able to make better arrangements at Ajmer for the education of the daughter. This, however, along with many other circumstances in the case, has not been subjected to any satisfactory or adequate inquiry. The petitioner's own evidence on the point is inconsistent with the pleading set forth in the fifth paragraph of his petition. He there distinctly said that, in consequence of facts discovered by him within a week of his arrival at Ajmer, and, therefore, early in the month of February 1920, he (the petitioner) left Ajmer and began to work at Abu Road, from whence he wrote to tell his wife that under no circumstances could he live with her any longer. Mr. Garlinge's evidence at the trial in the Court below is quite inconsistent with this plea. What he says is that on his return from field service, about the end of January, he was posted to Abu Road, whereupon his wife refused to accompany him there. During the months that followed, the petitioner's work took him backwards and forwards between Abu Road and Ajmer and he was continually pressing his wife to come to him at Abu Road, a request which she continued to refuse. The petitioner should not have been allowed to make a statement of this sort without being confronted with his own pleadings and asked to explain the discrepancy.

This makes it necessary for us to comment at once upon another most unsatisfactory feature of the trial in the Court below. The wife had entered an appearance, she denied the allegations against her and she did, as a matter of fact, go into the witness-box and give evidence on oath. She was not represented by Counsel, and it was the duty of the Court to have seen that she was so represented. Where a petition of this nature is filed by the husband, and the wife enters an appearance and denies the allegations against her; she has an absolute right to require her husband to furnish her with funds sufficient to enable her to make a full and satisfactory defence, and to obtain such assistance from Counsel as is reasonable under the circumstances, and the Court should have taken upon itself the duty of seeing that this was done.

As a matter of fact the petition itself is, as we have already pointed out, full of vague and unsatisfactory allegations, although in the fifth paragraph it is distinctly alleged that the petitioner discovered that his wife was carrying on adulterous intercourse with the co-respondent Joseph Prior; no particulars are given, and on the wording of the paragraph the Court is left to infer that the petitioner made this discovery early in the month of February 1920. If that were the petitioner's case it would be a case unsupported by any shred of evidence.

We ought not, however, to bear hardly upon the petitioner, or to decide anything against him, merely because he was badly advised by his Counsel in the Court below. The best thing we can do for him is to take up, not the petition, but his own sworn testimony at the trial and to see what he asserted against his wife and what evidence was produced in support of his assertions, or on the other side, by way of rebutting the same.

We return, to the end of January 1920, when the petitioner came back to Ajmer. We have already mentioned the difference of opinion between the parties as to whether or not the wife should take up her residence at Abu Road. In this connection much reliance seems to be placed upon a single phrase in a letter addressed by the respondent to the petitioner on the 20th June 1919, while the latter was in service in Mesopotamia. The letter, on the whole, is couched in affectionate terms. It is such a letter as a good wife might have written to a husband for whose safe return she was anxiously waiting, except for this one phrase. The writer is referring to certain matters between herself and her own family and she writes as follows :—

"I am sending two of mother's letters to you. I can assure you, Alf, if you work again this side, I will leave you. My God, my damn people, they have really treated me very badly."

In the petition, stress is laid upon this expression as embodying a definite refusal on the part of Mrs. Garlinge to live with her husband again in the event of his returning to his employment on the Abu Road side. It is very difficult to attach any such meaning to the phrase if it is read with its context. Moreover, when Mrs. Garlinge was in the witness box, she was not cross-examined on the point, or asked to say what she really meant and whether she would have refused to resume marital relations with her husband on his return to employment on the Abu Road side of the Railway. As we shall show presently, the petitioner's own evidence is inconsistent with the assertion of any such refusal on the part of his wife, and there was produced at the trial in the Court below and placed on the record, a letter of the petitioner to his wife, dated the 20th of September 1919, in which, while expressing strong resentment at the news that his wife had chosen in his absence to become a member of the Roman Catholic Church, and also resenting certain expressions used by her in some other letter not upon this record, he certainly nowhere suggests that he understood his wife to have refused to live with him in the event of his return to work at Abu Road.

Now we have it that during the year 1920 the respondent was living with her own people at Ajmer. The petitioner was employed at Abu Road and visited his wife from time to time in Ajmer. About the end of October 1920, according to the petitioner, he came to the house which his wife was then occupying in Ajmer. (We note that he speaks of it as "my house," so that presumably she was not living with her people then). He arrived in the early morning, about 6-15 A. M., and he means the Court to understand that his arrival was unexpected. He says that he found his wife and the co-respondent together in a room in which there was no bed. The co-respondent was fully dressed and Mrs. Garlinge was wearing a dressing gown, but they were lying side by side on the floor. The petitioner wishes the Court to understand that what he then saw left no doubt whatever in his mind as to the nature of the relations between the two. Nevertheless he raised no alarm at the time and made no attempt to obtain there and then corroborative evidence. He says he kicked the co-respondent and told him that if he ever came near the house again he would be severely dealt with. Nevertheless, after this scene, the petitioner goes on to depose, that about Christmas time that very year he returned to Ajmer and lived with his wife during the holidays. Again, he says, in the month of February 1921 he lived with his wife for about one month. In the ordinary meaning of these words used in this connection, they imply that he had resumed marital relations with his wife; which would in the circumstances be a condonation of her adultery, if in fact she had been unfaithful. We have been told in argument that the petitioner did not mean to imply by the expression above quoted that he had resumed marital relations with his wife. We can only deal with the evidence as it stands upon this record and give the ordinarily accepted meaning to ordinary words. If our inferences are in any way unjust to the petitioner, it is only one further reason for regretting that the petitioner when giving evidence was not properly taken in hand by his Counsel or by the Court, and care taken to elicit the facts.

The rest of the evidence for the petitioner consists of certain letters, regarding which we have already said all that is necessary.

There remains the evidence of two household servants. A man named Ramzan, who is the petitioner's cook, and a woman named Jamini, who cooks for the respondent. The gist of Ramzan's evidence is to the effect that the co-respondent Prior paid frequent visits to Mrs. Garlinge at Ajmer while her husband was absent on duty. He deposes further that on two occasions at least he saw the co-respondent lurking in the nala behind the house at a late hour of the evening, or after nightfall and that on one occasion, at about midnight, he saw Mrs. Garlinge going out of the house in the direction of that nala. On that particular occasion he did not follow her and he does not know whether Mr. Prior was in the nala. He admits, moreover, that on the said night the petitioner was sleeping in the house, so that we are asked to believe that the respondent actually left the house, with her husband inside, in order to go and meet her lover in the nala outside. The evidence of this witness seems to us flimsy and untrustworthy in the highest degree. We do not know when he informed his master of the facts which he had observed. He certainly did not do so at the time of their occurrence. The woman Jamini really proves nothing at all. She refers to a period of time during which Mrs. Garlinge was living in the same house with her own mother, her father, her brother, her sister and her own little daughter. During this time, the witness says, Mr. Prior frequently visited the house, and she found him drinking tea there four or five times when she arrived at 6 o'clock in the morning. At that time Mrs. Garlinge was in bed. Whether the witness intended the Court to believe that the co-respondent was drinking tea by the bed side of the respondent or in some other room was never cleared up. As a matter of fact the Trial Court has attached little or no importance to the evidence of these two witnesses. He has relied on the evidence of the petitioner, which he considers as practically uncontradicted. Both the respondent Mrs. Garlinge and the co-respondent Joseph Prior went into the witness-box and denied the allegations against them. Mrs. Garlinge's denial was not explicit as it no doubt would have been, if she had had the benefit of the most ordinary legal advice, but she undoubtedly meant to deny the allegations against her. She had another story to tell regarding an episode which undoubtedly did take place at Abu Road, in the month of July 1921. There was a violent quarrel between the petitioner and the respondent in that month at Abu Road, ending in the first rupture between them of which we can discover any real evidence on this record. We do not desire to go into the details of this matter as the name of another lady was dragged into the case, and she has had no opportunity of being heard in connection with the affair. But Mrs. Garlinge's statement that it was her husband who turned her out of the house which he was then occupying at Abu Road, and her further statement that she was at that time making allegation against her husband regarding his conduct with another woman are both corroborated by independent evidence.

This is the state of the evidence on record on which we are asked to assume the grave responsibility of confirming a decree for the dissolution of marriage.

The case has been tried in the most unsatisfactory manner conceivable. We have already commented upon the pleadings, the way in which evidence inconsistent with the pleadings was admitted and the absence of any provision for legal representation for the wife. We feel bound to add that the learned District Judge seems to have dealt with this matter without any adequate realisation of the seriousness of the decree which he was asked to pass, or the importance of the questions laid before him for adjudication. We certainly cannot take upon ourselves the responsibility of confirming the decree of the Court below on the materials on this record. We ought to note it as a point in favour of Mrs. Garlinge that at the earliest possible moment she filed a petition in the Court below by way of appeal against the decree of the learned District Judge. She had no right of appeal but the obvious intention of the Legislature as expressed in section 17 of the Act is that this Court, upon a reference for confirmation, should review the entire evidence and come to its own conclusion whether facts sufficient to justify a decree for the dissolution of marriage are or are not established by that evidence. We do not think that on the materials on this record there is any evidence upon which a Court ought to find, or ought to have found, that Mrs. Garlinge was guilty of misconduct with the co-respondent Joseph Prior, or with any other person.

The result is that we must refuse to confirm the decree of the Court below but on the contrary, we hereby set aside that decree and dismiss the petition. The petitioner must bear the costs of the opposite parties, throughout, including the fees for the Counsel, who has been employed to act for the respondent Mrs. Garlinge at the hearing in this Court, which we fix at the sum actually certified by Counsel

z. k. Petition dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 274 OF 1922.

February 21, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KHANDERAO RAMCHANDRA TALPADE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition—Toka land—Rates of assessment and capitalisation.

Where Toka lands are being acquired, Toka tenants are entitled to some consideration in fixing the rate of assessment on the value and the rate at which it should be capitalised, and they are not to be treated as if on the expiry of the period of their leases they would be rack-rented off their lands. [p. 138, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decision of the Tribunal of Appeal, Bombay, in Reference No. 29 of 1920.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General, (with him Mr. J. C. G. Bowen, Government Solicitor), for the Appellant.

Messrs. B. J. Desai and Campbell, (with them Messrs. K. N. Koyajee, instructed by Ardeshir, Hormusji, Dinshaw and Co., for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These are five appeals from the decision of the Tribunal of Appeal in References Nos. 29, 31 and 32 of 1920 and 78 and 79 of 1920, in which certificates have been given that they are fit cases for appeal to the High Court. Those certificates appear to have been granted on the ground that an important question of principle was involved, although as a matter of fact if a question of principle was involved, it had already been before the High Court on two different occasions, and the High Court, as far as it could, laid down what method should be followed with regard to the apportionment of the present value of Toka lands between Government and the Toka tenants. But it seems that each party wants this Court not only to lay down some uniform method of apportionment, but to go still further and fix the rate of assessment for arriving at the apportionment in all cases. No doubt that would be very desirable, but considering the varying nature of these Toka lands, it appears to us to be out of question to attempt to rule that in every case where Toka land is acquired by Government, the rate of assessment which it is expected Government would levy in 1929 when the fifty years' period expires, is a certain percentage of the present value of the land, because the rate to be now fixed on the present value of the land must be determined in each case according to the prospects which the land has of improving or decreasing in value, and other varying circumstances.

On that question it may be said that the lands in all these references were of very much the same nature, and their value was fixed at a time when the value of land had risen by speculation considerably beyond the usual rate, while there does not seem to be much prospect of those values increasing by the year 1929. It may even be that these lands by 1929 might decrease in value. However that may be, we have to fix a rate for the assessment and another rate for the interest at which the assessment should be capitalized. As was stated in Madhavdas Gokuldas Pasta v. The Government of Bombay (1912) First Appeal No. 147 of 1911, decided by Scott, C. J., and Batchelor, J., on April 10, 1912, (Unreported) which is known as Pasta's case:—

"In respect of lands held under the Toka tenure the right of Government to increase the Toka rent is not subject to any specific limitation. The present Toka rent for the land in question is Rs. 13-11-7. By a resolution of August 14, 1879, this rent was declared for a period of 50 years. The next revision will therefore take place in 1929. It is agreed that the amount of rent receivable up to that time is of a present value of Rs. 213: the contest is as to the value of the subsequent interest of Government in Toka rents payable after that date. The question is one which cannot be settled with anything approaching to certainty but the claim formulated by Government and accepted by the Tribunal of Appeal is based upon two probabilities, first that Government will in 1929 adhere to their declared policy of demanding four per cent. of the estimated value of building land as the rent or assessment payable to them and secondly that the value of the land in question will certainly not be less than that fixed as its present value under the proceedings which have resulted in its acquisition by the Improvement Trust. Taking then Rs. 2-5-0 per square yard as the present value making a total value of Rs. 18,278, a four per cent rent in 1929 would produce Rs. 731 per annum. Although Rs. 731 is two-thirds of a six per cent. return on the capital value and would at present only leave two per cent for the tenant, the question to be determined is whether Rs. 731 is a rent charge greater than the property can reasonably be expected to bear in 1929 having regard to the prospective development of building land in the north of the Island. Upon this point the members of the Expert Tribunal entertain no doubt. They say, 'We have arrived at the view that it will be land ripe for building when that assessment comes to be levied, and land of this area and ripe for building in that locality and position will carry the assessment referred to.'"

There is no doubt the land in that case was valued as not ripe for building at a very low rate of Rs. 2-5-0 per square yard. Assuming that the land would be ripe for building in 1929 and would fetch anything between Rs. 5 to Rs. 15 per square yard, four per cent. on Rs. 2-5-0 would be a very much smaller rate on a value between Rs. 5 and Rs. 15. But it must also be remembered that the rate of Government Paper was 3½ per cent. at that time.

It seems to us that it is hopeless at the present moment to speculate on what the Government policy will be in 1929. An attempt was made to place before the Tribunal evidence that the present policy of Government was, in the case of Toka land which came into the possession of Government, to demand a six per cent. rate on the present value. But the letter of the Collector which was put in with the reply of Government was dated some time in 1921, and such a declaration of policy could not affect the apportionment to be made by the Court as of the date when the land was notified. It also appears to us useless to inquire into what a purchaser of Government rights in Toka land would give for such rights, or what a present owner of Toka land would put by at the present moment in order to secure his position in 1929 when the previous settlement came to an end. All such calculations are themselves purely fanciful, and do not in any way assist the Court in arriving at a conclusion which itself can only be based on pure speculation. They merely delude the Court into thinking that it has arrived at a conclusion, not on speculation, but on sound reasoning. We have to decide between the views of Government, and no doubt we have to consider that they are entitled at the end of the period to reassess the land at a rate entirely within their discretion, and the views of the claimants the present owners, who may consider that they have rights in the nature of occupancy rights, which would entitle them to pay something less than a rack rent, which otherwise Government would charge on the basis that the lands were liable to be resumed at the end of the period.

Whether in 1929 there will be any Toka tenants still left in Bombay is also problematical. But if there are any, it is quite possible that they may attempt to urge their claims in this Court, and naturally it is quite impossible for any one to place any value on such claims at the present moment. Still our own view is that Toka tenants are entitled to some consideration, and they are not to be treated at the present day as if in 1929 they would be rack-rented off their lands. In these cases we have to fix the rate of assessment on the present value and the rate at which it should be capitalized; and on a consideration of all the arguments which have been placed before us by the Advocate-General for Government and Mr. Desai, we think we should fix four per cent. as the rate of assessment on the present value of the land and six per cent. as the rate for capitalization. The rate of capitalization can, we think, be laid down with absolute certainty. We have to take the present value of an annual payment to commence in 1929; six per cent. is the usual rate of interest, and has always been considered the usual rate of interest in this Court, so we see no reason why it should not be adopted in these cases, without considering whether the assessment of these lands in 1929 will be well-secured or unsecured. It is certainly desirable in all these cases that we should avoid as far as possible fanciful speculation which can be of no assistance towards fixing a figure which is itself a matter of speculation. For the purpose of apportionment between the rival claims of Government and the tenants we may say that it would not be fair in 1929 to fix the prospective rate of assessment higher than four per cent., while there may be cases in which it may be equitable to allow a lower rate. Therefore, calculations will be made in each of the references according to the rates which we have laid down, and the orders of the Tribunal of Appeal will be amended in accordance with our decision.

One cross-objection was urged on the part of the respondents in References 29, 31 and 32 of 1920 against the direction that they were to get only half their costs from Government. But Reference 26 was tried together with these References, and the claimant in Reference 26 got all his costs. We presume that the Tribunal considered that on a consideration of the facts in these References Nos. 29, 31 and 32 the fair order was to make costs payable only to the extent of half. That is entirely a matter within the discretion of the Tribunal and we cannot possibly interfere with it.

Z. K. Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 45 OF 1921.

June 5, 1922.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coku' Prasad.

RAM DAS AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS —APPELLANTS

versus

DUBRI KOERI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Res judicata—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Question tried in Revenue Courts, whether can be re-agitated in Civil Courts.

Where a Revenue Court having jurisdiction to decide a matter has heard and finally determined it, a suit in the Civil Court to question the decision of the Revenue Court is not competent.

Plaintiff brought a suit in the Revenue Court to eject the defendant as his sub-tenant. It was held that the defendant was not a sub-tenant but a tenant-in-chief paying rent to the zemindar and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff then filed a suit in the Civil Court to set aside the decree of the Revenue Court and to get possession of the land:

Held, that the suit was not maintainable.

Baljit v. Mahpal, 49 Ind. Cas. 118; 41 A. 203; 17 A. L. J. 60, followed.

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Stuart reversing that of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Ghazipur.

Mr. A Sanyal, for the Appellant.

Dr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff brought a suit in the Revenue Court to eject the defendant as his sub-tenant. The suit was fought out up to the Court of the Commissioner and it was held that the defendant was not a sub-tenant, but a tenant-in-chief paying rent to the zemindar.

After failing in the Revenue Court the plaintiff instituted the present suit in the Civil Court for setting aside the decree of the Revenue Court above-mentioned and for the possession of the land in dispute.

The defendant's contention was that he was the chief tenant and that such a suit did not lie and was barred by the rule of res judicata.

The Munsif decreed the suit, holding that the Revenue Courts were not competent to decide the question that the defendant was the chief tenant and not a sub-tenant of the plaintiff, and the present suit, being between rival tenants, was one cognizable by the Civil Court. This decision was affirmed on appeal.

The defendant appealed to this Court and a learned Judge of this Court has allowed his appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's claim. No doubt it was the tendency of the Court in earlier cases to allow such suits to be brought in the Civil Court, but this view has now been departed from.

Mr. Justice Piggott has very clearly discussed and put the present point of view in Baljit v. Mahipat (1). We are in full agreement with his view. The plea of sub-tenancy has been heard and finally determined by the only Court capable of entertaining it, and the present suit of the plaintiff to have the decision of the Revenue Court set aside must fail.

For these reasons we agree with the decision of the learned Judge of this Court and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(1) 49 Ind. Cas. 118; 41 A. 203; 17 A. L. J. 60.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 61 OF 1921.

June 6, 1922.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Gokul Prasad.

BHOJ RAJ—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HARDEVA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 59—Licensee, whether can claim adversely—Transfer of property—License, whether cancelled.

A licensee cannot, by enjoying the license for any length of time, acquire rights adverse to the licensor.

Where a licensor transfers the property in respect of which the license has been enjoyed, the license ceases to exist.

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Stuart reversing that of the District Judge, Aligarh.

Munshi Panna Lal, for the Appellant.

Munshi Gulzari Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff (appellant) to recover a certain plot of waste land in the village from the defendants who, according to the plaintiff's allegation, have erected certain thatched sheds and cattle troughs without his permission a short time ago.

The defence raised was (1) that the sheds were 25 years old, (2) that the plaintiff had lost title because of want of possession for 12 years, and (3) that these constructions were necessary for the defendants' cultivation in the village, or, in other words, that they were appurtenant to their holding.

The First Court dismissed the suit on the ground that it was barred by time because the plaintiff had not proved his possession within 12 years of suit.

The lower Appellate Court found, in concurrence with the First Court, that the constructions were more than 20 years old and that the defendants were mere licensees; that the plaintiff having got the property from the original licensors by virtue of transfer, the license ceased to exist, having regard to section 59 of the Indian Easements Act (V of 1882), and the defendants were liable to ejectment. It accordingly decreed the plaintiff's suit.

The defendants came up in appeal and a learned Judge of this Court has dismissed the plaintiff's claim on the ground that a zemindar cannot revoke a license like this at his will after the tenant has enjoyed the privilege for more than twelve years. As a general proposition of the law, we cannot accept this statement of the law as correct. A licensee cannot by enjoying the licence for any length of time acquire rights adverse to that of the licensor. The question whether a certain class of land is appurtenant to the holding of a tenant is one of fact depending upon the circumstances of each particular case. In this case, as we have stated above, the lower Appellate Court has found that the defendants did not hold the plot in suit or the constructions thereon as appurtenances to their holding. On this finding and the further fact that the plaintiff was a transferee from the original licensor, the license had ceased to exist by operation of law and the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. We, therefore, allow this appeal. As a claim based upon false allegations by a zemindar is one which does not meet with our approval, we refuse him his costs in all Courts. The result is that the judgment of the learned Judge of this Court is set aside and the plaintiff's claim is decreed, but without costs.

Appeal decreed.

Z. K.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

April 13, 1923.

Present:—Viscount Haldane, Lord Dunedin and Sir John Edge.

NABA KUMAR DAS AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

RUDRA NARAYAN JANA AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Lease of jungle land by Government—Clearing land for cultivation, meaning of—Non-compliance with condition—Forfeiture.

Government granted a lease of a tract of jungle land to the plaintiff. One of the clauses of the lease provided that one-eighth of the entire area leased must be cleared and in a fit state for cultivation at the end of the fifth year, and that at any time thereafter an officer of Government might enter on the land and cause it to be measured for the purpose of ascertaining whether the condition had been fulfilled. In the event of failure to comply with the condition the lessee was liable to the forfeiture of all rights in the land under the lease. After the expiry of the period of five years an officer of Government proceeded to the spot and after an inspection of the land but without taking measurements, made a report that the condition had not been fulfilled. The lease was thereupon determined:

Held, (1) that the obligation in the lease to clear the land and to put it into a fit state for cultivation, extended to the extraction of the stumps of trees as well as to the cutting down of the timber; [p. 142, col. 2.]

(2) that the lease did not impose an obligation on the Government to take measurements, there was a right to do so but no duty; [p. 143, col. 1.]

(3) that the forfeiture was not invalid merely for the reason that the officer who made the report did not take measurements, especially in the absence of positive evidence showing that the condition had been complied with. [p. 143, col. 2; p. 144, ol. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment and decree of the Calcutta High Court, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, 24-Parganahs.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., and Bagram, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Dunne, K. C., and Ramsay, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Viscount Haldane.—In this litigation the High Court at Fort William, as the Court of Appeal, reversed judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, 24-Parganahs. The appellants had brought a suit in the latter Court for a declaration that forfeiture by the Government of a certain lease and agreement was invalid and that they, as plaintiffs, were entitled to possession of the land, the subject of the lease. The learned Subordinate Judge decided in favour of the plaintiffs, but the High Court allowed an appeal from his decision and dismissed the suit. The present appeal is brought by the plaintiffs, and it seeks to have the decision of the learned Judge of first instance restored. The only question now relevant for determination is whether the resumption by the Government in 1906 of Crown land in the Sunderbans, originally leased on the 7th December 1900, and a subsequent pottah by the Government dated the 27th July 1909, in favour of the respondent, Rudra Narayan Jana, were validly made.

The only material facts are not numerous. A lot called Monsadwip in Saugor Island, Sunderbans, was put up to auction by the Government for settlement, and the highest bidder was one Golak Chandra Das. At his request the Government on the 7th December 1900, granted a lease in favour of Golak Chandra Das himself, Narayan Prashad Ballav, Prasanna Kumar Maiti, Narendra Nath Bhuiya, and Kabir Charan Patra. By partition deed the shares of the first three were declared to be of 4 annas each, and the shares of the last two of 2 annas each. These lessees, or their representatives, were the original plaintiffs and the appellants here. In August 1903 the first respondent, Rudra Narayan Jana, purchased from the successors-in-title of Golak Chandra Das, who had died, a 2 annas share of the 4 annas share to which the latter was entitled.

The lease of the 7th December 1900 gave an occupancy right for forty years from April 1901, of jungle land. Under the third clause of this lease one-eighth of the entire area leased was to be cleared and to be in a fit state for cultivation at the end of the fifth year, and at any time after the expiration of the fifth year the Sunderbans Commissioner or other officer appointed by the Government or any person authorised by him might enter on the land and cause it to be measured for the purpose of ascertaining whether this condition had been fulfilled. The fourth clause provided that on failure to comply with the above clearing condition, the lessees should be liable at the discretion of the Government to the forfeiture of all rights in land under the lease or to an annual penalty. The Government, if the lease was determined, was to have the right of immediate re-entry. There was also a provision for the construction by the lessees of "protective works" with a right in the Government to put an end to the lease in case these were not constructed within a time prescribed. In the view which their Lordships take of the case it is not necessary to consider this provision.

By an agreement of the same date with the lease, the 7th December 1900, the lessees covenanted that they would undergo the penalties set forth in "the clauses of the lease," provided that the Sunderbans Commissioner or other officer should give to them or their legal representatives fifteen days notice within which to show cause why the penalties should not be enforced. No question now arises on this covenant or proviso.

On the 12th April 1906 Mr. Sunder, who as Settlement Officer had taken over the duties of the Commissioner in the Sunderbans, an office which had been abolished, visited the property leased. He had previously made various intimations of visits which were not carried out, and he had, on the occasion on which he actually inspected, arrived three days before the time he had intimated. These circumstances, however, do not affect the question of his right. He appears to have gone to the property and to have looked at it with the aid of his binoculars both when he landed and subsequently from a boat. The property was stated by the Trial Judge to be "a vast tract of forest and swamp, comprised in the area of 7,532 miles, known as the Sunderbans," consisting of "a tangled region of estuaries, rivers and water-courses, enclosing a vast number of islands of various shapes and sizes." The property leased, was included in Chuck Monsadwip which is in Saugor Island, one of these islands. The Sunderbans is by nature a swampy jungle covered with trees. The soil is alluvial soil, formed by deposit from the Ganges at whose mouth it is. The Government had, for a long time past, been taking steps to re-claim it, and to convert the jungle from being the mere home of wild beasts into rice tracts. For this purpose it was necessary not only to cut down the trees but to take out their stumps, and improvement leases were being granted on terms, such as those in the lease in question, which should secure that this was done. It is, therefore, plain that the obligations in the lease to clear and to put into a fit state for cultivation, extended to the extraction of these stumps as well as to the cutting down of the timber.

Mr. Sunder appears first to have landed on the lot of the respondent, Rudra Narayan Jana. He subsequently got into a boat in order to have a view of other portions of the property, alighting on at least one spot. He was engaged for, at all events, two hours in looking at the property leased, which extended to about 3,000 acres. He did not take measurements. The learned Subordinate Judge speaks as though he was bound to do this, but it is clear that there was no obligation to do so imposed by the lease. There was a right if the representative of the Government thought proper, to enter and make measurements, but no duty. What the Settlement Officer had to determine, as a matter of fact, was simply whether one-eighth of the entire area leased had been cleared and put into a state fit for cultivation within the stipulated time.

On the 23rd April Mr. Sunder reported to the Collector of the 24-Paraganahs at Alipur that he had inspected and had found only Rudra Narayan Jana and a few raiyats who held under him on the property. He stated that the clearing conditions had not been fulfilled, and that only a small portion had been cleared by Rudra, who had obtained some paddy from it. He also said that the "protective works" had been commenced. As to this, however, for reasons connected with the absence of a designation by the Government of the site for them, no question has been raised on the argument in the appeal. He recommended in his report that the lease should be determined and the estate brought under direct management by the Government.

It was contended for the appellants that the substance of this evidence was displaced by certain documents put in at the trial by the Government. These documents were in the nature of a rent-roll proceeding on measurements stated to have been made about the beginning of the year 1909. The rent-roll itself was prepared on the 11th January in that year. It was relied on by the Subordinate Judge as showing that the land must have been made fit for cultivation by 1906. The appellants offered evidence that there had been measurements made for the Government in 1907, but both Courts rejected the testimony of the witnesses as false. In the Court of Appeal it was pointed out that the entries in the rent-roll are ambiguous as to whether more than 942 bighas were stated to have been fit for cultivation on the 6th April 1906. If there was no more than this amount made fit by then, the eighth part of the whole, amounting to 1,250 bighas, could not have been made fit within the time stipulated. The rent-roll was prepared by a clerk, Mahesh Chandra Dutta, from material which appeared to have been furnished to him by other clerks. There is no reliable evidence as to the entries having been the work of anyone who had sufficient first hand knowledge.

The Court of Appeal, moreover, points out that there was ambiguity in the entries as to the dates at which the tenants were treated as actually being in possession of land that had been rendered fit for cultivation.

But however this may stand there is another objection which their Lordships think fatal to the entries in the rent-roll being relied on as evidence which could outweigh the direct testimony of the witnesses who say that the stipulated eighth part had not been adequately cleared by April 1906. Mr. Sunder went into the witness box and stated that he had seen the property and, as the result, had advised that, as he had found that the clearing stipulated for had not been performed, the Government should resume the property leased, as was actually done. Nothing was put to him in his cross-examination about the rent-roll or the entries in it. If, as was suggested at the Bar, this was because the document was tendered by the Government, a defendant at the trial, as part of its case, only after Sunder had been in the box, an application might have been made to re-call him for further cross-examination. There is, however, no suggestion that there was any such application. Sunder was not even cross-examined on the alleged perfunctory character of his inspection. The learned Subordinate Judge relied largely on the circumstance that he did not measure. But he was not bound to measure. His evidence was that he could see and saw that the proper quantity of land had not been cleared. If this statement was challenged it should have been challenged by cross-examination directed to the impracticability of forming a judgment by mere inspection, even with the aid of glasses, as to the proportion of area cleared.

After the forfeiture had been declared and an interval had elapsed, a fresh lease was granted to the respondent, Rudra, on the 27th July 1909 who, it was admitted, could not be said to have been in a fiduciary position. In consequence of this lease to him he was joined as a defendant in the suit along with the Secretary of State.

The Trial Judge found that the defendants had failed to prove that the clearing conditions of the lease had been broken, and on this ground gave judgment against them. The Court of Appeal held that the learned Trial Judge had laid undue stress on jungle cutting alone. The stumps had to be extracted also before the land could be fit for cultivation. It was largely on the ground that this was proved not to have been done that they reversed the decision.

For reasons which they have already sufficiently indicated their Lordships concur in the view taken in the High Court at Fort William on the appeal from the Trial Judge, and they will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Chapman, Walker and Shephard.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. W. W. Box & Co.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 518 OF 1922.

June 1, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

SHANKAR LAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

KIRARI MAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom — Pre-emption—Pre-emptor associating stranger in claim—Partial pre-emption whether permissible—Vendee acquiring position equal to pre-emptor during pendency of suit—Title defeasible.

Where property situate in two mahals is sold and a suit for pre-emption is brought by persons some of whom are co-sharers in both mahals and the others only in one of them, the suit of the former is liable to be dismissed, as, in respect of the property situate in the mahal in which they alone are co-sharers they disentitle themselves from pre-empting by associating with them in their claim persons who are strangers to the property, and in respect of the property situate in the other mahal they cannot be permitted to enforce their right of pre-emption, as they are bound to take over the whole bargain and not only a portion of it. The suit must, however, succeed so far as the claim of these plaintiffs is concerned who are co-sharers in one mahal only, for they are entitled to preempt only that portion of the property which is situate in the mahal in which they are co-sharers and have sued to enforce that right. [p. 145, col. 1.]

A vendee cannot by acquiring, during the pendency of a pre-emption suit, a defeasible title equal to that of the pre-emptor defeat the suit for pre-emption. [p. 145, col. 2.]

Nabiban Bibi v. Kauleshar Rai, 4 A. L. J. 351; A. W. N. (1907) 110; Kauleshar Rai v. Nabiban Bibi, 3 A. L. J. 426; A. W. N. (1906) 164; 28 A. 642, followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the First Additional District Judge, Aligarh, dated the 27th February 1922.

Dr. M. L. Agarwala and Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Appellant.

Dr. S. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the 7th January 1920 the second and third defendants sold to the first defendant, who is the appellant here, certain property situated in two mahals, Gobind Ram and Baqi Manda. The sale of these items of property was made by one deed.

Five plaintiffs brought a suit to preempt this sale. Of these, plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 3 had no share in mahal Baqi Manda. Plaintiffs Nos. 4 and 5 had shares in both mahals. At the time of the purchase the vendee had no share in either mahal and this was the state of affairs at the time the suit was brought.

During the pendency of the suit the vendee got a transfer made in his favour of certain property situated in both the mahals. This transfer purported to be by way of gift. The Court of first instance, however, held that the transfer was not in reality a gift but was in fact a sale and this view has been affirmed in appeal by the lower Appellate Court.

The result of the suit in the Court of first instance was that the plaintiffs' claim was dismissed entirely with respect to the property situated in mahal Baqi Manda. The Munsif found that the plaintiffs Nos. 4 and 5 had, by associating with them in their claim, strangers to the property in mahal Baqi Manda, disqualified themselves from obtaining any decree for pre-emption in respect of this property. We have already adverted to the fact that the first second and third plaintiffs had no share in mahal Baqi Manda.

The Munsif gave a decree to all five plaintiffs for pre-emption of the property situated in mahal Gobind Ram.

This decree of the Court of the first instance has been affirmed in appeal by the learned District Judge.

It is complained in second appeal that the learned Judge did not decide all the points which were raised before him. In fact the only question which the learned Judge has decided is that the transfer which was made in favour of the vendee during the pendency of this suit was a transfer by way of sale and not by way of gift.

The first plea of which we take notice is contained in paragraph No. 2 of the memorandum of appeal. The learned Counsel has contended that the suit ought to have been dismissed on the ground that no suit for partial pre-emption is maintainable.

We are of opinion that this plea ought to succeed so far as the fourth and fifth plaintiffs are concerned.

By joining in the suit persons who were strangers to the property situated in mahal Baqi Manda, these plaintiffs disqualified themselves from suing for pre-emption of the property in that mahal, and as under the law they must pre-empt the whole sale and as they have disqualified themselves from doing so, in our opinion, their suit must fail entirely.

This consideration however does not apply in the case of the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 3. They could only claim pre-emption of the property situated in mahal Gobind Ram and this they have done.

It is next pleaded in paragraph 3 of the memorandum of appeal that there is no sufficient proof of custom. That question has not really been argued before us and indeed it appears to us that no argument is possible in view of the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz upon which the First Court relied. We are satisfied that a custom of pre-emption does exist.

As regards the argument that the whole suit should be dismissed we have already expressed our opinion that the claim of the first second and third plaintiffs cannot be dismissed on the facts as they stand. Further it is to be observed that the appellant, the vendee, cannot succeed on the law as laid down by this Court. He has been found by both Courts to have taken a transfer by way of sale during the pendency of the suit. He has not acquired an indefeasible title to the property by this transfer and in fact a suit for pre-emption in respect of this transfer was filed before the Munsif gave his decision. At the time of the First Court's decree the appellant had no complete title and was, therefore, not in a position to claim the status of a co-sharer. He was in short only a stranger and under the custom as set out in the wajib-ul-arz the plaintiffs have a right of pre-emption as against him in respect of the property situated in mahal Gobind Ram.

This view of the law has been taken in the case reported as Nabiban Bibi v. Kauleshar Rai (1) affirming the decision of Richards. J., which is reported as Kauleshar Rai v. Nabiban Bibi (2).

This ruling has been followed in other decisions of this Court and we need only refer to a decision of the present Bench, dated 20th April 1923 in Radhika Raman Bihariji Maharaj v. Bohra Shiam Sundar Lal (3).

The result of all this is that we modify the decree of the Court below by directing that the claim of the plaintiffs Nos. 4 and 5 be dismissed in respect of mahal Gobind Ram as against the defendant-appellant with proportionate costs in all Courts. The decree in favour of the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 3 with respect to mahal Gobind Ram will remain and to this extent the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs to the plaintiffs-respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

We may mention here that the order of the First Court dismissing the suit as

(1) 4 A. L. J. 351; A. W. N. (1907) 110.
(2) 3 A. L. J. 486; A. W. N. (1906) 164; 28 A. 642.
(3) 74 Ind. Cas. 382; 21 A. L. J. 518; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 526; 45 A. 561.

regards mahal Baqi Manda has become final and no appeal was filed against that order in the Court below.

Decree modified.

Z. K.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 16 OF 1922.

February 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pratt and Mr. Justice Fawcett.

DHONDI SUBHANE POWAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (III of 1874), ss. 9, 11, 11A—Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879), ss. 153, 166—Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4 (c)—Vatan, alienation of—Order declaring alienation null and void—Liability to pay full rent, commencement of—Arrears of rent—Forfeiture—Notice, contents of—Suit for declaration of invalidity of forfeiture, maintainability of.*

On 5th October 1904 an order was made by a Collector under section 11 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act declaring the alienation of a vatan to be null and void and that the land was liable to assessment at the rate of full rent prescribed under clause (2) of section 9 of the Act, but the amount of the full rent was not assessed till July 6th 1908:

Held, that under section 11A of the Act the full rent assessed was payable from the date of the order declaring the liability of the land to pay the full rent and not from the date on which the amount of the full rent was actually assessed. [p. 147, col. 1.]

Section 166 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code does not make it obligatory on the Collector to specify in the notice issued under that section for what years the land revenue is in arrears. [p. 147, col. 2.]

Where an order of forfeiture made by the Collector under section 153 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code is inura vires, a suit for a declaration that the order is invalid is barred by section 4 (c) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act. [p. 147, col. 2.]

Letters Patent Appeal from the decision of Macleod, C. J., in Second Appeal No. 722 of 1921, from the decision of the District Judge, Satara, confirming the decree passed by the Assistant Judge at Satara, in Suit No. 1 of 1917.

Mr. K. N. Koyajee, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Pratt, J.—The plaintiff sued for a declaration that the order of forfeiture made by the Collector on March 10, 1915, was invalid. The order of forfeiture was made under the following circumstances:—

The predecessor-in-title of defendants Nos. 2 to 8 had in the year 1886 alienated their vatan land to the plaintiff. After the death of the alienor, the defendants applied to the Collector to take proceedings for the protection of the vatan and the Collector, on October 5, 1904, made a declaration under section 11 of Bombay Act III of 1874 that the alienation was null and void.

Thereafter there were two courses open to the Collector under section 11—either (1) to summarily resume possession of the land; or (2) to assess it at the rate prescribed under clause 2 of section 9, i. e., at the full rent ordinarily paid by tenants of land of similar description in the same locality.

The Collector acted on the second alternative and decided not to summarily resume possession but to assess the land at the full rent. His order is quoted in the judgment of the District Judge and is as follows:—"Having no material to decide at once what a full rent would be, I close these proceedings, leaving it to the respondent to move further in the matter when he is ready." Later, on July 6, 1908, the Collector held further proceedings and assessed the land at a rental of Rs. 75 per annum.

The Collector, in 1915, forfeited the land because the plaintiff had not paid the full amount of arrears of rent then due. The plaintiff claims that the full amount had been paid and the question is whether the rent was due from July 6, 1908, when the assessment was fixed, or from October 5, 1904, when the Collector made his declaration that the alienation was null and void. If the rent ran from the former date there were arrears of rent due, and if from the latter no arrears were due.

Mr. Koyajee's contention is that the plaintiff is liable to pay rent only from the date when the assessment was made. But I think the terms of section 11 A negative that construction. The assessment of land was an alternative to the summary resumption of possession. The order that the land was liable to assessment must, therefore, mean assessment from the date of the order. From that date the person in possession is either wrongfully in possession or a tenant liable to pay either mesne profits or rent from the date of the order.

Again the assessment was made under clause 2 of section 9 which refers to cases in which vatan property is resumed after an alienation prior to the date of the Act, and it is clear from clause (1) of section 9 that in such a case profits from the date of the order declaring alienation to be null and void are resumable. The inference must be that any assessment levied under section 11A would also be charged from the date of the same declaration.

Mr. Koyajee lays stress on words "thenceforward revert to vatan" in section 11A—perhaps these words would have been better placed at the end of section 11. They can only mean that the Act regards the restoration of the vatan complete after dispossession or assessment. But they do not indicate that the assessment should not be levied from the date of the order requiring such assessment to be made.

I, therefore conclude that there were arrears of land revenue for the recovery of which the Collector had jurisdiction to declare the land in holding forfeited under section 153 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code.

It is next contended that the Collector has not complied with one of the conditions precedent to the exercise of his jurisdiction in that no proper notice of forfeiture was given under sections 153 and 166 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code. Notice was given but there was a mistake of detail as to the years for which the land revenue was in arrears. It was a misdescription which in no way misled the plaintiff because he has admitted in his statement (Exhibit 7) that he himself was aware that the rent was due from the date of the Collector's order in 1904. Nor can it be said that this misdescription in any way involves a violation of the terms of section 166 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, for the terms of that section do not make it obligatory upon the Collector to specify for what years the land revenue was in arrears.

As the Collector's order was intra vires the suit is barred not only by Art. 14, Schedule I, of the Indian Limitation Act, but also by section 4 (c) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act.

I would, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Fawcett, J.—I agree. I would only add on the first point that has been argued that section 9, clause 1, of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, III of 1874, expressly says that an order giving the vatandars profits of the vatan should have effect from the date of the Collector's order, and there is nothing in section 11A that can, in my opinion, be held to apply a different principle. When that section says "he may assess it at the rate prescribed in clause 2," it seems to me to refer to his directing that the person in possession should pay the full rent specified in clause 2 of section 9. It is not, in my opinion, essential for the efficacy of such an order that he should in the same order state the amount this full rent comes to. As in the present case, it may obviously be necessary to make further inquiry on that point, and though of course the amount of full rent should be determined within a reasonable time, yet the case falls within the principle "id certum est quod certum reddi potest." Accordingly I think there is no reason to differ from the view taken by both the lower Courts, and that the appellant became liable to pay the full rent, whatever it was, from the date of the Collector's order.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

THOPPAI VEDAVIASA AIYAR v. THE MADURA HINDU SABHA NIDHI CO. LTD.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER No. 6 OF 1922

AND

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 74 OF 1922.

April 17, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir Francis Oldfield, Kt., and Mr. Justice Devadoss.

THOPPAI VEDAVIASA AIYAR—RESPONDENT No. 13—APPELLANT

versus

THE MADURA HINDU SABHA NIDHI CO., LTD., BY ITS SOLE DIRECTORS AND PROPRIETORS VALLIAPA CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS AND RESPONDENTS NOS. 1 TO 5, 7 TO 9, 13 AND 14—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, scope and object of—Dispute between different parties—Mortgage decree—Order settling in what order different properties are to be sold—Appeal, whether lies.

Section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code should be read as relating to all questions arising between any of the parties to the suit and not merely between parties who are opposed to each other in the suit. The object of the section is the cheap and speedy settlement of all disputes at the stage of execution. [p. 150, col. 1.]

Rayner v. Mussoorie Bank, Limited, 7 A. 631 at p. 636; A. W. N. (1885) 204; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 830; Yagnasami Ayyar v. Chidambaranatha Mudaliar, 61 Ind. Cas. 961; 13 L. W. 15 and Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal, 1 Ind. Cas. 416; 31 A. 82 at p. 93; 5 M. L. T. 185; 6 A. L. J. 71, distinguished.

Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal 19 C. 683; 19 I. A. 165; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 209; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 898, followed.

An order passed in the course of execution proceedings for the settlement of the terms of a sale proclamation under a mortgage decree by which the mortgaged items in the possession of different parties are directed to be sold in a particular order is not merely administrative but is one relating to execution or satisfaction of the decree and is, therefore, appealable. [p. 150, cols. 1 & 2.]

Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmania Ayyar, 27 M. 259; 14 M. L. J. 57 and Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chundra Lahiry, 24 C. 725; 1 C. W. N. 374; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1152 (F. B.), followed.

Appeal against the decree and judgment of the District Court, Madura, in A. S. No. 92 of 1921, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Madura, in E. P. No. 151 of 1920 (E. A. No. 68 of 1921 in O. S. No. 14 of 1916 on the file of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Madura).

Petition under section 115 of Act V of 1908 praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Madura, dated 21st March 1921, in E. P. No. 151 of 1920 (E. A. No. 68 of 1921, in O. S. No. 14 of 1916, on the file of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Madura).

Mr. T. L. Venkatarama Iyer, for the Appellant.—The lower Appellate Court has refused to entertain the appeal on the ground that one does not lie.

The expression "between partition to the suit" in section 47 does not necessarily mean "between parties who are plaintiff and defendant respectively." The nature of the suit and the contention have to be considered and if there is a conflict between the parties, the question comes under section 47.

See Samalapalli Mangayya v. Samalapalli Sriramulu (1) which is a case directly on the point. I may also refer to Krishnaswamier v. Swaminadhier (2).

In the present case the question is between two mortgagors, as to whose property must be sold first, i. e., from which property the decree should be satisfied in the first instance. It relates clearly to the mode of execution and comes under section 47 of Civil Procedure Code and an appeal, therefore, lay to the lower Appellate Court.

Mr. P. V. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for 8th Respondent.—With all respect the decision in Samalapalli Mangayya v. Samalapalli Sriramulu (1) is not correct and is supported neither by principle nor by authority. The judgment gives no reasons whatever and follows no previous ruling. The first point is that every judicial order made in the course of execution proceedings is not an order under section 47, Civil Procedure Code. See Deoki Nandan Singh v. Bansi Singh (3). To bring a case

(1) 19 Ind Cas. 448; 24 M. L. J. 477; 13 M. L. T. 347; (1913) M. W. N. 382

(2) 18 M. L. J. 568; 4 M. L. T. 392.

(3) 10 Ind. Cas. 371; 16 C. W. N. 124; 14 C. L. J. 35.

under section 47 the question at issue must be one between decree-holder or judgment-debtor or at any rate between parties who were opposed to each other in the suit itself. This contention receives support from the language of the section. My submission is that it would have no application to question between judgment-debtors inter se on the authority of Raynor v. Mussoorie Bank, Limited (4), Kastura Kunwar v. Gaya Prasad (5) and Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal (6). There is further the authority of a decision of this Court in Yagnasami Ayyar v. Chidambaranatha Mudaliar (7).

(OLDFIELD, J.—What about a suit for partition and the disputes arising between defendants therein in execution proceedings?)

Suits for partition stand on a different footing since every defendant in such suit is potentially a plaintiff.

The object of the Legislature in enacting section 47 being the speedy disposal of all proceedings in execution, it could not have contemplated that judgment-debtors should be enabled to ask the Court to adjudicate as between themselves.

My next point is, the order in question is only an administrative one and not judicial one and so attracts the ruling in Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmania Ayyar (8).

(OLDFIELD, J.—What do you mean by 'administrative orders'?)

The Privy Council have employed the same language in Ko Tha Hnyin v. Ma Hnyin (9) and must be taken to refer to executive orders of Courts during execution proceedings such as the one before us.

(OLDFIELD, J.—What is the test to be adopted to determine if an order is purely administrative or not?)

The test is supplied by Banerjee, J., in Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chundra Lahiry (10).

In much the same way in which an interlocutory order between a preliminary and final decree has been held to be not appealable: Prayag Narain Singh v. Sukdeo Narain Singh (11) and a question between co-decree-holders inter se also has been held to be not appealable as in Gyamonee v. Radha Romon (12) and Ram Saran Pande v. Janki Pande (13), no appeal would lie in this matter also.

JUDGMENT.—The question in this appeal is whether the lower Appellate Court was right in holding that no appeal lay to it and passing an order of dismissal. The decision of the Court of first instance was as to the order in which certain items or property were to be sold in execution of a decree on a mortgage and the question is whether that decision was appealable as having been passed under section 47. It is urged here that it was not passed under section 47, first because although it was passed between the parties to the suit that order should be read as relating only to questions arising between the parties who are opposed to each other in the suit; that is, it is contended, between the plaintiff and one or other of the defendants and not between the defendants themselves. In support of this we have been referred to Raynor v. Mussoorie Bank Limited (4), Yagnasami Ayyar v. Chidambaranatha Mudaliar (7) and Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal (6). But although these cases do contain language susceptible of an interpretation, which may support the appellant's argument, that argument was not what was being considered by the learned Judges. For in each of these cases the matter under consideration was in dispute between a judgment-debtor and his representative or a person on whom his interest had in some way devolved and not (as here) between two judgment-debtors, whose interests were absolutely indepen-

(4) 7 A. 681 at p. 686; A. W. N. (1885) 204; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 880.
(5) 29 A. 207 at p. 209; 4 A. L. J. 47; A. W. N. (1907) 89.
(6) 1 Ind. Cas. 416; 31 A. 82 at p. 98; 5 M. L. T. 185; 6 A. L. J. 71.
(7) 61 Ind. Cas. 961; 13 L. W. 15.
(8) 27 M. 259; 14 M. L. J. 57.
(9) 11 Ind. Cas. 545; 15 C. W. N. 862; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 449; 13 Bom. L. R. 694; 14 C. L. J. 241; 38 C. 717; 8 A. L. J. 1117; 6 L. B. R. 26; 4 Bur. L. T. 257; 38 I. A. 126 (P. C.).
(10) 24 C. 725; 1 C. W. N. 37 (12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1152 (F. B.).
(11) 13 Ind. Cas. 170; 17 C. L. J. 605.
(12) 5 C. 592; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 984.
(13) 18 A. 106; A. W. N. (1895) 240; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 776.

dent. It is in our opinion clear on principle that no such rule as the 8th respondent's learned Vakil contends for can be laid down. In the case for instance of a partition suit the judgment-debtors may very well find their interests opposed when delivery is attempted, although up to the final decree they had no cause for complaint against each other and similarly in administrative or partnership suits. We can see no reason for acceding to the suggestion that we should limit the scope of section 47 in the way suggested, when to do so would exclude from its purview the decision of many of the questions, which must inevitably arise only after the decree and when the result would be to frustrate the object of the section recognised by the Privy Council in Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal (14) viz., the cheap and speedy settlement of all disputes at the stage of execution.

The other argument attempted is that the question now raised is intrinsically not one relating to the execution or satisfaction of the decree, because it has arisen in proceedings for and relates to the settlement of the terms of the sale proclamation. It is true that the question in terms is only whether one item of the mortgaged property shall be sold before the others and, of course, whether that order of sale shall be entered in the proclamation. But in fact we may say without expressing any opinion on the merits that the question raised is whether the decree shall be satisfied to a substantial exent primarily from the 12th defendant's Item No. 2 in accordance with the terms of his transfer from the mortgagor and the 13th defendant, the Official Receiver, representing the mortgagor's estate. It is clear that the interests of the owners of the items of the mortgaged property other than Item No. 2 will be seriously affected according as the 12th defendant's claim for postponement of the sale of the last mentioned item is allowed or rejected. In those circumstances, the matter is not in our opinion one of those referred to as administrative in Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmania Ayyar (8) in respect of which no appeal is allowed. The question raised is of a substantive right covered by section 47, the disposal of which, as the last paragraph of the judgment in Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmania Ayyar (8) shows results in an appealable order. To illustrate this, we may refer to the judgment of Banerjee, J., in Jogodishury Debea v. Kailash Chundra Lahiry (10). An order in execution proceedings can come under section 244 (now section 47) only when it determines some question relating to the rights and liabilities of parties with reference to the relief granted by the decree, not when it determines merely an incidental question as to whether the proceedings are to be conducted in a certain way." The result is that an appeal lies to this Court and lay to the lower Appellate Court. The lower Appellate Court has not dealt with the appeal before it on the merits. There must, therefore, be a remand, its decision being set aside in order that it might do so. Costs in the lower Appellate Court and in this Court to date will be costs in the case and will be provided for in the order to be passed on remand.

Civil Revision Petition No. 74 of 1922 is dismissed. No order as to costs.

V. N. V.
Z. K.

Order set aside;
Case remanded.

(14) 19 C. 683; 19 I. A. 166; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 209; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 898.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 5573 OF 1922.

February 26, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pratt.

HURBUT JOHN AMIES—PLAINTIFF

versus

JAL P. VIRJI—DEFENDANT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 78, 114—Contract for sale of motor car—Instalments—Property, when passes—Intention of parties—Warranty, implied, breach of—Damages—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92, proviso (2)—Warranty, express—Oral evidence, whether admissible.

HURBUT JOHN AMIES v. JAL P. VIRJI.

A seller of a motor car impliedly contracts to sell a car that is reasonably fit for use as a motor car. [p. 152, col. 2.]

Jones v. Just, (1868) 3 Q. B. D. 197; 9 B. & S. 141; 37 L. J. Q. B. 89; 18 L. T. 208; 16 W. R. 643, distinguished.

Priest v. Last, (1903) 2 K. B. 148; 72 L. J. K. B. 657; 89 L. T. 33; 51 W. R. 678; 19 T. L. R. 527, relied on.

A contract for the sale of a motor car on instalments contained the conditions that the buyer would pay instalments punctually; that after delivery of the car the seller had a right to enter upon the premises where the car was and inspect the car; that the purchaser was not to dispose of the car before the full price was paid; that the purchaser was to insure the car and assign the policy to the seller; that in default of observance by the buyer of any of the conditions aforesaid the seller had the right to determine the contract and to seize and take possession of the car:

Held, (1) that the intention of the parties as expressed in the conditions was that property in the car should not pass until full price had been paid, and that that intention must prevail in spite of section 78 of the Contract Act; [p. 152, col. 1.]

Brij Coomaree v. Salamandar Fire Insurance Company, 32 C. 816, dissented from.

The Irrawaddy Flotilla Company v. Bhugwandas, 18 C. 620; 18 I. A. 121; 15 Ind. Jur. 403 & 542; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 40; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 413 (P. C.), referred to.

(2) that there was an implied warranty that the car was fit for use as a motor car; [p. 152, col. 2.]

(3) that the buyer was entitled to recover damages on proof of breach of the implied warranty. [p. 153, col. 2.]

Oral evidence of an express collateral warranty is admissible under proviso (2) to section 92 of the Evidence Act. [p. 152, col. 2.]

Mr. Rangneker, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sues the defendant for damages in respect of a contract for the sale of a motor car.

The contract is for sale by the defendant to the plaintiff for Rs. 4,000 of which Rs. 1,000 had already been paid and the balance was payable in monthly instalments of Rs. 250 on the 5th of May and of each succeeding month.

But the contract of sale contained certain very special conditions. These were:—that the buyer will pay instalments punctually; that after delivery of the car the seller had a right to enter upon the premises where the car was and inspect the car; that the purchaser was not to dispose of the car before the full price was paid; that the purchaser was to insure the car and assign the policy to the seller; that in default of observance by the buyer of any of the conditions aforesaid the seller had the right to determine the contract and to seize and take possession of the car.

The word 'hire' is not used in the contract and it is not a hire purchase agreement. At the hearing I expressed the opinion that the contract was not executory and that under section 78 of the Indian Contract Act property in the car passed when the car was delivered. The plaintiff was unfortunately not represented, and Mr. Rangnekar for the defendant being ready to accept this view the following issues were raised:—

(1) Whether the car was sold under an express warranty that the car was a new car and in perfect working order?

(2) Whether there was an implied warranty that the car was serviceable as a motor car?

(3) Whether there was a breach of warranty and what damages is the plaintiff entitled to for such breach?

(4) What is the amount of brokerage due to the plaintiff in respect of the sale of a car to Mr. Robbins?

(5) Whether the defendant was entitled to refuse to return the car after it had been given to him for repairs on September 2, 1922?

(6) Whether the defendant is entitled to his counter-claim for repairs and balance of price?

On further consideration, however, I have come to the conclusion that the view expressed by Maclean, C. J. in Brij Coomaree v. Salamandar Fire Insurance Company (1) is unsound. If section 78 were construed as laying down an inflexible rule as to the passing of property, not only would there be a serious limitation on the freedom of contract but there would also be an inconsistency with other sections of the Indian Contract Act, e, g., section 7. No doubt it is curious that section 78 should not be expressed as subject to a contrary intention. But the Act is a notoriously badly drafted Act and it does not purport to be exhaustive: Irrawaddy Flotilla Company v. Bhugwandas (2). The intention of the

(1) 32 C. 816.
(2) 18 C. 620; 18 I.A. 121; 15 Ind. Jur. 403 & 542; 6 Sar; P. C. J. 40; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 413 (P. C.); parties as expressed in the conditions cited was that the property in the car should not pass until full price had been paid. That is the construction put upon the contract in the pleadings and that intention prevails in spite of section 78 of the Indian Contrat Act.

In this view the only amendment necessary to the issues is to add the words or damages to Issue No. 6. Mr. Rangnekar does not claim to call further evidence on this amended issue.

The plaint is so badly drafted that it was difficult to frame appropriate issues. The plaint claims damages for loss of earnings consequent on the defendant's refusal to return the car after it had been given for repairs on September 2. This is absurd as the defendant had a lien at least for his bill for repairs and all the instalments then due had not been paid. Plaintiff's main grievance as set forth in paragraph 1 of the plaint seemed to be the inferiority of the car and so I raised issues for damages for breach of warranty express and implied. An amendment of the plaint was not insisted upon to save expense.

The undisputed facts are that the plaintiff entered into negotiations for the purchase of the car on April 5, and deposited Rs. 1,000 that day, signed the agreement to take delivery of the car on April 27, and paid the insurance money and Rs. 250 for the first instalment on May 11. There was no other payment of instalments except Rs. 150 on July 24. The plaintiff, however, was entitled to credit for brokerage for selling another car of the plaintiff on July 15. The car was frequently sent to defendant for repairs. It was last so sent on September 2 and as plaintiff had not paid all the instalments the defendant determined the contract by notice in November. The defendant claims in the counter-claim damages for breach of the contract and for the amount of his bill for repairs and on the other hand the plaintiff in this suit claims damages on the ground of inferiority.

To take the plaintiff's case first. His plaint avers that there was an express warranty that the car was a new car and in perfect working order. There is no such warranty in the written agreement. But evidence of such an express collateral warranty would be admissible under section 92, proviso (2), Indian Evidence Act. The plaintiff has given no evidence of it. All he says is that defendant called it a new car but he was not deceived by this for he at once contradicted him and said it was not a new car.

I think, however, the contract of sale was subject to an implied warranty that the car was serviceable, i. e., reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was bought. Mr. Rangnekar contends there is no such presumption where the buyer had an opportunity of inspecting the goods. The Common Law rule depended upon whether the buyer relied on his own judgment or the seller's: Jones v. Just (3); but that distinction is not made in the Indian Contract Act. Pollock and Mulla suggest that the words "have been ordered" in section 114 imply that the buyer is relying on the seller's judgment. But this is a strained construction of the section and there is no reason why the seller should be excused from performance of his contract because of what may or may not be passing in the buyer's mind. The plaintiff had an opportunity to inspect the car, though I do not believe he had a trial drive, for if he had he would have driven himself. The distinction between the English cases where the buyer had an opportunity of inspection is not made in the Indian Contract Act, and even in England it only applied to patent defects. The circumstances of the case may raise an implication that the goods were ordered for a particular purpose. See Priest v. Last (4). A seller of a motor car impliedly contracts to sell a car that is reasonably fit for use as a motor car.

As to the condition of the car I accept the plaintiff's evidence. The plaintiff says that before he had the car a fortnight the engine choked and he had to take it to the workshop where the engine was opened and decarbonised. There was then

(3) (1868) 3 Q. B. D. 197; 9 B. & S. 141; 37 L. J. Q. B 89; 18 L. T. 208; 16 W. R. 643.
(4) (1903) 2 K. B. 148; 72 L. J. K. B. 657; 89 L. T. 33; 51 W. R. 678; 19 T. L. R. 527.

carburetter trouble and the car was consuming a gallon of petrol for ten miles. Then there was accident and the damage was repaired by the defendent. The plaintiff says that that was in the middle of May but it was more probably at the end of May or beginning of June. In June two front springs broke and were replaced by plaintiff but the carburetter troubles continued and in August defendant substituted another carburetter of the same make. This leaked, so the plaintiff took it back to the workshop on September 2 and defendant has now put in another type of carburetter.

The defendant admits the carburetter trouble but denies replacing the carburetter in August. He also denies that the engine had to be opened and decarbonised a fortnight after delivery to the plaintiff.

But the decarbonising of the engine was mentioned in plaintiff's letter of May 23. Defendant does not impute forgery but denies receipt of the letter. I do not believe his denial and I think that letter important corroboration of the plaintiff's evidence. Moreover, the defendant has not called his workshop foreman to deny plaintiff's evidence as to the decarbonising of the engine and the re-placing of the carburetter.

It is true there was an accident some time in May or more probably in June and the repairs consequent thereon were the subject of defendant's bill for Rs. 294-4-0 This did not affect the engine and was subsequent to the decarbonising of the engine at the end of April or beginning of May.

Much is made of the admission in plaintiff's letter of October 9, "The car has not been roughly handled as no complaints have been made in reference to mechanical parts." But plaintiff is only semi-literate and I do not think he understood what he was writing—for he had complained of a choked engine and defective carburetter and the front spring collapsed in two months.

It is also rather surprising that in spite of his own experience plaintiff should have helped defendant to sell another car. But as plaintiff earned money for himself by so doing it does not follow that he was satisfied with his own bargain.

The defendant has produced an invoice showing the price of the car was Rs. 4,650 but the car was exported from America in 1920 and the decarbonising of the engine is clear proof that the car had been used and was a second hand car when sold to the plaintiff.

Defendant explains the rapid collapse of the tubes and tyres as due to the car having been a long time in his showroom. But the hood was tattered at the time of the contract and the upholstry had deteriorated so much that the springs of the seat protruded a few days after the purchase. I think that defendant was conscious that he had sold a second-hand car and that is why he has made no charge for decarbonising the engine in April and May or re-placing the carburetter in August.

Plaintiff says the car when sold was worth only Rs. 1,500 but this is probably an exaggeration. Considering that the car was second-hand and not serviceable in the condition it was in when given to plaintiff, its value could scarcely have been more than half the invoice price, i. e., Rs. 2,325. The present value of Rs. 4,000 on the instalment system would be about Rs. 3,925. Damages for breach of warranty would therefore be Rs. 1,600

I do not think that plaintiff is debarred from claiming this by the rule in Braithwaite v. Foreign Hardwood Company (5) for he never repudiated the contract. If property had passed and defendant had sued him for balance of price he would have been entitled to plead breach of warranty in reduction of the price.

On the other hand, defendant was entitled to determine the contract in November for plaintiff was in default of instalments. At that time seven instalments, i.e. Rs. 1,700 were due and only Rs. 250 plus Rs. 150 plus a sum for brokerage had been paid. There is a dispute as to the amount of brokerage. Plaintiff says it was Rs. 500. Defendant says it was Rs. 250 at once and Rs. 250 later, on full price of the car being paid by the purchaser. I take the brokerage of ten per cent. which would make it at Rs. 450 so the total amount paid was Rs. 850. Thus more than two instalments were in arrears in November and the plaintiff had committed breach of his contract.

(5) (1905) 2 K. B. 543; 74 L. J. K. B. 688; 92 L. T. 637; 10 Com. Cas. 189; 10 Asp. M. C. 52; 21 T. L. R 413

As to damages the car if sold now would fetch little less than its market value when sold. It has had some extra wear and tear but on the other hand the upholstry has been repaired and a new carburetter fitted. Its present value I would assess at Rs. 2,000. The defendant's damages are, therefore, Rs. 3,925 minus Rs. 2,000 which equals Rs. 1,925. Of this he has already received Rs. 850 leaving a balance due to him of Rs. 1,125. There are special stipulations in the contract as to damages which I neglect as unreasonable.

As to defendant's bill for repairs I disallow Rs. 250 which plaintiff has paid for insurance; also Rs. 294-4-0 covered by insurance, also Rs. 110 plus Rs. 45 for a hood and upholstry. Defendant admits Rs. 110 is not chargeable as there was a separate oral agreement to supply a new hood. Plaintiff says this agreement extended to the upholstry also and I believe him. There is, therefore, due to the defendant a bill for repairs of Rs. 282. I, therefore, allow Rs. 282 plus Rs. 1125, i. e., Rs. 1,407.

I, therefore, find the issues (1) in the negative; (2) in the affirmative; (3) in the affirmative Rs. 1,600; (4) Rs. 450; (5) in the affirmative; (6) in the affirmative as to repairs to the extent of Rs. 282, and as to damages to the extent of Rs. 1,125.

There will, therefore, be a decree for the plaintiff for Rs. 1,600, and for the defendant for Rs. 1,467 on the counter-claim.

Under the circumstances, I make no order as to costs.

Z. K.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1930 OF 1918.

August 24, 1920.

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjea, KT., and Mr. Justice Panton.

Raja NARENDRA LAL KHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BHOLA NATH BHUYA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Registered agreement—Conduct, evidence of, whether admissible to modify agreement—Patni Kabulyat—Stipulation to deliver certain documents—Failure to enforce stipulation for long period—Estoppel.

A putni kabulyat contained the following stipulation:—"I shall deliver one set of the chita, khatian jamabandi, and sheha, thoka and jama wasil baki and other lawazima papers of the patni mehals, signed by the persons preparing the same and bearing my signature into your sherishta after the expiry of two consecutive years at the end of every third year, and obtain receipt for the same, on failure to do so you will take from me Rs. 215 the cost of preparing the papers at the end of every three years, and if I do not pay the same amicably, you will realize the same by having recourse to law and get the said papers prepared by making mofussil survey and tumar by appointing amin at the end of every third year." Under the law some of these documents could not be prepared every third year. For thirty-five years no documents were demanded by the landlord or submitted by the patnidar. The present suit was brought by the landlord to recover the sum of Rs. 1,290 for the patnidar's default to deliver the documents, the sum having been calculated at the rate of Rs. 215 per annum for six years:

Held, that the landlord having failed to enforce the clause in the kabulyat for thirty-five years was not entitled to maintain the present suit for damages.

Case-law discussed.

Evidence of the subsequent acts and conduct of the parties to a written contract is admissible in evidence to show that certain terms of the contract were never intended to be acted upon from the very beginning. [p. 156, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the Second Additional District Judge, Midnapore; dated the 22nd of July 1918, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, First Court of that District, dated the 19th of September 1916.

Babus Mohendra Nath Roy and Khirod Narain Bhuya, for the Appellant.

Babus Bepin B. Ghose and Santosh K. Pal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of Rs. 1,290 from the defendants as damages on account of the defendants' failure to deliver certain papers under the terms of a patni kabulyat.

The patni kabulyat is dated the 23rd February 1880 and was executed by the grand-father of the defendants. There is a stipulation in the kabulyat which runs as follows:—"I shall deliver one set (or one copy) of the chita, khatian jamabandi and Sheha, Thoka and jama wasil baki and other lawazima papers of the patni mehals, signed by the persons preparing the same and bearing my signature into your sherishta after the expiry of two consecutive years at the end of every third year, and obtain receipt for the same, on failure to do so you will take from me Rs. 215 the cost of preparing the papers at the end of every three years, and if I do not pay the same amicably, you will realize the same by having recourse to law and get the said papers prepared by making mofussil survey and tumar by appointing amin at the end of every third year. To this neither I nor my heirs will be able to make any objection."

The suit was instituted on the 21st September 1915. It is found that during the course of 35 years since the execution of the kabulyat the patnidar never submitted any papers as aforesaid, nor did the zemindar ever demand the same. The Court of first instance held that the stipulation was stringent and unreasonable and was never meant to be acted upon, and that in any case the plaintiff was entitled only to compensation not exceeding Rs. 215, but there was no evidence to show the amount of loss actually sustained by the plaintiff. In the result the suit was dismissed. On appeal the learned District Judge was of opinion that the terms of the kabulyat cannot reasonably bear the interpretation sought to be put upon it by the plaintiff, that ever since the execution of the kabulyat the papers had never been demanded or submitted, and that the stipulation was never meant to be enforced. The appeal was accordingly dismissed. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court.

It is contended that the evidence of conduct relied upon by the Courts below is not admissible in evidence having regard to the provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act. The authorities upon the point are not uniform. A Full Bench of this Court in the case of Preonath Shaha v. Madhu Sudan Bhuiya (1) held that oral evidence of the acts and conduct of parties such as oral evidence that possession remained with the vendor notwithstanding the execution of a deed of out and out sale is admissible to prove that the deed was intended to operate only as a mortgage. A question was, however, raised in some later cases whether the Full Bench decision had not been affected by the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Balkishen Das v. W. F. Legge (2). But the evidence which was held to be inadmissible by the Judicial Committee in that case was certain oral evidence of intention which had been admitted in the Court below and the ground upon which their decision is based is that such evidence is excluded by the provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act. The evidence there consisted only of oral statements of the parties, and there was no other evidence of the acts and conduct of the parties adduced in that case which was considered by the Privy Council. It is upon these grounds that the decision in Balkishen's case (2) was distinguished by Banerjee and Brett, JJ. Khankar Abdur Rahman v. Ali Hafez (3) and the learned Judges held that Balkishen's case (2) did not in any way affect the rule laid down by the Full Bench in Preonath Shaha v. Madhu Sudan Bhuiya (1). The same view was taken by Maclean, C. J., Banerji and Brett, JJ. in Mahomed Al Hossein v. Nazar Ali (4).

In the case of Radha Raman Chowdry v. Bhowani Prasad (5), Rampini and Gupta, JJ.;

(1) 25 C. 603; 2 C. W. R. 562; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 397 (F. B.)

(2) 27 I. A. 58; 22 A. 149; 4 C. W. N. 153; 2 Bom. L. R. 523; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 601; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1121 (P. C.).

(3) 28 C. 256; 5 C. W. N. 351.

(4) 28 C. 289; 5 C. W. N. 326.

(5) 6 C. W. N. 60.

were of opinion that oral evidence of the subsequent acts and conduct of the parties is not admissible to show that the rent is less than what was stated in a registered kabulyat. A similar view was taken by Rampini J. in the case of Beni Madhub Gorani v. Lalmoti Dassi (6), but his decision was set aside on appeal by Maclean, C. J. and Macpherson, J. and the learned Judges held that certain rent receipts showing payment of a smaller rent than that provided in a registered lease were admissible to show either that the parties never intended the terms of the kabulyat to be strictly carried out or that as between the parties there had been a waiver of the strict terms of the lease. The case was followed in the case of Kalis Chandra Saha v. Darbaria Sheik (7), and Manindra Chandra Nandi v. Srimati Durga Sundari Dasya (8), one of the members of the present Bench being a party to both the decisions. It may be open to doubt, however, whether there can be a waiver of the essential terms of a registered lease except by a registered instrument having regard to the decision of the Full Bench in the case of Lalit Mohan Ghose v. Gopali Chauk Coal Company, Limited (9), where, however, the variation was sought to be effected by documents. But in the cases mentioned above, the Court held upon the evidence of the subsequent acts and conduct of the parties that certain terms of the contract were never intended to be acted upon. On the other hand in the case of Lakhatullah Sheikh v. Bishambar Roy (10) Jenkins, C. J., and Doss, J., held that an agreement is nore-the-less oral because it is to be inferred from the conduct of the parties.

The question was raised before the Judicial Committee in the case of Maung Kyin v. Ma Shwe La (11), but was not decided. Their Lordships observed:—"The evidence which the appellants thus proposed to tender was described in general terms, and their Lordships have not the advantage of dealing with it in the form of questions specifically put and argued. So far, however, as it is still pressed, it, no doubt, consisted only of evidence relating to the acts and conduct of the parties as distinguished from evidence of oral statements and conversations constituting in themselves some agreement between them. Its object was to show that, whatever the terms of the documents may have been, none of the parties had acted on them as effecting an absolute sale, but that through a long course of mutual dealings materially affecting their respective positions, they had always treated the business between them as one of loan secured by mortgage.

"This may give rise to important and difficult questions under section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, which provides that when the terms of any contract required by law to be reduced to the form of a document (and sales or mortgages of land are by sections 54 and 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, included among such contracts) 'no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from, its terms.'"

We have not referred to the decisions of the other High Courts some of which have taken a view contrary to that taken by the Full Bench of this Court in Preonath's case (1) and of the effect of the decision in Balkishen's case (2). The question, therefore, is not free from difficulty nor settled. But the weight of authority so far as this Court is concerned is in favour of the admissibility of evidence of the acts and conduct of parties and as stated above in some cases, this Court has held upon the subsequent acts and conduct of the parties that certain terms of a contract were never

(6) 6 C. W. N. 242.
(7) 32 Ind. Cas. 251; 20 C. W. N. 347.
(8) 32 Ind. Cas. 185; 20 C. W. N. 680.
(9) 12 Ind. Cas. 723; 39 C. 284; 14 C. L. J. 411; 16 C. W. N. 55.
(10) 6 Ind. Cas. 577; 12 C. L. J. 646.
(11) 12 Ind. Cas. 39; 38 C. 892; 15 C. W. N. 958; 10 M. L. T. 103; (1911) 2 M W. N. 30; 14 C. L. J; 276; 13 Bom. L. R. 797; 8 A. L. J. 1184; 21 M.L. J. 1105; 4 Bur. L. T. 273; 38 I. A. 146 (P. C.).

intended to be acted upon i. e., from the very beginning. It is unnecessary, however, to discuss the matter further having regard to the view we take of the construction of the kabulyat. The covenant relied upon provides that one set (or one copy) of "chita, khatian, jamabandi, seha, thoka jama wasil baki and other lawazima papers" are to be submitted at the end of every third year bearing the signature of the persons preparing the same. The tenure created by the kabulyat was a putni tenure. Ordinarily no such papers are delivered by the putnidar to the zemindar. There is, however, nothing in the law to prevent the parties from entering into such a contract. But chita, khatian and jamabandi can be prepared only after measurement of lands. Such papers are not prepared every third year and under section 90 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the landlord can (subject to any contract) cause a measurement of the lands of tenants only once in 10 years except in certain cases which do not apply to the present. The patnidar, therefore, cannot have such measurement made and, therefore, cannot have chittas khatian and jamabandi prepared every third year. It was not possible, therefore, for the patn dar to comply with such a stipulation. The zeminda could not also for the same reason get a measurement of the lands by appointing an amin, every third year, even if he could realise Rs. 215 every third year from the patnidar. It is probably for those reasons that such papers were never demanded nor submitted. It is true seha thoka and jama wasil baki papers are prepared every year, but the sum of Rs. 215 agreed upon to be paid in the event of the breach of the contract includes the cost of preparation of the Chita khatian and jamabandi, as well as for preparation of seha, thoka and jama wasil baki papers. As stated above, the papers were never demanded nor submitted at any time during the 35 years that the putni was in existence and the plaintiff after having acted in a particular way for 35 years has instituted a suit for recovery of Rs. 1,290 as damages for failure to submit such papers for six years, claiming Rs. 21 for each year. We are of opinion that the Courts below are right in dismissing the suit. In this view it is unnecessary to consider the other contentions raised before us.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER No. 110 OF 1921.

August 2, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir Jwala Prasad, KT., and Mr. Justice Ross.

Musammat DULHIN SONA KUER—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat BIBI ALE FATIMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 10, scope of—Dismissal of suit—Suit, when premature—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—"Interested," meaning of—Person benefiting by payment, duty of—Rate of interest, how determined.

Section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code does not bar a suit, nor has a Court any jurisdiction thereunder to dismiss a suit; the section merely enacts that the trial of one of two or more suits in which the same issue is directly and substantially involved, is not to be proceeded with until the cognate case pending in another Court is disposed of. [p. 163, col. 2.]

Provided there is valid cause for it, a suit cannot be said to be premature under section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 163, col. 2.]

Nemagauda v. Paresha, 22 B. 640; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1009, referred to.

Where a proprietor in good faith pending litigation makes necessary payments for the preservation of the estate in dispute, and the estate is afterwards adjudged to his opponent, he is entitled to be recouped what he has so paid by the person who benefits ultimately by the payment, if he has failed through no fault of his own to reimburse himself out of the rents. [p. 165, col. 2.]

Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy, 21 C. 142; 20 I. A. 160; 17 Ind. Jur. 576; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 366; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 727 (P. C.), relied on.

The word "interested" in section 69 of the Contract Act ought not to be construed narrowly DULHIN SONA KUER v. BIBI ALE FATIMA.

as meaning a person with a real interest. If bona fide one believes that he has an interest in property and not only as a pretext for having a claim against those who are bound to make the payment, there is no reason why the law should not compel the person ultimately benefiting by the payment to return the money to the payer. [p. 166, col. 1.]

The rate of interest recoverable from a judgment-debtor is determined not by the purpose for which the money is applied but by the market-rate prevailing at the time. [p. 166, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Patna, dated the 21st January 1921.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, Rai Guru Saran Prasad and Raghunandan Prasad, for the Apellant.

Messrs. Sultan Ahmad, Nurul Hussain and Hassan Jan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Jwala Prasad, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff against the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Patna, dated the 21st January 1921. The facts are undisputed.

Bibi Fasihan was a Muhammadan lady of rank, belonging to the Suni sect of Mussalmans. She possessed considerable property. On the 21st of November 1891 she executed a mortgage-bond in favour of Girdhar Das and others, mortgaging the following properties:—

1. Mahal Kurmi Chak.
2. Mahal Kasba Barowna.
3. Bankipur Machhiarawan.
4. Karnauti Khurd and Buzrug, and
5. Abdulla Chak.

The mortgagees obtained a mortgage-decree on the 2nd September 1903 on foot of their mortgage which was made absolute on the 4th September 1905, in accordance with a compromise entered into by the parties whereby five years' time was given for payment of the entire decretal amount. The decretal amount not having been paid within the time allowed, the decree-holders put their decree in execution against Bibi Fasihan, and on her death against her heirs.

Bibi Fasihan died on the 2nd July 1909, leaving behind her four daughters, named Fatima, Saera, Salema and Habiba, a son named Mohammad Umar by her first husband, and another son named Kalimuzaffar by her second husband. Before her death, between the 7th of May and the 8th of June, she executed several deeds of gift, two of them being in favour of Kalimuzffar alias Cheddi, one in favour of her daughter, Habiba, and one in favour of her son Muhammad Umar. By these deeds of gift she gave her properties to her aforesaid children, the bulk of them to Kalimuzaffar. No deed of gift was executed in favour of her three daughters, Bibi Fatima, Saera and Salema. The donees, under the aforesaid deeds of gift, got their names registered as proprietors in the Collectorate in respect of the share conveyed to them by the lady and took possession of their respective properties and began to deal with them and to give leases, mortgages, etc., in favour of other persons. The three daughters, Fatima, Saera and Salema, in whose favour no gift was made by the lady, brought suits on the 26th of March 1912 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Patna to have the aforesaid deeds of gift declared invalid and to recover their full shares of the properties left by their mother. These suits were subsequently transferred to the file of the District Judge of Patna where Fatima and Saera's suit was No. 6 of 1913, and Salema's suits were numbered 9, 10, 11 and 12 of 1913. All these suits were disposed of by the District Judge on the 8th April 1914. The result of his decision was that all the deeds executed by the lady except the deed of gift of the 7th May 1909 in favour of Kalimuzaffar were set aside. The parties affected by the decision of the District Judge appealed to this Court and by the decision of this Court dated the 18th July 1917 the appeals were disposed of, with the result that all the deeds, including the deed in favour of Kalimuzaffar, were set aside. The operative portion of the decision of this Court is as follows :—

"The deeds of gift, therefore, do not stand in the way of the heirs of Bibi Fasihan taking their shares under the Muhammadan Law. Her husband, Abdus Subhan, inherited a share of $\frac{1}{4}$ of the lady's properties, her two sons Umar and Kalimuzaffar each took 6/32 and each of her four daughters Fatima, Saera, Salema and Habiba took 3/32 of the properties left by her. The heirs of such of the aforesaid persons as have died since the death of the lady have succeeded to the shares inherited by their predecessor. The properties left by Musammat are, therefore, liable to be distributed among her heirs and the heirs of her heirs unaffected by dealings or transfers of interests in excess of their legal shares. As the donees and the heirs have been dealing with the properties since 1909 and the matter is complicated by claims of creditors and others it is useless to give each of the heirs a decree for his or her share in the ordinary way. The result of passing such decree would be endless litigation. The proper course appears to be to direct a general administration of the property of Musammat Fasihan under the orders of the Court. I would dismiss with costs Appeals Nos. 73 and 219 arising out of Suit No. 6, Appeal No. 42 arising out of Suit No. 9, and Appeal No. 339 arising out of Suit No. 11. I would allow with costs Appeal No. 112 arising out of Suit No. 6 and Appeal No. 581 arising out of Suit No. 6 and setting aside the deed of May 7th, 1909, I would declare that the heirs of the deceased are entitled to the shares specified above in the property of Musammat Fasihan. I would remand Suits Nos.6 and 9 of 1913 to the Court below in order that in the presence of the parties a preliminary decree may be passed with reference to O. XX, r. 13, ordering such accounts and enquiries to be taken and made and giving such directions as may appear to be necessary. It will probably be necessary to appoint a Receiver or Commissoners to carry out the administration. Arrangement must be made to pay off the debts of the deceased as soon as possible. Those heirs or representatives of heirs who have been in possession of parts of the property should be debited with what they or persons claiming under them have received."

In Suit No. 6 of 1913 which was instituted by Bibi Fatima and Saera, in addition to the relief sought by the plaintiff to have the deeds of gift executed by Bibi Fasihan declared null and void, there was a further claim for administration of the estate and for partition of it among the heirs and for other reliefs. Suit No. 9 of 1913 was instituted by Salema to have the two deeds of gift executed in favour of Kalimuzaffar alias Cheddi of the 9th May and 5th June 1909 set aside and to have her declared in possession of her legal share in the properties of Bibi Fasihan. These two suits were, by the decision of this Court, referred to above, remanded to the Court below for the purposes of the joint administration of the properties of Bibi Fasihan and for the drawing up of a preliminary decree under O. XX, r. 13. We are, therefore, concerned with these two suits only, the other suits having been now fully and finally disposed of.

In accordance with the aforesaid directions of this Court the preliminary decree was drawn up by the District Judge on the 27th September 1917.

While the litigation about the estate of Bibi Fasihan was going on, Muhammad Umar, one of her sons, who had a hiba deed executed in his favour by his mother dated the 6th June 1909, executed a mortgage-bond in favour of Dulhin Sona Kuer. That mortgage was executed on the 4th February 1913 and was in respect of a sum of Rs. 85,000. The properties mortgaged in this bond by Muhammad Umar were thirteen Mouzahs out of a total of twenty which were conveyed to him by his mother under the deed of gift referred to above. Two of the mortgaged properties, namely, Mouza Kasba Barowna and Karnauti Khurd, and Bazrug had alreay been mortgaged by Bibi Fasihan along with certain other properties mentioned above on the 21st November 1891 to Girdhar Das and others. Therefore, Girdhar and others were prior mortgagees in respect of these two properties covered by the mortgage of Dulhin Sona Koer.

Dulhin Sona Koer obtained a mortgage-decree on the basis of the aforesaid bond on the 25th February 1915 and after it was made absolute she put the same into execution and purchased the aforesaid 16-annas of Mahals Kasba Barowna and Karnauti Khurd and Buzrug on the 20th June 1916. In the meantime, Girdhar Das had put his decree into execution. That execution case was numbered 362 of 1914. Mahal Bankipur Machhiarawan, one of the properties mortgaged in the deed of Girdhar Das, was covered by the deed of gift in favour of Kalimuzaffar. On the 28th July 1915 he paid Rs. 65,000 as the rateable share of the debt over the said properties to the decree-holder who agreed not to sell Mahal Bankipur Machhiawaran until after the other properties were sold and the sale-proceeds found insufficient to pay off the entire decretal amount; and he put in a petition to that effect in Court. His prayer was granted and Mahal Bankipur Machhiarawan, which was lot No. 1, was directed to be sold after all the other properties were sold, by the order of the Court dated the 28th July 1915 (Exhibit 2). Girdhar Das, therefore, proceeded to sell the other properties and Mahal Kasba Barowna was sold for Rs. 36,500, Kurmi Chak for Rs. 41,000 and Abdulla Chak for Rs. 18,000 The sale took place on the 26th February 1916.

Muhammad Umar, Bibi Habiba and Sona Koer then instituted proceedings under O XXI, r. 90, to have the sale of Mahal Kurmi Chak and Kasba Barowna set aside. The sale was set aside on the 15th December 1916. On the 15th January 1917 one Janki Das and others purchasers of these properties appealed to this Court against the order of the Subordinate Judge setting aside the sale of the aforesaid properties. This appeal was disposed of on the 5th June 1918 in terms of a compromise arrived at between the parties. In the meantime, in the administration proceedings which were pending before the District Judge, Mr Jamil Ahmad was appointed Receiver on the 25th January 1918 and he was, therefore, made a party respondent in the aforesaid appeal pending in the High Court as representing the estate of Bibi Fasihan. The decree of this Court dated the 5th June 1918 runs as follows:—

"By consent it is ordered that upon the judgment-debtors respondents paying to the appellants the consolidated sum of Rs. 15,000 on account of all and every claim the appellants may have against the judgment-debtors respondents the Appeals Nos. 7 and 8 of 1917 will be dismissed. The appellants will then be entitled to withdraw from the Court all and every amount deposited on account of the purchas-money in respect of the properties but the appellants will not be entitled to claim credit for any sum of money paid by them into the Government Treasury on account of Government revenue. If the above sum of Rs. 15,000 is not deposited here in Court to the credit of the appellants on or before the 26th June 1918, the Appeals Nos. 7 and 8 will stand decreed with costs."

After the sales were set aside by the Subordinate Judge on the 15th December 1916, the decree-holder was directed on that very day to deposit the necessary expenses and furnish materials in order that the execution and the sale of the properties might be proceeded with. On the 2nd January 1917 the proceedings, therefore, continued and the plaintiff paid Rs. 36,500 to Girdhar Das, being the amount for which Mahal Barowna had been sold, and upon her doing so she obtained an order similar to that which was obtaind by Kalimuzaffar referred to above, with respect to this property Barowna. The order of the Court was that Barowna should be sold after lots Nos. 3 and 4, i.e., Kurmi Chak and Karnouti. As regards the money that was paid by her the Court's order was in the following words:—

"Let Rs. 36,500 be credited against the decree and let sale proclamation issue as prayed for in the petition."

Upon this the plaintiff paid Rs. 15,000 to the Receiver (defendant No. 20 in this case) to enable him to pay the amount directed by the compromise decree of the High Court to be paid to the purchaser of the aforesaid two Mouzahs before the sale could be set aside. The Receiver having got the money from the plaintiff, the Receiver paid the said sum to the purchaser and the aforesaid Miscellaneous Appeals Nos. 7 and 8 of 1917 in the High Court were dismissed on the 15th June 1918, the result of which was that the sales of Barowna and Kurnauti were set aside.

Now in September 1916, the plaintiff as purchaser of the aforesaid properties in execution of her mortgage-decree against Muhammad Umar obtained delivery of possession through the Court. There was then still due to the plaintiff about Rs. 37,000 under her decree. She also got possession of other properties purchased by her except those that had already been sold for arears of Government revenue, namely, Ibrahim Lodi, Syedpur Behrna and Supasang.

After his appointment the Receiver wanted to take possession of these properties but the plaintiff refused to deliver up possession to him, and, on a reference being made to the District Judge, the matter was decided against the plaintiff on the 22nd March 1918. The plaintiff then moved this Court in revision (No. 75 of 1918) against the decision of the District Judge. Her application was, however, dismissed by this Court on the 7th November 1918, vide judgment, Exhibit B 1. It was held that the plaintiff having taken a mortgage and purchased the property during the pendency of the litigation, started at the instance of the heirs of Bibi Fasihan, impugning the validity of the gifts in favour of the plaintiffs'-mortgagor Muhammad Umar and others, she could not resist the taking of possession of the property by the Receiver who was appointed by the Court in the administration suit No. 6 of 1913. This Court further held that inasmuch as the plaintiff did not satisfy the whole mortgage-debt of Girdhar Das-Kesho Das she could not be subrogated to the position of the prior mortgagee. Her application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council was dismissed by this Court on the 27th May 1919 vide judgment, Exhibit B. The result of this decision was that the Receiver took back possession of the aforesaid properties from the plaintiff on the 21st August 1919.

Musammat Sona Koer applied on the 21st June 1919 to the District Judge (a) to grant permission to execute her decree against the Receiver or (b) to direct the Receiver to pay Rs. 36,500 to her. On the 26th June 1919 the District Judge granted prayer No. 1 on the same condition as was imposed upon Bibi Aley Fatima by order of the Court, dated the 19th May 1919. No order appears to have been passed with regard to her prayer to direct the Receiver to pay the sum of Rs. 36,500.

On the 10th December 1919 she appears to have repeated her application for directing the Receiver to pay the said sum. In that petition she further asked that in case the money was not paid she may be given permission to sue the Receiver. This application was referred to the Receiver for report who submitted his report on the 19th December 1919. In his report he stated that the Musammat was in possession of some of the properties yielding an income of Rs. 10,000 for which she was liable to account and also for mesne profits and that she had withdrawn the surplus sale proceeds amounting to about Rs. 40,000 odd in respect of village Supasang appertaining to the estate and that she being a party to the administration suit her claim to the aforesaid sum of Rs. 36,500 could be considered in the administration proceedings, and the Receiver further added that her application was premature and not entertainable. The Court recorded the following order :—

"Read Receiver's report dated the 19th December 1919 on the petition of Musammat Sona Koer filed on 10th December 1919 for payment of Rs. 36,500 with interest and for grant of permission to sue the Receiver : Ordered, permission is granted".

Accordingly the present suit was instituted and she filed her plaint on the 2nd January 1920. She claims in this suit the aforesaid sum of Rs. 36,500 with interest at the rate of one per cent. per mensem from the date of payment, viz., 2nd January 1917 up to the date of the filing the plaint, amounting to Rs. 49,640.

Defendants Nos. 1 to 6 are the heir of Muhammad Umar, defendant No. 7, is Kalimuzaffar, defendants Nos. 8 to 11 heirs of Bibi Solena, defendants Nos. 12 to 15 heirs of Bibi Fatima, defendants Nos. 16 to 18 heirs of Bibi Saera, defendant No. 19 is Bibi Habiba and defendant No. 20 is the Receiver. Defendants Nos. 1 to 6, 8 to 11 and 16 to 20 filed different sets of defence on substantially the same grounds. In short their objections were that the suit is not maintainable in its present form, that the estate of Bibi Fasihan was not benefited by the plaintiff's payment ; nor can she recover the same from the defendants, that the plaintiff withdrew the sum of Rs. 40,000 odd from the Collectorate out of the sale proceeds of Mahal Supasang and other villages and the said sum should be set off against the plaintiff's claim and that her suit is barred under section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The aforesaid pleas gave rise to the following issues :—

"1. Is the suit as framed maintainable ?

"2. Has the plaintiff a valid cause of action against the defendant No. 20 ?

"3. Whether the defendants are entitled to any set off. If so, can they claim it without payment of Court-fee and for what amount?

"4. Is the plaintiff entitled to contribution? If so against which defendant?

"5. Can the plaintiff maintain the present suit in the face of proceedings of the administration suit pending before the District Judge and in face of section 10, Civil Procedure Code?

"6. Is the plaintiff entitled to get interest, and if so, at what rate?

"7. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?".

The learned Subordinate Judge decided all these issues in favour of the defendants with the result that the plaintiff's suit has been dismissed. She has, therefore, come to this Court in appeal.

I will first dispose of Issue No. 5. The learned Subordinate Judge records the following finding upon this issue:—

"It requires no decision in face of the above finding, but I have already remarked above, that it would have been better had the plaintiff put forth her claim in the Administration Court"

In the previous paragraph, the Court in dealing with Issues Nos. 1, 3, and 4, remarked as follows:—

"Admittedly plaintiff withdrew a large sum of money out of the surplus sale-proceeds from the Collectorate and admittedly she has been in possession of the property, the income of which was also considerably large. The plaintiff is admittedly to account for these items. But it is urged for the plaintiff that all these accounts will be taken in the administration suit which is pending before the District Judge, and it she is found liable she would be called upon to pay. In other words plaintiff wants to take away her own money and ask the defendants to wait till the administration suit is decided. I think all these questions can be fully tried by the Administration Court and no preference should be given to plaintiff's claim over that of the defendants, at least the equity requires so. Hence there seems to be no reason to grant any relief to the plaintiff in this suit."

Continuing the Subordinate Judge says:

"For these reasons I am of opinion that the suit is not maintainable, that if plaintiff wants any relief she may come under the provisions of the mortgage law with a suit properly so framed in the light of the observations made above. I, therefore, decide these issues against the plaintiff and in defendants' favour."

The Subordinate Judge also quoted a passage from the judgment of Mullick, J., (Exhibit B1) to the effect that the mortgage of the plaintiff was affected by the litigation which was pending at the time when the plaintiff took her mortgage and until the administration suit was over, it could not be known how much of the property would come into the hands of the plaintiffs as a representative of Muhammad Umar, and it might be that no residue might be left which might come into the plaintiff's hands.

These are the grounds upon which the learned Subordinate Judge considered the case of the plaintiff to be premature. But the suit has been dismissed upon the principal ground that the plaintiff paid the money in question to Girdhar Das and Kesho Das voluntarily in order to secure benefit to herself and not with a view to confer any benefit to the estate of Bibi Fasihan, and that, as a matter of fact, the estate of Bibi Fasihan was not at all benefited, in other words according to the learned Subordinate Judge the plaintiff cannot recover the amount paid by her either by way of contribution from the other co-heirs of Muhammad Umar, she representing Umar's interest, nor can she recover the property from them under the provisions of sections 69 and 70 of the Indian Contract Act. In other words, the learned Subordinate Judge is of opinion that she can under no circumstances recover the money from the defendants in the present case. Therefore, whether the claim is premature or not does not affect the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge, for the plaintiff in no circumstances is entitled to press her claim against the heirs and legal representative of Bibi Fasihan or her estate now in the hands of the Receiver. This view of the matter makes it certain that unless the plaintiff establishes her claim to recover the amount paid by her from the estate of Bibi Fasihan, the Receiver or the Court in the administration suit cannot possibly grant any relief to her.

The Receiver in his report referred to above did not definitely state that the claim was untenable, but from the attitude assumed by the Receiver in the subsequent stage of the case, and particularly in the written statement, it is impossible to conceive that the plaintiff had the remotest chance of getting her relief in the administration suit. The Court did not venture to enquire into her claim when she put it forward just after her discomfiture in this Court vide judgment date the 7th November 1918 (Exhibit B1). Her first application, as stated above, was made in June 1919 and the consequent dispossession of the property in August 1919. Her second application was made on the 10th December 1919 while the claims of other creditors either of Bibi Fasihan or of her heirs were being dealt with by the Receiver and the Court administring the estate of Bibi Fasihan; but no definite decision was arrived at with respect to the claim of the plaintiff because of complications having arisen on account of the purchase of the properties by Girdhar Das, the prior mortgagee; but the sale of these properties was set aside, and when the matter came before this Court in revision it was held that the plaintiff's mortgage was affected by the doctrine of lis pendens and that she could not be subrogated to the position of a prior mortgagee. The lower Court's order of the 19th December 1919 referred to above contained in three words, "permission is granted" does not give any reason for the said order far less does it promise any investigation into the claim of the plaintiff. Probably as the estate was being administered by the Court and as the claim of the plaintiff had to be enforced against the estate, the permission of the Court would be necessary. If that was so, the bar, if any, to institute the present suit was removed by the order of the Administration Court. In face of that order and in view of the fact that there was never any intention on the part of the Receiver or of the Court to investigate the claim of the plaintiff; to my mind it seems that there was no option left to her but to have her claim established in Court by a separate suit.

In order to apply section 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure as a bar to any further proceeding with the trial of the present case, it is necessary to show that the matter in issue involved in the present case was also directly and substantially the same as in the administration suit. The claim of the plaintiff to recover the aforesaid sum upon the facts alleged in the plaint was not at all pending in the administration case as the aforesaid order of the Court clearly indicates.

Again the section does not bar the suit but it only says that the trial of it shall not be proceeded with, and thirdly that the Court under that section has no jurisdiction to dismiss a suit but can only postpone the determination of the same until the cognate case pending in another Court is disposed of. In other words the Code provides for the trial of only one of two or many suits if the same issue is directly and substantially involved, in order to save time and possibly a conflict in the views taken by different Courts of concurrent jurisdiction with respect to the same matter. Nor does the section dispense with the necessity of instituting such suits. Under this section a suit cannot be said to be premature provided that there is valid cause for it. No authority is needed to support the aforesaid proposition for the section itself is clear, vide however the case of Nimagauda v. Paresha (1). The learned Subordinate Judge is, therefore, wrong in holding that the present suit is either barred or that it is premature; he is also wrong in dismissing the suit upon that ground.

The next question is, and that is the material question in the case, is the plaintiff entitled to recoup herself from the estate of Bibi Fasihan? It is not denied that Rs. 36,500 paid by her to Girdhar Das was a debt over the estate of Bibi Fasihan under the mortgage executed by Bibi Fasihan on the 21st of November 1891 and that after her death in 1909 her heirs and representatives took her estate burdened with that debt; and, before they can distribute among themselves the assets of the estate and the properties of the deceased, it is incumbent upon them to discharge the said debt. Rupees 36,500 is part of the mortgage-decree for the payment of which each and every property included in the mortgage is severally and jointly liable.

(1) 22 B. 640; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1009.

Subsequent to the mortgage Bibi Fasihan chose to execute certain deeds of gift referred to above in favour of some of her children preferring them to others, Muhammad Umar was one of her children on whom her favour seem to have been bestowed and he was given 16-annas of the properties, whereas his share therein was only three annas. In 1912 some of Bibi Fasihan's heirs objected to the deeds of gift made in favour of some of her children on the ground that their shares in the properties of Bibi Fasihan were reduced on account of the deeds in question and this naturally led to litigation.

The plaintiff in this case took a mortgage of 16 annas of some of the properties conveyed to Muhmmad Umar by his mother after the suits that were instituted by the daughters of Bibi Fasihan, namely, Fatima, Saera and Salema. The plaintiff, no doubt, took the mortgage subject to the final decision in the case which was then pending and which has now resolved itself into the administration of the estate of Bibi Fasihan. Her claim under the mortgage is, as held by this Court, affected by the doctrine of lis pendens and possibly after the final administration her claim might be either reduced or wholly extinguished by reason of there being nothing left in Muhammad Umar which she could take as his mortgagee. But that is the question which has to be decided because the plaintiff in her capacity as mortgagee is claiming under the mortgage executed by Muhammad Umar. We, in this case, are not concerned with that. Her position as mortgagee is relevent only in order to find out whether she had any interest or supposed interest in the properties of Bibi Fasihan so as to impel her heirs to pay the debt over the estate.

Now at the time when the plaintiff paid the money, the sale of the mortgaged properties was set aside but the properties had really not gone out of danger. The execution was proceeding and there was no order of the High Court in the appeals that were filed by the purchasers against the order of the Subordinate Judge setting aside the sales, to stay further proceedings in the execution, and from the record of the execution case we find that the Court as well as the decree-holder was strenuously pursuing the properties in question and orders for the issue of sale proclamation had already been passed. Kalimuzaffar, defendant No. 7, had already paved the way as to what should be done by one interested in the properties which were the subject of the mortgage of Girdhar Das-Kesho Das. To him, as to Umar, 16 annas of another property Mahal Machhiarawan was given by their mother under the deeds of gift. He settled with the decree-holder to pay a proportionate sum of the decree and to have this property sold last of all. Thus this property would be exempt from sale in the event of the entire sum due under the decree being realised by the sale of other properties or the liability would be in any case considerably diminished.

The plaintiff also resorted to the same remedy. She paid Rs. 36,500 as the proportionate share of Mahal Barowna and got an order from the Court with the consent of the decree-holder to sell it after Kurmi Chak and Karhouti. This arrangement will not in any way affect the liability of the properties which were mortgaged to Girdhar Das and Kesho Das. That payment, whatever be the arrangement between the parties, was to go towards the satisfaction of the decree and as a matter of fact the Court directed that the said money be credited towards the satisfaction of the decree.

No doubt the record of the case has grown into an enormous magnitude and the case has been complicated on account of the number of villages and the diversity of the interests held by the heirs. But the very statement of the case, so far as the present point is concerned, makes it simple. The order of the Court, as observed above, was that the amount paid by the plaintiff be credited towards the decree and this was done. Now this decree the heirs of Bibi Fasihan are bound to discharge. If the plaintiff had not paid the proportionate amount of the decree viz., Rs. 36,500, it would have been realised by the sale of the mortgaged properties which had not then been sold, and it is immaterial whether the liability in the final adjustment of the decree in question would have fallen upon Mahal Barowna.

Now whose property was saved by this payment of Rs. 36,500? It was the property of Bibi Fasihan. Then, the question that might be asked by the heirs of Bibi Fasihan is "why do you lay claim to the property Barowna and others". If the money was not paid by the estate, then the heirs of Bibi Fasihan would be bound to pay it; if not, the estate of Bibi Fasihan would be sold, and in that event probably the interest of the plaintiff would also have been extinguished. But that is no consideration for holding that the estate of Bibi Fasihan was not benefitted by that payment. The Receiver, as a matter of fact went to the length of paying Rs. 15,000 as compensation under the compromise decree of the High Court in order to prevent the sale of the properties including Barowna for whose sake—not for the sake of the plaintiff but for the sake of the heirs of Bibi Fasihan—the money was paid. Therefore, I have no hesitation in holding that the money was paid for the benefit of the property which at that time the plaintiff thought belonged to her, or there was a possibility of her having an interest in it; but at the same time the Receiver, as representing the heirs of Bibi Fasihan, thought that the property was, as a matter of fact, Bibi Fasihan's. The question then is whther the lady was interested in making the payment. She is a mortgagee of the estate of Muhammad Umar. Muhammad Umar is admittedly an heir of Bibi Fasihan and has an interest in the estate left by her though not of 16 annas yet of 3 annas at least in all the mortgaged properties of the estate of Bibi Fasihan. If the property had been sold in execution of a prior mortgage-decree and not redeemed either by the mortgagor or the pusine mortgagee, the puisne mortgagee would be sure to suffer and that was the position in which the plaintiff was placed. Therefore, the plaintiff was interested in the payment of the money. It was through the Court that she obtained a title under her sale certificate in execution of her decree and delivery of possession; she lost possession of the property on account of the decision of this Court but she was always entitled to call upon the persons representing the estate of Bibi Fasihan to pay the debt that she had discharged in order to re-imburse her. This is to be gathered from the observation of Lord Macnaghten in the case of Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy (2). In that case the plaintiff obtained possession under the decree of the High Court of a revenue paying estate and he paid the rents and cesses in default of which payment the estate would have been sold. The High Court decree was afterwards reversed by the Privy Council. In 1885 the defendant obtained possession of the estate in execution of the High Court decree, and the plaintiff claimed the revenue and cesses paid by him while he was in possession of the property. Their Lordships observed:

"It seems to their Lordships to be common justice that when a proprietor in good faith pending litigation makes the necessary payments for the preservation of the estate in dispute, and the estate is afterwards adjudged to his opponent, he should be recouped what he has so paid by the person who ultimately benefits by the payment, if he has failed through no fault of his own to re-imburse himself out of the rents."

Now if Muhammad Umar had made the payment, would he not have been entitled as heir of the three annas share in the estate of his mother to ask the other co-heirs to contribute towards it? We find that this principle was accepted in the practical dealings with the estate in question in the administration proceedings, and Kalimuzaffar one of the heirs, having a seven annas share paid off Rs. 65,000 in order to save the property Machhirawan, the sixteen annas of which was given to him, from being sold. The Receiver without any objection makes that sum a charge upon the estate of Bibi Fasihan and the Court sanctions it. Dulhin Sona Koer then stepped into the shoes of Umar by reason of his mortgage which was a transfer of the property held by him in the true sense of the word and as defined in the Transfer of Property Act. Therefore, what Umar could do Sona Koer could also do. If she paid the money, as she did, she has as much right as Umar had (and this was recognised in the case of Kalimuzaffar) to ask the other heirs to contribute towards the payment and to recoup her on account of the money that she had advanced. Upon this principle, therefore, not only sections 69 and 70 will apply but various other sections of the Indian Contract Act, viz., sections 43, 68, 69, 70 and 72. In a case of this kind one is not to be pinned down to a particular section of the Act but all the sections read together laid down the principle upon which one paying money out of his own pocket is entitled to recoup himself from those who either derive benefit out of it or are bound to pay. It is also immaterial whether the person paying the money had a real interest or not. The word "interested" used in section 69 cannot have such a narrow meaning. If bona fide one believes that he has an interest in property and not only as a pretext for having a claim against those who are bound to make the payment, there is no reason why the law should not compel the person ultimately benefitting by the payment to return the money to the payer.

(2) 21 C. 142; 20 I. A. 160; 17 Ind. Jur. 576; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 366; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 727 (P. C.).

In this connection I would like to refer to the authorities quoted in the judgment in Second Appeal No. 1067 of 1921 delivered by me on the 28th June 1923 [Rang Lal Sahu v. Kali Shankar Sahai (3)] The principles of those cases would apply therein but did not apply to the second appeal which was disposed of by me.

I, therefore, hold that the plaintiff is entitled to get back the money paid by her from the estate of Bibi Fasihan and that this should be treated in the same way as the payment made by Kalimuzaffar.

We, therefore, set aside the decision of the Subordinate Judge and in its stead make a decree to the effect that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the sum of money claimed by her from the estate of Bibi Fasihan.

Then the question is whether she is entitled to recover the rate of interest of one per cent. per month as claimed by her and which was stipulated in her mortgage-bond. This was the rate of interest and perhaps compound interest agreed to by Bibi Fasihan when she execute the mortgage bond in favour of Girdhar Das-Kesho Das. The learned Vakil on behalf of the respondents contends that 6 per cent. per annum should be allowed to the decree-holder inasmuch as that is the rate directed by the decree of the Subordinate Judge to be paid to Girdhar Das. That is no doubt the rate of interest on the amount of Girdhar Das' decree but the payment made by the plaintiff was out of her own pocket and if the Receiver or the judgment-debtors had had to borrow money from outside in order to pay the decree they would have had to pay the market-rate of interest. That is the test which is applied to all such cases, and in our experience we know that when a decree has to be paid by a creditor he does not borrow money at the rate of interest mentioned in the decree but he borrows it at the market-rate, so the purpose for which the money was applied would not determine the rate of interest but the rate of interest which was prevailing at the time. No evidence has been given in this case as to what the market-rate of interest was at the time, nor has it been shown that the rate of interest mentioned in the bond is excessive or more than the market-rate prevailing at the time. Therefore, the bond rate must be deemed to be the market rate in the absence of any evidence to the contrary. But in the circumstances of the case compound interest is not allowable; nor has it been claimed. Therefore, simple interest only at the rate of one per cent per month will be allowed.

The result is that the decree of the Court below is set aside and in lieu thereof there will be a decree in favour of the plaintiff to recover from the defendants the sum of money claimed by her with future interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. The heirs of Bibi Fasihan are liable to the extent of the assets of the estate which have come into their hands. Bibi Fasihan's estate being in charge of the Receiver he shall administer it in the administration suit and the decretal amount in question together with interest will be paid by the Receiver out of the joint assets of the estate of Bibi Fasihan. In doing so, the Receiver will take into account the liabilities of Dulhin Sona Koer and her successors-in interest of the estate. These liabilities will be set forth in the judgment in Civil Revision Cases Nos. 177, 291, 300, 309, 310, and 312 of 1923 which have been heard along with this appeal.

(3) 77 Ind. Cas. 73; 2 Pat. 890; (1923) Pat. 353.

The appeal is decreed with costs.

Ross, J.—I agree.

W. C. A. Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 97 OF 1916 WITH RULE NO. 338 OF 1916.

July 12, 1916.

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjea, KT., and Mr. Justice Richardson.

Maharaj KUMAR SHOSHI KANTA ACHARJI CHOWDHURY BAHADUR—APPELLANT

versus

Raja SARAT CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY—RESPONDENT.

Execution of decree—Construction of decree, rules of—Execution Court, duty of—Variance between judgment and decree—Amendment—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 152, O. XX, rr. 6, 7.

A decree speaks for itself and must be executed as it stands, the executing Court being confined between the four corners of the decree. [p. 171, col. 1.]

Bhugobat Singh v. Ram Adhin Singh, 22 W. R. 330, Radha Pershad Singh v. Torab Ali, 18 C. 108; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 582; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 72 and Udwant Singh v. Tokhan Singh, 28 I. A. 57; 28 C. 353; 3 Bom. L. R. 318; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 14 (P. C.), followed.

But a decree, like any other document, is open to construction, and where a decree is ambiguous it ought to be so construed as to conform with the judgment. [p. 168, col. 2.]

Maharaja of Bhartpur v. Rani Kanno Dei, 28 I. A. 35 at p. 42; 23 A 181; 3 Bom. L. R. 51; 5 C. W. N. 137; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 792 (P. C.), relied on.

There is, however, a limit to what construction can do, and the remedy by construction is only appropriate if the language of the decree is ambiguous. If the language is plain and there is no ambiguity the proper remedy for a variance between the decree and the judgment is to apply for the amendment of the decree. [p. 169, col. 1.]

The operative words of a decree were as follows:—

"It is ordered that this suit be partially decreed, that the plaintiff's right be declared to so much of the disputed lands as falls within the boundary lines of the Revenue Survey Map of 1848 of Mauza Nij Shampur Paharpur comprised in Mahal 218 of the Touzi of the Mohalla Collectorate, laid down in the Amin's map:"

Held, that the meaning of the decree was not that the plaintiff's right was declared to so much of the disputed lands as fell within the boundary lines of the survey map of the village of which the Amin had made a map, but that the boundary lines of the Survey map were taken to be those laid down or shown in the Amin's map. [p. 168, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Rajshahi, dated the 5th April 1916.

Babus Jogesh Chandra Roy, Govinda Chandra De Roy and Bhupendra Chandra Guha, for the Appellant.

Babu Bhupendra Chandra Guha, for the Judgment-debtor-Petitioner.

Messrs. Jackson and H. N. Ghose, Babus Bisnu Coomar Bose, Dwarka Nath Chuckerbutty and Jotish Chandra Guha, for the Respondent.

Babu Jotish Chandra Guha, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is from a determination of the Court below contained in a judgment, dated the 5th April 1916, upon a question raised under section 47 of the Code in regard to the construction of a decree.

The decree (dated the 27th March 1905) was obtained by the respondent Raja Sarat Chandra Roy against Raja Surja Kanta Acharjya, the predecessor of the appellant, Raja Sashi Kumar Acharjya. There was an appeal to this Court which was dismissed on the 22nd May 1908. A further appeal to the Privy Council was also dismissed on the 20th July 1914 Surja Kanta Acharjya v. Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury (1). The result was that the decree of the First Court stood confirmed without modification.

The suit related to a considerable area of land in the possession of the appellant which the respondent claimed as part of an estate which he had purchased at a sale held for arrears of revenue. The respondents' success was not complete but partial. It was held that he was entitled to so much of the land as fell within the boundaries of his estate as shown in a Revenue Survey Map of 1848. This is plain from the judgment delivered and is not disputed. There is also no dispute as to the tri-junction point or the starting point which a surveyor, demarcating the boundaries in the locality, would commence his measurement. It is agreed that this point was conclusively fixed by the Trial Judge. The present dispute arises in this way. A map prepared by an amin who had made a local enquiry under the direction of the Trial Court purports to show the boundaries according to the Revenue Survey Map. The decree at first sight, at any rate, adopts the amin's map. Towards the close of his judgment, however, the learned Subordinate Judge referred to the variation between the magnetic north and the true north. The amin apparently had made no allowance, for such variation and the point at issue is whether the respondent is entitled to have the variation taken into account for the purpose of the delivery of possession or whether under the terms of the decree he is bound by the amin's map. The point is not touched upon in the judgments of this Court and the Privy Council.

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 309; 18 C. W. N. 1281; 20 C. L. J. 563; 16 M. L. T. 290; 27 M. L. J. 365; 1 L. W. 807; (1914) M. W. N. 757; 16 Bom. L. R. 925 (P. C.).

The words of the decree are as follow:—

"It is ordered that this suit be partially decreed, that the plaintiff's right be declared to so much of the disputed lands as falls within the boundary lines of the Revenue Survey Map of 1848 of Mouza Nij Shampur Paharpur comprised in Mahal 218 of the Touzi of the Mohalla Collectorate, laid down in the amin's map."

The original decree is in Bengali but with every respect for the learned Subordinate Judge, there is at any rate no patent ambiguity either in the original or in the translation. The Bengali expression (Aminer Naksha Ankita), which represents the words "laid down in the amin's map," refers, as clearly as those words do, to the boundary lines of the Survey map. According to the grammatical sense the boundary lines of the Survey map are taken to be those laid down or shown in the Amin's map. The meaning is not "the boundary lines of the Survey map of the village of which the amin has made a map." Apart from the language such a reference to the amin's map would be entirely useless. What is called the ordinary portion of the judgment, which is in English, puts the meaning beyond doubt. The words there are:—"It is ordered that these five suits are partially decreed in this way that the plaintiffs' right to the portions of the disputed lands shown in the amin's maps as falling within the boundary lines given in the Revenue Survey Maps of 1848 of the Mouzas in questions.....be declared as appertaining to his zemindari." The decree, therefore, as already stated, on the face of it adopts the amin's map and if it were not for the passage in the judgment which creates the difficulty, there would be no room at all for discussion.

As the decree was in his view ambiguous, the learned Subordinate Judge goes on to refer to that passage as a clue to the meaning and as a justification for the order which he made, namely that "The Civil Court amin should determine the boundary line of the Revenue Survey Map with reference to the certified copy of the map supplied by the parties." In other words he throws the Amin's map overboard and directs that the Survey map should be relaid.

Appealing from that order the appellant naturally takes his stand upon the decree between the four corners of which a Court of Execution is no doubt confined: Radha Pershad Singh v. Torab Ali (2), Udwant Singh v. Tokhan Singh (3). On the other hand it is perfectly true that a decree like any other document is open to construction. The Code says that the decree shall agree with the judgment (O. XX, r. 6) and a decree, therefore, ought, if possible, to be construed so as to conform with the judgment. Maharaja of Bhartpur v. Rani Kanno Dei (4).

(2) 18 C. 108; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 582; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 72.

(3) 28 I. A. 57; 28 C. 353; 3 Bom. L. R. 318; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 14 (P. C.).

(4) 28 I. A. 35 at p. 42; 23 A. 181; 3 Bom. L. R. 51; 5 C. W. N. 137; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 792 (P. C.).

But there is a limit to what construction can do. The remedy by construction is only appropriate if the language is ambiguous. If the language is plain and there is no ambiguity, the proper remedy for a variance between the decree and the judgment is to apply for the amendment of the decree. The fact that such an application must be made to the Privy Council in England is no reason why we should strain the law in order to assist one party to the prejudice of the other. On the contrary we should not be justified in taking liberties with a decree which has become, by adoption, His Majesty's order in Council; Raja Bhup Indar Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bahadur Singh (5).

The question, then, is whether this decree is capable of the construction which the respondent seeks to have put upon it. We have pointed out that there is no such ambiguity as that suggested by the learned Subordinate Judge and that the decree, as it stands, agrees with the ordering portion of the judgment. That being so, is there any reason for departing from the natural meaning of the words? In the paragraph of the judgment on which the argument for the respondent was rested the Subordinate Judge says:—"The Civil Court amin has failed to ascertain what at the time variation between the two meridians was. I, however, do not consider this omission to be of importance now, as I think there would be necessity again for ascertaining this variation at a subsequent stage in the execution department, when delivery of possession would have to be made for the plaintiff." Then he adopts the amin's tri-junction points (five suits were tried together with one of which we are concerned) and says that he considers "them to be the proper starting points for laying down the boundary lines of the Revenue Survey of 1848". Then he says in conclusion "The suits, therefore, should be decreed in parts as noted above and it is accordingly ordered." Then follows the ordering portion the relevant part of which has already been quoted.

(5) 27 I. A. 209 at p. 215; 23 A. 152; 5 C. W. N. 521; 2 Bom. L. R. 978 (P. C.).

Some importance was attributed to the words "as noted above" in the last sentence of the passage cited. But those words were probably intended to qualify the preceding words "in parts" The reference was probably to the beginning of the preceding paragraph where the Subordinate Judge had found that the plaintiff was "entitled to recover possession of the lands in suit in portions." The passage as a whole, however, does support the respondent to this extent that the Subordinate Judge evidently contemplated that in execution allowance would be made for the variation between two meridians, the magnetic meridian and the polar meridian. It is contended for the respondent that effect should be given to an intention which is not expressed in the decree. The contention in its most plausible form is that by the amin's map the Subordinate Judge means the amin's map adjusted with reference to the true north. But, however the contention be put, the result of acceding to it would be to introduce into the decree a direction which is not there, namely, that the Amin's error in not taking into account the deviation of the magnetic meridian should be corrected and his boundaries re-aligned accordingly. That the further result would be an entirely new map is shown by the Subordinate Judge's order which discards the Amin's map and directs the Survey map to be relaid.

Now the Courts which dealt with the case had nothing before them except the amin's map to indicate the practical effect of the decree which they were making or confirming. The case of Lukhi Narain Jagadeb v. Jodu Nath Deo (6) aptly illustrates what important and even startling consequence might follow from the correction of the amin's map in the manner suggested. If the decree said that the amin's map was to be corrected the correction would have to be made whatever the effect might be, though conceivably the suit having been decreed in part, a difficulty might arise, if the effect were to show a title in the respondent to all or more than all he claimed. The decree, however, gives no such direction and cannot be made to give any such direction without importing into it words which are not there.

(6) 21 I. A. 39; 21 C. 504; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 408; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 966 (P. C.).

It was said that it was hard that the respondent should suffer because the Court made a mistake in drawing up the decree. The first answer to that is that if there is a mistake, it is open to the respondent to take steps to have it corrected. But so far as the Subordinate Judge was concerned the mistake seems rather to have been in the judgment than in the decree. The Subordinate Judge appears to have under-estimated the possible importance of the question and to have wrongly assumed that the amin's map would be corrected in execution as a matter of course. That accounts for the omission in the decree and in the ordering portion of the judgment. The decree said what the Subordinate Judge intended to say though the effect is not what he thought it would be. The mistake in the judgment produced a corresponding mistake in the decree.

As to the parties, it is true that the Code (O. XX, r. 7) directs the Judge to sign the decree when he "has satisfied himself that the decree has been drawn up in accordance with the judgment," but there is a general and convenient practice which was apparently followed in the present case, under which the signatures of the Pleaders are placed upon a decree before it is signed by the Judge, and it is undesirable to minimize the responsibility of the parties for the correctness of a decree as drawn up. We were told by the learned Pleader for the appellant (and the statement was not disputed), that neither party took objection to the amin's report and map on the specific ground that his north did not correspond with the true north. The question, it was said, was suggested in the course of cross-examination conducted on the appellant's behalf. That may illustrate the danger of random cross-examination but it does not prevent the appellant from insisting on the decree as it stands. It it probable that the question was not pushed to a plain conclusion at the time because neither side knew what the effect of allowing for the deviation would be. That may account also for the decree being accepted by both parties in the form in which it was drawn up. In that state of things the appellant can hardly complain of hardship. It is just possible that if the decree had been drawn up in the way in which he says it ought to be understood, the result on appeal might have been different. So far as there is any question whether one or the other party is to blame for the form which the decree has taken, there is little to choose between them and the decree binds one as much as the other.

We do not know, and it does not signify for the present purpose, what the result of correcting the map would be. The appellant says that he would be adversely affected and that a considerable addition would be made to the area to be awarded to the respondent. If the result would have been the other way we should doubtless have heard the same argument from the opposite quarters. The respondent would have been for the decree and nothing but the decree and the appellant would have relied on the judgment. The decision at which we should have arrived, it may be hoped, would have been the same, as the decision at which we are now about to arrive. The consideration which suggests itself is that the party who would be prejudiced by an alteration of the map had, as the decree stands, no inducement and possibly no right, to raise the question in appeal. The Courts, it is true, accepted the Survey map. The Revenue Survey of 1848 was presumably carried out on scientific lines and the north shown in the Survey map is the true north. But mistakes have been known to creep even into Survey maps. The amin's version of the Survey map may be wrong in theory but it was adopted in the decree and his map may in fact more closely represent the true boundaries. At any rate it was certainly not necessary for the party who would suffer from its rectification in the way proposed to take in appeal such a point as this, that if the rectification were made, the practical result would be to throw grave suspicion on the correctness of the Survey map.

Then it was said that the parties are as much bound by the judgment as the decree. That is no doubt so and it may be that the respondent has a title or right to have the decree amended. We need not consider that question which may turn to some extent on the terms of section 152 of the Code. All we need say is that the decree cannot be construed in the way in which it has been construed by the Court below and that the question raised is a question not of construction but of amendment.

The point is a short one but we have dealt with it at same length as it was energetically argued and is of considerable importance. In this country a decree is often executed, not by the Judge who made it and best knows what was intended, but by a successor, or by some other Judge to whom it is sent for execution. It would add to the many difficulties which arise in the execution department if any encouragement were given to the alteration of decree under the guise of interpretation. The principle has long been recognised that a decree must be executed as it stands. As Phear, J. said in Bhugobat Singh v. Ram Adhin Singh (7) "the decree speaks for itself."

The result is that this appeal must be allowed with costs and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. The order was passed in a proceeding in the nature of a review of two previous orders dated the 24th March 1916, and the 30th March 1916, the first passed on an application made by the decree-holders, and the second on a reference made by the amin. We refer the view of the decree taken in those orders and the decree will be executed accordingly. We assess the hearing fee at eight gold mohurs.

In view of our judgment, it is unnecessary for us to pass orders on the Rule.

Let the record be sent down at once.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed: no order in Rule.

(7) 22 W. R. 330.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 1080 OF 1920.

July 2, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett.

KISHEN PRASAD & CO. LTD. —PLAINTIFFS

versus

FULLUMAL HIRALAL.—DEFENDANT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 153, O. VI. r. 17—Bombay High Court Rules, r. 266—Amendment of plaint, after decree—Preliminary decree—Receiver, costs of.

An amendment of pleadings can, as a general rule, be allowed only during the actual pendency of a suit, and not after the decree has been actually drawn up and sealed. [p. 172, col. 1.]

The Duke of Buccleuch, (1892) P. 201; 61 L. J. P. 57; 67 L. T. 739; 40 W. R. 455; 7 Asp. M. C. 294 and Sukhdeo Prasad v. Lachman Singh, 24 A. 456; A. W. N. (1902) 114, distinguished.

Where, however, a Receiver has been appointed by the Court in a suit, the Court may, even though the suit be no longer pending, permit parties to intervene on a question as to the Receiver's costs. [p. 172, col. 2.]

Administrator-General of Bengal v. Prem Lall Mullick, 22 C. 1011; 22 I. A. 203; 5 M. L. J. 157; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 660; 11 Ind. Dec (N. S.) 672 (P. C), followed.

Mr. Lalji, for the Plaintiffs.

JUDGMENT.—In this motion the Court's leave is asked to amend the plaint by adding certain words in the first prayer for relief which will have the effect of making payable to the plaintiffs the expenses, etc., payable to the muccadams for storing, etc., the 407 and 16 bales of cotton which the plaintiffs had received from the defendants. In its decree of April 8, 1922, the Court appointed the manager of the plaintiffs to be Receiver of these bales; and the question of plaintiffs' right to recover these expenses has arisen in the course of the Receiver passing his accounts before the Commissioner. The Chamber Judge has held that they are not covered by the decree, and hence this motion. It is also asked that the decree should be amended similarly on such terms as the Court may deem fit to impose on the plaintiffs.

The first question that arises is whether the amendment of the plaint, which is asked for, falls under section 153 and O. VI, r. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code. Section 153 allows the Court to give leave for amendment at any time in any proceeding in a suit, and O. VI, r. 17, says that the Court may allow such amendments at any stage of the proceedings. Prima facie this limits the Court to allowing amendments in pleadings during the actual pendency of the suit and not after the decree has been actually drawn up and sealed. This is the general rule which applies in the case of the corresponding rule of the English Supreme Court, viz., O. XXVIII, r. 12. At page 377 of the Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court of 1923 it is said: "Speaking generally, an amendment of an indorsement or pleading cannot be made after judgment has been entered, unless the case comes within the 'slip' Rule." That 'slip' Rule is the rule allowing amendments of a judgment or decree for clerical or arithmetical mistakes corresponding to section 152 of the Civil Procedure Code. It goes on to say: "But the words of r. 1, 'At any stage of the proceedings' occur also in O. XVI, r. 11, and upon those words the Court of Appeal held, in The Duke of Buccleuch (1) that the power given by the Rule may be exercised after final judgment, as long as anything remains to be done in the case." In that particular case it will be found that there was a limitation that consent should be given by the party that it was proposed to add and it was held that the decree was not final. I do not suppose that that case can be treated as an authority for allowing the amendment of a pleading in a case where the decree is final and has been sealed, or, as it is sometimes expressed, "perfected." So far as I am aware there is no Indian authority to the contrary. Mr. Lalji for the plaintiffs referred to Sukhdeo Prasad v. Lachman Singh (2), where it is said that the suit had proceeded up to judgment and decree. These words are ambiguous, and I think they must, as there used, mean that the suit was ready for judgment and the decree that follows on the judgment, not that a decree had actually been passed. The case is, of course, different from one where an amendment is allowed by an Appellate Court, for in such a case the suit is, so to speak, proceeding in that appellate Court. But when a decree has actually been passed, if it is final, the original Court is, generally speaking, functus officio, and the occasion for an amendment of pleadings cannot really arise. Mr. Lalji says that the decree in question is only a preliminary one. It is, no doubt, marked as a preliminary decree on mortgage. But as expressly declared by clause (2) of section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, a decree can be partly preliminary and partly final; and there can, I think, be no doubt whatever that, in so far as the decree fixed the sum of Rs. 68,425-0-6 as the sum to be paid by the defendants to the plaintiffs for debt and interest, it is final, for it thereby fixes the amount due from the defendants up to the date of the decree. It is no doubt preliminary in so far as it subsequently declares that the plaintiffs have a first charge on certain immoveable property for the amount due and payable by the defendants to the plaintiffs under the decree and in so far as it appointed the plaintiffs' manager to be a Receiver of these 407 and 16 bales and directed that he should pass his accounts before the Commissioner. In regard to the latter point, it may be mentioned that O. XL, r. 1 (1) (a), does declare that the Court can appoint a Receiver of any property, whether before or after decree. And there is the authority of Privy Council in Administrator General of Bengal v. Prem Lall Mullick (3) for saying that where a Receiver has been appointed by the Court in a suit, the Court may, even though the suit be no longer pending, permit parties to intervene on a question as to the Receiver's costs. So that in that particular regard the plaintiffs have a stronger case than in regard to an amendment of the pleadings, and a consequent alteration of the decree as to the amount that was payable by the defendants to the plaintiffs at the date of the judgment. In regard to the latter point, the whole object of the proposed amendment of the plaint is that the Court should subsequently allow an amendment of the decree, so as to enable the plaintiffs to add to the amount decreed against the defendants a further sum of Rs. 5,000 odd in regard to the muccadamage charges for these bales; and the case really falls under rule 266 of this Court which restricts the powers of the Court, after the decree or order has been sealed, to amend the same. It allows this to be done only so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment or rectify an inaccuracy or clerical or arithmetical error. Its last clause is "Save as aforesaid, no alteration or variation shall be made without a review of judgment and re-hearing under the provisions of section 114 and O. XLVII of the Code of Civil Procedure".

(1) (1892) P. 201; 61 L. J. P. 57; 67 L. T. 739; 40 W. R. 455; 7 Asp. M. C. 294.
(2) 24 A. 456; A. W. N. (1902) 114;
(3) 22 C. 1011; 22 I. A. 203; 5 M. L. J. 157; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 660; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 672 (P. C.).

Subject to a qualification, which I will deal with later the alteration which the plaintiffs seek seems to me to be clearly one which cannot now be allowed by this Court save in accordance with the provisions for review of judgment, which are referred to in the rule; and as a somewhat analogous case I may refer to the case of Glasier v. Rolls(4) where a judgment had been passed allowing certain costs but no provision had been made for the costs of the short-hand notes of the reporters, and the Court was asked to allow the judgment to be amended by inserting a provision for those costs, though they had not been asked for at the trial. The Court of Appeal unanimously refused this application, and in his judgment Bowen, L. J. says (p. 376):

"It is quite a different thing to come after a judgment and ask that it should be amended so as to express the real intention of the Court, entertained by the Court at the time the judgment was given..... But to seek to alter the judgment by asking that something may be embodied in it the demand for which was not even thought of at the time, and was never brought to the attention of the Court, is really to ask us to make a different judgment from that which has already been perfected."

I think those remarks apply equally to the present case.

(4) (1890) 62 L. T. 305; 59 L. J. Ch. 63; 38 W. R. 113.

It was alleged by Mr. Lalji that it was a mere inadvertence which led to the omission of the plaintiffs to ask for relief in regard to these particular expenses, and no doubt that may be so. But, on the other hand, the case of Jehangir Cowasji v. The Hope Mills, Limited (5) shows that the Court should not ordinarily draw any such presumption of inadvertence; and reference to my notes of the proceedings underlying the ex parte decree shows that the plaintiffs' witness Niranjanprasad Dwarkadas stated that Rs. 59,462-10-6 was the sum due to the plaintiffs up to March 19, 1920, and that after that date no item was debited to the defendants except interest. It seems difficult to understand why the plaintiffs should not have paid these charges when they became due and debited them to the defendants in their account, so that they would naturally have been brought to the attention of the Court.

The result is that, subject to the qualification, which I have already mentioned, I hold that the motion is misconceived and should not be allowed. The plaintiffs, in regard at any rate to such expenses incurred up to the date of the Receiver taking possession, in my opinion, can only proceed by an application for review of judgment under O. XLVII of the Civil Procedure Code. I must not, however, be taken to encourage such an application. There are various difficulties in the way of the plaintiffs, for instance, limitation, and the necessity of showing that the case falls properly under O. XLVII, r. 1, as construed in the recent Privy Council judgment in Chajju Ram v. Neki (6).

Now I come to the qualification I have mentioned. I think a distinction can rightly be made as to costs in respect of muccadamage, etc., which became leviable for the storage, etc., of these bales from the date of the Receiver taking possession of them as Receiver. I have already pointed out that there is the authority of the Privy Council for entering into questions as to the Receiver's accounts even although the suit may not be pending, and I have also pointed out that in my opinion the decree is preliminary with regard to the Receiver taking certain action and passing his accounts. That being so, rule 258 applies, namely, in every decree and order that is not final liberty to apply shall be implied. It is open in my opinion, to the party interested to apply in regard to any question that may arise as to the Receiver's accounts, so far as they are accounts in respect of any liability subsequent to his appointment as Receiver taking effect; and to that extent I do not think that rule 266 bars any alteration of or addition to the terms of the preliminary decree that may be justified. I, therefore, leave that position also open to the plaintiffs.

(5) 2 Ind. Cas. 294; 33 B. 216; 10 Bom. L. R. 488.

(6) 72 Ind. Cas. 566; 24 Bom. L. R. 1238; 30 M. L. T. 295; 26 C. W. N. 697; 41 P. L. R. 1922; 3 P. L. T. 435; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 112; 16 L. W. 37; 17 P. W. R. 1922; 3 L. 127; 43 M. L. J. 332, 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 99; 36 C. L. J. 459 (P. C.)

GOKHA RAM V. SHAM LAL.

Subject to that, the motion is discharged with costs.

Z. K. Motion dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 324 OF 1919.

August 2, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau and Mr. Justice Brasher.

GOKHA RAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SHAM LAL—PLAINTIFF—AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by father—Necessity—Small portion of consideration not for necessity—Sale, whether can be set aside—Suit by son to annul sale—Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 120, 126.

A sale of family property by a Hindu father cannot be set aside merely because a small portion of the sale consideration is found not to have been advanced for necessity. [p. 175, col. 1.]

Lala Chatranarayan v. Uda Kanwari, 1 B. L. R. 201; Felaram Roy v. Bagaianand Banerjee, 6 Ind. Cas. 207; 14 C. W. N. 895; Naman Mal v. Har Bhagwan, 66 Ind. Cas. 362; 2 L. 357; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 317 and Kannu Chetty v. Amirthammal, 26 Ind. Cas. 418; 1 L. W. 877, relied on.

A sale of family property by a Hindu father merely for the purpose of paying off a mortgage which exists on the property is not justified. [p. 175, col. 2.]

A suit by a Hindu son to get a sale of family property effected by the father annulled is governed by Art. 126 and not by Art. 120 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. [p. 176, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 15th December 1918, varying that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Class, Ludhiana, dated the 1st August 1918.

Mr. Shamsir Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. Fakir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Seven suits have been brought by Sham Lal for the annulment of alienations effected by his father Labhu Ram. The Subordinate Judge found that Labhu Ram was a drunkard and a gambler who had wasted his property, that he had no business or occupation on which the money he borrowed might legitimately have been spent, and that the debts he had incurred, except those which could be connected with his son's marriage, were tainted with immorality and not binding on the plaintiff. He passed decrees annulling the alienations, subject to the condition that the plaintiff should pay to the alienees certain sums for which necessity had been proved.

On the appeals of the alienees the District Judge has found that the evidence is not of such a nature as to lead to the conclusion that Labhu Ram was licentious throughout his life or had no business or occupation, and he has accepted six of the appeals, and while maintaining the decrees for annulment of the alienations he has allowed further sums to the alienees on account of the antecedent debts which formed part of the consideration for the alienations. The seven alienees have preferred Second Appeals Nos. 324 to 326 and 328 to 331 of 1919, which may be disposed of by one judgment.

It will be convenient to take First Appeal No. 325 by Atma Ram, to whom Labhu Ram sold a house for Rs. 1,200. The lower Appellate Court has allowed Rs. 939 which were required for the payment of debts, disallowing only an item of Rs. 100 and one of Rs. 161. It is contended for the appellant that the item of Rs. 100, which is said to have been paid to one Mangu Mal, should have been allowed, the lower Appellate Court having overlooked certain evidence in coming to the conclusion that the payment was not proved. It is unnecessary, however, to go into this matter, as we think the ap eal must succeed even if necessity for the sum of Rs. 261 has not been proved.

In Lala Chatranarayan v. Uba Kanwari (1), where a widow had sold property for Rs. 995, out of which only Rs. 670 were needed for the payment of a debt, it was held that the mere fact that she had sold the property for more than the amount of the debt did not render the sale invalid.

That ruling was followed in Felaram Roy v. Bagalanand Banerjee (2) in which it was held that a sale by a Hindu widow cannot be set aside upon payment of the amount which it was necessary for her to raise to pay off a legal debt simply because the property sold was not sold for a sum which exactly covered that debt.

The same view has been taken by this Court in Naman Mal v. Har Bhagwan (3).

It has also been held by the Madras High Court in Kannu Chetty v. Amirthammal (4) that if in the case of a sale by a widow a small portion of the purchase money was not required for urgent necessity it does not follow that the sale itself was not due to necessity, unless it could be reasonably presumed or unless it is proved that the sale of a lesser area for the exact amount required for necessity was feasible.

The principle enunciated in these rulings is applicable with all the more force to the case of an alienation by a male proprietor. In the present case it was necessary for Labhu Ram to sell the house in order to pay his debts which amounted to Rs. 939, and the fact that he obtained by the sale an additional sum of Rs. 261 for which he is not shown to have had any necessity is not a sufficient reason for annulling the sale.

The same principle applies to Appeal No. 330 which relates to a sale in favour of Fattu and Buta, effected for the purpose of paying debts due to different persons. The sale was for Rs. 1,400 of which all but Rs. 200 has been allowed.

Appeal No. 324 relates to a sale in favour of Gokha for Rs. 1,900, out of which the lower Appellate Court has allowed Rs. 1,500 on account of Labhu Ram's share in a mortgage-debt due to the vendee. No necessity was proved for the remaining items. This case is distinguishable from Appeals Nos. 325 and 330, as the mortgage which was to be paid off by the sale was a mortgage of the very property which was sold, and it was a mortgage with possession. There was no other debt to be discharged, and the sale of the property merely for the purpose of paying off the mortgage which existed on it was perfectly useless. The decree annulling this sale was, therefore, correct.

Similar remarks apply to Appeal No. 328, which is by Ram Rachpal, to whom Labhu Ram sold land for Rs. 900 for the purpose of paying off two mortgages held by Ganesha Mal on the same land. The lower Appellate Court disallowed two items amounting to Rs. 160, for which no necessity was shown. It is true that Ganesha Mal's mortgages carried interest, but the mortgage-deed contained no provision for his recovering principal or interest either from the mortgaged property or from other property of the mortgagor, and the mortgagee could only get possession of the mortgaged property if the mortgagor made default. There was, therefore, no necessity whatever for Labhu Ram to sell the mortgaged property, and the sale has been rightly annulled.

Appeal No. 329 relates to an alienation in favour of Nikka for Rs. 900, out of which Rs. 750 have been allowed. This alienation was not a sale, but a mortgage, so that the remarks made above in regard to Appeal No. 325 do not apply to this case. The findings that necessity has not been proved for the items disallowed are findings of fact, and Counsel for the appellant has not been

(1) 1 B. L. R. 201.
(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 207; 14 C. W. N. 895.
(3) 66 Ind. Cas. 362; 2 L. 357; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 317.
(4) 26 Ind. Cas. 418; 1 L. W. 877.

able to say anything in support of the appeal. There was an additional mortgage to Nikka for Rs. 99, but no evidence was given of the payment of the money.

Appeal No. 331 relates to an oral sale to Muhammad Shah for Rs. 400. The District Judge has disallowed the whole of this sum, finding that no necessity for any item has been proved. The finding is one of fact, and nothing has been said in support of this appeal.

There remains Appeal No. 326, the subject of which is a sale of land to Rahmat and others for Rs. 2,500. The land was mortgaged with possession to one Rosha for Rs. 1,225, and the lower Appellate Court has allowed that item and Rs. 35 for registration expenses, disallowing the two remaining items of Rs. 740 and Rs. 500, for which the vendees failed to prove any necessity. Nothing has been urged with regard to the items disallowed, and there was clearly no necessity for the sale, as Labhu Ram could have allowed the land to remain in mortgage with Rosha. The main argument advanced is that the suit was barred by limitation under Art. 120 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act, having been instituted more than six years after the sale, which took place on the 25th January 1911. Had the suit been merely for a declaration that the sale should not affect the plaintiff's rights the argument would have been correct, but the plaintiff sued for the annulment of the sale, and in fact obtained a decree for annulment, so that Art. 126 applies, and the period of limitation is 12 years. The fact that the plaintiff was not given a decree for possession as well as for annulment of the sale does not make Art. 126 inapplicable. We hold, therefore, that the suit was within time and that the decree is correct.

The result is that we accept Appeals Nos. 325 and 330, reverse the decrees passed in those cases, and dismiss the suits with costs throughout. We dismiss Appeals Nos. 324, 326, 328, 329 and 331 with costs.

Z. K.

Appeals Nos. 325 and 330 accepted, the remainder dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2530 OF 1917.

November 9, 1921.

Present :—Mr. Justice Chevis and Mr. Justice Harrison.

NANAK CHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM CHAND AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 4, O XXXIV, r. 1—Mortgage—Redemption—Suit by second mortgagee—Appeal—Death of mortgagor—Abatement.

To a suit by a second mortgagee to redeem from the prior mortgagee the mortgagor is an absolutely necessary party and the suit cannot proceed in his absence.

Where, therefore, during the pendency of an appeal in such a suit the mortgagor dies and his legal representatives are not brought on the record within the period of limitation allowed by the law, the whole appeal abates.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Attock at Campbellpore, dated the 21st April 1917, affirming that of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Campbellpore, dated the 8th August 1916.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. S. Bhagat, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—A preliminary objection to the hearing of this appeal has been raised by Mr. M. S. Bhagat who points out that Waryam, one of the respondents, died on the 31st December 1917 and that no application to bring his legal representatives on the record was made until 12nd April 1921. This is so and as the provisions of section 5 of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application of this nature, O. XXII, r. 4 (3) governs the case. The respondent who has died was the mortgagor, the suit being one brought by a second mortgagee to redeem from the prior mortgagee. It is therefore clear that the mortgagor is an absolutely necessary party and in his absence the suit cannot proceed against the remaining defendant. We accordingly declare that the appeal has abated. This order is made without prejudice to any application which the appellant may be advised to make under O. XXII, r. 9, Civil Procedure Code. The costs of the hearing (Rs. 32) will be paid by the appellant to Ram Chand respondent.

Z. K.

Appeal abated.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 224 OF 1923.

May 3, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, KT.

LACHMI NARAIN MARWARI AND ANOTHER—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal Public Gambling Act (II of 1867), ss. 5, 8—Money on person of gambler—Forfeiture.

What is liable to forfeiture under section 8 of the Bengal Public Gambling Act, are those things which may be reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming. The private property of an individual, such as money or jewellery on his person, who is found gaming in a gaming house cannot be seized and forfeited under the section, unless it is quite clear that there was attached to such private property the taint that it was reasonably suspected to have been used or intended for the purpose of gaming. [p. 178, col. 2.]

Emperor v. Tola, 26 A. 270; A. W. N. (1904) 11; 1 Cr. L. J. 35; Tula v. Emperor, 54 Ind. Cas. 250; 41 A. 366; 17 A. L. J. 368; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 161; 21 Cr. L. J. 42 and Emperor v. Kifayat 49 Ind. Cas. 165; 41 A. 272; 17 A. L. J. 64; 20, Cr. L. J. 133, referred to.

Revision from an order of the Additional District Magistrate, Dhanbad, affirming a decision of the Senior Deputy Magistrate, Dhanbad, dated the 2nd December 1922.

Mr. Janak Kishore, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in criminal revisional jurisdiction. It is made on behalf of two persons who were prosecuted and convicted of an offence against the provisions of section 4 of the Public Gambling Act (1867). They were convicted by the Senior Deputy Magistrate of Dhanbad on the 2nd December 1922; they pleaded guilty. The first applicant was fined Rs. 40 and the second applicant Rs. 25. When the Police raided the premises where the gambling was going on they searched the persons of the applicants and took from them a considerable sum of money which the learned Vakil who appears on behalf of the applicants informs the Court was of the value of about Rs 100. After the conviction the applicants made an application to the Deputy Magistrate asking for a return to them of the money which had been found in their possession by the Police. I take it that this money would certainly have been available for the purpose of paying the fine, but I understand from the learned Vakil who appears on behalf of the applicants that the fines were paid and that the application for refund of the money seized upon their persons was made after such payment. Now, on the 2nd December the Deputy Magistrate of Dhanbad passed the following order :—

"The money found on the persons who visited the gaming house for gambling has been forfeited to Government."

From this order the applicants applied to the Additional District Magistrate of Dhanbad who, however, although he thought that the matter presented considerable legal difficulty, did not think that it was within his province to refer the case to this Court merely to obtain a correct interpretation of the law; which he considered was somewhat doubtful. He accordingly refused to make any reference to this Court and a Rule was accordingly obtained in revisional jurisdiction from Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Macpherson on the 18th April last. The matter has now come up before me.

I think that it is important to consider the words of the section of the Act under which it is said that the accused were convicted. Section 4 reads :—

"Whoever is found in any such house. (such house here means common gaming house) tent, room, space or walled enclosure, playing or gaming with cards, dice, counters, money or other instruments of gaming, or is found there present for the purpose of gaming, whether playing for any money, wager, stake or otherwise, shall be liable on conviction before any Magistrate, to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, or to imprisonment of either description as defined in the Indian Penal Code for any term not exceeding one month, and any person found in any common gaming house during any gaming or playing therein shall be presumed, until the contrary be proved, to have been there for the purpose of gaming." Section 5 reads :—

"If the Magistrate of a District or other officer invested with the full powers of a Magistrate or the District Superintendent of Police, upon credible information and after such inquiry as he may think necessary has reason to believe that any house, tent, room, space or walled enclosure is used as a common gaming house, he may either himself enter or by his warrant authorise any officer of Police, not below such rank as the Lieutenant-Governor shall appoint in this behalf, to enter, with such assistance as may be found necessary by night or by day, and by force, if necessary, any such house, tent, room, space or walled enclosure, and may either himself take into custody or authorise such officer to take into custody all persons whom he or such officer finds therein, whether or not such persons may be then actually gaming, and may seize or authorise such officer to seize all instruments of gaming, and all moneys and securities for money, and articles of value, reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming which are found therein; and may search or authorise such officer to search all parts of the house, tent, room, space or walled enclosure which he or such officer shall have so entered, when he or such officer has reason to believe that any instruments of gaming are concealed therein, and also the persons of those whom he or such officer so takes into custody and may seize or authorise such officer to seize and take possession of all instruments of gaming found upon such search."

Under section 8 it is laid down :—

"On conviction of any person for keeping or using any such common gaming house, or being present therein for the purpose of gaming, the convicting Magistrate may order all the instruments of gaming found therein to be destroyed and may also order all or any of the securities for money, and other articles seized not being instruments of gaming to be sold and converted into money, and the proceeds thereof with all moneys seized therein to be forfeited; or in his discretion may order any part thereof to be returned to the persons appearing to have been severally thereunto entitled."

Now, it is quite clear to my mind that what is liable to forfeiture are those things which may be reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming. It is impossible, I think, to suggest that the private property of an individual who is found gaming in a gaming house could be seized and forfeited unless it was quite clear that there was attached to such private property the taint that it was reasonably suspected to have been used or intended for the purpose of gaming. It may be said that even with regard to such tainted things the Magistrate has a discretion to order their return in whole or in part to whom they belonged. But the law itself provides the penalties by way of fine and imprisonment for the offence, and over articles which cannot be clearly regarded as being tainted with the reasonable suspicion of having been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming, I think, that it must be clear that the Court had no jurisdiction whatever. It is said that if that was so, circumstances might arise which might on the one hand render the provisions of the Act somewhat nugatory; whilst on the other hand they might render the position of the person convicted one of the utmost hardship and injustice. In illustration of the first proposition it is pointed out that, if money found on a person discovered in a gaming house cannot be seized and forfeited, the probability would be that immediately upon the least alarm the gamblers would at once put in their pockets all the money on the premises. On the other hand to illustrate the latter position it is perfectly easy to imagine a case where a person in possession of a very large sum of money, which had not been used and which he had no intention whatever of using for gaming, paid a visit to a gaming establishment, he might find that he forfeited the whole of his property under the provision of this section, a result which I do not think the Legislature could ever have contemplated or which the construction of the Act itself will permit. It must be judicially clear that the money or articles seized are reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming. It is obviously quite impossible for a Magistrate definitely to say, without proof, what amount of money found on an individual in a gaming house has been used for gaming or is intended by its owner to be used in gaming. It is also equally impossible for a Magistrate without proof to say that articles of value such, for example, as a watch or rings found on the person of an individual discovered in a gaming house, may have been intended to have been used or may have been used as pledges or securities for money wagered. The learned Vakil who appears on behalf of the applicant was unable to find any authority dealing with this matter under the provisions of the Public Gambling Act (1867). But he drew my attention to several cases which have been decided in the High Court of Allahabad under the provisions of the Public Gambling Act, 1867. This Act is not quite identical with the Bengal Gambling Act (1867) but is in many respects very similar. Section 4 reads :—

"Whoever is found in any such house, walled enclosure, room or place playing or gaming with cards, dice, counters, money or other instruments of gaming, or is found there present for the purpose of gaming, whether playing for any money, wager, stake, or otherwise, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, or to imprisonment of either description, as defined in the Indian Penal Code for any term not exceeding one month, and any person found in any gaming house during any gaming or playing therein shall be presumed, until the contrary be proved, to have been there for the purpose of gaming."

Section 5 reads:—

"If the Magistrate of a District or other officer invested with the full powers of a Magistrate or the District Superintendent of Police upon credible information and after such enquiry as he may think necessary has reason to believe that any house, walled enclosure, room or place is used as a common gaming house, he may either himself enter or by his warrant authorise any officer of Police not below such rank as the Lieutenant Governor or Chief Commissioner shall appoint in this behalf to enter with such assistance as may be found necessary, by night or by day, and by force if necessary, any such house, walled enclosure, room or place, and may either himself take into custody, or authorise such officer to take into custody all persons whom he or such officer finds therein, whether or not then actually gaming, and may seize or authorise such officer to seize all instruments of gaming and all moneys and securities for money, and articles of value, reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming, which are found therein; and may search or authorise such officer to search all parts of the house, walled enclosure, room or place, which he or such officer shall have so entered when he or such officer has reason to believe that any instruments of gaming are concealed therein, and also the persons of those whom he or such officer so takes into custody and may seize or authorise such officer to seize and take possession of all instruments of gaming found upon such search.

Whilst section 8 reads:—

"On conviction of any person for keeping or using an such common gaming house or being present therein for the purpose of gaming the convicting Magistrate may order all the instruments of gaming found therein to be destroyed and may also order all or any of the securities for money and other articles seized not being instruments of gaming to be sold and converted into money and the proceeds thereof with all moneys seized therein to be forfeited or in his discretion may order any part thereof to be returned to the persons appearing to have been severally thereunto entitled."

It will be observed at once that although slightly differing in detail, these sections correspond very closely to the sections of the Act which is applicable in this province. In the case of Emperor v. Tota (1) it was held that where persons were found gaming in a public place under circumstances to which section 13 of the Public Gambling Act (1867) was applicable although instruments of gaming, etc., could be seized by the Police, there is no authority for the confiscation of money found with the persons arrested. Section 13 of the Act applicable to the United Provinces corresponds to our section 11 relating to pla ing for money in any public market, fair street, place or thoroughfare. The case is not altogether identical with that which is now before me and some distinction is drawn between the position which exists under the provisions of section 13 and that which exists under the provisions of section 8. The difference lies apparently between the wording of the section as in the one case it deals with gaming in a common gaming house and in the other case gaming in a public place. In the case of Tulla v. Emperor (2) it was held by Mr. Justice Lindsay that in the case of men convicted under section 3 or 4 of the Public Gambling Act, 1867, the law does not contemplate the confiscation of money found on the persons of the accused. His Lordship in his decision observes:—

(1) 26 A. 270; A. W. N. (1904) 11; 1 Cr. L. J. 35.

"This case has been referred by the Sessions Judge of Saharanpur for the purposes of having an order passed by a Magistrate set aside. The Magistrate was dealing with a case under the Gambling Act and after convicting the persons who were accused before him he made an order confiscating some of the money which was found in possession of the persons concerned. The Judge, I think, is right in saying that the law does not contemplate the confiscation of the money found on the persons of the accused...I accept the recommendation of the learned Judge and direct that the order of confisacation be set aside."

The decision in this case (decided in 1919) seems to have been at variance with the decision of Mr. Justice Rafique in Emperor v. Kifayat (3) where his Lordship thought that an order ordering the confiscation of money found on the premises was a legal order. The report, however, is not very clear. It would seem, so far as I can gather, that the order of the Magistrate was directin confiscation of the money found in the house. I cannot see that it was an order ordering the confiscation of the money found on the persons of those who were in the common gaming house. The head-note* is probably incorrectly reported. For it reads :—

"A conviction under section 3 or section 4 of the Public Gambling Act, 1867, differs from a conviction under section 13, in that in the case of the latter the forfeiture of money found with the persons convicted is not lawful, but in the case of the former the forfeiture of money of securities for money found in a common gaming house is lawful."

This head-note may perhaps be a little misleading and both the decisions of Mr. Justice Rafique and Mr. Justice Lindsay may be capable of reconciliation. I have myself no doubt that in the ordinary case of money found in the possession of a person who is discovered in a gaming house such money is not capable of being forfeited. The Act provides its penalties. Everything found on the premises or on the persons there which is surely tainted with the gaming mark, that is to say, if we use the words of the section, reasonably suspected to have been used or intended to be used for the purpose of gaming, is liable to forfeiture and may or may not be returned under the discretion of the Magistrate under the provisions of section 8 but not otherwise.

The order, therefore, of the Deputy Magistrate of Dhanbad dated the 2nd December 1922 will be set aside. The money seized by the Police from the two applicants must be refunded to them.

Z. K. Rule made absolute.

(2) 54 Ind. Cas. 250; 41 A. 366; 17 A. L. J. 368; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 161; 21 Cr. L. J. 42.

(3) 49 Ind. Cas. 165; 41 A. 272; 17 A. L. J. 64; 20 Cr. L. J. 133.

*Head-Note of 41 A. 272.—[Ed.]

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REFERENCE NO. 7 OF 1922.

May 22, 1923.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir Thomas Richardson, KT.,

EMPEROR

versus

Babu BHUBANESWAR NAG, PLEADER.

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 13—Pleader paying client's money to his relation—Neglect of duty—Grossly improper conduct.

If a Pleader withdraws his client's money from Court at the instance of a relation of his client and pays the same to that relation without satisfying himself but assuming bona fide that he had authority from the client to instruct him to withdraw the money and to receive it, the Pleader is guilty of neglect of duty both towards the Court and his client but he is not guilty of grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty. [p. 183, col. 1.]

Reference under section 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879) made by the District Judge, Dacca, in the matter of Babu Bhubaneswar Nag, a Pleader practising in the Judge's Court, Dacca.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chakravarti and Surendra Nath Guha, for the Government.

Babu Prokash Chandra Pakrasi, for the Pleader.

JUDGMENT.

Sanderson, C. J.—This is a report by the learned District Judge of Dacca with regard to a Pleader of that Court.

The learned District Judge arrived at the conclusion that the Pleader had been guilty of grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty and, accordingly, he made a recommendation that the Pleader should be suspended from practice. He made a further order that pending the orders of the High Court on his report the Pleader should be suspended from practice and he should deliver up his certificate

The material facts which it is necessary to mention are shortly as follows: One Niljan Bibi in August 1918 was appointed by the Court guardian of her minor sons and daughters and, in respect of the minors' property she was directed to submit accounts. After much delay she submitted accounts; and, upon examination it appeared that she had not accounted for a sum of Rs. 269 which it was alleged had been withdrawn from the Court on behalf of Niljan Bibi in her capacity as guardian of the minor children. She was called upon to explain why that sum had not appeared in the accounts. She alleged that one Ketabdi Khan had stood surety for her with respect to the guardianship and she suspected that it was he, who had withdrawn the sum from the Court. She further alleged that she was not aware that it had been withdrawn until she was called upon to account, and that if it had been withdrawn it had been withdrawn without her knowledge or consent. Thereupon at her instance Ketabdi Khan was called upon to show why he should not be proceeded against for cheating or criminal breach of trust. Ketabdi Khan stated that apparently the money had been withdrawn by the Pleader in question, that it had been withdrawn without the authority of Ketabdi Khan or of the guardian Niljan Bibi. Thereupon, the learned Judge made an enquiry; and, the Pleader asserted that he had received authority from Niljan Bibi through Ketabdi Khan and that after the withdrawal of the money which he admitted; he had paid the sum of Rs. 230 to Ketabdi Khan on the 28th of November 1919 and that he had obtained a receipt for the same from Ketabdi Khan on behalf of the guardian and that he had paid the balance of Rs. 39 at a subsequent date, some eight or ten days afterwards.

The learned Judge after this enquiry came to the conclusion that whatever might be the position with regard to the payment of the money, the Pleader had no authority to make the application for the withdrawal of the money or to pay the money to Ketabdi Khan and he instituted proceedings under the Legal Practitioners' Act and called upon the Pleader to show cause why he should not be dismissed or suspended.

The Pleader filed an answer to those proceedings and stated that he made the application for withdrawal of the money under instructions of Ketabdi Khan who was the brother of Nilian Bibi's late husband and surety for the guardian, Niljan Bibi, and that he made over the money to Ketabdi Khan on the verbal authority of Niljan Bibi given on a previous occasion, and that Ketabdi Khan had admitted his signature on the receipt granted by him for Rs. 230 out of Rs. 269. He then referred to the fact that he had been given time for paying the money but owing to the hardness and difficulty of the times he was unable to collect money and comply with the order and he prayed for another opportunity to collect money and refund the same. The learned Judge thereupon fixed the 20th of July as the date for the hearing of the proceedings; and, on that occasion Niljan Bibi and Ketabdi Khan were examined, and we have their depositions before us. The Pleader did not appear, and he has not paid the money which he had practically admitted was due from him. The learned Vakil who appeared for the Pleader to-day stated that the reason why he had not appeared was that he made a mistake as to the date. When the learned Vakil was asked why the Pleader did not apply to the learned Judge for an opportunity of being further heard, the answer was that as the final order had been made he did not think that he should make an application to the learned Judge but that when the report came before the High Court he would put in an affidavit stating the facts on which he would rely. He has not put in such an affidavit and I am not prepared to accept the explanation which the Pleader has given for his failure to appear before the learned Judge on the 20th of July. It is an excuse which has no substance whatever.

The findings of the learned Judge are as follows:—

"In view of the contradiction between Ketabdi Khan's statement in these proceedings and the statement he made at the enquiry previously held by the Court, it must be admitted that the defendant's allegation that he paid to Ketabdi Khan and obtained from him a receipt for money and subsequently paid him the balance of Rs 39 has not been disproved." He then proceeded to discuss further the question of the receipt, and then arrived at the following finding: "This much is clear; namely, that the defendant had no authority to withdraw the money from the Court or to pay it to Ketabdi Khan and he not only deceived the Court by representing that he had authority to withdraw the money but if he paid the money to Ketabdi Khan he committed a gross breach of the duty imposed on him as a Pleader by paying the money to a person who was not entitled or authorised to receive it, and if he did not pay it to Ketabdi Khan he misappropriated the money. He has virtually admitted that he is liable to make good the money but though ample time has been given him to refund it, he has failed to do so." He then found that the Pleader was guilty of grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty.

Having regard to these findings of the learned Judge, in my opinion, we must approach this case upon the basis that the Pleader paid the Rs. 269 to Ketabdi Khan, and the question remains, whether assuming that to be a fact, there is anything in the conduct of the Pleader which would amount to grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty? There is no doubt in my mind that the Pleader ought to have satisfied himself before he made the application to the Court for the withdrawal of the money that Ketabdi Khan was acting with the authority of the guardian Niljan Bibi. He took no steps to satisfy himself that the application which he was about to make was really authorised by Niljan Bibi, and in that respect he was certainly wanting in the proper exercise of his duty not only towards the Court but also towards Niljan Bibi on whose behalf he was purporting to act.

Having obtained the money from the Court, in my judgement, the Pleader certainly ought to have satisfied himself that Ketabdi Khan had the authority of Niljan Bibi to receive the money. But he took no steps to satisfy himself upon that point, as it was clearly his duty to do. He must have known that he was dealing with a sum of money which having regard to the position of Niljan Bibi and her family, was a considerable sum of money, that it was money which she ought to have received on behalf of her minor children, and, certainly, it was his duty to take steps to satisfy himself that that money reached the hands of Niljan Bibi.

In both these respects, in my judgment, the Pleader neglected the duty which he owed not only to the Court but also the guardian Niljan Bibi.

But that is not conclusive of the question which I have to decide. The question is whether I am satisfied that he was guilty of grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty. On a previous occasion he had paid a sum of Rs. 15 to Ketabdi Khan on behalf of Niljan Bibi and taken a receipt for it from him when Niljan Bibi was not present: and, on another occasion he had paid Rs. 25 to Ketabdi Khan on behalf of Niljan Bibi in the presence of Niljan Bibi and he obtained a receipt for that from him. If we assume, as I have said we must assume, for the purpose of this judgment that the Pleader paid this sum of Rs. 269 to Ketabdi Khan, it must have been, in my opinion, upon the understanding that he, Ketabdi Khan, was authorised to receive it on behalf of Niljan Bibi. Otherwise why should he pay the money to Ketabdi Khan? I am now proceeding upon the assumption that he paid the whole of the money to Ketabdi Khan. It seems to me that if we accept that fact, the Pleader must have acted upon the assumption that Ketabdi Khan was authorised to receive the money on behalf of Niljan Bibi, and, in those circumstances, though, as I have already said he ought to have taken proper steps to satisfy himself of Ketabdi Khan's authority to receive the money, I am not prepared to hold that he was guilty of grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty within the meaning of section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act.

I have only to add that the circumstances of this case were so suspicious that they amply justified the learned Judge in taking proceedings against the Pleader, in reporting the matter to this Court and in suspending the Pleader from practice pending the orders of this Court.

We make no further order upon the report except that the order of suspension will cease from to-day.

Richardson, J.—I agree

S. D. Suspension set aside.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL, REVISION NO. 337 OF 1923.

July 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh.

UMED SINGH—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR THROUGH UCHHAB SINGH—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439—Revision—Finding of fact, whether can be interfered with—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 500—Defamation—Proof—Prosecution, duty of—Public good.

Ordinarily findings of fact are accepted by a Revisional Court as binding upon it, but it has the power to look into the evidence for itself and see if these findings can be justified by what appears upon the record. [p. 184, col. 2.]

A Revisional Court does not decide the balance of credibility between two conflicting sets of witnesses or two conflicting issues of fact, but it may be compelled to dissent from a finding of fact which is either perverse or has been arrived at contrary to well-established principles of law [p. 184, col. 2.]

In a criminal case an accused person is not to be judged by how he pleads and fails to plead in the proceeding. Much injustice may be done by applying to criminal proceedings the precise and pedantic requirements of Civil Procedure. In dealing with defamation, the Penal Code has introduced a series of provisions, adopted partly from the old Common Law, in the nature of defences but it has not altered the fundamental principle of the Criminal Law, that the complainant or prosecution must prove the accused to be guilty, or, in other words, the absence of such facts as happen to bring the case within either of the defences or exceptions laid down in the section. [p. 185, col. 1.]

A complainant in a case of a defamation is bound to prove that the statement complained of is false and that if it is true it is not for the public good. [p. 185, col. 2.]

What is for the public good is a question of fact in each case. [p. 185, col. 1.]

Where a person has been outcasted a statement made to the brotherhood that he has been outcasted is made for the public good. [p. 185, col. 2.]

Criminal revision against an order of the Sessions Judge, Kumaon, dated the 31st May 1923.

UMED SINGH V. EMPEROR.

Mr. M. L Agarwala, for the Applicant.
Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an exceptionally difficult matter to know what to do with but I have come to a sort of rough conclusion which I think will conform to the procedure laid down by this Court in other cases, and possibly in the end be more satisfactory to both parties than the present state of things. One Uchhab Singh complained before a Special Magistrate at Naini Tal that he had been slandered by the accused Umed Singh by reason of a statement made by Umed Singh to the effect that Uchhab Singh had suffered the penalty of being outcasted by reason of his social relations with one Lachhi who himself was an outcaste The matter had already assumed considerable proportions before it reached the Magistrate. Nothing else could account for the extremely elaborate judgment in which he has dealt with the matter, and although he describes it as a trifling matter (he is an Indian and ought to know better than I do, but I think that these caste questions in village communities are very far from being trifling matters) such an agitation was caused that 50 villages have been affected directly and hundred villages indirectly within a short time. It sounds more like the description of an incurable epidemic, and so serious has it become that marriage parties have been put under the ban. Yet says the Magistrate in his finding the allegation is false, and if that is so, it would seem to follow that the accused is a man of enormous influence, because it certainly is a startling thing that by the mere repetition of a false accusation which ought to be a le to be proved or disproved by the brotherhood without much difficulty, he has nonetheless been able to affect 100 villages. The mere fact that 100 villages are affected for good or for evil, confirms me in my view that it is really a public question. I can not help thinking that there is something out of the ordinary in this finding by the Magistrate. In the result, finding that the accused had uttered a false statement, which means of course false to his knowledge and if defamatory, one of the worst turns which one man can do to another in the same society, the Magistrate sentenced him to the somewhat mild punishment of one month's simple imprisonment. The matter came before the learned Sessions Judge of Kumaon in revision. Dr. Katju upholding in one sense the order of the learned Sessions Judge while at the same time he asks me to ignore it and to hold that it was made without jurisdiction because his only jurisdiction was to refer the question to this Court, has argued that the learned Judge had no right to go behind a finding of facts. I cannot agree with that statement framed in that bold way. In the ordinary course of things findings of fact are accepted by a Revisional Court as binding upon it, but revision would be an idle farce if the Revisional Court had not the power, which has been exercised hundred, possibly one thousand, times throughout the High Courts in India, to look into the evidence for itself and see if these findings can be justified by what appears upon the record. A Revisional Court does not decide the balance of credibility between two conflicting sets of witnesses or two conflicting issues of fact but it may be compelled to dissent from a finding of fact which is either perverse or has been arrived at contrary to well-established principles of law. In this case so far as the firding is concerned, it does not seem that the learned Judge was abundantly justified. He says that it seems that in January Uchhab Singh was outcasted, and Dr. M. L. Agarwala for the applicants, has drawn my attention to a written panchayatnama signed by several of the brotherhood, by which the brotherhood decided that he was outcaste, and did it in January, whereas the statement complained of made by the accused, was not until March. But though the finding of fact by the Sessions Judge on this documentary evidence seems prima facie justified, it does not seem to have been arrived at according to law. The learned Judge did not issue notice, never heard the complainant, and having his attention drawn to this document, assumed against the complainant that he had been outcaste, although in all human probability the only reason why the complainant brought the charge at all was to clear himself and stop these ugly statements being made about him So that the order of the learned Judge; although in one sense in favour of the complainant becomes an injustice, because it overrules the Magistrate on fundamental issue of fact without giving the other side a chance of being heard. But further, the order of the learned Sessions Judge meets with my strong disapproval on a totally different ground. In vulgar parlance he seems to have given each party a slap in the face. Turning to the accused the learned Judge has said that he did not plead justification before the Magistrate, and that therefore, although the statement about the complainant having been outcasted might be true he has non-the-less got to go to jail. A touch of humour is added by the fact that the accused has already gone to jail, has served the full term of imprisonment and that what I am doing is really almost idle and superfluous. But I dissent totally from the proposition that in a criminal case an accused person is to be judged by how he pleads or fails to plead in the proceeding. Much injustice may be done by applying to criminal proceedings the precise and pedantic requirements of Civil Procedure. It is quite true that in dealing with defamation, the Penal Code has introduced a series of provisions adopted partly from the old Common Law in the nature o defences, but it has not altered the fundamental principle of the Criminal Law, that the complainant or prosecution must prove the accused to be guilty, or in other words the absence of such facts as happen to bring the case within either of the defences or exceptions laid down in the section. There is no such language as pleadings in a Criminal Court. The subsequent conduct or statement of an accused person may affect his credibility. It cannot destroy his right, assuming him to be an innocent person, until his guilt has been established without any reasonable doubt. The view of the learned Judge that the accused did not plead justification is in this case doubly fallacious, because in fact the Magistrate had framed an issue on that very question and had decided it adversely to the accused. But in my opinion the complainant was bound to prove that the statement was false, and further that if it was true, it was not for the public good. What is for the public good is a question of fact, but until I am corrected I should hold that if a person really was outcasted, a statement to the members of the brotherhood that he was outcasted, was the kind of statement contemplated by the expression for the public good. So long as caste prevails, and it must be remembered that it is sanctified by religious and by racial tradition going back for centuries and forming one of the fundamental characteristics of social life in India, any attempt to minimise, ignore or brush on one side existing regulations, existing sanctions or respect for existing decisions must be regarded from the Indian point of view as contrary to the public good. If it is not from the Indian point of view for the public good, caste ought to be abolished. It seems to me that there is no way out of that dilemma, and therefore to justify this conviction it was necessary to hold, not merely that the statement was untrue, but that if, as the Sessions Judge thought, it was true that it was a statement not honestly made for the benefit of the brotherhood. Unfortunately that does not conclude the difficulties raised by this order of the Sessions Judge. Dr. Katju himself, who appeared for the complainant to defend it, while at the same time somewhat illogically asking me to ignore it, pointed out to me that it was passed without jurisdiction. Strictly speaking he is right. On the matter coming before the Sessions Judge under section 435, his duty, if any question arose which he thought ought to be further dealt with, was to refer the matter to the High Court under section 433. It may be said in answer to this that the learned Judge did not think that there was anything to refer, because ex parte he was so satisfied with the Magistrate's order. But the difficulty in taking that view is that, as I have pointed out, even the learned Judge has fallen into two fundamental errors, and one of them is a finding of fact adverse to the complainant without a hearing. My attention has been drawn to the important decision in the case of Sharif Ahmad v. Qabul Singh (1), also a case of defamation and a case having an important bearing on the case now before me, in which the Chief Justice has approved the following dicta of Mr. Justice Piggott.

(1) 63 Ind. Cas. 875; 19 A. L. J. 425; 3 U. P. L. R. (A.) 77; 43 A. 497; 22 Cr. L. J. 715.

PARSHOTTAM JAGJIVAN v. EMPEROR.

"It is obviously advisable that this Court should make it a rule of practice that a person dissatisfied with any order or proceeding in a Court of inferior jurisdiction to that of the Sessions Judge or of the District Magistrate should, in the first instance, obtain the opinion of the Sessions Judge, or of the District Magistrate on the matter in question, before invoking the jurisdiction of this Court. Such a procedure tends to prevent the time of this Court from being wasted over frivolous or unsustainable applications. It also ensures the further advantage that, if the matter eventually comes before this Court, it comes upon a record containing an expression of opinion by a Court of superior jurisdiction, such as that of the Sessions Judge or of the District Magistrate." The value of that practice is of course entirely discounted if the opinion of the Sessions Judge therein mentioned as desirable to be laid before the High Court, is arrived at by an exparte finding. The result is that owing to a chapter of accidents I really am unable to come to a satisfactory conclusion in this case. One party wants me to quash the order, the other party wants me to ignore it. It struck me that I might deal with it by certain dicta and leave the accused in this case to repeat the slander and the complainant to fight it out with him in the Civil Court, where the matter can be finally and more satisfactorily determined, but that might be a hardship on the parties who possibly are not anxious to spend large sums on litigation, and as they have chosen this tribunal, I think it more satisfactory to ensure that they get a full adjudication in it. Holding myself therefore empowered to deal with it with a free hand, I allow the revision and I refer the whole matter back to the learned Judge to deal with the original revision application made to him by the accused according to law after hearing both parties and going into the evidence, and referring any question to the High Court which he thinks fit to do, if on a re-consideration of the matter he should come to the conclusion that the conviction of the accused was not according to law.

Z. K. Application allowed.
Case remanded to Sessions Judge.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION FOR REVISION No. 48 OF 1923.

April 26, 1923.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Kajiji.

PARSHOTTAM JAGJIVAN—PETITIONER
versus
EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act (I of 1918), s. 1 (3)—Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), s. 48 (f)—Bye-Laws of Surat Municipality—Bye-Law No. 4, whether ultra vires*—Information for purposes of census.*

Under section 48 (f) of the Bombay District Municipal Act, read with section 1 (3) of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act, a Municipality has power, with the previous sanction of the Governor-in-Council, to make bye-laws so far as they are not inconsistent with the Act, among other things, with reference to the taking of a census within the Municipal District. [p. 187, col. 1.]

Bye-law No. 4 of the Bye-laws of the Surat Municipality is not ultra vires, and a person who refuses to supply the information required under the bye-law is liable to the penalty provided in bye-law No. 5. [p. 187, col. 2.]

Criminal application against conviction and sentence passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate at Surat.

Mr. Bahadurji, (with him Mr. M. B. Dave), for the Applicant.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, C.J.—In this case the petitioner seeks to have the order of conviction against him revised. The accused has been convicted by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Surat of refusing to furnish information required by the Municipality under bye-law 4 framed under section 48 (f) of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901. The Municipality called upon the petitioner to furnish information which they required with regard to children of school-going age and they purported to do so under the said bye-law. The petitioner refused to furnish the information. Consequently he was prosecuted for a breach of this bye-law and he was sentenced under bye-law 5 to pay a fine of Rs. 2.

Then he made an application to the Sessions Court with a view to have this matter referred to this Court. But the learned Sessions Judge declined to refer the case to this Court.

The present application is made to this Court to have the conviction and sentence set aside. The application is supported on two grounds.

First, it is urged that bye-law 4 is invalid in so far as it requires information with regard to the census of children of school-going age for the purpose of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act, 1918. It appears that in 1919 under section 3 of the Act it was declared that the provisions of that Act would be applicable to the Municipal District constituted under the Municipal Act. The Government have framed and published rules under section 18 of the Act which confers powers upon them to frame such rules for the purposes of the Bombay Primary Education Act of 1918. It is urged that as the Local Government have got powers to frame rules under this Act of 1918, the Municipality cannot have any power to frame bye-laws under the Municipal Act for the purpose of carrying out their obligations under the Primary Education Act. That, however, does not appear to me to be right because it is provided by section 1 (3) of the Act of 1918 that "it shall be construed as part of and supplementary to the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, hereinafter called "the Principal Act." Under section 48 (f) of the Principal Act the Municipality have the power, with the previous sanction of the Governor in Council, to make bye-laws so far as they are not inconsistent with the Act, among other things, with reference to the taking of a census within the Municipal District. Bye-law 4 provides:—

"Whenever a census is undertaken by the Municipality or the Schools Committee every occupier of a building in Municipal limits shall on demand supply to the best of his knowledge and ability to any officer authorised in this behalf by the Municipality all information that such officer may require of him either orally or in writing in a printed form supplied by the Municipality with regard to himself and all occupants of the same building who are either members of or servants in the family &c."

It is clear that this bye-law is framed so as to meet the requirements of Bombay Act I of 1918. Under that Act read with the rules framed by the Local Government under that Act it is obligatory upon the Municipality to keep a register of the children of school-going age and with a view to fulfil that obligation it was open to the Municipality to frame a bye-law which would enable them to take a census of such children within the Municipal area. In order to keep such a register certain information would be necessary and the Municipality were entitled under this clause of the principal Act to take the power to demand such information from persons living within the Municipal area. The bye-law does not appear to me to be in any way inconsistent with the principal Act or with the rules made by the Local Government under Act I of 1918. The powers of the Municipality to frame bye-laws under section 48 of the principal Act are not in any way curtailed by the powers conferred under section 18 of Act I of 1918 upon the Local Government to frame rules for the purposes of the Act. I am unable to accept the contention urged on behalf of the petitioner that the bye-law is invalid.

The second point urged in support of the application is that by a resolution of the Municipality dated January 12, 1922, the Act of 1918 ceased to have operation within this Municipal area. It does not appear, however, that the resolution of the Municipality rescinding the prior Notification of 1919 was published in the Local Government Gazette, nor does it appear to have received the previous sanction of the Local Government. Under section 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act (I of 1904) the Municipality would have the power of rescinding the Notification published in 1919 subject to the sanction and conditions, to which the first Notification was subject. That means that it would be open to the Municipality to cancel their previous Notification with the previous sanction of the Local Government and by publication in the Local Government Gazette as provided by section 3 of the Act of 1918. It is not suggested in the course of the argument that the resolution of the Municipality dated January 12, 1922, ever received the sanction of the Local Government: and it is conceded that it was never published in the Bombay Government Gazette. Therefore, the Act of 1918 was in operation in this area, at the date the information in question was demanded from the petitioner. This contention also must be disallowed. Section 16 of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act of 1918, to which reference has been made in the course of the argument, and under which the Local Government have the power to cancel a Notification under section 3 of the Act, has no application to the facts of this case.

We discharge the Rule.

Kajiji, J.—I agree.

Rule discharged.

Z. K.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 379 OF 1923.

July 19, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh.

LALLU RAM—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Public nuisance—Annoyance, proof of.

In order to establish a charge of committing a nuisance in a public place to the annoyance of residents or passengers in the locality, it is necessary to prove that somebody was annoyed. But annoyance to one person is sufficient and all that is required is to show that the act complained of was done in such a way as to annoy the person who complained of it. [p. 188, col. 2.]

When a public servant, like a Municipal employee, whose duty it is to look after the cleanliness of the streets, sees anybody easing himself in a public place or street he is sure to be annoyed. [p. 188, col. 2.]

Criminal reference made by the Sessions Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 9th of July 1913.

Mr. K. Varma, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This case has been referred to the High Court really for the decision of the question whether it is necessary, in order to establish a charge of committing a nuisance in a public place to the annoyance of residents or passengers in the locality, to prove that somebody was annoyed. The Act certainly says so, and I do not see how anybody can seriously doubt it. But annoyance to one person is sufficient, and even annoyance itself is a question of degree, and if a public servant, like a Municipal employee whose duty it is to look after the cleanliness of the streets sees anybody easing himself in a public place or street he is not unlikely to be annoyed. When you come to think of it, it is his business to be annoyed. He ought to be annoyed. A person trying to keep the streets clean who sees anybody easing himself, would be very wrong if he was not annoyed. In fact his employers would have every right to be annoyed with him, if he was not and, therefore, if he reports it in his official capacity and gives evidence of the act, it is a reasonable inference to draw that he was annoyed. Whether the jamadar in this particular instance attempted to define and put into precise language the degree of annoyance which he felt, does not appear, because the case was summarily tried. But it is reasonable to suppose that he was very much annoyed, and that if he was pressed on the question he would have said so. It turns out that between the offender and the jamadar there has been a terrible feud about the refusal to sell cloth on credit, and the jamadar according to the defence, harboured feelings of anger and indignation towards the offender. When one comes to picture the scene, if it is correct that in the course of his patrolling the streets in the interests of health and cleanliness this jamadar, armed with the authority of the law, saw this individual, against whom he had this grudge, committing an act of nature in one of the very places which was calculated to injure the public interest which the jamadar had to look after, one can imagine that his annoyance was very great indeed. It has not been found to be fictitious annoyance or mala fide, but the

In re RAMBHARTHI HIRABHARTHI

Magistrate has found that the case has been proved. I must assume that he meant what he said and that he was satisfied that the jamidar was sufficiently annoyed. I agree with the Sessions Judge that the matter is of importance, but it seems to me to have been hardly worth while referring it to the High Court, because, although every one must agree with the Sessions Judge that an ordinary person would consider the act objectionable, it is impossible to say, when the section requires the act to be one done to the annoyance of the public, that annoyance must not be proved. But it is sufficient if one person is annoyed, and as the act complained of can hardly be proved except by some person who comes forward to complain, the annoyance is almost necessarily involved in the complaint. It, therefore, comes to this, that all that is required is that the act was done in such a way as to annoy a person who complained of it. The proceeding in the Court below before the Sessions Judge was revision, and I am not at liberty to consider any point really except that referred to me. Mr. Kamlakant Verma has also contended that a drain by the side of the road does not come within the description contained in the Act of an open place. That is a question of fact. It was not raised in the Court below, and presumably a drain by the side of the road is not only in an open place but in a thoroughfare, which is sufficient. It would appear that there must have been an open place to enable the jamadar to see the offence. I merely, therefore, hold that the conviction was one according to law, and I direct the record to be returned to the Sessions Judge.

Z. K. Record returned.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATIONS FOR REVISION NOS. 55, 58 AND 59 OF 1923.

May 30, 1923.

Present :—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kajiji.

In re RAMBHARTHI HIRABHARTHI —APPLICANT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 4, 182, 193, 211—Oaths Act (X of 1873), ss. 4, 14—Extra-territorial jurisdiction—Offences committed by Indian subject in relation to proceedings in Foreign Court—False information—Perjury—False charge—Trial in British India—Court in Native State whether "Court"—Jurisdiction.

Section 4 of the Penal Code confers certain extra-territorial jurisdiction in respect of acts committed outside British India by certain classes of persons including the Indian subjects of His Majesty : but it does not affect the nature of the act for which they are liable. The act alleged must amount to an offence punishable under the Code. [p. 191, col. 1.]

There is no provision in the Penal Code which constitutes it an offence to lodge a false complaint in a Foreign Court or to give false evidence before such Court where the oath is not administered under the provisions of law in force in British India, but under the law of that State in relation to proceedings before that Court. [p. 191, col. 1.]

Though the Oaths Act extends to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with His Majesty so far as regards the subjects of His Majesty, a Court in a Native State cannot be treated as a Court within the meaning of sections 4 and 14 of the Act, in relation to proceedings which were held before that Court entirely under the law of that State, and which had nothing to do with any proceeding in British India or under the law in force in British India. [p. 191, col. 2.]

While perjury before the Court of a Native State by an Indian subject of His Majesty would be as objectionable as perjury before a Court in British India, it is not punishable under section 193 of the Penal Code, where it is committed in a Foreign Court in relation to entirely foreign proceedings. [p. 191, col. 2.]

The criminal proceeding and false charge within the meaning of section 211 of the Penal Code mean proceedings and charge in British India, where the Penal Code is in force; criminal proceedings taken and a false charge made before a Court in a Native State are not within the scope of the section. [p. 192, col. 1.]

Criminal applications against an order passed by the City Magistrate, Surat.

Mr M. B. Dave, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ratanlal Ranchhoddas, for Mr. H. V. Divatia, for the three Opponents.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

In re RAMBHARTHI HIRABHARTHI.

JUDGMENT.—The applicant, who is the original complainant, filed information in the Court of the City Magistrate of Surat against the opponent in each of these three applications charging him with offences punishable under sections 182, 193 and 211, Indian Penal Code, or some of them. The acts complained of, viz., the giving of false information to a public servant, the giving of false evidence and falsely charging the complainant with an offence, were all committed at Vyara, in the Baroda territory and before a public servant or the Court of the Baroda State at Vyara. The complainant and the accused in these cases are Native Indian subjects of His Majesty. They had gone from Surat to a place of pilgrimage called Unani in the Baroda territory in connection with the annual fair held there in April 1921. The accused Nagindas is said to have entrusted his clothes with certain articles including cash to the complainant there. The said accused prosecuted the complainant in the Vyara Court of the Baroda State on a charge of criminal breach of trust punishable under the Penal Code of the Baroda State in connection with the said entrustment, and the accused in the two companion cases gave evidence against the complainant; but the complainant was acquitted. It is in connection with these proceedings that these accused persons are said to have given false information and false evidence and to have made a false charge in the Court of that State.

The complainant is stated to have obtained the sanction of that Court as required by the rules of procedure in that State for prosecuting these accused persons in respect of the offences as constituted by the said acts punishable under the Baroda law. The parties are Indian subjects of His Majesty and ordinarily live in British India. The complainant seeks to prosecute the accused in British India in respect of the acts committed outside British India. Though at the date of the complaints the necessary certificate, of the Political Agent under section 188, Criminal Procedure Code, was not obtained, the complainant has subsequently obtained it. The learned Magistrate made the following order on December 22, 1922:—

"Return to the complainant for presenting the complaint before the proper Magistrate, as the offence has been committed completely within Baroda State limits: section 201, Criminal Procedure Code."

It does not appear as to whether the learned Magistrate made this order simply because no certificate under section 188, Criminal Procedure Code, was produced or he made it as no offences punishable under the Indian Penal Code were disclosed We are now informed by the Government Pleader that the order was made as no certificate under section 188, Criminal Procedure Code, was produced at the time. The complainant applied to the Sessions Court for a revision of this order. By this time he had obtained the necessary certificate under section 188. The Sessions Judge was of opinion that in view of the certificate under section 188, the complaints could be proceeded with but he declined to interfere as he thought that he had no jurisdiction to revise an order under section 201, Criminal Procedure Code. Accordingly he dismissed the applications. The complainant has now applied to this Court to have the order of the Magistrate returning the complaint set aside and for a direction that the complaint as originally filed be proceeded with. If the only difficulty in the way of the applicant was the absence of the certificate under section 188, Criminal Procedure Code, at the date of the complaints, we should allow these applications as the certificate has been obtained subsequently. But there is a fundamental difficulty in his way.

On the facts as alleged in the complaints the question is whether any offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code is disclosed. If no such offence is disclosed, it is obvious that we cannot properly direct the complaints to be proceeded with. This question was not raised in the lower Courts and does not appear to have been considered by them. As it arises, however, on the allegations in the complaint we cannot ignore it. We considered it desirable to ask the Goverment Pleader to appear and we have now heard full arguments on behalf of the Crown, the complainant and the accused on the interesting question whether the acts alleged to have been committed by the accused at Vyara are punishable under the Indian Penal Code. I am of opinion that these acts do not constitute any offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code.

Section 4 of the Indian Penal Code is relied upon as showing that the provisions of the Code apply to any offence committed by any Native Indian subject of His Majesty without and beyond British India and that the word 'offence' includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India would, be punishable under the Code. This section provides that any Indian subject of His Majesty is liable to be punished for an offence punishable under the Code committed outside British India and that the 'offence' includes any act committed outside British India which would be punishable under the Code if committed in British India. It gives certain extra-territorial jurisdiction in respect of acts committed outside British India by certain classes of persons including the Indian subjects of His Majesty: but it does not affect the natuie of the act. The act alleged must amount to an offence punishable under the Code. There is no provision in the Code which constitutes it an offence to lodge a false complaint in a Foreign Court or to give false evidence before such Court where the oath is not administered under the provisions of law in force in British India, but under the law of that State in relation to proceedings before that Court. All the acts attributed to the accused are said to have been done either before the Police Officer or the Court at Vyara with reference to proceedings which were held according to the law of the Baroda State. For instance, in this case, no offence under section 182, Indian Penal Code, can be made out as it is not suggested that false information was given to a 'public servant' as defined by the Indian Penal Code, quite apart from the consideration that it was given without and beyond British India. As regards the offence under section 193, Indian Penal Code, it is not suggested that the accused were legally bound by oath, i. e., oath administered under the provisions of law in force in British India or by any express provision of law, i. e., law in force in British India, to state the truth before the Vyara Court. The provisions of the Indian Oaths Act cannot apply to the statements in question. We have considered the provisions of sections 1, 4, 5 and 14 of the Indian Oaths Act as bearing on this question. Though the Act extends to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with His Majesty so far as regards the subjects of His Majesty, the Vyara Court cannot be treated as a Court within the meaning of sections 4 and 14 of the Act, in relation to proceedings which were held before that Court entirely under the law of that State, and which had nothing to do with any proceedings in British India or under the law in force in British India. The oaths were administered to the accused persons as witnesses by the Vyara Court under the law obtaining in the Baroda territory. While perjury before that Court by an Indian subject of His Majesty would be as objectionable as perjury before a Court in British India, it is not punishable under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code, when it is committed in a Foreign Court in relation to entirely foreign proceedings.

As to the charge under section 211, Indian Penal Code, the accused Nagindas is said to have instituted criminal proceedings at Vyara against the complainant and to have falsely charged him before the Vyara Court. The criminal proceedings and false charges contemplated by section 211 must mean proceedings instituted and charges made according to the provisions of criminal law in force in British India. The section occurs in a Chapter relating to offences against public justice which under the Indian Penal Code must mean public justice in British India unless it is expressly otherwise provided.

In the course of the argument it was conceded that it would be difficult to make out any offence punishable under sections 182 and 193; but it is contended that the expressions "institutes any criminal proceedings" and "falsely charges" in section 211 are general, and should be interpreted as including criminal proceedings and false charges before a Foreign Court like the Vyara Court. No authority is cited in support of this proposition: and on general rules of construction it seems to us that the criminal proceedings and false charges within the meaning of section 211 must mean proceedings and charges in British India, where the Indian Penal Code is in force, though it is conceivable that a person may be able to institute such proceedings or make such a charge while he is actually in foreign territory. The criminal proceedings taken and the false charge made before the Vyara Court are not within the scope of the section.

We have not overlooked the fact that the complainant also is an Indian subject of His Majesty, and that the offence of criminal breach of trust charged against him before the Vyara Court would be an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code in virtue of the provisions of section 4 of the Code. But that fact does not alter the nature of the proceedings before the Vyara Court nor does it affect in any way the nature of the acts alleged against the accused in the present proceedings.

No other provision of law has been referred to as justifying these proceedings before a Magistrate in British India on the allegations in the complaint.

We cannot, therefore, order these complaints to be further proceeded with.

We discharge the Rules.

Z. K. Rules discharged.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE NO. 9 OF 1923.

March 13, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT

versus

SARJU PRASAD—ACCUSED.

Criminal trial —Conviction under repealed Act —Offence punishable under repealing Act as well —Conviction, legality of.

The fact that a conviction is recorded under an Act which has been repealed is not vital and does not vitiate the conviction, if the offence is punishable under the repealing Act as well.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Gonda. under section 438, Criminal Procedure Code.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

Mr. H. K. Ghosh, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—There is no reason to interfere with the order of the Deputy Magistrate. The learned Sessions Judge appears to have made this reference under a misapprehension. It is certain that the applicant Sarju Prasad's license for the vending of poisons was cancelled in 1922. The first order was passed by the District Magistrate on 13th January in the belief that the license for 1922 had not been issued to Sarju Prasad. He ordered that the license shall not be renewed for 1922. The Police then pointed out that the license for 1922 had already been issued to him whereupon, on 19th January 1922, the District Magistrate ordered the cancellation of the license. Clearly, therefore, the possession of poisons by Sarju Prasad on 22nd November 1922 was without a license and punishable under section 6 (1) (a) of Act XII of 1919. The Deputy Magistrate overlooked the fact that Act I of 1904 had been replaced by the Poisons Act of 1919 and recorded a conviction under the Act of 1904. This error, however, is not vital and does not vitiate the conviction recorded by the Deputy Magistrate. As I have pointed out the applicant was liable to punishment under the Act which is operative at present. The record shall be returned.

N. H. Record returned.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO CO., LTD. v. ALBERT BONNAN.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL CIVIL NO. 100 OF 1922 IN SUIT NO. 1610 OF 1922.

April 10, 1923.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, KT., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir Thomas Richardson, KT.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO COMPANY, LTD. —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

ALBERT BONNAN AND ANOTHER— DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Trade mark — Law applicable — Assignment of trade mark—Manufacturer reserving right of manufacture— Right of sale, assignment of— Exclusive right of sale—Reputation in goods— Passing-off action—Common Law right—Injunction.

In India there is no system of registration nor is there any provision for a statutory title to a trade mark, so that the rights in respect of trade marks must be determined in accordance with the principle of the English Common Law. [p. 198, col. 2; p. 199, col. 1.]

British American Tobacco Company Limited v. Mahboob Bux, 7 Ind. Cas. 279; 38 C. 110 at p. 117; 15 C. W. N. 280, referred to.

A trade mark is a mode of warranting the origin of the goods, to which it is attached, or their trade association, and it is of the essence of a trade mark that its representation should be true. In this is to be found the true test of the assignability of a trade mark. [p. 199, col. 1.]

The title to a trade mark cannot be assigned or devolve in gross, but unless the mark connotes a personal connection between its original owner and the goods in connection with which it is used, it may be assigned and transmitted with the good-will of the business in such goods. It cannot be assigned when it is divorced from its place of origin, or when in the hands of a transferee it would indicate something different to what it indicated in the hands of a transferor. [p. 199, col. 1; p. 200, col. 1.]

Singer Manufacturing Company v. Wilson, (1875) 8 Ch. D. 434 at p. 455; 45 L. J. Ch. 490; 34 L. T. 858; 24 W. R. 1023 and Pinto v. Badman, (1891) 8 Pat. Cas. 181 at p. 194, referred to.

A passing-off action is one in which the plaintiff alleges that the defendant is injuring him in his property by wrongfully intercepting trade which, but for the defendant's wrongful acts, would come to the plaintiff in his business. It is an action in which the plaintiff alleges that the defendant so gets up his goods as that the public, intending to buy the plaintiff's goods, are induced to buy the defendant's goods, in the belief that they are buying the plaintiffs goods. The plaintiff's goods need not be goods manufactured by the plaintiff. They may be goods which he purchases, or which he imports, or otherwise acquires and which he sells under some 'get-up' which conveys that they are goods which, whether made, imported, or sold by him, carry with them the advantage of the reputation that the plaintiff is responsible for their quality or their character [p. 197, col. 1.]

The doctrine of passing-off cannot be so extended as to say that where the sole representation is that the goods are the goods of a particular manufacturer, it should be held that that carries with it a representation that they have come through any particular channel; or, putting it conversely, that any one who is injured by the passing-off of goods as the goods of the third party can bring an action. [p. 198, col 2.]

Dental Manufacturing Company Limited v. C. DeTrey & Co., (1912) 3 K. B. 76 at pp. 87, 88; 81 L. J. K. B. 1162; 107 L. T. 111; 29 R. P C. 617; 28 T. L. R. 408; relied on.

A manufacturer, while reserving the right to manufacture and sell his goods with their well-established trade mark, cannot assign the sole right to sell those goods in any particular place so as to enable the purchaser to restrain members of the public from selling in that place goods which the manufacturer himself has manufactured and sold to them without any restriction upon their sale in that place. [p 200, col. 2; p. 201, col. 1.]

The mere fact that a seller has popularised certain goods does not prevent others having the same goods from following him into the same market and competing with him there, where the reputation of the goods is the reputation of the manufacturer and not of the seller. [p. 204, col. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Pearson.

Mr. L. P. E. Pugh (with him Mr. W. W. K. Page), for the Appellants.

Mr. Langford James (with him Mr. F. R. Surtta), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Sanderson, C. J.—This is an appeal from the judgment of my learned brother Mr. Justice Pearson which was delivered on the 18th of July 1922, whereby he dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The suit was brought for a declaration that the plaintiff Company was the sole owner in India, Burma and Aden of a certain brand, trade mark, trade name; covering, wrapper or label and the name W. D. and H. O. Wills; and that the plaintiff Company was solely entitled within the said limits to the exclusive right of user thereof and that it was solely entitled to import into and sell in India; Burma and Aden tobacco and cigarettes bearing, or contained in tins, boxes, packets, coverings, wrappers or labels or other receptacles bearing, the said brand, trade mark; trade name; covering; wrapper or label or the said name. The plaintiff Company also asked for an injunction and damages against the defendants.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO CO., LTD. v. ALBERT BONMAN.

The trade mark brand and names are described in paragraph 6 of the plaint, and a specimen of the wrapper or covering used by the plaintiff Company is Exhibit A which is to be found at page 243-A of the paper book. A specimen of the wrapper or covering on the cigarettes imported by the defendant is to be found at page 245-A of the paper-book and is marked Exhibit C.

There is no dispute as to the main facts of the case, and they may be taken from my learned brother's judgment at pages 251 and 252, as follows—

"The cigarettes manufactured by W. D. and H. O. Wills of Bristol and London were very well known in the English market and were known in India long before 1902 by which time they had acquired a very high reputation in the Indian market also. One of their brands was the 'Gold Flake' brand used on cigarettes manufactured by them from Virginian tobacco.

"In 1902 there was a fight between the large American and English tobacco concerns or combines, the upshot of which was that they came to an arrangement among themselves :—The Imperial Tobacco Company of Great Britian and Ireland was thenceforward to confine its trade to the British Isles, and the American Tobacco Company to America while the British American Tobacco Company, Limited, was formed to carry on the trade throughout the rest of the world, using the same marks and manufacturing in England or America. The importation and sale in India was in the first instance let in the hands of a Company called the British American Tobacco Company (India), Limited.

"In 1910 the Imperial Tobacco Company of India Limited, the present plaintiff, was formed to take over the Indian business from the last named Company; and has since been importing and selling 'Gold Flake' cigarettes, as well as others of W. D. and H. O. Wills brands. Ninety per cent. of its shares are held by the British American Tobacco Company.

"These 'Gold Flake' cigarettes were at first, about 1907, imported to India in tins of 50, since 1911 they have been imported also in paper-packets of 10, the cigarettes being invariably manufactured in England. The plaintiff Company has also factories of its own in India, at one of which, at Bangalore in Southern India, it manufactures from Virginia tobacco, imported for the purpose, a cigarette which is placed on the market in tins of 50 and packets of 10 as 'Gold Flake' Magnums, the 'Gold Flake' label and get-up being used with the addition that they are made 'in India.'

"Between 1910 and 1922 the imports of 'Gold Flake' cigarettes into India by the plaintiff Company amounted to 128,000,000, in the tins of 50 and to 8,770,000, in the packets of 10. Of these last, however, some 7,043,000 were imported in a single year 1919, and were largely exported again to Mesopotamia and other places for Army use.

'So that, with allowance made for that, the proportion of imports and sales of the packets is extremely small as compared with the tins."

On the 1st September 1910 an agreement was made between the British American Tobacco Company, Limited, therein called the British American Company, the British American Tobacco Company, (India), Limited, therein called the "Indian Company," and the plaintiff Company called the "Imperial Company." The recitals were as follows —

"Whereas the British American Tobacco Company have for some time past carried on the business of manufacturers of tobacco and its products for India Burma and Aden and elsewhere and are the owners of the good-will and trade marks in various parts of the world including India, Burma and Aden And Whereas the British American Company have agreed to sell and the Imperial Company have agreed to purchase the business good-will and trade marks now owned by British American Company in India, Burma and Aden for the sum of one million five hundred thousand (Rs. 1,500,000) rupees And Whereas the Indian Company have for some time past carried on business in India Burma and Aden as sellers and distributors of the products of British American Company and others And Whereas the Indian Company have agreed to sell and the Imperial Company have agreed to purchase the business and good-will and trademarks now owned or used by the Indian Company together with the furniture in the various offices or depots."

And the material clauses were :—

"1. British American Company hereby sells and the Imperial Company hereby purchases for the sum of one million five hundred thousand rupees (Rs. 1,500,000):—

"(a) All those the good-will business rights and other assets in connection with or appertaining to the business of British American Company in India, Burma and Aden and the brand or brands trade marks or trade names in connection therewith formulæ the recipes of preparation treatment and manufacture and in particular the sole right and title to use in India Burma and Aden the name of British American Company and the names of firms and companies acquired by British American Company heretofore and used by them in connection with their business in and for India Burma and Aden. The Imperial Company shall further be entitled to the redemption fund set up by British American Company against the liability to redeem coupons and the Imperial Company shall assume and take over the liability to redeem such coupons as and when they become due or redeemable.

"2. The India Company hereby sells and the Imperial Company hereby purchases :—

"(a) The good-will business rights or other assets in connection with or appertaining to the business of the India Company in India Burma and Aden and the brand or brands trade marks or trade names in connection therewith formulæ and recipes of preparation treatment and manufacture and in particular the sole right and title to use in India Burma and Aden the name of the India Company and the leases and tenancies of the buildings acquired by the India Company and all rights and interests therein.

"3. The Imperial Company undertakes and agrees with the British American Company as follows :—

"That they will while they or any company or firm in which they may have a controlling interest are carrying on the business of manufacturing goods of the class required they or either of them will supply British American Company (on terms to be agreed upon) with such of the manufactured goods as British American Company shall require for consumption outside India, Burma and Aden.

"That they will not at any time either solely or jointly or as a manager or agent of any other person or persons company or firm or as a shareholder in any other company or otherwise be engaged or concerned in the business of a manufacturer of or in any dealing or trading in tobacco or its products or tobacconists' goods beyond the limits of India, Burma and Aden unless at the request or with the consent of British American Company.

"The Imperial Company will not, nor will any firm or firms over which they shall have controlling interest, without the consent in writing of the British American Company use any of the trade marks brands or other rights or licenses dealt with under this agreement upon or in connection with any goods except such goods be as nearly as circumstances permit of similar nature whereon or in connection wherewith the same are now or may from time to time be used by British American Company outside India Burma and Aden.

"4. The British American Company undertakes and agrees with the Imperial Company as follows :—

"That they will from time to time supply the orders of the Imperial Company and any company or firm in which Imperial Company shall have a controlling interest all goods for the time being manufactured by British American Tobacco Company outside India, Burma and Aden reasonably required by Imperial Company for consumption in India, Burma and Aden and to charge therefor such a price as shall be agreed upon between them from time to time.

"That they will not save as herein excepted and save as shareholders in Imperial Company or their successors or any company or firm in which they shall have a controlling interest carry on business in India or Burma or Aden either solely or jointly with or as manager or agent for any other company or person or persons or directly or indirectly carry on or be engaged or concerned or interested in the business of manufacture or in any dealing or trading in tobacco or its products or tobacconist's goods within India, Burma and Aden (except as shareholders in Peninsular Tobacco Company Limited or their successors or assigns or except as may be permitted by the Imperial Company) and except that nothing herein shall prevent British American Company from being shareholders in any company exporting goods to India, Burma or Aden provided that (subject to any existing obligation) British American Company shall use their best endeavours to procure the Imperial Company as agents in India Burma and Aden for the sale of any such goods there.

"6. The India Company hereby undertakes and agrees with the Imperial Company that they will not save as herein excepted carry on business in India or Burma or Aden either solely or jointly with or as managers or agents for any other company or person or persons or directly or indirectly carry on or be engaged or concerned or interested in the business of manufacture or in any dealing or trading in tobacco or its products or tobacconists' goods within India or Burma or Aden.

"13 Each of the parties hereto shall enter into execute and do any further assurances or anything necessary for the carrying out of this agreement."

On the 27th of April 1922 there was an Indenture executed. The parties to that Indenture were the British American Tobacco Company Limited (called "the vendors") of the one part and the Imperial Tobacco Company of India Limited (called the purchasers) of the other part: and, it was recited that "Whereas the vendors sometime since agreed to sell and the purchasers agreed to purchase the said business carried on by the vendors in India Burma together with the trade marks used therein, but no specific assignment of the good-will or the said business and the said trade marks has been executed and whereas the consideration for the said sale was the sum of one million five hundred thousand rupees the receipt of which the vendors hereby acknowledge and whereas the purchasers have requested the vendors to execute this assignment for the purpose of effectually vesting in the purchasers the said good-will and trade marks: Now this Indenture witnesseth that in pursuance of the said agreement and for the consideration aforesaid the vendors hereby assign unto the purchasers all that the good-will of the business of the vendors so as aforesaid carried on by them in India and Burma together with all trade marks used in the said business and more particularly those registered by the vendors at Calcutta and Rangoon and referred to in the schedule hereto to hold the same unto the purchasers and their assigns absolutely." This deed was put in evidence though it was not pleaded: and, it may be noted that the "Indian Company" was not a party to it.

In 1919 the British American Tobacco Company, Limited, made cigarettes in packets in large numbers for the British Army Canteen authorities. They were called "Gold Flake" cigarettes and bore a label with Wills mark similar to the label used by the plaintiffs except for a notice at the end of the packet. The difference between the two labels was as follows: In the case of the goods imported and sold by the plaintiff Company there was at the end of the packet in small print. "This label is issued by the Imperial Tobacco Company of India Limited" (Here is the Star trade mark) "successor in India to W. D. and H. O. Wills. Cigarettes made in England." On the cigarettes which were manufactured by the British American Tobacco Company and which were afterwards imported into India by the defendant were these words in small print., "Established by W. D. and H. O. Wills, Bristol and London, British American Tobacco Company Limited" (Here is the Star trade mark), "Bristol, London, Liverpool and Virginia sucessor made temporarily in U. S. A."

Sometime in 1921 some of these cigarettes were sold in England by the Army Canteen authorities and the defendant purchased a large quantity in packets. The only restrictions placed upon [the defendant at the time of his purchase from the Army Canteen authorities was that he was not to sell them in Great Britain. He alleged that he was to be at liberty to export them wherever he liked.

The cigarettes were genuine "Gold Flake" cigarettes made by the British American Tobacco Company, i. e., the Company which made cigarettes for the plaintiffs; they bore the Gold Flake label, the Gold Flake get-up, and were manufactured of the same quality of tobacco as those made by the British American Tobacco Company for the plaintiffs.

The defendant offered to sell the cigarettes, which he had purchased, to the British American Tobacco Company. They, however, declined to buy them and the defendant in February 1922 imported a large quantity of the cigarettes into India.

The defendant had purchased the cigarettes at a bargain price and this enabled him to place them on the market in India at a price which was considerably lower than the price at which the plaintiff Company sold similar Gold Flake cigarettes.

The plaintiffs discovered that Gold Flake cigarettes were being placed on the market in India, and that the defendant had imported them; and, in May 1922, the plaintiffs filed this suit claiming the reliefs to which I have already referred.

The plaintiffs alleged two titles: the first a proprietary title to the exclusive use in India, Burma and Aden of the trade mark and name of W. D. and H. O. Wills, derived from British American Tobacco Company and the British American Tobacco Company (India), and the second an independent title in the plaintiffs themselves, alleging that the trade mark and name referred to the origin of the cigarettes and the importation thereof by the plaintiffs.

Both of these titles were disputed by the defendant.

The learned Judge in his judgment dealt in the first place with the second contention of plaintiffs, viz., "the allegation that the get-up of the Gold Flake label used in connection with the sale of cigarettes in India indicates to the purchasers and consumers that the goods sold under the label are goods imported by the plaintiff Company; that the defendant's goods if placed on the market are calculated to deceive purchasers and consumers into the belief that in buying the goods of the defendant, they are buying goods imported by the plaintiff Company." No criticism upon this statement of the plaintiffs' case has been made, and it is in accordance with the description of such a claim given by Buckley, L. J., in Dental Manufacturing Company, Limited v. C. De Trey & Co. (1). "A passing-off action is one in which the plaintiff alleges that the defendant is injuring him in his property by wrongfully intercepting trade which, but for the defendant's wrongful acts, would come to the plaintiff in his business. It is an action in which the plaintiff alleges that the defendant so gets up his goods as that the public, intending to buy the plaintiff's goods, are induced to buy the defendant's goods, in the belief that they are buying the plaintiffs' goods. The plaintiffs' goods need not be goods manufactured by the plaintiff. They may be goods which he purchases, or which he imports, or otherwise acquires, and which he sells under some 'get-up' which conveys that they are goods which, whether made, imported, or sold by him, carry with them the advantage of the reputation that the plaintiff's well-known firm are responsible for their quality or their character."

The learned Judge's finding on this part of the case was as follows:—"I find, therefore, upon this part of the case that the reputation of the brand of Gold Flake cigarettes in India is the reputation of the maker and not of the plaintiff Company as importers. The reputation originated in the days of Messrs. W. D. & H. O. Wills, the original manufacturers, and the efforts of the plaintiff company have been directed not to creating or acquiring (if such a thing is possible) an importer's reputation of themselves in the brand but in maintaining and devolping the reputation of the brand as a manufacturer's brand. The issues, therefore, dependent upon this finding are answered in favour of the defendant."

The learned Judge, therefore, decided the two issues which related to this part of the case in the negative. The first issue was "Does the get-up of the cigarettes described in paragraph 7 of the plaint denote to purchasers in India that such cigarettes are imported by the plaintiff Company?" The second issue was, "Will the sale by the defendant Company of cigarettes in such get-up deceive the purchasers in the belief that the cigarettes have been imported by the plaintiff Company?" As I have said the answer to both these issues was in the negative.

(1) (1912) 3 K. B. 76 at pp. 87; 88; 81 L. J. K. B. 1162; 107 L. T. 111; 29 R. P. C. 617; 28 T. L. R., 498.

The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs drew our attention to the whole of the evidence on this part of the case, though his argument was mainly directed to an attack upon the learned Judge's finding on the other part of the case.

There is no necessity for me to refer to the evidence in detail, for I agree with the learned Judge's finding of fact. In my judgment the sole representation made by the plaintiffs' user of the covering of the cigarettes was a representation that the cigarettes were the Gold Flake cigarettes manufactured by the successors of the well-known firm of W. D. & H. O. Wills There is no evidence to justify the alleged representation (on which the plaintiffs relied) that cigarettes, bearing the said wrapper or covering, had come through a particular channel, or had been imported by the plaintiffs. In the same way, the defendant by using the wrapper or covering was merely representing the cigarettes as Gold Flake cigarettes manufactured by the successors of the well-known firm of W. D. & H. O. Wills, viz., the British American Tobacco Company. This was a perfectly true representation and the defendant was in no way passing off or attempting to pass off the cigarettes sold by him, as the plaintiffs' goods

False representation is the foundation of a suit such as this: and there was, in my judgment, no false representation by the defendant. Though the importation by the defendant may have been calculated to injure the plaintiffs' business, they had no cause of action on the ground now under consideration.

The concise statement of Fletcher Moulton, L. J., in Dental Manufacturing Company Limited v. C. De Trey & Co. (1) may usefully be referred to on this part of the case. It is as follows:—

"To my mind it would be an injurious and ridiculous extension of the doctrine of passing-off to say that, where the sole representation is that the goods are the goods of a particular manufacturer, it should be held that that carries with it a representation that they have come through any particular channel; or, putting it conversely, that any one who is injured by the passing-off of goods as the goods of a third party can bring an action."

In this case the defendant was passing off the cigarettes as the goods of the third party, viz., as cigarettes manufactured by the British American Tobacco Company, the successor of W. D. & H. O. Wills and there was no representation that they were goods of the plaintiffs or that the goods were imported by the plaintiffs.

In my judgment, therefore, the learned Judge was right in deciding the first two issues in favour of the defendant and in holding that this part of the plaintiffs' case failed

The plaintiffs raised an issue as to the condition of the cigarettes imported by the defendant. The learned Judge came to the conclusion that these cigarettes were not bad or unsaleable, and I see no reason to differ from the learned Judge's conclusion on this point.

The other part of the plaintiffs' case is dependent upon their alleged derivative title, and is based upon the agreement dated the 1st September 1910 and the Indenture of the 11th April 1922.

This part of the plaintiffs' case is really inconsistent with the other part, which has already been considered, and if the plaintiffs have a good cause of action under this heading, the evidence, which was produced at the trial in the attempt to support the plaintiffs' alleged right as importers of the cigarettes, would have been unnecessary.

As pointed out by Sir Lawrence Jenkins in British American Tobacco Company, Limited, v. Mahboob Bux (2), in India there is no system of registration nor is there any provision for a statutory title to a trade mark, so that the rights of the parties must be determined in accordance with the principle of the English Common Law; and, further a trade mark is a mode of warranting the origin of the goods, to which it is attached, or their trade association; and it is of the essence of a trade mark that its representation should be true. In this is to be found the true test of the assignability of a trade mark. In that judgment the learned Chief Justice drew attention to passages from the judgment of Lord Kingsdown, Lord Cranworth, Lord Westbury and Mellish, L. J. which I do not think it necessary to repeat, but which I regard as being material to the present case.

(2) 7 Ind. Cas. 279; 38 C. 110 at p. 117; 15 C. W. N. 280.

There is no doubt that the title to a trade mark cannot be assigned or devolve in gross, but unless the mark connotes a personal connection between its original owner and the goods, in connection with which it is used, it may be assigned and transmitted with the good-will of the business in such goods.

In this csase the plaintiffs' learned Counsel argued that the good-will of the business in India carried on by the British American Tobacco Company and by the British American Tobacco Company (India) was assigned to the plaintiffs along with the sole right to use the trade mark in question and the names of the two companies in India.

It was argued that the business of the British American Tobacco Company was carried on in several countries, that the British American Tobacco Company had a business in India and a good-will attached to it and that inasmuch as the good-will of the business in India was assigned, or agreed to be assigned to the plaintiffs, the property in the trade mark used in such business passed to the plaintiffs.

The difficulty on this part of the plaintiffs' case is that the trade mark is one which denotes the origin of the cigarettes and it has been and is still used in connection with cigarettes manufactured by the British American Tobacco Company for sale in other parts of the world besides India.

Before the assignment, relied on by the plaintiffs, the trade mark was not confined to cigarettes used by the British American Tobacco Company in connection with their business in India, and after the assignment it is still used by the British American Tobacco Company in connection with their business in parts of the world other than India. In other words, the trade mark in question was a mode of warranting the orign of the goods to which it was attached, viz., the manufacture of W. D. & H. O. Wills or their successors and the goods imported by the defendant were genuine goods made by the British American Tobacco Company, properly bearing the trade mark in question as denoting the origin of the goods to which it was attached.

The difficulty on this part of the plaintiffs' case was illustrated by the argumefft of the learned Counsel for the plaintiffs. He was constrained to admit that if the trade mark means goods made by "Messrs. W. D. & H. O. Wills or their successors" the plaintiff have no case.

He contended, however, that the marke really means "goods of W. D. & H. O. Wills or their successors in India." In other words, he argued that outside India the mark denoted that the cigarettes were made by the successors of W. D. & H. O. Wills, but that in India the mark denoted that the cigarettes were made by or for the successors of W. D. & H. O. Wills in India, But in each case put by the learned Counsel, the trade mark was attached to cigarettes of the same quality, viz., W. D. &. H. O. Wills Gold Flake Cigarettes, and in each case the cigarettes were made by the same company, viz., the British American Tobacco Company.

In my opinion, it is not possible, on the facts of this case, to hold that the mark bore the dual meaning alleged by the plaintiffs and their contention in this respect cannot be accepted. Further, it should be noted that it is contrary to the evidence in the case and the findings of fact of the learned Judge.

In the case to which I have already referred, Sir Lawrence Jenkins drew attention to the fact that Mellish, L. J., in Singer Manufacturing Company v. Wilson (3), limited the passing of a trade mark to the case where the entire business, of which it is a part, is sold: And in Pinto v. Badman (4) Fry, L. J., in dealing with the transfer of a trade mark said:—"It follows, therefore, that it has been laid down by the clearest authority that a trade mark can be transferred with, to use Lord Cranworth's language, the manufactory of the goods in which the mark has been used to be affixed. Beyond that, as far as my knowledge goes, and so far as any case that has been cited to us at the Bar is concerned, no authority can be produced.

(3) (1875) 2 Ch. D. 434 at p. 455; 45 L. J. Ch. 490; 34 L. T. 858; 24 W. R. 1023.

"Therefore, I conceive that is the limit of the assignability of the trade mark. It can be assigned if it is indicative of origin, when the origin is assigned with it.

"It cannot be assigned when it is divorced from its place of origin, or when in the hands of a transferee it would indicate something different to what it indicated in the hands of a transferor."

In my judgment, the trade mark in this case is indicative of origin, and the origin has not been assigned with the trade mark.

It was conceded that if there had been no agreement to assign or assignment by the British American Tobacco Company to the plaintiffs, and if this suit had been brought by the British American Tobacco Company, the Company could not have succeeded, in the absence of a covenant by the defendant with the British American Tobacco Company not to import the cigarettes, purchased by him, into India.

It seems to me that the plaintiff Company (in which the British American Tobacco Company held 90 per cent. of the shares) as assignees from the British American Tobacco Company cannot be in a better position than the British American Tobacco Company, unless it can be proved that the plaintiff Company have established some right of their own, independent of the British American Tobacco Company, such as might be established if they could have proved that the wrapper and covering upon and the get-up of the cigarettes denoted that they were imported by the plaintiff Company. This the plaintiff Company attempted to prove, but, as already stated, they failed.

In this case we have nothing to do with any statutory provision, such as is to be found in section 22 of the English Trade Marks Act of 1905; and the case is to be decided on the principles of the English Common Law. According to such principles, the property, if any, of the owner is in its nature, transitory and only exists so long as the mark is distinctive in the eyes of the public or a class of the public [see per Lord Parker in Spalding v. Gamage (5)]. In this case the mark is distinctive, as already stated, in the eyes of the public as the mark of the manufacturer, W. D. & H. O. Wills or their successors, the British American Tobacco Company. It was not distinctive of the business of the British American Tobacco Company or the British American Tobacco Company (India) in India and it has not become distinctive of the plaintiff Company's cigarettes.

It is clear, therefore, that the manufactory of the cigarettes in which the mark has been used to be affixed, has not been assigned to the plaintiffs, nor has the property in the business or the good-will of the business, in connection with which the trade mark has been used for a long period, been assigned to the plaintiffs.

In my judgment, the plaintiffs did not purchase the origin of the cigarettes or the exclusive right to manufacture. They must have known at the time of the agreement of 1st September 1910 that W. D. & H. O. Wills' Gold Flake cigarettes could and would be manufactured by the British American Tobacco Company and sold in different parts of the world and that there was a risk of persons buying such cigarettes outside India and importing them into India.

The British American Tobacco Company, while reserving the right to manufacture and sell W. D. & H. O. Wills' Gold Flake cigarettes with the well-established mark upon them, could not assign the sole right to sell such Gold Flake cigarettes

(4) (1891) 8 Pat. Cas. 181 at p. 194.

(5) (1915) 32 Pat. Cas. 273 at p. 284; 84 L. J. Ch. 449; 113 L. T. 198; 31 T. L. R. 328.

in India to the plaintiffs so as to enable the plaintiffs to restrain members of the public from selling in India genuine Gold Flake cigarettes of W. D. & H. O. Wills which the British American Tobacco Company had themselves manufactured and sold in the market without any restriction upon importation into India.

For the above mentioned reasons, I am of opinion that the plaintiffs have failed in both respects to establish their alleged right to the declaration, injunction and other reliefs claimed, and in my judgment the learned Judge was right in dismissing the suit.

The appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Richardson, J.—It will be convenient, in what I have to say, to use the name of Wills & Co., as a comprehensive term including the original firm of W. D. & H. O. Wills and their successors in England. The plaintiff Company will be referred to as 'the Company.' I will assume then that the good-will of the Indian business of Wills & Co., and the trade marks and trade labels, used in that business, were validly transferred and assigned to the Company by the agreement of 1st September 1910, and the Indenture of the 11th April 1922, and the Company have thus acquired all the rights which Wills & Co. had in India in respect of their cigarettes and the trade marks and labels associated with them. This litigation is particularly concerned with the brand of cigarettes called Gold Flake and the label on the tins or boxes in which they are packed for sale is well known. The trade mark on this label is a double Star.

I will assume further that the rights which the Company possess include the right to manufacture these Gold Flake cigarettes in India and to sell them in tins or boxes to which Wills & Co's. label is affixed.

This right of manufacture, however, has not been exercised and for the present purpose the Company are not manufacturers. They are only importers of Gold Flake cigarettes manufactured in England. In paragraph 9 of the plaint it is stated that since the 1st October 1910 Gold Flake cigarettes for sale in India, Burma and Aden have been manufactured by Wills & Co. solely for the Company and have been imported into and sold in these countries solely by the Company, the number sold amounting to about one hundred and twenty-five million.

Moreover, the learned Judge, Pearson, J., before whom the case came in the first instance, has found, and in my opinion, on the evidence, rightly and conclusively found, that up to the date of the suit, the Company had acquired no independent reputation as importers. Nor do they use any distinctive importer's mark. Apart from the legend in small letters round the double Star, the label which they use as importers is identical with Wills and Co.'s label The legend is:—"This label is issued by the Imperial Tobacco Company of India, Limited, successor in India to W. D. & H. O. Wills—Cigarettes made in England." The mention of the Company's name is formal and insignificant while the name of the original firm "W. D. & H. O. Wills" appears conspicuously in three places.

As to the position of the defendants, it appears that the first defendant Albert Bonnan, who describes himself as a Frenchman, purchased in 1921 a large quantity of Wills & Co.'s Gold Flake cigarettes about twenty-one and a half million—from the Board of the Army and Canteen Stores in England, the cigarettes being packed in tins or boxes bearing Wills & Co.'s label. The small letter legend round the double Star on that label is "established by W. D. & H. O. Wills Bristol and London; British American Tobacco Company, Limited, Bristol, London, Liverpool and Virginia—successor, made temporarily in U. S. A." Doubtless, the Board had obtained their supplies direct from Wills & Co. and were getting rid of their surplus stock. At any rate, it is not disputed that Bonnan's cigarettes are genuine Gold Flake cigarettes. In the argument nothing turned on the fact that they happen to have been made in America and not in England. It would seem that during the War, Wills & Co. made temporary arrangements for the manufacture of their cigarettes in America.

Bonnan's purchase was subject to the contractual restriction that the cigarettes were not to be disposed of in Great Britain. Otherwise, so far as the vendors were concerned, he was free to do with the cigarettes what he liked. He brought them into India and formed a Company, the second defendant, Bonnan & Co., to sell the cigarettes there. As the interests of Bonnan and Bonnan & Co. appear to be the same, I will follow Pearson, J., in treating Bonnan as the sole defendant. Having bought his cigarettes cheap, Bonnan was able to undersell the plaintiff Company in the Indian market and thus came into conflict with them. I repeat that for all material purposes Bonnan's cigarettes must be regarded as of the same quality and manufacture with those sold by the Company.

It was in these circumstances that the Company instituted their suit on the 11th May 1922 and obtained a temporary injunction prohibiting the further sale of Bonnan's cigarettes pending the issue. They ask for a declaration that within the limits of India, Burma and Aden they have the exclusive right as owners to the user of the trade mark and label denoting Wills & Co.'s Gold Flake cigarettes, and that they are solely entitled to import into and sell in those countries cigarettes bearing or contained in tins or other receptacles bearing such mark or label. They further ask for a perpetual injunction in aid of the rights which they assert and, by amendments of the plaint made in June 1922, for damages.

The suit was dismissed by Pearson, J., and the appeal is from the learned Judge's judgment dated 18th July 1922.

In brief, the Company claim to be the only persons at liberty to import Wills & Co.'s Gold Flake cigarettes into India for purposes of sale. In paragraph 15 of the plaint the claim is put on the grounds (1) that the importation and sale by Bonnan of his cigarettes is " an infringement of the rights and property of the plaintiff Company to and in Wills & Co's trade mark" and (2) that the use of the Wills & Co.'s trade mark and label by Bonnan "will deceive purchasers of the said cigarettes into the belief that the said cigarettes have been imported by the plaintiff Company." In paragraph 16A of the plaint, added in June, it is further stated that the importation by Bonnan of his cigarettes will diminish the sale of the plaintiff Company's cigarettes and "has impaired and will further impair the reputation of the plaintiff Company" and their cigarettes.

It was conceded by Mr. Pugh, appearing for the Company, that the claim is novel and not covered by any direct authority. The learned Counsel, however, added that the law of trade marks was of comparatively recent origin and had not yet reached the limits of its growth. But whether that be so or not, I confess myself unable to appreciate the reasoning by which the present claim is sought to be supported.

The misconception, which, as it seems to me, underlies the Company's case, consists in the exaggerated stress laid on the notion that the right to a trade mark is a right of property. The ground which I have numbered (1) in paragraph 15 of the plaint, is treated as if it were an independent ground of action. But given their right to the trade mark, the Company cannot succeed without proof of some such averment as that contained in the second ground. To meet the objection that no right to an importer's marks has been established, an attempt has been made in argument to give the averment a somewhat wider form and to say that in selling his cigarettes, Bonnan represents them to be the goods of the Company. The averment in that form, however, can only be supported in the circumstances by returning to the notion of property. The right to the trade mark is treated as conferring a monopoly, entitling the Company to protection under any and all conditions and against any and all kinds of injury, including injury by mere commercial competition. In my opinion, the short answer to the case is that in selling his cigarettes Bonnan does nothing which misleads or is calculated to mislead the public as to what they are buying.

The questions whether a right to a trade mark is a right of property and in what sense it can be so regarded, have been the subject of discussion, for instance, by Lord Parker in Spalding v. Gamage (5). But for the present purpose, the question of substance is what is the extent of this right? What constitutes infringement of a trade mark?

The extent of the right of, I will say, the owner of a trade mark, is doubtless to be measured by the correlative duty or obligation imposed on others. That obligation is expressed in the principle underlying all the cases, that "no body has any right to represent his goods as the goods of some body else." Lord Westbury certainly regarded the right to a trade mark as a right of property; but his way of putting the matter leads to the same result. He says in Hall v. Barrows (6), "Imposition on the public is indeed necessary for the plaintiff's title, but in this way only, that it is the test of the invasion by the defendant of the plaintiff's right of property, for there is no injury done to the plaintiff if the mark used by the defendant be not such as may be mistaken by the public for the mark of the plaintiff." I agree that no imputation of fraudulent intent is necessary; but over and above his right to the trade mark, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant is really imposing on the public. Trade marks are in the present respect on the same footing as trade names, and in Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Loog (7), Lord Watson said this :—"There is no authority, and, in my opinion, no principle for giving the trader any higher right. If he cannot allege and prove that the public are deceived, or that there is a reasonable probability of deception, he has no right to interfere with the use of the name by others." In Spalding's case (5) Lord Parker said: "The property, if any, of the so-called owner is, in its nature, transitory, and only exists so long as the mark is distinctive of his own goods in the eyes of the public or a class of the public."

Take as a concrete instance the case of Reddaway v. Banham (8). No doubt the defendant's description of his belting as "camel hair belting" was in a sense true, but the finding was that the defendant was guilty of a false representation and of passing off his goods as the plaintiffs', because the description was likely to mislead purchasers into the belief that his belting was the plaintiffs' belting, the fact being that the two beltings were of different manufacture and came from different factories. The words I have already quoted come from Lord Halsbury's judgment. "For myself," he said "I believe the principle of law may be very plainly stated, and that is, that nobody has any right to represent his goods as the goods of some body else" Lord Herschell cited the language of other Judges to the same effect and in the course of his judgment he observed: "I cannot help saying that, if the defendants are entitled to lead purchasers to believe that they are getting the plaintiffs' manufacture when they are not, and thus to cheat the plaintiffs of some of their legitimate trade, I should regret to find that the law was powerless to enforce the most elementary principles of commercial morality." Lord Macnaghten referred to the defendant as an "interloper who hoped to find more profit and less trouble in trading on another man's reputation than on his own merits." He said that the plaintiffs' belting had come to be known as "camel hair belting" all over the world and that it was almost an abuse of language to say that this description as applied to the defendant's belting was merely the simple truth. For the defendant's purposes, he added, the whole merit of the description lay in its duplicity.

Comparison with Reddaway v. Banham (8) shows how empty the present case is of substance or even of plausibility. The Company represent that the cigarettes which they import and sell are those of Wills & Co. Not having any distinctive reputation as importers, and not having used any distinctive importer's mark, the Company trade on the reputation of Wills & Co. Bonnan makes the same representation as regards his cigarettes, that they are the goods of Wills & Co. and he also trades on the reputation of Wills & Co. His representation is the simple truth and the whole truth. There is no duplicity or equivocation. No purchaser, not the most unwary, has been or is likely to be deceived. The Company may regard Bonnan as an interloper but I cannot see that he is in any way trading on their merits or their reputation. He is not a pirate. He is not palming off his cigarettes as theirs or doing anything which is commercially immoral. He is not violating the good-will which the Company have no doubt acquired in India or infringing any of their trade marks. The mere fact, if it be a fact, that the Company have popularised Gold Flake cigarettes in India, does not prevent others, armed with the same cigarettes, from following them into the same market and competing with them there.

(6) (1863) 32 L. J. Ch. 548; 8 L. T. (N. S.) 227; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 483; 11 W. R. 525; 1 N. R. 543; on Appeal (1863) 4 D. J. & S. 150; 33 L. J. Ch. 204; 10 Jur. (N. S.) 55; 9 L. T. (N. S.) 561; 12 W. R. 322; 146 R. R. 248; 46 E. R. 873.

(7) (1882) 8 A. C. 15; 52 L. J. Ch. 481; 48 L. T. 3; 31 W. R. 325.

(8) (1896) A. C. 199; 65 L. J. Q. B. 381; 74 L. T. 289; 44 W. R. 638.

The case was put in argument whether if a traveller coming to India filled his portmanteau with Gold Flake cigarettes he could dispose of them thereto his friends. Learned Counsel could only say that he might give them to his friends but could not sell them, an answer which I think did not give complete satisfaction either to the learned Counsel himself or to the Court.

There may be another way of dealing with the claim equally fatal to the Company. Mr. Langford James contended on Bonnan's behalf, mainly, I think, on the authority of Pinto v. Badman (4), that the assignment of Wills & Co. in favour of the Company was invalid, because the trade mark was not assigned together with any manufactory in India and could not be assigned independently of the manufacture of the goods to which it related. If I do not adopt that contention in toto, it is because I am not sure as to the precise effect of section 22 of the British Trade Marks Act of 1905. But that is not to say that the contention has no force. I have assumed that Wills & Co. were in a position in 1910 to make, and did make, a valid assignment of the goodwill of their Indian business and that such an assignment would convey to the assignees the right to set up a manufactory in India turning out cigarettes with the same get-up as those of Wills & Co., and I have also said that as the Company have not exercised that right, they are not manufacturers. In the circumstances, it may be that they are in no better case than if they had taken merely an assignment in gross of Wills & Co.'s trade mark. It may be that they cannot rely on the assignment of the Indian goodwill because they have not acted upon it, and that they can only rely on such undertakings as those given by Wills & Co. in paragraph 4 of the agreement of 1910. In that case, their rights as assignees of the Indian business and the trade mark would be of no avail to them and they would be driven back to rights which are merely contractual If this be the true view, clearly the cases of Richards v. Butcher (9) and Dental Manufacturing Company Limited v. C. De Trey & Co. (1) would be direct authorities against the Company, even if Bonnan were passing off as the manufacture of Wills & Co.'s cigarettes, which were not the manufacture of Wills & Co. This result seems reasonable enough because, otherwise, the prohibition against the assignment of a trade mark in gross might easily be evaded as regards, say, a British possession by adding a merely colourable assignment of the goodwill in that possession of the business to which the trade mark relates.

If the Company can only depend on their contractual rights, those rights as Fletcher Moulton, L.J. points out in De Trey's case (1) "are not exclusive in any sense which affects the public", and the observations which he quotes from the judgment of Kay, J., in the other case would be in point. Kay J. was dealing with the exclusive right claimed by Richards as sole agent for the sale of Messrs. Heidsieck's wine' in England. "What does that mean?' he asked, "it only means that Messrs. Heidsieck have contracted that they will not sell any of their wine to any other persons in England, except Mr. Richards; but, it, by any means whatever, another person gets Heidsieck's wine, if he buys it in France, or buys it in Germany, or in England, or buys it of the plaintiffs, or buys it of any body else, he has a right to sell it. The plaintiffs cannot prevent him—nobody can. He has a perfect right to sell it; it is an article of commerce in which he has a perfect right to deal"

(9) (1890) 7 Pat Cas. 288;

But quite apart from the view of the case suggested by the learned Counsel for Bonnan, much of what was said in De Trey's case (1) has a close application to the present case and reinforces the ground on which I prefer to rest my decision. Granted that the Company have all the rights they claim in Wills & Co's trade mark, the mere possession of those rights does not, in the circumstances, justify them in asserting that Bonnan is representing his goods to be their goods. The assertion is not true in fact or substance.

No doubt the present case differs from De Trey's case (1) in two respects. In the first place, De Trey claimed no right as the Company here claim to any trade mark and no right higher than that of sole agent for sale. In the second place, the alleged infringing articles were not, as they are here, the genuine goods of the same manufacturer, but imitations. The second distinction is in Bonnan's favour. He is in no sense representing his goods to be other than what they are. Wills & Co. themselves could make no case against him for passing off. The first distinction is not, in my opinion, vital. In Lord Parker's words already cited, the Company's right to the trade mark or their right to protection "only exists so long as the mark is distinctive of their goods in the eyes of the public" As used, however, by the Company, the mark is distinctive not of their goods but of the goods of Wills & Co.

I might, therefore, follow Vaughan Williams, L. J., and say that there is nothing in the get-up of Bonnan's cigarettes which identifies them with the Company and there is a passage in the judgment of Fletcher Moulton, L. J., which is capable of easy adaptation to this effect :—"There is a right in a plaintiff to come to the Court to prevent any goods being passed off as his which are not his goods, and; when I say that, I include goods which he has manufactured, goods which he had purchased and sold—any goods that can fairly be called his goods. In respect of these he can restrain an attempt to pass off goods that are not his, as though they were his. But in this case it is clear that in no proper sense of the word were these goods ever regarded by the public as, nor were they in truth, (the Company's) goods, and there never was any representation on the part of (Bonnan) that the alleged infringing articles were (the Company's) goods." Or, again, I might conclude like Buckley, L. J., by saying, on the facts with even more force than he did, that "there was no representation whatever affording any ground for a passing off action."

It is not necessary to consider what the position would have been if the Company had manufactured their own cigarettes and Bonnan had brought into the market Wills & Co.'s cigarettes with the same or a similar get-up, but made and purchased elsewhere. Like Pearson, J., I doubt whether the issue would have been different. Bonnan's representation to purchasers would still have been true in simple fact, and, the formulæ and recipes for preparation, treatment and manufacture being the same, the cigarettes made in India would presumably have been identical in quality with those made elsewhere. The parties would have been selling goods of practically identical manufacture under practically identical marks. I doubt whether in such case it could have been said that Bonnan was passing off his cigarettes as those of the Company, and, apart from any question of passing off, he would still have been free to import Wills & Co.'s cigarettes obtained elsewhere into India.

It must be borne in mind that in India there are no statutory means of obtaining by registration an exclusive right to a particular trade mark. The Company have no statutory rights on which they can rely. They depend on the rights which the Common Law or the Commercial Law gives them [Somerville v. Schembri (10), British American Tobacco Co., Ld. v. Mahboob Bux (2)]. The case to which the learned Counsel referred of the Imperial Tobacco Company (Newfoundland) v. Duffy (11) was decided under the Newfoundland Trade Marks Act under which the trade mark there in question had been registered.

(10) (1887) 12 A. C. 453; 56 L. J. P. C. 61; 56 L. T. 454.
(11) (1918) A. C. 181; 87 L. J. P. C. 50; 118 L. T. 259; 35 R. P. C. 12.

GOKULDAS PITAMBER V. ODHAVJI GIGABHAI.

I have endeavoured to deal with some of the arguments presented to us, but in my view the only difficulty in the case lies in the enterprising length to which the right to a trade mark has been pushed by the Company. In my opinion, apart from legislation, no such barrier as the Company desire can, in the circumstances, be imposed on the importation of genuine Wills & Co.'s Gold Flake cigarettes into India.

I agree that the suit was rightly dismissed and that this appeal fails.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT NO. 1963 OF 1923.

June 28, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice Pratt.

GOKULDAS PITAMBER—PLAINTIFF

versus

ODHAVJI GIGABHAI—DEFENDANT.

Fraud—Suit to set aside decree—False evidence, decree based on.

The fact that a decree is based on false evidence does not amount to fraud vitiating the decree unless the effect of the false evidence was to prevent the other party from putting his case before the Court. [p. 207, col. 1.]

Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sulliman, 21 C. 612; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1038 and Flower v. Lloyd, (1877) 6 Ch. D. 297; 46 L. J. Ch. 838; 37 L. T. 419; 25 W. R. 793, relied on.

Mr. Binning, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. F. S. Taleyarkhan, (with him Mr. B. K. Desai), for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit by the plaintiff, the tenant, to set aside a decree obtained by the defendant, his landlord, on the ground of fraud. The decree was passed on December 15, 1922, requiring the plaintiff to vacate the premises on or before May 31 of this year. The defendant's requisition in that suit, which was Suit No. 3745 of 1922, was for his own occupation and the bona fides and the reasonableness for that requisition was the principal matter in issue. In the course of the hearing of that suit the defendant said in answer to cross-examination "I am the rent farmer and hold the premises under a lease. The lease has not expired: it will last two years more." The plaintiff says that that was false evidence, that the defendant was not a lessee, and that if he had a lease it did not last two years more and that the only document under which the defendant was in possession was the document Exhibit C according to which the defendant was not a lessee at all but a rent farming agent the period of whose agency expired in October 1923.

Now the agreement Exhibit C has been admitted, and under that agreement it does appear that the defendant was no more than an agent to collect the rent. The defendant's explanation in his affidavit, which by consent of the parties has been treated as evidence in this case, is that the owner of the premises had at first agreed to give him a lease for five years but that agreement was not carried out. The owner then desired to vary the term for one year and took a writing from him to that effect, and subsequently, just before the owner went to South Africa, the owner promised to let him remain in possession for two years. It is clear, therefore, even on defendant's admission, that the statements made in answer to cross-examination in the suit were not true, that the defendant was not a lessee, and that he had not a lease of the premises for two years.

The question then remains whether this false evidence is sufficient to justify the Court in holding that the decree made in that suit is vitiated by fraud. Now there are several decisions on the point as to whether false evidence is such fraud as to vitiate the decree passed in the suit in which it was given. The most satisfactory of the statement of the law is that in Mahomed Golab v. Mahomad Sulliman (1) where the High Court of Calcutta held that false evidence in a suit would not be fraud vitiating a decree unless the effect of that false evidence was to prevent the other party from putting his case before the Court. Indeed that must be so, for if every decree which was the result of the suit in which false evidence was given could be vitiated on that ground then, as has been said in Flower v. Lloyd (2), a large number of judgments supposed to be final would only be the commencement of a new series of actions. What I have to decide is whether by this false evidence the plaintiff in this suit is prevented from establishing his defence in the ejectment suit. Now the plaintiff's defence in that ejectment suit was really a defence denying the reasonableness and bona fides of the defendant's requisition of the premises for his own use and occupation. The plaintiff in that suit did not raise any question as to the defendant's title. If he had done so, he would have been debarred from raising the issue under the Rent Act as to the reasonableness and bona fides of the defendant's requisition. It seems to me clear that this was not a defence which the plaintiff intended to make and that he was not prevented by the evidence of which he complains from making that defence. Again, even supposing he had intended in the previous suit to question the defendant's title, it is not apparent how the false answers of the defendant to the questions put to him in the cross-examination prevented the plaintiff from investigating the defendant's title. It won't do to say that the plaintiff believed the defendant and, therefore, was induced not to make an investigation of title. Because it is very seldom that one party accepts as true any evidence that is given in a suit by the other party. It was quite surely just as easy for him to ascertain the true facts as to defendant's title during the course of that litigation as it has been for him to do so as soon as the litigation was over. The conditions are the same for the owner of the property is still in South Africa. I hold, therefore, that although the evidence given by the defendant in answer to the particular questions asked in cross-examination was not true yet it did not avoid the decree.

(1) 21 C. 612; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1038.

I accordingly find on the issues framed (1) whether the evidence of the defendant, assuming it to be false as stated in paragraph No. 4 of the plaint, prevented the plaintiff from putting his case before the Court, and if so, amounted to fraud invalidating the decree—in the negative: (2) whether the said evidence was as a matter of fact false—in the affirmative; and (3) whether the decree in Suit No. 3745 of 1922 was obtained by fraud as alleged in paragraph No. 4 of the plaint—in the negative.

Although I find that the evidence given by the defendant in the former suit was not true I do not depart from the ordinary rule as to costs. Because I think this suit is merely an attempt on the part of the plaintiff to put off the day for delivery of possession of the premises. Accordingly I dismiss the suit with costs.

Suit dismissed.

Z. K.

(2) (1877) 6 Ch. D. 297; 46 L. J. Ch. 838; 37 L. T. 419; 25 W. R. 793.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1862 OF 1918.

April 11, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Abdul Racof.

Musammat RAM PIARI AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SULTAN BAKHSH—PLAINTIFF— —RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 153, O. VI, r. 17, O. XLI, r. 27—Appeal—Amendment of grounds of appeal—Appellate Court, power of, to direct amendment—Commissioner to revise report of previous Commissioner—Additional evidence when can be admitted—Partnership suit—Interest, when can be allowed.

The Civil Procedure Code gives the Court full discretion to allow an amendment of pleadings at any stage, and where the grounds of an appeal are not sufficiently clear, the Appellate Court can direct the appellant to amend them. [p. 208, col. 2.]

RAM PIARI v. SULTAN BAKHSH.

Where mistakes and omissions are discovered in the report of a Commissioner appointed to examine accounts, an Appellate Court has power to direct another Commissioner to examine the accounts and to remedy the mistakes and omissions of the previous Commissioner. Such an order does not amount to the production of additional evidence under r. 27 of O. XLI of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 208, col. 2.]

Where an Appellate Court is unable to decide an appeal on the record as it stands, it is justified in passing an order for the production of additional evidence under r. 27 of O. XLI. of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 208, col. 2.]

Interest is not usually allowed in partnership suits except on sums advanced in excess of the capital agreed to be contributed. [p. 208, col. 2; p. 209, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Sialkot, dated the 26th April 1918, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Sialkot, dated the 22nd December 1914.

Bakhshi Tek Chand and Mr. Mehr Chand Mahajan, for the Appellants.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff Sultan Bakhsh brought the suit out of which the present appeal arises so long ago as the 5th December 1906, for rendition of accounts of partnership and for recovery of any sum which might be found due to him. The proceedings were extremely lengthy and the history of them is clearly given in the judgment of the learned District Judge, who found that Rs. 1,412-10-0 was due from the defendants and passed a decree for that sum, together with costs in proportion. He also ordered that the sum decreed should bear interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of institution of the suit till the date of realisation. From this decree the defendants have filed the present second appeal. There is also a cross-appeal by the plaintiff (No. 2266 of 1918), but, as Mr. Manohar Lal expressly said he would not press it, we need not say anything further about it, except that it is dismissed with costs.

The first point urged by Mr. Tek Chand on behalf of defendants-appellants was that the order of Mr. Rose, District Judge of the 20th August 1915 (pages 16-17 of the paper-book) was contrary to law. In that order Mr. Rose discussed some of the grounds of appeal and in the end confessed his total incapacity to deal with an appeal cast in that form and returned it for amendment within three months. It is contended before us that the plaintiff should not have been allowed to amend his grounds of appeal. The Civil Procedure Code, however, gives the Court full discretion to allow an amendment of pleadings at any stage, and if the grounds of an appeal are not sufficiently clear, we see no reason why an Appellate Court should not direct an appellant to amend them. After the plaintiff had filed his amended grounds of appeal Mr. Rose, by his order of the 4th April 1916, issued a commission to Lala Devi Daval instructing him to report on all the points raised in the applications filed by the parties in the District Judge's Court. Mr. Rose stated that the primary object of the Commissioner should be (1) to revise Lala Karm Chand's report which undoubtedly contained some mistakes, and (2) to complete it by taking into consideration monies realised (or paid out) on account of the partnership after it had been dissolved, but before it was finally wound up and its accounts closed (page 21 of the printed paper-book). Mr. Tek Chand objects to this order on the ground that it contravenes the provisions of O. XLI, r. 27 of the Civil Procedure Code. Mr. Rose, however, did not order or allow the production of any additional evidence, but merely directed another Commissioner to examine the accounts and to remedy certain mistakes and omissions made by the previous Commissioner. We cannot see anything illegal in his order. Moreover, we understand that Mr. Rose found himself unable to decide the appeal on the record as it stood at the time, and under these circumstances he would have been perfectly justified in passing an order for the production of additional evidence under r. 27 of O. XLI, had he thought it right to do so.

[Here their Lordships disposed of certain points not material for this Report.—Ed.]

The next point urged was that the defendants should not be made to pay interest on the sum decreed from the date of the suit to the date of realisation. In our opinion, no sufficient reasons have been given for allowing this interest. In the first place, none was claimed in the plaint. Secondly, interest is not usually allowed in partnership suits, except on sums advanced in excess of the capital agreed to be contributed (see in this connection the Law of Partnership by Singhal, page 239). Thirdly, the delay in the decision of the suit has been due more to the plaintiff than to the defendants. Plaintiff alleged that the defendants' accounts were forged and this necessitated further examination thereof, and it was eventually held that the accounts were not forged. Again, there was a delay when the appeal of the plaintiff came before Mr. Rose owing to the grounds of appeal not being sufficiently clear. Fourthly, the defendants never refused to render accounts and placed all their bahis at the disposal of the Court at the very outset. Fifthly, they were not the original partners with Sultan Bakhsh, but undertook liability as the representatives of Lehna Singh with whom the plaintiff entered into partnership. The decree was passed on the 26th April 1918 and a few months later the amount decreed was paid into Court and was invested in war bonds upon which interest has been accruing. The plaintiff will be entitled to so much of the interest upon those bonds as is found to be in proportion to the sum held by us to be due to him. In addition to this we think that he should be allowed interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of the decree to the date on which the amount decreed was paid into the Executing Court.

The only remaining matter which Mr. Tek Chand argued was that of costs. He urged that the parties should have been directed to bear their own costs. Now, the ordinary rule is that costs shall follow the event, and it was within the discretion of the learned District Judge to pass any orders he thought fit in regard to the costs. We do not think that any sufficient reason has been made out for departing from the usual rule or for interfering with the discretion which the learned District Judge has exercised.

The result then is that we accept the appeal and deducting the sum of Rs. 238-15-0 from the amount decreed, we make the decree one for Rs. 1,173-11-0, with proportionate costs in all Courts, and we further direct that the defendants shall pay interest on this sum at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of the District Judge's decree until the date on which they paid the amount decreed into the Executing Court. The plaintiff's appeal, as already stated, is dismissed with costs.

Defendants' appeal accepted in part.

Z. K. Plaintiff's appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 859 OF 1921.

June 19, 1923.

Present :—Sir Dawson Miller, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahai.

Bibi KANIZ ZOHRA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Saiyed MUJTABA HUSSAIN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Charitable endowments—Mutwalliship—Sajjadanashini — Succession — Females, rights of— Usage.

Under the Muhammadan Law a woman is disqualified by reason of her sex from the right to act as mutwalli of endowed property where the office involves the performance of the duties of a sajjadanashin as well, unless there is some local usage or custom to the contrary. [p. 214, col. 1.]

In Muhammadan endowments the sajjadanishini and the mutwallishiip are different offices. The former is a priestly office involving the performance of spiritual and religious duties, the latter a purely secular one involving the management of the trust property. [p. 210, col. 2.]

A woman is incompetent to be a sajjadanishin according to the Muhammadan Law but is not disqualified from performing the duties of a mutwalli as such. [p. 210, col. 2.]

The origin of the rule that a woman is not qualified to perform the functions of a sajjadanishin is based upon the consideration that it is unseemly for a Muhammadan lady to perform duties which bring her in close and intimate association with the general public of the opposite sex. The disqualification is not confined only to those cases in which the office requires that spiritual instruction should be given by the sajjadanishin to his disciples. [p. 212, col. 2.]

No woman is qualified to become a sajjadanishin whose office involves the performance of religious and spiritual duties, not only those of piri muridi (preceptor and disciple) but those of leading the fateha and offering prayers and incense in a place of public worship. [p. 212, col. 2.]

KANIZ ZOHRA v. MUJTABA HUSSAIN.

According to the Muhammadan Law the duties of mutwalli who has not to perform religious duties or spiritual functions may be discharged by a proxy. But the office of sajjadanishin requires peculiar personal qualifications and the duties of this office cannot be discharged by proxy. [p. 213, col. 2.]

Although a minor might succeed by inheritance to the office of mutwalli, a substitute being appointed to carry out the duties during his minority, where the succession is not by inheritance, but by appointment or selection, a minor cannot become mutwalli. [p. 214, col. 1.]

The devolution of the office of mutwalli depends in the first instance upon the provisions of the wakfnamah, or trust deed, but in its absence the order of succession must be determined according to the usage of the particular endowment in question. [p. 210, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 7th February 1921, affirming a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 20th February 1920.

Messrs. S. Ahmad and Sultan-ud-din Hussain and W. H. Akbari, for the Plaintiff Appellant.

Messrs. H. Imam and S. M. Tahir, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiff from a decision of the District Judge of Bhagalpur affirming a decision of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the suit.

Bibi Kaniz Zohra, the plaintiff in the suit, is the daughter of the late Saiyed Ijteba Husain who died in the year 1913 leaving as his heirs his widow and the plaintiff and a younger daughter. During his life time the plaintiff's father and uncle were the joint mutwallis of certain wakf property dedicated to the maintenance of a mosque, an imambara and a dargah, or shrine, of a saint situated in the town of Bhagalpur. At the time of her father's death the plaintiff was about 8 years old. She claims that she succeeded by inheritance to a half share in the management of the wakf property or, in the alternative, that she is entitled to share jointly in the management with her uncle Saiyed Mujtaba Husain, the first defendant in the suit. She further claimed that if she did not succeed by inheritance she was in fact appointed by her relations and the assembled congregation after her father's death. She instituted the present suit in the year 1919 whilst still a minor suing through her mother as next friend to establish her right to a share in the mutwallishp of the endowed property. The defendants in the suit are her uncle and her younger sister. The former alone filed a written statement and contested the plaintiff's claim.

The endowment is an old one. It is proved to have been in existence at the beginning of the last century and its origin is probably of much earlier date. There was at one time a Khanqah or monastery attached to it and it is found by both the Trial Court and the first Appellate Court that there has all along been attached to the institution a sajjadanashin and that this office still exists. It is further found that the management or mutwallishp of the trust property goes with the office of sajjadanashin. The qualifications of the two offices are different. The sajjadanashini is a priestly office involving the performance of spiritual and religious duties which it is admitted cannot according to Muhammadan Law be performed by a woman. The functions of a mutwalli are purely secular involving the management of the trust property and a woman is not disqualified by reason of her sex from performing the duties of a mutwalli as such. The devolution of the office of mutwalli depends in the first instance upon the provisions of the wakfnamah, or trust deed. But in the present case the wakfnamah has not been produced in evidence and probably no longer exists. In its absence the order of succession must be determined according to the usage proved to have prevailed with regard to the endowment in question. It is found that the usual course for appointing the mutwalli was that after the death of an incumbent a relation of the late mutwalli was chosen by the other relations and the well wishers of the wakf after consultation with respectable neighbours and gentlemen of the neighbourhood and also, if necessary, by the advice of the sajjadanashins or mutwallis of other wakf properties, and that in any particular case either the whole of this procedure or a part of it only might have been carried out, that these were the usual guiding principles in choosing the successor. It would appear, therefore, that the devolution was not strictly according to the rules of heredity but was by election out of a limited class and the office could only be held by one qualified to act as sajjadanashin. The plaintiff claimed to have been elected by the relations after consultation in the manner described above.

The Subordinate Judge before whom the case came for trial was of opinion that the plaintiff had failed to make out that she had been elected.

The District Judge on appeal took a different view upon this part of the case. He was of opinion that the plaintiff had sufficiently made out her case that she was in fact elected as co-mutwalli with her uncle Mujtaba Hussain, but that as she was not qualified to perform the office of sajjadanashin her election was not valid. It was the plaintiff's case that in the institution with which we are concerned the office of sajjadanashin had become extinct and had ceased to exist many years ago before the time of her grand-father who was the mutwalli of the wakf property, and the main contention in both the lower Courts centred round this issue. The Judge of the Trial Court in his judgment says "There is no dispute that the plaintiff cannot be a sajjadnashin; but her case is that this office has become extinct since the time of Irtiza Hussain and he with his successors has been in possession in the capacity of a mutwalli only". The learned District Judge on appeal also expressed the matter thus: "It is a common ground of both appellant and respondents that as Kaniz Zohra is a woman she cannot exercise the functions of a sajjadanashin. If, therefore, the sajjadanashinship has not become extinct then the appellant admittedly has no case. I will, therefore, deal first with this point and my finding upon it will decide the appeal." Both Courts found that in fact the office of sajjadanashin had not become extinct and as a woman was admittedly disqualified from performing the functions of that office the plaintiff's suit must fail.

In appeal before us it was argued that the real issue had not been properly understood by the learned District Judge and that although the office of sajjadanashin had not become entirely extinct the spiritual duties as distinct from the performance of religious ceremonies no longer existed and that the learned District Judge had not dealt with this aspect of the case. It was argued that the spiritual duties of a sajjadanashin were the only offices which the mutwalli as such was not competent to perform and that the mutwalli or indeed any Muhammadan might perform the religious duties, that is to say, leading the prayers, reading from the Koran and performing the urs and fatcha and carrying out the other duties required by the Muhammadan ritual. The learned Counsel for the appellant referred to the evidence of the defendant himself in which he admitted that there was no system of piri muridi in the family. The pir is the spiritual instructor and the murid is the disciple or pupil and the system referred to is that of giving spiritual instruction to the disciples. He contended that the origin of the rule that no woman could act as sajjadanashin was based upon the fact that by Muhammadan Law a woman may not allow her skin to be touched by a man outside the circle of her immediate blood relations whereas the spiritual instruction known as piri-muridi required that the pupils or disciples should on some occasions kiss the hand of the sajjadanashin. No authority for this limited disqualification was cited but a passage in Macnaghten's Principles and Precedents of Muhammadan Law, second edition, was quoted. The passage is contained in a note at page 343 and reads thus:—

"The meaning of the term sajjadanashin, which is synonymous with gaddi nashin, is thus given by Meninski:—Considens in tapete sacras preces peracturus aliisque proeiturus antistes." This officer is frequently confounded with the mutwalli, that is, the trustee or superintendent of the endowment, although they are quite distinct; the one having charge of the spiritual, the other of the temporal, affairs of the endowment. The office of trustee may be held by a woman, and the duties may be discharged by proxy, whereas the office of superior requires peculiar personal qualifications".

There is a further passage on page 332 of the same volume which was also relied upon. It is as follows:—

"Females are not competent to assume the office of superior of an endowment; and such an act is at variance with the usage of the country, because it is the duty of the superior to instruct and guide his disciples, to teach his scholars, and to keep their company continually in private and in public, and this cannot be done with propriety by a woman, whose duty it is to live retired and secluded."

The learned Counsel argues from this that the only obstacle in the way of a woman acting as sajjadanashin is that the duties of the office require the incumbent to keep company in private and in public with his disciples and that as there were no disciples in the present case the disqualification did not exist. A passage was also relied upon from the judgment of Abdur Rahim, J. in the case of Sajjada Shah Mahamad Usuf v. Shaw Habit (1) in which the question was whether the Court had power to remove a sajjadanashin and appoint some one else in the office. In that case the learned Judge speaking of the duties which were actually performed by the incumbent in the particular case before him says at page 680 of the report "In short the duties ordinarily attached to the office of a sajjadanashin did not appertain to the position which the defendant and his ancestors have been occupying. All that they had to do was to conduct the annual urs and to offer fatehas at tombs, and none of these could be said to be functions incapable of being performed by other Muhammadans. As regards maintenance of the daily service at the mosque or of the special services in the mosque on Fridays or on the occasion of the Ramzan, the Eedul Fitar and the Bakrid, the work was capable of being attended to by any mutwalli of a mosque." It cannot be supposed, however, that in delivering this opinion the learned Judge had in mind the question of whether a woman could perform the duties to which he was referring. That the duties referred could be performed by a mutwalli not specially qualified as a sajjadanashin may be conceded, but the opinion of Abdur Rahim, J., above quoted does not touch upon the question of sex disqualification. No doubt the origin of the rule that a woman was not qualified to perform the functions of a sajjadanashin is based upon the consideration that it is unseemly for a Muhammadan lady to perform duties which bring her in close and intimate association with the general public of the opposite sex but there seems to be no reason why the disqualification should be confined only to those cases in which the office requires that spiritual instruction should be given by a teacher to his disciples. Whatever may have been the exact nature of the objections upon which the disqualification of a woman to act as sajjadanashin was originally based it would appear to have become a settled rule at the present day that no woman is qualified to become a sajjadanashin whose office involves the performance of religious and spiritual duties, not only those of pir muridi but those of reading the fateha and offering prayers and incense in a place of public worship. In Mujavar Ibramb bi v. Mujavar Hussain Sheriff (2) it was held that a woman is not competent to perform the duties of mujavar of a dargah which are not of a secular nature. In that case the lands had been dedicated for the reading of the fateha, for the supply of water, lights, flowers, and other things requisite for the services to be performed at a dargah and for the support of those by whom the services should be performed. In that case the learned Judges stated:—

"It appears from the evidence that the office of mujavar entails the discharge

(1) 53 Ind. Cas. 677; (1919) M. W. N. 662;

(2) 3 M. 95; 5 Ind. Jur. 190; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 623; of duties of a spiritual character, such as reading the fateha, offering prayers and incense, etc., which could not conveniently be performed by a woman. There is no satisfactory evidence that the office has ever been held by a woman, except in one instance, and that was at a different place, and in that case it is admitted there were in the family in which the office was hereditary no male members by whom its functions could be discharged.

"The question as to the competency of a female to hold the office was in reference to the same endowment considered and determined by this Court in the negative in Hussain Bibi v. Hussain Sheriff (3) where a claim was advanced by the widow of a deceased mutavar to be declared entitled to discharge in her turn the duties of the office and to obtain possession of a share of the endowed property. That decision notices the distinction which exists between a trusteeship for secular purposes, which can be held by a woman, and an office entailing religious duties, for which a woman is not eligible, and rests on the authority of Macnaghten (Muhammadan Law, 343, Note, and the cases cited in the appendix to that work.)"

On referring to Mr. Macnaghten's note already quoted it will be found that he makes no difference between spiritual and religious duties, the antithesis being between spiritual and temporal duties, the latter being capable of performance by a woman and the former not. The authority of other text writers also seems opposed to the view that a woman can perform the duties of a sajjadanashin. Mr. Syed Ameer Ali a text writer of repute states the matter thus: "The office of mutwalli is an office of personal trust, and a person who cannot discharge the duties of the trust personally, nor be responsible for their due discharge, cannot appoint a deputy. But where the mutwalli has to perform religious duties or spiritual functions in connection with the wakf, which, as regards men, can only be performed by a man, a woman cannot be appointed to the office. For example, if the mutwalli is also the superior of a religious establishment, and, as such, has to officiate on occasions of religious festivals, a woman is precluded by her sex from holding the towliat" In support of this opinion he relies amongst other authorities upon the case already referred to of Muiawar Ibram Bibi v. Mujavar Hussain Sheriff (2) (Muhammadan Law, 4th Edition, Vol. I, 443). Sir Roland Wilson in his treatise on Anglo Muhammadan Law, 5th Edition, page 357, paragraph 321, states the law thus—"A female may be the mutwalli of an endowment and so may a non-Muhammadan; but if the endowment be for the purpose of divine worship, neither females nor non-Muhammadans are competent to hold the office of sajjadanashin, or spiritual superior." Mr. P. R. Ganapathi Iyer in his book on Hindu and Muhammadan endowments, 2nd Edition, page 435, after pointing out that the office of sajjadanashin and mutwalli are separate and distinct says" The sajjadanashin has charge of the spiritual affairs of the endowment. But the mutwalli has charge of its temporal affairs. One consequence of this is that a woman may be a mutwalli but cannot be a sajjadanashin. According to the Muhammadan Law, the duties of mutwalli who has not to perform religious duties or spiritual functions may be discharged by proxy. But the office of sajjadanashin requires peculiar personal qualifications and duties attached to that office cannot be discharged by proxy, A woman, therefore, cannot be appointed to such office.... It may happen that in some cases the office of mutwalli and sajjada are combined in the same person. Then also a woman cannot be appointed."

It is found in the present case the Mutwalliship appertains to the office of sajjadanashin and as that office requires certain personal qualifications which cannot be performed by proxy the question does not arise in the present case whether a female could be appointed mutwalli delegating the performance of religious offices to a proxy. This question was considered in the case of Munnavaru Begam Sahibu v. Mir Mahapalli Sahib (4)

(3) 4 M. H. C. R. 23.

(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 489; 41 M. 1033.

where it was held that a religious office can be held by a woman under the Muhammadan Law unless there are duties of a religious nature attached to the office which she cannot perform in person or by the deputy. In that case Abdur Rahim, J., remarked: "The rule prohibiting women from being appointed to such offices is not confined to the office of sajjadanashin but there may be other offices which she may not be able to perform, for instance, that of an Imam, in a mosque where she would have to lead the congregation." The learned Judge was of opinion that the prohibition did not arise from any absolute injunction of Muhammadan religion or law but from local usages and customs. In the present case no local usage or custom has been proved which would entitle a woman to act as sajjadanashin nor was any instance given in which a woman had occupied that office in the mosque in question. In my opinion the plaintiff is disqualified by reason of her sex from the right to act as mutwalli of the property in suit by reason of the fact that the office involves the performance of the duties of a sajjadanashin.

Moreover there is, I think, another fatal objection to the plaintiff's claim. Although a minor might succeed by inheritance to the office of mutwalli, a substitute being appointed to carry out the duties during his minority, it seems to be settled law that where the succession is not by inheritance but by appointment or selection a minor cannot be appointed. Mr. Syed Ameer Ali, Muhammadan Law, Vol. I, page 445 says:—

"In the absence of any provision in the trust-deed as to the mode of succession, or of any evidence of usage, the mutwalli may, on his death-bed, nominate his successor, and such nomination will be valid without any judicial order. But in order that the nomination may be effective it is necessary that the person so appointed should be adult and possessed of understanding. All the authorities are agreed that a minor can not lawfully be appointed a mutwalli. The Fatawai Alamgiri lays down the principle thus:—

"'And it is a condition to the validity of the appointment of a mutwalli that he should be adult and possessed of understanding and thus it is stated in the Bahr ur-Raik.'

"So also in the Radd-ul Muhtar, the conditions necessary to the validity (of the appointment) are puberty (bulugh) and understanding (aakl)."

The learned author further points out that where the office of mutwalli devolves upon a minor by virtue of the provisions of a trust-deed, in such a case the appointment will remain in abeyance until majority is attained. So also when the towliat is hereditary in a family and a minor succeeds, the Kazi shall not remove him but shall appoint another to discharge the duties of the office during his minority. Mr. Tyabji's Principles of Muhammadan Law, page 410, also states clearly:—'Where an infant or person of unsound mind is purported to be appointed as a mutwalli his appointment is void. Where the office of mutwalli devolves upon a person who is a minor, the Court may appoint another mutwalli to act in his place during his minority." In the present case the plaintiff's right is based not upon succession but upon appointment and her minority appears to be fatal to the claim. In my opinion this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Kulwant Sahai, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

N. H.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 201 OF 1921.

October 5th, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Phillips and Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

VEDLA VENKATASUBBAMMA PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
VEDLA VENKAMMA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Estoppel—Adoption by widow—Representation of authority to adopt by husband—Conduct.

A Hindu widow, who in adopting a boy to her husband represents that she was authorised by her husband to do so and thereafter by her words and conduct holds out and treats the boy as the lawfully adopted son, is estopped from denying that she had the authority of her husband to adopt or that the adoption was a valid one. [p. 215, col. 2.]

Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh, 15 Ind. Cas. 673; 34 A. 398; 16 C. W. N. 675; 9 A. L. J. 730; 14 Bom. L. R. 485; (1912) M. W. N. 641; 12 M. L. T. 95; 16 C. L. J. 60; 23 M. L. J. 200; 39 I. A. 142 (P. C.) and Ramachari v. Saraswati Ammal, 60 Ind. Cas. 246; 12 L. W. 544; (1920) M. W. N. 721, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Bezwada, in O.S. No. 68 of 1919.

Messrs. T. R. Ramachandra Iyer and S. Srinivasa Iyer, for the Appellant.

Messrs. A. Krishnaswami Iyer and V. Suryanarayana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this case is the widow of one Vedala Janakiramayya who is said to be the adopted son of the first defendant's husband. The first defendant has denied both the factum of the adoption and also its validity. The Subordinate Judge has found that the ceremony of adoption did actually take place and that the plaintiff's husband has been treated as an adopted son by the first defendant, but he has held that the first defendant not having had authority from her husband or from the sapindas to make the adoption, the adoption is invalid; and he has further found that the first defendant is not estopped from raising the plea of the invalidity of the adoption. In appeal, the factum of the adoption is not disputed and the only point which is seriously argued is that the authority given by the husband has not been actually proved, but it is contended that the first defendant by her conduct and acts from the time of the adoption until the present day, is estopped from denying that the plaintiff's husband was really her adopted son.

There are many facts which we think may be referred to in detail, as the question of estoppel must depend upon the evidence and we will proceed to mention the chief circumstances which would lead to an inference in coming to a decision. In the first place, when this boy was adopted his name and house name were changed. He took the house name of the first defendant's husband and the name of his adopted father's father. Immediately after the adoption, the first defendant performed his upanayanam ceremony. Some years later, the first defendant performed his marriage and also graphpravesam ceremony. The adopted boy performed the shradha for the first defendant's husband and it also appears that he had on share in the property belonging to his natural family. The partition in the natural family has not been actually proved but, from the only evidence available, it seems clear that Janakiramayya did not receive any of his natural family's property. There is thefurther circumstance that, when Janakiramayya's natural mother died, the plaintiff did not observe polution and, if Janakiramayya had been a member of that family, she must undoubtedly have done so. These circumstances are all very strong evidence that the first defendant did adopt the boy and treated him as a lawfully adopted son; his performance of the ceremonies mentioned was one that could only be done by an adopted son, and, therefore, the whole course of the conduct of the first defendant, and, as far as we know, of other people, shewed a recognition of the validity of Janakiramayya's adoption. In this connection we may refer to the case decided by the Privy Council in Dharam Kunwar v. Balwant Singh (1), which in many respects resembles the facts here. It is suggested in Ramachari v. Saraswati Ammal (2), that the remarks of the Privy Council in this case are mere obiter dicta but we think that is hardly so, although they decided the question in issue in two ways; once as a question of fact and again on the question of estoppel, which had been the only one decided by the Allahabad High Court. In that judgment we find the following passage relating to the widow who was held to be estopped from disputing the validity of the adoption which she had made: "She has asserted her authority in the most solemn manner under her hand and seal, and her conduct both before and after the assertion has been of a like unequivocal character. She could not now be allowed to change her story without grave injustice ensuing to those who have acted in reliance upon her deliberate and repeated representations. The respondent is now severed from his natural family; he has undergone a change of social status which may or may not be beneficial to him, but which has certainly so altered his mode of life as to make a relapse into his former condition a grievous hardship upon him. He and his friends have been driven to expenses in the maintenance of the privileges with which the Rani purported to endow him. He married on the faith of this adoptive mother's word, and, no doubt, has creditors who have sold him goods or lent him money in like reliance on her good faith." Many of these facts we find in the present case and we think that they are sufficient to constitute an estoppel. It was contended by Mr. Krishnaswamy Aiyar for the respondent that the representation by the first defendant that the boy had been adopted was nothing more than a representation that the ceremony of adoption had taken place and that it could not be treated as a representation that that ceremony was validly performed. In the circumstances of this case we are not prepared to accept the plea. It would be very difficult at this late stage to prove the authority considering that the adoption took place as long ago as 1897; and, when the first defendant by her words and acts held out the boy as her adopted son, it is difficult to restrict that representation to a mere assertion that the ceremony of adoption had taken place. In addition to her conduct we have the deliberate statement made by her in Exhibit K, which is the earliest opportunity afforded to her to make a representation in public, that she had her husband's authority to adopt. There is also evidence that she asserted this authority at the time of the adoption, which we see no reason to discredit. This coupled with her conduct is quite sufficient to constitute an estoppel and we must hold accordingly that she is estopped from denying the adoption.

(1) 15 Ind. Cas. 673; 34 A. 398; 16 C. W. N. 675; 9 A. L. J. 730; 14 Bom. L. R. 485; (1912) M. W. N. 641; 12 M. L. T. 95; 16 C. L. J. 60; 23 M. L. J. 200; 39 I. A. 142 (P. C.).

(2) 60 Ind. Cas. 246; 12 L. W. 544; (1920) M. W. N. 721.

A further question is raised by the respondents as to Item No. 3, which the second defendant claims to have obtained under some arrangement with the first defendant in 1897. The second defendant has not been examined and the first defendant does not support his case, and we have only very vague indications from the evidence to enable such a case to be put forward It certainly has not been proved.

The appeal will be allowed and the plaintiff will have a decree for possession of the suit property and for mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 250 per annum from the date of plaint. As the first defendant is now dead, the mesne profits will be payable by the second defendant and defendants Nos. 3 to 6. The question of their respective liabilities will be determined in execution. The plaintiff will have her costs throughout against the second defendant and the second defendant will pay Government the court-fees on the plaint and the appeal memorandum.

V. N. V. S. D. Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

REFERRED CASE NO. 20 OF 1922.

September 25, 1923.

Present :—Sir Walter Salis Schwabe, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter.

THE SECRETARY, BOARD OF REVENUE, LAND REVENUE AND SETTLEMENT (INCOME TAX)—REFERRING-OFFICER

versus

R. M. A. R. R. M. ARUNACHELAM CHETTIAR—ASSESSEE.

Income Tax Act (VII of 1918), s 3 (2) (viii)—Exchange profits—Assessment to Income tax—Casual profits.

A Nattukottai Chetty carrying on business in Madras and elsewhere as Banker and money-lender remitted from Madras sums aggregating over four lakhs of rupees to Penang through his banking agents, such sums being invested there in Straits Settlements dollars and ultimately reconverted into rupees and remitted back to Madras. The remittances were made on eight occasions and the re-transfer to Madras on thirteen occasions. Owing to fluctuations of exchange between dollars and Rupees the Chetty made a profit of considerable amount on the transactions, and was assessed to income-tax. These dealings in exchange had become part of the assessee's general Banking business:

Held, that the income, not being receipts arising from business of a casual and non-recurring nature was rightly assessed to Income-Tax.

In considering whether a case comes under section 3 (2) (viii) of the Income Tax Act, receipts of a casual and non-recurring nature are only exempted when they are not receipts arising from business. The question to be considered is whether a particular receipt is properly brought into account or omitted in carrying the profits of a business. If the transactions form part of the ordinary business of the assessee, the profits or losses must be brought into account. But if the transactions are outside the scope of the ordinary business of the assessee, they need not be brought into account. The question is one of fact in each case whether the transactions form part of the ordinary business or not. [p. 217, col. 2; p. 218, col. 1.]

California Copper Syndicate Co., Limited v. Harris, (1904) 5 Tax Cas. 159; 6 F. 894, Hudson's Bay Company v. Stevens, (1909) 5 Tax Cas. 424; Commissioner of Taxes v. Melbourne Trust, Limited, (1914) A. C. 1001; 84 L. J. P. C. 21; 30 T. L. R. 685 and Beynon v. Ogg, 7 Tax Cas. 125, followed.

Case stated under section 51 (1) of the Income Tax Act of 1918 by the Secretary, Board of Revenue, Land Revenue and Settlement (Income-Tax) in I. T. A. No. 316 and S. T. A. 64 of 1921-22 in his letter dated the 16th October 1922.

The Government Pleader, for Referring Officer.

Messrs. A. Krishnaswamy Aiyar and M. Patanjali Sastri, for the Assessee.

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe C. J.—The assessee is a Nattukottai Chetty carrying on business in Madras and elsewhere as Banker and money-lender. In the year of assessment, he remitted from Madras sums aggregating over four lakhs of rupees to Penang, such sums being invested there in Straits Settlements dollars, and ultimately reconverted into rupees and remitted back to Madras. The remittances were made on eight occasions within a period of four months in 1919 and the re-transfer to Madras was on thirteen occasions covering a period of four months from the end of 1920 to the beginning of 1921. Owing to the fluctuations in exchange, which varied between 93 and 175 rupees per 100 dollars the assessee made a profit of a considerable amount on the transaction. He has been assessed to income-tax on that profit, and the question referred to this Court is whether he has been correctly assessed. Under section 51 (1) of the Income Tax Act which was then in force, any question which has arisen with reference to the interpretation of any of the provisions of this Act may be referred to the High Court. This action probably gives wider powers than section 66 of the Indian Income Tax Act of 1922, the consolidating Act now in force, which limits the references to the High Court to questions of law. It is not, however, necessary to consider the exact meaning of the words of these sections because, the facts having been found, the question whether or not they bring the income within the reach of any particular section of the Act is a question of law.

Section 3 of the Act applies to all income from whatever source it is derived, if it accrues, or arises, or is received in British India. Certain exceptions are set forth in section 3 (2) and among those exceptions is to be found (viii) "any receipts not being receipts arising from business or the exercise of a profession, vacation, or occupation which are of a casual and non-recurring nature." By the combined effect of sections 5 and 9, income derived from the business is chargeable to income-tax in respect of the profits of any business carried on by the assessee. In the United Kingdom, income-tax is payable on the balance of profits and gains derived from carrying on a trade or business. I can find no distinction in this matter between the laws of the two countries. The English Acts have not got the exception in so many terms of receipts of a casual and non-recurring nature; but, as by the words of section 3 (2) (viii) of the Indian Act, receipts of a casual and non-recurring nature are only exempted when they are not receipts arising from business, the question to be considered both in India and England is whether a particular receipt is properly brought into account or omitted in arriving at the profit of a business. If the transactions are business transactions and result in a profit or loss made in the carrying on of the business, they must be brought into account; otherwise not. The questions which have arisen for decision have been whether particular transactions form part of a business carried on by the assessee. They need not be part of some already established business but they must together form business. If the transactions form part of the ordinary business of the assessee the profits or losses on them must, of course, be brought into account. But where the transactions are outside the scope of the ordinary business of the assessee it is often a difficult question to decide whether or not they are to be treated subject to income-tax. Profits may be made by the realisations of security or by the sale of land or moveable property and, in the case of one man they may be merely successful realisations of assets or alterations of investments while in the case of another man they may form part of the income of a business. To give a simple illustration a Barrister might buy a picture and at a later date when the works of the particular artist were in demand, sell that picture and realise profit. No income-tax would be payable on this profit. If a picture dealer bought a picture and on the same events happening sold it at a profit, that profit would be a profit earned in his business and would be liable to income-tax. So, too, profits made on isolated specualtiors are not liable to income-tax, but those made in speculation of a similar kind as a part of business would be liable. A difficult question may, however, arise as to whether the transactions are of such frequency as to amount to carrying on a business. The distinction is well illustrated by the cases of the California Copper Syndicate Co., Limited v. Harris (1) and Hudson's Bay Company v. Stevens (2). In the former a Company was formed for the purpose of acquiring and reselling mining property and also for working such property. It acquired and worked various properties and then re-sold the whole at a profit, and it was held that such profit was liable to income-tax and Lord Justice Clarke Macdonald in the course of the judgment subsequently approved by the Privy Council in Commissioner of Taxes v. Melbourne Trust Limited (3) said: "The question to be determined being is the sum of gain that has been made a mere enhancement of value by realising a security or is it a gain made in an operation of business in carrying out a scheme for profit-making." In the latter, a Company received by grant from the Crown and as consideration for surrender of their charter, large tracts of land and then proceeded over a period of time to sell that land in small lots and it was held that the profits made on these cases were not liable to income-tax, the sales being merely realisation of assets, the Company not carrying on trade in buying and selling lands. In Beynon v. Ogg (4) a Company whose ordinary business was that of coal merchants, Insurance Brokers and Agents of colliery Companies purchased on its own account as a speculation 250 Railway Coal Trucks and subsequently got rid of them at a profit. It was held that the profit was made in the operation of the Company's business. It was pointed out by Sankey, J., that though in most cases an isolated transaction does not fall to be chargeable, it was not possible to say that the mere fact that it was an isolated transaction at once takes it out of the category of chargeable property and it was necessary to look at the number of the wagons bought, the amount invested and how they were sold, and, in fact, to look at the whole circumstances to say whether the assessee had embarked on the purchase of Railway wagons as part of his business.

Turning to the facts of this case, the assessee was a dealer in money and had by reason of his dealings with the Straits Settlements facilities at hand for dealings in exchange between Madras and the Straits Settlements. He had at Penang agents, themselves bankers, who were in the habit of collecting for him outstandings in his money-lending business, and as and when required remitting them to India and in a process converting dollars into rupees. During the periods in question in this case, he got regular information by letter

(1) (1904) 5 Tax Cas. 159; 6 F. 894.
(2) (1909) 5 Tax Cas 424.
(3) (1914) A. C. 1001; 84 L. J. P. C. 21; 30 T. L. R. 685.
(4) 7 Tax Cas. 125.

RAJEPPA RANAPPA KUNDAGOL v. GANGAPPA JOTAPPA MANDWE.

and cable from these agents as to the movements of exchange in the Straits Settlements. He sent large sums of money extending over a period of four months. At first the market went against him and he sent increasing quantities of rupees, no doubt with a view to averaging the cost of the dollars. The dollars were by arrangement with the agent left on deposit carrying interest, a fact not in itself conclusive and when he got them back, by reason of the increase in the value of the rupee he was able to realise by degrees an increasing profit. Taking all these facts into consideration, I think that the right inference to be drawn is that in this case these dealings in exchange had become part of the assessee's Banking business, and I think that even looked at apart from his ordinary business, he did not enter into these transactions as an isolated investment or capital or speculation, but as a business of a dealer in exchange.

On these grounds, I hold that the decision of the Commissioner is correct. The assessee must pay the costs.

Coutts-Trotter, J.—I agree.

Reference answered.

V. N. V.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 483 OF 1921.

April 10, 1922.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Shah.

RAJEPPA RANAPPA KUNDAGOL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GANGAPPA JOTAPPA MANDWE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Bombay Presidency—Inheritance—Atmabandhus—Mother's brother's son and mother's sister's son.

According to the Mitakshara, as interpreted in the Bombay Presidency, mother's brother's son and mother's sister's son, being atmabandhus are equally distant and, therefore, are entitled to inherit the property equally. [p. 222, col. 1.]

Appandai Vathiyar v. Bagubali Mudaliar, 5 Ind. Cas. 280; 33 M. 439; (1910) M. W. N. 44; 7 M. L. T. 203; 20 M. L. J. 275; Ram Charan Lal v. Rahim Bakhsh, 34 Ind. Cas. 108; 38 A. 416; 14 A. L. J. 538; Mohandas v. Krishnabai, 5 B. 597; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 393 and Tirumalachariar v. Andal Ammal, 30 M. 406; 2 M. L. T. 357; 17 M. L. J. 285, dissented from.

Dattatraya v. Gangabai, 77 Ind. Cas; 17, 24 Bom. R. 69; 46 B. 541; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 321, referred to.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Dharwar, in Appeal No. 232 of 1919, reversing the decree passed by the Assistant Judge, Dharwar, in Civil Suit No. 31 of 1919.

Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar, for the Appellant.

Mr. Y. N. Nadkarni, for Mr. K. H. Helkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, J.—The question of law arising in this appeal is as to how the property of a Hindu would devolve when the nearest relations of the deceased are his mother's sister's son and mother's brother's son.

The facts are not in dispute. Nagapa was the last male holder and the adopted son of Jivapa. On his death the property devolved on his adoptive mother Pirava. She alienated the property in suit to her brother's son who is defendant No. 1. She died, and thereafter defendant No. 2, who is found to be her sister's son, sold the property to the plaintiff. On Pirava's death the inheritance is to be traced to Nagapa. The plaintiff claims through the adoptive mother's sister's son and defendant No. 1 claims as the mother's brother's son. The alienation by Pirava ceased to be operative on her death.

The Trial Court held that the mother's sister's son was the preferential heir, and decreed the plaintiff's claim. The lower Appellate Court held that the mother's brother's son was the preferential heir and accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's suit with costs.

In the appeal before us the same question arises, and we have to decide as to what are the rights of the competing heirs to the inheritance of Nagapa.

The view of the Trial Court is in accordance with the decision of the High Court of Madras in Appandai Vathiyar v. Bagubali Mudaliar (1) and the view of the Appellate Court is supported by the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Ram Charan Lal v. Rahim Bakhsh (2). There is no decision of this Court on the point. The only decision to which a reference may be made is the case of Mohandas v. Krishnabai (3) in which the mother's brother (an atmabandhu not expressly mentioned) was preferred to the mother's sister's son (an atmabandhu expressly mentioned) on the ground of propinquity.

Here we have to consider the claims of the mother's sister's son and the mother's brother's son. Both are males, both are atmabandhus expressly mentioned in the Mitakshara and the Vyavahara Mayukha, both are equally removed from the propositus and they are both related on the mother's side.

Considering the point with reference to the texts exclusively, apart from the decisions, it is clear from the Mitakshara Chapter II, section 6, placita 1 and 2 (Stokes' Hindu Law Books, page 448) that both are atmabandhus, and there is nothing to guide us beyond this that by reason of near affinity the cognate kindred of the deceased himself are his successors in the first instance; on failure of them his father's cognate kindred; or if there be none, his mother's kindred." The only ground for determining the preference of one bandhu over the other is 'near affinity' or 'propinquity' the word in the text for it being antarangatva. It is now settled beyond controversy that the lists of bandhus are merely illustrative and not exhaustive and that nothing is laid down by Vijnansevara beyond this that atmabandhus are to be preferred to pitribandhus and that pitribandhus are to be preferred to the matribandhus, and that the reason of the preference is propinquity. In the Vyavahara Mayukha also we find the same thing, and nothing more. (See Mandlik's Hindu Law, page 82). After referring to the Smriti texts, specifying the different classes of bandhus, which have been quoted by Vijnanesvara in the Mitakshara, the author of the Mayukha says that the order (of succession) is as stated in the text. I have given the English translation of this passage as rendered by Mr. Mandlik, who has added a foot-note expressing his opinion that the order must be taken to have been specified in the texts even as regards each class of bandhus. Apart from the argument based on this note, there is nothing in the Vyavahara Mayukha which throws any further light on the point now under consideration. It is not necessary to refer to other works on Hindu Law. It is enough to point out that there is nothing in the texts or the commentaries which are accepted as authorities in this Presidency to show that any test for determining the question of preference among bandhus of the same class other than that of propinquity is laid down.

All other considerations to be found in modern books on Hindu Law are useful in determining the nearness of affinity: but there is no express reference thereto to be found in the texts, the only test mentioned being propinquity. Speaking with reference to this Presidency I think that the only test that has been applied, and that ought to be applied, is propinquity to the deceased. Applying that test to the facts of this case without reference to any other consideration it seems to me that both are equally removed from the propositus.

It is urged, however, that when that is the case, considerations of the relative religious efficacy of the oblations offered by these relations ought to be considered. Both the Madras and Allahabad High Courts have rejected the argument of relative religious efficacy in the case of these two bandhus. It is held that it affords no safe basis for preferring one to the other. I do not consider it necessary to deal with this argument at length. In this Presidency the test has not been accepted as sound in the case of distant relations—like bandhus. Its application is apt to lead to confusion: also the test when applied to the case of the two bandhus that we are concerned with fails to yield any such result as would justify the preference of one over the other. It is enough to state that on this point I accept the view of the Madras and Allahabad High Courts.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 280; 33 M. 439; (1910) M. W. N. 44; 7 M. L. T. 203; 20 M. L. J. 275.
(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 108; 38 A. 416; 14 A. L. J. 538.
(3) 8 B. 397; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 393.

It is next urged that on the ground stated in the foot-note in Mr. Mandlik's book on Hindu Law, to which I have already referred, the mother's sister's son should be preferred to the mother's brother's son as having been mentioned first. Though there is no express reference to this foot-note in the judgment in Mohandas v. Krishnabai (3) it appears that as far back as 1881 the opinion was expressed with reference to the words used by Nilakantha in the Vyavahara Mayukha that thereby he seems to intend no more than is stated in the Mitakshara. It is difficult to assume that the foot-note in Mandlik's Hindu Law, which was published in 1879, was not brought to the notice of the learned Judges. Apart from that, however, I think that the opinion expressed with reference to the meaning of the words used in the Vyavahara Mayukha is correct, if I may say so with respect. I do not desire to discuss this point in detail. I do not think it is reasonable to apply the rule referred to in the foot-note to the order mentioned in the Smriti texts relating to the illustrative lists of bandhus. I can understand the force of this argument when applied to a text like the well-known text where the different heirs are mentioned in their order. But where the bandhus are only intended to be indicated, it seems to me that it is not right to attach any importance to the order in which they are mentioned in each class. I feel justified in taking this view by the fact that Vijnanesvara does not refer to this order as having any significance though he expressly points out that the order is indicated as regards each class of bandhus.

It is further urged on behalf of the respondent that as two females intervene between the propositus and the defendant No. 2, he should rank after defendant No. 1 as an heir, and the decision in Tirumalachariar v. Andal Ammal (4) has been relied upon in support of that general consideration. The Allahabad High Court has decided in favour of the mother's brother's son relying to a certain extent upon this ground. It seems to me, however, that there is no basis in the Mitaksahra or the Vyavahara Mayukha for the general proposition which has been stated in the above Madras case somewhat too broadly. I quite admit that the circumstance of more females than one intervening would render it easy for the Court in many cases to apply the test of propinquity, and to decide who is the nearer bandhu. But I do not think that a bandhu could be necessarily described as being more remote than another on the mere ground of two females intervening between him and the propositus. It depends upon the particular relationship. No doubt among the modern writers on Hindu Law there is weight given to this consideration; and in the various tables that are to be found the effect of this consideration is apparent. But all the writers are by no means agreed, for instance it appears from Golap Chandra Sarkar Sastri's Treatise on Hindu Law, page 96 (4th Edition), that in his opinion there is no basis for preferring one to the other on this ground. I refer to this opinion as showing that the proposition is not universally accepted. But I base my view upon the fact that the propinquity is the only test sanctioned in the Mitakshara and no general proposition which is not in terms sanctioned by Vijnanesvara can be laid down as being decisive. I think that each case should be dealt with on the basis of the particular relationships existing between the bandhus and the propositus: and speaking with reference to these two bandhus in particular, I do not think that the mother's brother's son can be said to be nearer to the propositus than the mother's sister's son. In the recent case of Dattatraya v. Gangabai (5) in which this Court had to consider the subject of the succession among bandhus, we declined to prefer one bandhu to the other on the ground of the mother of the one being a preferential heir to the mother of the other. If the preference which may exist among the mothers is not to have any decisive significance, I do not see how the fact of the father of one bandhu being a preferential heir to the mother of another bandhu, if those persons were alive, could be allowed to determine the relative rights of their respective sons. As regards these particular bandhus, I think that this consideration is not sufficient to justify the preference of one to the other. The antarangatva (near affinity) of these two relations is much the same, and I am unable to discover any substantial ground for ranking one above the other. The result is that both are equally distant, and are equally entitled. It is clear that in the texts in which these bandhus are mentioned as illustrative of the class, there is no indication as to their relative rights inter se, and generally speaking it may be said that where the relationship is equally distant and there is no firm basis to prefer the one to the other, there is no reason why both should not be allowed to take equally. Just as nothing is indicated as to the order in which the bandhus in each class are to take inter se, nothing is indicated as to their taking equally in some cases. This alternative has been generally ignored in the discussions as to succession among bandhus, and sometimes the order is settled as if this alternative was not open at all. It seems to me, however, that in the case of these bandhus when there is nothing definite to enable the Court to decide the question of preference, there is no reason why we should go out of our way to find out some possible ground for such preference. In such a case there can be no objection to give effect to the view that as both are equally near to the propositus they ought to take equally.

(4) 30 M. 406; 2 M. L. T. 357; 17 M. L. J. 285.

(5) 77 Ind. Cas. 17; 24 Bom. L. R. 691; 46 B. 541; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 321.

I would, therefore, allow the appeal to that extent, set aside the decree of the lower Court and direct that the property of Nagappa be equally partitioned between the defendant No. 2 and defendant No. 1 and that the property sold to plaintiff be assigned to the share of defendant No. 2 as far as possible and handed over to the plaintiff.

Each party to bear his own costs throughout. The partition of lands liable to pay assessment to be effected by the Collector as provided by the Code of Civil Procedure.

Macleod, C. J.—I have nothing to add. I entirely agree with the conclusions arrived at in the judgment which has just been read.

N. K. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1705 OF 1921.

March 3, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

HASTI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

HIRA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Adverse possession—Remote reversioner.

An adverse possession of the property of the last male holder is not adverse to a remoter reversioner during the lifetime of the nearest reversioner, that is so long as his right to possession does not accrue. [p. 223, col. 2.]

Sundar v. Salig Ram, 9 Ind. Cas. 300; 26 P. R. 1911; 34 P. L. R. 1911; 33 P. W. R. 1911 and Roda v. Harnam, 18 P. R. 1895 (F. B.), followed; Kaka v. Labh Chand, 106 P. R. 1906; 162 P. L. R. 1906, not followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 16th May 1921, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Delhi, dated the 8th February 1921.

Mr. Badri Nath Kapur, for Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Raj Krishna, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The following pedigree-table will be of assistance in understanding the facts of the case out of which the present second appeal arises:—

Not Ram died in 1890 or 1891 and mutation of his land was sanctioned in favour of Hans Ram, Mehun and the sons of Ramla who had predeceased his father. At that time the whole of the land left by Ganga Bisken was joint, but in 1894 or thereabouts there was a private partition and the share of the descendants of Not Ram was separated off from the shares of Ganga Bishen's other two sons. In 1903 Mehun died and his land was mutated half in favour of Hans Ram, and half in favour of the sons of Ramla with Hans Ram's consent. The collaterals sued to contest this mutation but withdrew their suit with permission to sue again. In 1911, Jamna and others revived the suit of 1904 and got a declaratory decree protecting their reversionary rights in Mehun's land against the sons of Ramla, it being held in that suit that Ramla was a pichhlag and not the real son of Not Ram. Hans Ram's line has now died out, his widow having died in June in 1919. Hasti, Kanhya, Devka and Jamna brought the present suit for the land which came to the sons of Ramla upon the death of Not Ram in 1891. The first Court held that the suit was within time as the plaintiff's right to sue for possession only accrued upon the dying out of the line of Hans Ram. The lower Appellate Court holds that the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs are reversioners is not barred by limitation for the plaintiffs had no right to possess the land until the line of Not Ram died out. At the same time, the Court held that the descendants of Ramla had been in adverse possession of the land against the whole world since they obtained it upon the death of Not Ram, and that, therefore, the suit was barred by time. The plaintiffs have filed a second appeal in this Court and it is urged that though the possession of the sons of Ramla may from the very beginning have been adverse to Hans Ram and Mehun, the suit of the plaintiffs is not barred by time because they had no right to sue for possession until the line of Hans Ram had died out.

It is common ground that the question whether Ramla is the son or stepson of Not Ram is res judicata. The lower Appellate Court appears to have held that Ramla's sons got a share in the land by virtue of a gift from their uncles. But this was never pleaded in the Trial Court and their Counsel frankly admits that they had not relied upon any allegation of gift. In my opinion, the theory of the gift is not warranted by the facts. It is not shown that Hans Ram and Mehun got possession of the whole of the land on Not Ram's death and made a gift of a portion of it to their nephews. On the contrary, it is clear that the sons of Ramla were allowed to succeed to one-fourth share of Not Ram's estate. There was no alienation in their favour by their uncles, and, therefore, Punjab Act I of 1900 does not apply. Counsel for the appellants relies upon Sundar v. Salig Ram (1). In that case it was held, following the principles underlying Roda v. Hurnam (2), that the claim was not barred under Art. 144 of the Limitation Act inasmuch as the plaintiff's right to sue for possession was not derived from or through B, the nearest reversioner of the last male-owner, and, secondly, the defendant's possession though adverse to B could not be adverse to the plaintiffs until after his death, when their right to possession accrued. Now, relying upon this Counsel urges that though the possession of Ramla's sons was adverse to their uncles from 1890 or 1891, still inasmuch as the plaintiffs' right to sue for possession was not derived from or through them, the possession of the sons of Ramla could not be adverse to them until after the dying out of Hans Ram's line when their right to possession accrued. Counsel for the respondents cites Kaka v. Labh Chand (3) which is certainly in support of his contention that the suit is barred by time, but that decision was considered and dissented from in the Full Bench Ruling of 1911. He also refers to Mahmu v. Shihan Singh (4), but in that case the Division Bench apparently distinguished Sundar v. SaligRam (1) and the facts, moreover, do not appear to be on all fours with the present case. I have no difficulty in holding that the Full Bench Ruling of 1911 governs the present case and that the plaintiffs' suit is, therefore, within time.

(1) 9 Ind. Cas. 300; 26 P. R. 1911; 34 P. L. R. 1911; 33 P. W. R. 1911.
(2) 18 P. R. 1895 (F. B.);

I accordingly accept the appeal and setting aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court restore that of the First Court decreeing the plaintiffs' suit with costs in all Courts.

N. H. Appeal accepted.

(3) 106 P. R. 1906; 162 P. L. R. 1906.
(4) 52 Ind. Cas. 857; 76 P. R. 1919.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 16 OF 1922.
July 12, 1923.

Present :—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kemp.

HARIBHAI GULAB—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
MATHURA LALLU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mayukha—Succession—Uncle and nephew—Priority.

According to the Vyavahara Mayukha the only test of preference among the distant Sapindas is the test of propinquity to the propositus so that an uncle being nearer to the propositus will exclude a nephew from succession.

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Broach, in Suit No. 396 of 1919.

Messrs. G. N. Thakor (with R. J. Thakore), for the Appellant.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question argued in this appeal is that Haribhai, the plaintiff, would take equally with his uncle Lallu as reversionary heir to the deceased Varadhbhai who was the first cousion of Lallu's father. The relationship of the parties is given at page 3 of the print in the judgment of the lower Court, and according to the relationship it is clear that Lallu is nearer by one degree to Varadhbhai, Haribhai being the son of Lallu's brother Gulab who was dead at the date the inheritance opened.

It is urged on behalf of the plaintiff, who raised this contention in the lower Court without success, that as according to the rule under the Vyavahara Mayukha a brother's son takes with the brother when the inheritance to another deceased brother opens, by the same analogy in the case of distant sapindas the same rule should be adopted. It is a contention which is not supported by any authority. It seems to us to be entirely opposed to the whole scheme of the rules of inheritance. It is enough to refer to the passage in the Vyavahara Mayukha itself at page 82 in Mandlik's Hindu Law, where it is stated. "All the sapindas and the Samanodakas follow in the order of propinquity." and after the specified heirs when we come to the agnates, the only test is the test of propinquity. Applying that rule, it is clear that Lallu would be a nearer heir than Haribhai, and would exclude him. This contention is so opposed to the plain meaning of the Vyavahara Mayukha that we are not surprised that the learned Counsel for the appellant has not been able to rely upon anything better than the analogy of brother and brother's son in support of this proposition. A case like the present is not of uncommon occurrence and if the analogy had ever been extended in this Presidency in the districts governed by the Vyavahara Mayukha, there would be some decision in favour of such a proposition. But the absence of such a decision indicates that the contention is not sound. We therefore, confirm the decree of the lower Court and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

BADAN SINGH v. EMPEROR.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 556 OF 1922.

June 20, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

BADAN SINGH—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 463, 464, 465—Fabricating false document—Forged document, what is—Assertion by creditor in his own book—Offence.

Every false or fabricated document is not a forged document. There must be acts that constitute the document a false or fabricated one, that is to say, the case must fall within the definition of making a false document in section 464 of the Penal Code, and such false document must also possess a certain character or tendency, that is to say, the character described in section 463 of the Code.

Complainant purchased a bullock from the accused and promised to pay the price on a certain date. An entry to that effect was made in the bahi of the accused and was thumb-marked by the debtor. Subsequently, the accused added a clause on the credit side of the bahi to the effect that if the amount was not paid as agreed upon interest at a certain rate would be charged:

Held, that as the addition was merely an assertion by the creditor himself and did not purport to be an agreement by the debtor to pay interest, it did not operate to impose any liability on the debtor, and, therefore, did not amount to a false document within the meaning of section 464 of the Penal Code.

Jawala Ram v. Queen-Empress, 12 P. R. 1895 Cr., followed.

Revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Ludhiana, dated the 16th March 1922, affirming that of the Magistrate, First Class, Ludhiana, dated the 24th February 1922.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This is a petition by Badan Singh for revision of the order of the Sessions Judge of Ludhiana, upholding on appeal an order of the Magistrate convicting him of an offence under sections 471 465, Indian Penal Code.

Briefly the facts were as follows:—Bhana and Puran bought a bullock from the petitioner for Rs. 40 and paying one rupee as earnest promised to pay the remaining Rs. 39 at Namani Sambat 1976. An entry to this effect was made in Badan Singh's account-book and was thumb-marked by the debtors. Subsequently a clause was added on the credit side of the bahi which said that if the amount was not paid as agreed upon then the creditor would take 1½ times the principal including interest.

The sole argument, according to the learned Sessions Judge, raised in his Court was that the addition was made on the credit side and with the permission of the debtors. It has been found as a fact that the debtors did not sanction the addition of the condition about interest. It is contended in revision that even accepting the finding of the lower Courts, no false document has been made within the meaning of section 464, Indian Penal Code. The words of the addition are as follows:—Agar iqrar guzar jawe to biaj semt deorhe lene. It is argued that these words do not purport to contain an agreement by the debtors, but merely represent an assertion by the creditor that if the amount due be not paid as agreed upon, he will take 1½ times the amount. Counsel has referred to Jawala Ram v. Queen-Empress (1) as an authority for the proposition that every false or fabricated document is not a forged document. There must be acts that constitute the document a false or fabricated one, that is to say, the case must fall within the definition of making a false document in section 464, Indian Penal Code, and such false document must also possess a certain character or tendency, that is to say, the character described in section 463, Indian Penal Code. As in that case, so here, the addition complained of is merely an assertion or allegation in writing by the creditor himself and it is to the effect that if the debt is not paid as agreed upon, he will take 1½ times the amount. This entry does not operate to impose any liability to pay interest upon the debtors and, therefore, would not have the tendency referred to in section 463, Indian Penal Code, in other words, it would not cause damage or injury to the debtors, because it does not purport to be any agreement by them to pay interest. I, therefore, hold that no false document has been made within the meaning of section 464, Indian Penal Code. It is possible that the petitioner might have been charged with an attempt to cheat or with fabrication of false evidence but he has not been so charged and the circumstances of the case do not warrant any further trial of him. He has already been sufficiently punished.

(1) 12 P. R. 1895 Cr.

I allow the revision and, setting aside the order of the lower Courts, acquit the petitioner and direct that he be discharged from his bail.

Z. K. Revision accepted.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION FOR REVISION NO. 98 OF 1923.

July 19, 1923.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

NEMCHAND NATHA—ACCUSED —APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act (I of 1918), ss. 7, 8, 9, 10, scope of —School Committee, powers and duties of—Attendence order, failure to obey—Reasonable excuse —Instruction, meaning of—Duty of Court.

The two necessary conditions of a valid conviction under section 10 of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act are: (1) that there must be an order passed by the School Committee under section 9 of the Act, that is an order passed in strict compliance with the procedure laid down in that section; and (2) that the parent must be shown to have failed to comply with the provisions of section 7 of the Act on and after the date specified in such order. [p. 227, col. 2.]

The powers conferred on the School Committee by the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act are wide. They are in curtailment of the right of the parent to give efficient instruction to his child according to his own ideas. It is, therefore, essential that an attendance order passed by the Committee must be shown to have been passed in strict compliance with the procedure therein prescribed, namely "after giving the parent an opportunity of being heard and after such enquiry as it considers necessary" as laid down in section 9 of the Act. The direction as to enquiry in the section is not merely permissive, it has a compulsory force. [p. 227, col. 2.]

It is not essential that the "instruction" referred to in section 8 (b) of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act, in order to be efficient should conform to the standards as adopted in the recognised primary schools. [p. 229, col. 2.]

When a complaint is made to a Court under section 10 of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act, it is the function of the Court to see whether it is proved that the parents failed to send the child to a recognised school, without reasonable cause, on or after the date specified in the attendance order. [p. 229, col. 1.]

Criminal application against conviction and sentence recorded by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, N. P., Surat.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. M. B. Dave), for the Applicant.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General (with him Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader,) for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Coyajee, J.—The applicant in this case asks this Court to set aside an order of conviction made against him by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, N. P. Surat, under section 10 (1) of the Bombay Primary Education (District Municipalities) Act, 1918. The following are the material facts.

In compliance with the provisions of section 3 of the said Act, primary education of girls was made compulsory in the Municipal District of Surat, from January 1, 1920. A School Committee has been duly appointed—its duties being, among others, to enforce the provisions of the Act respecting the attendance of children at school. It is admitted that by section 7 of the Act the applicant was bound to cause his daughter Bai Parson to attend a recognized primary school in the absence of a reasonable cause.

On January 3, 1923 the School Committee sent a notice (Exhibit D) to the applicant requiring him to appear before them on the 9th idem to show cause why he should not cause Bai Parson to attend a recognized primary school. The notice was signed by the school attendance officer on behalf of the Committee. The applicant failed to appear. The Committee thereupon resolved, on January 9 (Exhibit E), that an order should be served on him directing him to cause the child to attend a recognized primary school on or before the 18th of that month. An order to that effect (Exhibit F) was served on him on the 13th; but it is said he refused to acknowledge its receipt.

On January 17, the applicant wrote to the attendance officer as follows:

"I have got your notice .....My daughter Parson goes to study in the Swaruprani School of the Rashtriya Kelavni Mandal and that is known to you.....We are certainly eager to give education to our daughter and our girl is already receiving proper education.....You should note that our daughter is receiving education."

No enquiry seems to have been made by the Committee at any time either as regards the truth of the statement made in Exhibit G or as to the efficiency of the instruction imparted in the school which the girl was said to have been attending. It is necessary to set out here the following facts which appear in the evidence given by the attendance officer before the Magistrate in this case.

"The Swaruprani School is national . . . Neither I nor my Committee have by writing the national school ascertained what books are being taught in their schools...Neither I nor my Committee have at any time inspected any of the national schools. We have not asked for the curriculum that has been laid down in the schools. I do not know what are the qualifications of the teachers employed at the national schools. The School Committee has not made any enquiry as regards the fitness of the teachers employed in those schools. I do not say that a child that is taught at an unrecognized (school) is not in receipt of adequate education. There is no resolution of the School Committee to the effect that the education given in national schools is not efficient. I was present when the School Committee met on the 9th of January...The proceeding Exhibit E, was written then and there. The order, Exhibit F, was resolved to be issued after the girl's absence had been noticed. No further enquiry had been made about this girl."

The applicant did not carry out the attendance order, Exhibit F. On January 20, the Chairman of the Committee authorized the attendance officer to make a complaint to the Magistrate under section 10. This was done, with the result that he applicant was convicted and ordered to pay a fine of one rupee.

The question now before us is whether the conviction is valid in law. The two necessary conditions of a valid conviction under section 10 are: (1) there must be an order passed by the School Committee under section 9, i. e., an order passed in strict compliance with the procedure laid down in that section; (2) the parents must be shown to have failed to comply with the provisions of section 7 on and after the date specified in such order. In my opinion the prosecution has failed to establish that those conditions were fulfiled in this case.

The order, Exhibit F, was passed by the Committee without regard to the imperative requirements of section 9. That section is in these terms.

"Where the School Committee is satisfied that the parent of any child who is bound under the provisions of section 7 to cause such child to attend a recogized primary school, has failed to do so, the School Committee, after giving the parent an opportunity of being heard and after such inquiry as it considers necessary, may pass an order directing the parent to cause such child to attend a recognized primary school on and from a date which shall be specified in the order."

The powers conferred under the Act on the School Committee are wide. They are in curtailment of the right of the parent to give efficient instruction to his child according to his own ideas. It is, therefore, essential that an attendance order passed by the Committee must be shown to have been passed in strict compliance with the procedure therein prescribed, namely, "after giving the parent an opportunity of being heard and after such enquiry as it considers necessary." In this case the Committee did give the applicant an opportunity of being heard on January 9, but he did not accept it. The record satisfies me—as it satisfied the learned Magistrate—that his failure to do so was due to a spirit of recalcitrancy and to no worthier motive. But he seems to have soon realized it; for, on January 17, he wrote the letter, Exhibit G, stating that it was known to the attendance officer and others that the girl had actually been attending the Swaruprani School. In his evidence the attendance officer admits:

"From the register of absentee children I had come to know that the daughter of Nemchand" (i. e. the applicant) "was attending national school." The Committee made no enquiry at any time to enable them to form an opinion as to the efficiency of the education imparted in that school. This is clear on the evidence of the attendance officer which I have set out above. The attendance order required the applicant to send his child to a recognised school on the 18th; he sent the letter, Exhibit G, on the 17th; the complaint to the Magistrate was not made until the 20th. There was nothing to prevent their making the necessary enquiry before making the complaint. They had made none before passing the order, Exhibit F. In my opinion that order was not made in compliance with the requirements of section 9. I do not read the words "and after such enquiry as it considers necessary" as merely permissive. That expression has a compulsory force, regard being had to the object of the enactment, to the wide powers conferred on the Committee in derogation of the parent's rights, and to the language of section 9 itself. In the circumstances, the fact that the Committee passed the order, Exhibit F, does not by itself lead to the inference that it had made an enquiry in the spirit of the enactment.

The second requirement of section 10 is that it must be shown that the parent has failed to comply with the provisions of section 7 on or after the date specified in the attendance order passed by the Committee. Section 7 imposes on a parent the duty of causing his child to attend a recognized primary school "in the absence of a reasonable excuse as hereinafter provided." I think the effect of section 10 is the same as that of section 12 of the Elementary Education Act, 1876 (39 and 40 Vic, c. 79), which is in these terms: "Where an attendance order is not complied with, without any reasonable excuse within the meaning of this Act, a Court of summary jurisdiction, on complaint made by the local authority," may inflict a penalty on the parent

What, then, is a "reasonable excuse"? This expression is not specifically defined in the definition clause, section 2. The 8th section, however, gives its meaning in these terms:

"8. A parent shall be deemed to have a reasonable excuse for failure to cause a child to attend a recognized primary school in any of the following cases:—

(a) where the child is prevented from attending school by sickness, infirmity or other unavoidable cause;

(b) where the child is receiving, otherwise than in a recognized primary school, instruction which in the opinion of the School Committee is efficient, or has already completed his primary education;

(c) where there is no recognized primary school within one mile, measured according to the nearest road, from the residence of the child."

For purposes of this case it is unnecessary to decide whether the three cases there set out are meant to be exhaustive, or they are merely three illustrations of reasonable excuse. The languaga of section 7 might indicate that they are exhaustive. However that may be, we are here concerned with section 8, case (b) only, for according to the applicant his child had at all material times been receiving education otherwise than in a recognized primary school. It is not shown that either before or after passing the order, Exhibit F, the Committee made any enquiry for the purpose of deciding whether in its opinion the instruction which the child had been receiving elsewhere was or was not efficient; for, the Committee has to form its opinion not capriciously but on sufficient grounds and for substantial reasons. It is not shown that the Committee has formed its opinion on the subject in the spirit of the enactment, or, at all. It appears to me that the learned Magistrate has not rightly appreciated the second requirement of section 10. I agree with him in holding that the Legislature has cast on the School Committee the duty of deciding whether the instruction received by a child otherwise than in a recognized primary school is efficient or not. I, however, decline to assume that the Committee must be held to have discharged that duty merely because they passed the attendance order. Moreover, it is clearly the function of the Court—when a complaint is made under section 10—to see whether it is proved that the parent failed to send the child to a recognized school, without reasonable cause, on or after the date specified in the attendance order. The Act does not inflict penalty on a parent for a mere failure to carry out an attendance order passed under section 9. For, it is not to be supposed—unless the Statute clearly said so, which in this case it does not—that once an attendance order is made by the School Committee under section 9, the parent is for all time deprived of the right to give efficient instruction to his own child otherwise than in a recognized primary school. The Magistrate concedes that the Court must consider a case falling under section 8 (a); it must, in my opinion, also consider a case coming under section 8 (b). Dealing with this question the learned Magistrate observes:—

"There is however one thing in this connection that has to be mentioned as pointed out by the learned Pleader for the prosecution. He pointed out that in clause (b) the word used is "instruction" i. e. instruction in primary education and nothing else and primary education is defined in the Act, section 2 (5), so that it is not merely the curriculum laid down in any particular school that was necessary to be proved but that the curriculum and the whole of the teaching has to be in conformity with the standards as laid down and fixed and recognized by Government as such. Merely the curriculum did not matter, certain other rules laid down by Government in this respect had to be observed which he said were not being followed by this school in particular as also other schools under this particular "mandal" as was evident from the replies of the defence witness in this respect. When that was so, therefore, he made out that it could not at all be said that the primary education given to the girl in question was such as was contemplated by the Act. I think there is a good deal in all that has been urged in this respect."

I am unable to accept this narrow interpretation put upon the word "instruction" occurring in section 8 (b). The expression used in that section is "instruction" not "primary education," it is an expression bearing a much wider import. Its efficiency is to be decided by "the opinion of the School Committee," not by its compliance with some standard fixed and recognised by Government. The main object of the enactment is to see that a child is not left without the benefit of education. It is sufficient if it is receiving efficient instruction elsewhere than in a recognised primary school. I see no reason for giving to that expression, as used in section 8, case (b), the narrow meaning which was contended for by the Public Prosecutor before the lower Court and accepted by the Magistrate. In my opinion the prosecution has failed to satisfy the second requirement of section 10 also.

In this view of the case I consider it unnecessary to express an opinion on the question whether the resolution, Exhibit P, passed by the School Committee on January 11, 1922, and relied on by the applicant, is still in force.

I would set aside the conviction and order the fine, if paid, to be refunded.

Shah, Ag. C. J.—I entirely agree. I desire to make it clear with reference to the resolution of the School Committee dated January 11, 1922 (Exhibit P), that we do not accept one of the two grounds upon which the learned Magistrate has held it to be invalid, as it is not essential in our view that the instruction in order to be efficient within the meaning of section 8 (b) should conform to the standards as adopted in the "recognised primary schools." The other ground relates to the power of the School Committee at that date to act as such under the Act of 1918. The learned Magistrate has held that in view of the Commissioner's order dated December 17, 1921 (Exhibit L), the School Committee ceased to exist, and the learned Advocate-General has urged that that view is correct.

In the view we take of the case, it is not necessary to decide this question: so I express no opinion about it. I do not wish to be understood as accepting the view of the learned Magistrate on this point.

Conviction set aside.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 672 OF 1922.

October 30, 1922.

Present :— Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Harrison.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT

versus

BASTA SINGH—RESPONDENT.

Arms Act (XI of 1878), ss. 5, 19 (a)—Arms Rules, Sch. II—Manufacture of kirpans by Sikhs—Offence.

The entry in Schedule II to the Arms Rules which excludes "kirpans possessed or carried by Sikhs" from the prohibitions and directions contained in the Arms Act, refers to kirpans actually in existence and in the possession of or carried by Sikhs. In other words, a Sikh can possess or carry a kirpan without a license, and is not prevented by any provisions in the Arms Act from dealing with a kirpan which he possesses in any way he likes. But the entry does not exempt the manufacture of kirpans from the operation of the prohibition contained in section 5 of the Arms Act. [p. 230, col. 2.]

The manufacture of kirpans, therfore, without a license, is an offence falling under clause (a) of section 19 of the Arms Act. [p. 231, col. 1.]

Appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Ambala, dated the 17th June 1922, reversing that of the Magistrate, First Class, Rupar, District Ambala, dated the 12th May 1922.

Mr. Carden Noad, Assistant Legal Remembrancer, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. S. Salariya, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Scott-Smith, J.—This is an appeal by the Local Government from the order of the Sessions Judge of Ambala setting aside the conviction of Basta Singh, who was convicted of an offence under section 19 (a) of the Indian Arms Act. Basta Singh is a Sikh and was convicted by a Magistrate of having manufactured and sold kirpans without a license. The learned Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and acquitted him having regard to the entry in the Second Schedule annexed to the Indian Arms Rules, which shows that kirpans possessed or carried by Sikhs are excluded from the operation of all the prohibitions and directions contained in the Arms Act.

In appeal it is contended on behalf of the Government that the exemption only applies to kirpans actually in existence and possessed or carried by Sikhs and not to the manufacture of kirpans by Sikhs. Mr. G. S. Salariya, on the other hand, who appeared for Basta Singh, urged that the decision of the learned Sessions Judge was correct, and that the entry in the third column of the Second Schedule showed that kirpans possessed by Sikhs were excluded from all the prohibitions contained in the Act, and that this included the prohibition as to manufacture contained in section 5.

Schedule I to the Indian Arms Rules gives a list of persons exempted from certain prohibitions and directions contained in the Act, whereas Schedule II contains a list of Arms, Ammunition and Military stores which are excluded from the operation of certain prohibitions and directions contained in the Act. Sikhs as such are not exempted under Schedule I, and it is necessary to examine what the exemption upon which Basta Singh relies actually is. The arms excluded from the prohibitions and directions contained in the Act are "kirpans possessed or carried by Sikhs." This, in my opinion, clearly refers to kirpans actually in existence and in the possession of or carried by Sikhs. In other words, a Sikh can possess or carry a kirpan without a license. Further, he is not prevented by any provision in the Arms Act from dealing with a kirpan which he possesses in any way he likes. A Sikh, however, is not in my opinion exempted by the entry in Schedule II from the operation of the prohibition as to manufacture contained in section 5 of the Act. If Government had intended so to exempt him, it would have done so by an entry in Schedule I. The exemption extends to existing arms only, whereas Counsel for the respondent wishes to make it applicable to a class of persons as well. I am unable to agree with his interpretation of the law in this respect. I agree that in the view of the law which I take, it is meaningless to exclude from the operations of the prohibition in section 5 an existing kirpan, because you cannot manufacture what already is in existence. But the same applies to the first entry in Schedule III.

I would, therefore, accept the appeal and restore the order of the First Court convicting Basta Singh of an offence under section 19 (a) of the Indian Arms Act. As there was a reasonable doubt as to the interpretation of the law, I think a heavy sentence is not required in the present case. Basta Singh has already undergone more than a month's rigorous imprisonment and I would, therefore, sentence him to the term of imprisonment already undergone and would remit the fine.

Harrison, J.—I agree entirely with the view taken by my learned brother. Before the exemption can operate in a case such as this the arm in question must conform to the description given in the second column of the Schedule, that is to say, it must both be a kirpan and must be possessed or carried by a Sikh. To take an analogy from an exemption, which occurs earlier in the same Schedule "katyars used in Mahratta marriage processions" are exempted from all prohibitions. If a man were to be prosecuted for manufacturing katyars without a license, it would be no valid defence to urge and prove that they were intended to be used in such marriage processions, for at the time the offence was committed, the article in question would not come within the four corners of the definition. When the use to which the arm is to be put affects the exemption a distinct provision is inserted in the schedule as when "uniform swords, etc., intended to be supplied to persons entitled to wear them" are exempted as such. So here, as soon as the process of manufacture was complete and the arms had reached that stage in their development at which they could be described as kirpans no further offence could be committed provided that and as long as they were possessed or carried by Sikhs.

It might be urged that if this be the correct view, it is an offence to manufacture any article which is exempted unconditionally and without any qualification such as a bow and arrow or a toy cannon, but this is not the case. To manufacture an article of this nature is no offence and if the arm exempted in this case were a kirpan and nothing more the manufacture would be no offence. It is, however, a kirpan possessed or carried by a Sikh and in the nature of things it is as impossible to manufacture this arm as it is impossible to manufacture a katyar used in a marriage procession and, therefore the exemption does not cover or include manufacture by a Sikh or any other person, for the wording of the notification shows that it is only when the arm has assumed its final form and has become a kirpan that the exemption begins to operate.

Z. K. Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 430 OF 1922.

December 7, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Newbould and Mr. Justice Suhrawardy.

BILASH CHANDRA BANERJEE—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 235—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 218, 403, 409, 477A—Joinder of charges—Offences committed in the same transaction.

The accused, a Sub-Inspector of Police, took charge of certain property belonging to a deceased person. He subsequently returned the greater portion of it to his heir, but misappropriated certain items, and destroyed and altered certain portions of the diaries and lists in order to show that those items had never been received. He was charged with and tried at one trial for offences under sections 218, 403, 409 and 477A of the Penal Code:

Held, that all the charges related to acts which were so connected together as to form one transaction and the joinder of charges was, therefore, permissible under section 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 232, col. 2.]

BILASH CHANDRA v. EMPEROR.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Mymensingh, dated the 8th September 1922.

Babus Monmotha Nath Mukherjee and Benoy Kumar Ghose, for the Appellant.

Mr. Orr, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant has been convicted of offences punishable under sections 477A and 218, Indian Penal Code and sentenced to twelve months' rigorous imprisonment for each offence, the sentences to run concurrently.

The appellant was put on his trial on several charges, and it is contended that the trial is bad for misjoinder of charges. In order to understand this contention and the nature of the charges the following facts may be shortly stated:—The accused was the Sub-Inspector in charge of the Netrokona Police Station. On the 7th February last a prostitute named Kamini died in Netrokona town at about 2 P. M. in the afternoon. She had executed a registered deed of gift covering most of her properties to one Purna. The case for the prosecution is that on her death the Sub-Inspector took charge of the properties left by Kamini and removed them to the thana shortly after her death. A telegram was sent to Purna who was 17 miles away and he came to the thana on the morning of the 8th between 10 and 11. That evening he took away the properties claimed by him except three specific ornaments, a gold gopahar, a pair of gold ananta and silver rates which were retained by the Sub-Inspector. Entries had been made in the Police General Diary recording that this property of Kamini had been taken charge of, but the pages containing these entries were torn out and fresh pages were written from which it will appear that the property was never taken to the thana and that it was made over to Purna at 10 A. M. on the 7th February.

On these allegations the accused was charged firstly with having committed criminal misappropriation of the three ornaments belonging to Kamini which had not been delivered to Purna. He was secondly charged with having framed the record in a manner which he knew to be incorrect, namely, the entry No. 173 which related to the delivery of Kamini's property to Purna. He was thirdly charged under section 477A with having destroyed the original entries in the General Diary and with having altered the entry No. 173 already referred to. Further there were three charges of criminal breach of trust by a public servant punishable under section 409, the first relating to the properties left by Kamini and not covered by the deed of gift in favour of Purna, the second relating to the three specific ornaments already mentioned and the third relating to the properties mentioned in the deed of gift.

It is contended that the offence described as punishable under section 218 differs from the offence charged as punishable under section 477A, Indian Penal Code. Naturally there must be some difference in the charges as the facts are set out so as to make different sections applicable. In the former of these charges the charge relates to the framing of the record in a manner known to be incorrect, using the actual words of the section. In the charge under section 477A the words of the section are again used and the accused is charged with having destroyed certain entries in the original pages and also having altered one entry. We think that as regards these charges they fall under two separate definitions of the law and the accused can be jointly charged and tried at one trial for these offences under section 235. We also think that the joinder of the other charges is covered by the provisions of that section. All the charges relate to acts which are so connected together as to form one transaction The charge of criminal misappropriation relating to the same articles as the charge of criminal breach of trust by a public servant and the other charges of criminal breach of trust in respect of the property covered by the deed of gift and those not covered by the deed of gift would be legally joined and tried at one trial.

It is also contended that there has been misdirection in stating to the Jury what was the defence set up by the accused. The accused was defended and he made a statement in Court. In that statement the main line of defence was that he had several enemies and they had conspired to get him into trouble. But in his defence no answer was given to the specific allegations that were made against him. It is, therefore, not clear what his actual defence was on the points where there has been said to be misdirection. We find that during the course of his summing up the learned Judge made a mistake as regards a certain date and was corrected by the learned Pleader for the defence and he admitted his error. We cannot understand if he had misdirected the Jury as is now alleged that mistake should not have been corrected then and there. We are not satisfied there was any misdirection in this respect.

The other points taken in this appeal are based on an affidavit that has been filed by one of the Pleaders who appeared on behalf of the appellant at the Sessions trial. It appears that after the Jury had retired to consider their verdict they wished for further direction on certain points of law. They were first seen by the Judge in his private Chamber and they there asked him one question on a point of law. The Judge then sent for the Pleaders and on their arrival they pointed out to him that further directions to the Jury should be made in open Court. The Judge and the Jury then went into the Court room and certain questions which were put by the Jury and the answers given by the Juge were duly recorded. We hold that this fact that one question was put to the Judge not in open Court was no more than an irregularity and did not vitiate the trial.

It is further contended that the Judge did not comply with the provisions of section 303, Criminal Procedure Code, since he did not ask the Jury questions to ascertain what their verdict was or the three charges under section 409, Indian Penal Code. The verdict of the Jury as recorded is not guilty under sections 409 and 403, but guilty under sections 218 and 477 A. That seems to us a sufficiently clear verdict. The Jury were taken by the Judge and rightly taken to mean that they acquitted the accused on all charges under section 409 and the charge under section 403, Indian Penal Code, and there was no necessity for any question to ascertain their verdict was. It is said in the affidavit that the learned Judge asked the Jury some questions as to their reasons and they gave some answers which were not recorded. This has been denied by the learned Judge and we must accept his statement. It is pointed out to us that in the judgment passed by the Judge after the verdict was recorded he has given the reasons of the Jury for their verdict and that this indicates that the statement in the affidavit is correct. We are unable to accept this contention. The Judge remarks that the Jury found the accused not guilty on charges under sections 409 and 403, Indian Penal Code, holding clearly that it is not possible to accept the evidence as to the particular way in which the items of property were disposed of by the accused. To us the words used by the Judge indicate that he is not repeating what he has heard from the Jury but is stating what he believes to have been the motive which actuated them.

We hold, therefore, that there are no ground for interfering with the verdict of the Jury and dismiss this appeal.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 561 OF 1922.

June 16, 1922.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, KT., Chief Justice.

JAFAR—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859), s. 2—Carrier, whether workman.

A contract to carry stones cannot be described as a contract of an artificer, workman or labourer, within the meaning of section 2 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act.

Devappa Ramappa Naik v. Emperor, 50 Ind. Cas. 492; 43 B. 607; 21 Bom. L. R. 277; 20 Cr. L. J. 316, relied on.

Criminal revision reported by the Sessions Judge, Dera Gazi Khan, with his No. 278 J, dated the 7th April 1922.

FACTS.—Jafar accused is a carrier. He was paid Rs. 53-13-0 to carry stones on his camels.

Gurandita Mal, complainant, instituted a complaint on account of this advance of Rs. 53-13-0. On 2nd November 1917 the Magistrate gave Jafar three months within which to work off the advance.

On the 14th July 1919 complainant made a second complaint that the advance had not been worked off. On 8th October 1919 Jafar was ordered to pay the advance within a month or undergo one month's simple imprisonment. On the 8th November 1919 the complaint was dismissed in default. On 2nd February 1920 an application for restoration was rejected. On 24th November 1921 the complainant brought a fresh complaint alleging a balance due of Rs. 31-2-6 out of the original Rs. 53-13-0.

On 20th January 1922 Jafar was sentenced to one month's rigorous imprisonment.

GROUNDS—(a). The Act does not apply to carriers.

(b). The complainant's own conduct in allowing the case to slide for four years has put him out of Court.

The accused is on bail of Rs. 50 since.

JUDGMENT.—The accueed was employed by the complainant to carry stones on his camels and I do not think that a contract of this kind can be described as a contract of an artificer, a workman, or a labourer, within the meaning of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859) vide, inter alia, Devappa Ramappa Naik v. Emperor (1). Accordingly I accept the application for revision and quash the order of the Magistrate sentencing the accused to one month's imprisonment.

Application allowed.

Z. K.

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 492; 43 B. 807; 21 Bom. L. R. 277; 20 Cr. L. J. 316.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 246-B OF 1923.

October 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Baker, Offg. J. C.

DADDIPRASAD—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

DISTRICT MAGISTRATE, YEOTMAL —NON-APPLICANT.

Extradition Act (XV of 1903), applicability of—Berar and Hyderabad State.

A case of extradition from Berar to Hyderabad State is governed by the Extradition Treaty of 1867 between the Indian Government and the State and not by the Extradition Act. [p. 235, col. 2.]

Revision against an order dated the 8th September 1923, passed by the District Magistrate, Yeotmal, in Extradition Case pending on his file.

Mr. S. C. Hosall, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—The facts are that the applicant was arrested on 8th July 1923 by the Sub-Inspector, Pusad, under section 54, clause (7), of the Code of Criminal Procedure, on suspicion of having received cattle stolen in the Hyderabad State.

On 9th July he was placed before the First Class Magistrate, Pusad, and remanded till 21st July, on which day he was ordered by the Magistrate to be placed before the District Magistrate, Yeotmal. The applicant is a resident of the Basim Taluka of the Akola District.

On the 26th July 1923 the applicant was placed before the District Magistrate, Yeotmal who remanded him till 8th August 1923 and requested the Commissioner, Berar, to move the State authority to send the extradition warrant with evidence of criminality within two months, otherwise the accused would be released. The accused was kept in custody and remanded from time to time.

On August 28th, 1923 evidence of criminality was received from the District Magistrate, Nanded in Hyderabad State, and was sent to the Commissioner. An application for bail was made on 3rd September 1923 and was refused on 8th September 1923, on which day a wire was received from the Commissioner to detain the accused in custody till the arrival of the Hyderabad State Police.

On 20th September 1923 the extradition warrant together with evidence of criminality was received from the District Magistrate, Nanded, but in the meantime an application had been made to this Court for bail and for quashing the proceedings and an order had been issued that the accused should not be handed over to the Hyderabad Police pending the disposal of the application.

The District Magistrate sent in a reply to the Rule issued to him to show cause, but was not represented at the hearing. The matter being of some importance I ordered notice to issue to the Standing Counsel to represent the Crown and the application has now been fully argued on both sides.

It is contended on behalf of the applicant that the proceedings are governed by the Indian Extradition Act XV of 1903, which has been applied to Berar.

The arrest of the accused falls under the provisions of section 23 of that Act and must, therefore, be dealt with under section 10. The provisions of section 10 have not been complied with, because the Magistrate has not made any enquiry, no report has been made to the Political Agent, Hyderabad, and the accused has been detained more than two months in custody before the arrival of the warrant referred to in section 7 of the Act. It was also contended at the first hearing that the warrant was from the District Magistrate, Nanded, and not from the Political Agent.

The case for the applicant has been argued on the supposition that the Extradition Act applies, but this is not so. This is a case of extradition from Berar to Hyderabad State and is governed by Treaty. Section 18 of the Extradition Act specially excepts cases governed by Treaty. The procedure will be found in the Criminal Circulars of this Court Part II, No. 6, page 37, which is printed in the Chief Commissioner's Book Circulars (Edition 1917, Vol. II, Part VIII, No. 4, paragraphs 9-11, pages 20 and 21).

Extradition between His Exalted Highness the Nizam's Dominions and Berar is governed by the Extradition Treaty of 1867 (Aitchison's Treaties, Vol. IX, page 108). Certain offences have been added to those mentioned in the Treaty by an arrangement in 1915 between the Central Provinces Administration and the Nizam's Government, but we are not concerned with that, as the offence (cattle stealing) with which the accused is charged is in the original Treaty. The procedure laid down is that when an accused person is arrested in Berar by or at the instance of the Nizam's Police he is kept by the Berar Police till a requisition is received by the District Magistrate for his surrender. This requisition is sent by the Nizam's authority, the Talukdar, to the District Magistrate through the Commissioner of Berar, together with the evidence of criminality. The District Magistrate on receiving the requisition from the Commissioner surrenders the accused person. On no account may he comply with a requisition made direct to him by the Nizam's authorities.

This procedure has been followed in the present case. The evidence of criminality along with the requisition has been sent by the Dsitrict Magistrate, Nanded, who is also the Talukdar, to the District Magistrate, Yeotmal, through the Commissioner, Berar, and the District Magistrate is, therefore, bound to surrender the accused.

No time limit is laid down and there is no necessity of a warrant from the Political Agent.

There are, therefore, no grounds for interference; supposing this Court to have the power to interfere, which is very doubtful, this being a matter governed by Treaty and not under the ordinary law. This Court may have power under section 491 of the Amended Criminal Procedure Code, but to justify its exercise it would have to be shown that the accused was illegally or improperly detained in custody, which does not appear to be the case. I am, therefore, of opinion that I cannot interfere.

Even under section 15 of the Extradition

CHANDU LAL V. EMPEROR.

Act the power of this High Court to interfere is ousted except in very special circumstances. The learned Standing Counsel is prepared to show that even if the Extradition Act applied the proceedings are regular as the accused was remanded by the District Magistrate on 26th July and the warrant was received on 25th September, within two months.

I agree with him that section 10 of the Act does not compel the Magistrate to hold an enquiry and in any case the evidence of criminality was received on 28th August 1923, but I can hardly follow his argument that the period from 8th July to 26th July, during which the accused was in custody, must be excluded, as section 23 makes it clear that a person arrested under section 54, clause (7), Criminal Procedure Code, may be detained subject to the same restrictions as are contained in section 10, that is for not more than two months, and I am of opinion that the two months would run from the date of arrest, 8th July.

However, it is not necessary to go into this point, as the Extradition Act does not apply.

With regard to the prayer for bail it was rejected by the Magistrate on the ground that he had evidence before him which led him to believe that the applicant had committed two offences of cattle theft or of receiving stolen cattle in the Nizam's Dominions and there is nothing to show that his opinion is incorrect.

Apart from this, once the warrant from the Nizam's State authority has been received the Magistrate has no power to admit to bail even under the Extradition Act except under sections 8 and 8 (a) and, therefore, unless the Nizam's authority directs bail to be taken, the Magistrate can only do so if he reports the case to the Local Government. I may refer to In re Murlidhar Bhagwandas (1).

The result is that there are no reasons for interference. The application is dismissed and the papers should be forthwith returned to the District Magistrate, Yeotmal.

G. R. D. Application dismissed.

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 674; 43 B. 310 at p. 320; 20 Bom. L. R. 1009; 20 Cr. L. J. 34.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 255 OF 1923.

July 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

CHANDU LAL—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Burden of proof.

The plea of insanity being of the nature of a general exception, an accused person relying on it must establish it.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Saharanpur, dated the 10th March 1923.

Mr. S. A. Haider, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This a somewhat curious case. The applicant committed an assualt on the wife of a Civil Surgeon and was sentenced to nine months' rigorous imprisonment. The defence of insanity was raised at the trial. The medical evidence regarding the accused was conflicting. One Doctor thought him insane, but on the other hand the Superintendent of the Bareilly Lunatic Asylum, under whose supervision he was placed, reported and gave evidence that he was not insane. Under these circumstances the learned Sessions Judge says that if the burden of proving affirmatively the man's unsoundness of mind had been on the prosecution he would say that it had not been discharged, but insanity being of a nature of a general exception which must be proved by the accused, he was of opinion that the defence had failed to prove insanity. This is a correct statement of the law and in view of the evidence of the Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum I do not think that it can be challenged on the evidence. I may add that the case was again reported to Government by the Sessions Judge for such action as Government might take and Government has since returned the record stating that it is advised that the man is not insane. Under the circumstances I do not see my way to interfere with the order passed by the Court below.

I accordingly dismiss the application.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 234-B OF 1923.

September 28, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

TUKARAM—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 379—Theft—Bona fide claim—Minor's property held by others—Guardian's duty.

A removal of property in the assertion of bona fide claim of right, though unfounded in law and fact, does not constitute theft. But a mere colourable pretence to obtain or keep possession of property does not avail as a defence. [p. 238, col. 1.]

Though it is the duty of a guardian of a minor's property to get into his own hands all the property of the minor, it is not his duty to take forcible possession of it but to resort to the Law Courts if it is held against him by others. [p. 238, col. 1.]

Criminal revision against an order of the Sessions Judge, West Berar, Akola, in Criminal Revision No. 11 of 1923, dated the 15th June 1923.

Mr. V. N. Bapat, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—This arder also disposes of Criminal Revisions Nos. 235-B to 238-B of 1923. The five applicants, namely, Tukaram, Vishnu, Pandurang, Narayan and Gunwant have been convicted of theft and sentenced to fine. One Sakharam Gurao of Ganeshpur died leaving behind him two widows, Musammats Dwarkabai and Tanabai, and minor son. He possessed certain land at Ganeshpur, Tahsil Murtizapur, among which was field Survey No. 28 and at his death his minor son became owner. That son died, and the widows were in possession. Each of them adopted a son; one Ramrao is said to have been adpoted by Musammat Dwarkabai and one Bhaurao by Musammat Tanabai. Then dispntes arose between Musammat Dwarkabai and Ramrao which reached the Civil Court which appointed one Narayan Sitaram as guardian of Ramrao, authoring him, it is said, to take charge of the minor Ramrao's property. This order was passed on 23rd March 1922 by the District Judge, Akola. It is alleged that the co-widows in an attempt to act to the detriment of the minor Ramrao dealt with the property. Dwarkabai leased field Sarvey No. 28 to one Raghunath Marwari who sub-leased the same to Sakharam Jairam and the complainant Tukaram Yadoji. The prosecution story is that these cultivated it in 1922-23 and that the five accused obstructed the complainant in the cultivation and removed the crops in December 1922. The Magistrate finds that the complainant Tukaram had cultivated and was in possession at the time. The Magistrate states in his judgment:—

"Though under the orders of the District and Sessions Judge (vide Exhibit D-1) the accused Narayan Sakharam was authorized to take possession of the minor (Ramrao's) property, evidently he did not do so, for on 12th December 1922 he put in an application in the Court of District and Sessions Judge, Akola, stating that he was not yet given possession of the property. From this it is also clear that the accused did not believe that they could take possession on the strength of District Judge's order, viz. Exhibit D-1. The plea of the defence Counsel, Mr. Pingle, that the accused took possession because of the aforesaid orders believing bona fide that they could do so, cannot be allowed. The accused were not acting bona fide. They in fact took the law into their hands and took possession of Survey No. 28 and removed the crops without even waiting for District and Sessions Judge's order on the accused Narayan's application put on 12th December 1922.....They thus wrongfully deprived the complainant of the cropsgrown by him. The dishonest intention of the accused is, therefore, clearly made out."

The accused were found guilty of theft and were each fined Rs 30 except Narayan who was fined Rs. 50 and in default of payment two months' rigorous imprisonment was ordered and Rs. 100 out of the fine was to be awarded to the complainant as compensation. An application for revision was made to the Sessions Judge who declined to interfere. Hence the present application for revision.

It is here contended that as the accused acted in the interests of Ramrao, acting through his guardian Narayan, who had been appointed the guardian by the District Judge, no offence of theft can possibly have been committed. I am referred to Algarasawmi Tevan v. Emperor, (1), Suraj Alt v. Arfan Ali [Arfan Ali v. Emperor] (2), Queen-Empress v. Nagappa (3) and Empress of India v. Budh Singh (4). Suraj Ali v. Arfan Ali [Arjan Ali v. Emperor (2)] lays down that "the removal of property in the assertion of a bona fide claim of right, though unfounded in law and fact, does no constitute theft. But a mere colourable pretence to obtain or keep possession of property does not avail as a defence."

The principles enunciated in these published rulings are undoubtedly correct but they do not seem to me to help the applicants in the present case. It is well known that when a person has been appointed guardian of a minor's property his duty is to get into his own hands all the property belonging to the minor that he can. But if it is held against him by others it is not his duty to take forcible possession of it but to resort to the Law Courts. Here Narayan was appointed guardian on 23rd March 1922. He allows the lessees of the field to prepare the land, sow and cultivate it and then when the crops are ripe with his companions takes forcible possession. The crops did not belong to the minor, the widow who leased the fields might be responsible to the minor for their crops or the letting of the land, though it is presumed that the widow is entitled to maintenance. But the facts did not justify anybody acting on behalf of the minor to forcibly take possession of the crops in the minor's interest. The motive in doing so seems to me very clearly dishonest and in my opinion the five applicants have been correctly convicted of the offence of theft. They dishonestly removed property knowing it belonged to another. I decline to interfere and reject the five applications for revision,

G. R. D. Applications rejected.

(1) 28 M. 304; 2 Cr. L. J. 754.
(2) 36 Ind. Cas. 136; 44 C. 66; 20 C. W. N. 1270; 17 Cr. L. J. 456.
(3) 15 B. 344; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 23.
(4) 2 A. 101; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 627.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 95 OF 1923.

October 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Neave, A. J. C.

RAM SARUP AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR THROUGH MOHAMMAD HAIDER—COMPLAINANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIX, r. 1—Suit, dismissal of, for default—Injunction, whether can be granted—Jurisdiction—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 107, proceedings under—Attachment of property, whether can be directed.

A Court has no jurisdiction to grant a temporary injunction relating to a suit which has been dismissed for default, but for the restoration of which an application is pending. [p. 240, col. 1)]

No order of attachment of property can be passed in a proceeding under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 239, col. 1.]

Application against orders of the District Magistrate, Bahraich, dated the 9th July 1923.

Mr. Ghulam Hasan, for the Applicants.

Mr. Mojiz Husain, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application under section 435, Criminal Procedure Code, for the revision of an order of the Deputy Commissioner of Bahraich.

In order to understand the facts of the case it is necessary to go into its history in some detail.

Mouza Murka in the Bahraich District was sold for Rs. 25,000 by S. Ali Haider, the father of the opposite party, to the father of the present applicants on the 8th May 1919 and possession was given to him on 14th June 1919. He applied for mutation which was finally granted by the Board of Revenue after contest on the 21st September 1920. The purchaser was not allowed to retain possession undisturbed and he instituted proceedings under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code. His right to possession was, however, maintained and an application for revision made by the opposite party was rejected by this Court on the 3rd November 1920 when they were directed to go to the Civil Court if they wished to establish their rights.

Meanwhile the Police had sent up both the parties to be bound over to keep the peace under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code. The applicants were discharged but the opposite party were bound over on the 3rd February 1920, and on the 28th April 1920 that order was upheld by this Court. The District Magistrate, Mr. Cotton, however, cancelled their bonds under section 125, Criminal Procedure Code. The relations between the parties, however, continued to be so strained that the Police once more asked for action to be taken under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, and on the 21st November 1920 the District Magistrate, Mr. Cotton, passed the following order:—

"From the report of the Circle Inspector dated 12th November 1920 there is no doubt that the action of Lala Parshotam Das has been highly provocative, at the same time, I am reluctant to bind him over when he has been allowed mutation by the Commissioner and this has been confirmed by the Board. Murka will be taken under Qarq Tahsil at once."

The village was accordingly taken under attachment.

This was clearly an illegal order. What section it is purported to have been passed under, is not shown, but the only proceedings then before the District Magistrate were those under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, in which no order of attachment of property could be passed. Nor can it be maintained that it was an emergency order under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, as none of the requirements of section 145 were complied with at the time or later.

From time to time applications were made by Lala Parshotam Das for the release of the village but no orders favourable to him were passed until on 4th November 1921 he was informed that it would be released as soon as the revenue due on it was paid. This condition was complied with by the applicant. But now the opposite party who had in December 1920 filed a civil suit for a declaration, that the deed of transfer should be cancelled, applied to the Subordinate Judge for an order to the District Magistrate directing him not to release the village pending the decision of the civil suit.

It appears that at that moment when this application was made the suit had been dismissed for default but proceedings for its restoration to the file were pending. The Subordinate Judge sent to the District Magistrate a robkar in the sense desired. The District Magistrate, however, replied that the Subordinate Judge's order was not warranted by law and could not be carried out. The present applicants now put in a petition to the Subordinate Judge, praying that the order sent to the Deputy Commissioner might be re-called. On this, the Subordinate Judge passed a long order to the effect that he could not re-call an order which had not been obeyed. This was on the 10th February 1923.

The applicants next returned to the District Magistrate and asked to have the village released. On the 9th July he passed the order which this Court is now asked to revise. In this he held that the order passed by Mr. Cotton for the attachment of the property was illegal but that he was now debarred from releasing it by the order issued from the Court of the Subordinate Judge. This he held must be regarded as an injunction under O. XXXIX, r. 1 of Civil Procedure Code. He was fortified in this view by the application which had been made under O. XXXIX, r. 4 by the applicants and rejected on 10th February 1922 by the Subordinate Judge.

The applicants' Pleader argues that the order of the Subordinate Judge ought not to be regarded as under O. XXXIX r. 1, Civil Procedure Code. None of the grounds which would justify the issuing of such an order were even alleged by the persons who asked for it. They merely said that they were apprehensive that the present applicants might get the property released by the District Magistrate. No inquiry was made and no evidence adduced.

On the other hand it is pointed out that O. XXXIX, r. 1 is the only provision of law under which the Subordinate Judge would possibly have acted and the present applicants recognised it as such an order in their own application under r. 4 to have it set aside. It is further pointed out that such an order would not be open to revision under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, and, therefore, whether properly passed or not it cannot be called to question now.

In re PUNYA SYMALO.

One aspect of the matter which does not appear to have been emphasised or considered is the fact that the Subordinate Judge's order was passed after the suit had once been dismissed and before it had been restored to the file. There was, therefore, no suit pending at the time before the Court and it had no jurisdiction to pass any orders. I am of opinion that the injunction granted by the Subordinate Judge was void ab Initio and having been made without jurisdiction it can, therefore, be no bar to the release of the property. The order under which that property was originally attached was an entirely illegal order. I accordingly allow this application and direct that the property be released from attachment in favour of the applicants by the Deputy Commissioner of Bahraich.

Z. K. Application allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE NO. 222 OF 1923.
(CASE REFERRED NO. 42 OF 1923.)
September 19, 1923.
Present:— Mr. Justice Krishnan and
Mr. Justice Odgers.
In re PUNYA SYMALO—ACCUSED.

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), s. 221—Money payable under contract of toll lease —"Other sums," meaning of.

The amount due under a contract of the lease of toll does not fall under section 221 of the Local Boards Act. The words "other sums" in that section must be read as ejusdem generis with what precedes them.

Case referred for the orders of the High Court under section 438 of Criminal Procedure Code by the Sessions Judge, Ganjam at Berhampore, in his letter Dis. No. 883 of 15th March 1923.

Mr. V. L. Ethiraj, for the Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.— We think the reasons stated in the order of the learned Sessions Judge are correct and we accept the same. The amount due under a contract of lease though of the toll cannot be treated as falling within the section 221 of the Local Boards Act. The words "other sums" in the section should be read ejusdem generis with what proceedes them. Then again the sum in question, is not payable "under or by virtue of this Act," but is payable by the party under the contract between the parties. Section 106 has no bearing on this question; it merely authorises the leasing out of the tolls but does not make the money payable under the contract of the lease money payable under the Act. We, therefore, set aside the order of the Town Sub-Magistrate of Berhampore, in M. C. No. 44 of 1922 as made without jurisdiction.

V. N. V.
S. D. Order set aside.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL EXTRAORDINARY APPLICATION NO. 367 OF 1922.

July 23, 1923.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA—APPLICANT

versus

NARSIBHAI DADABHAI PATEL AND ANOTHER—OPPONENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Bombay Regulation (II of 1827), s. 5—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), s. 32—Revision—Interlocutory order—Interference by High Court—Suit for declaration that certain nominations of Municipal Councillors are invalid—Secretary of State, whether necessary party—Jurisdiction of Sub-Judge to try suit.

The language of section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code is wide enough to include an interlocutory order. The High Court will not, however, interfere with an interlocutory order in revision, save in cases wherein a defeat of the law and a grave wrong are manifest, and are irremediable by the regular procedure. [p. 242, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

The second clause of section 5 of Bombay Regulation II of 1827 confers on the High Court the power to interfere with interlocutory orders. [p. 244, col. 1.]

To a suit for a declaration that the nomination of certain members to a Municipality by the Commissioner is invalid and illegal, the Secretary of State for India is a necessary party. [p. 244, col. 1.]

Section 32 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act, ousts the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge to try a suit to which the Secretary of State for India is a party, irrespective of the fact whether he was impleaded as a party at the time when the suit was filed or after the suit had been received and registered by the Court. [p. 244, col. 2.]

Civil Extraordinary Application against an order passed by the Subordinate Judge, Nadiad, in Suit No. 261 of 1922.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for the Applicant.

Mr. G. N. Thakor, (with him Mr. N. M. Desai), for the Opponents.

JUDGMENT.

Coyajee, J.—The applicant asks this Court, in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction to call for the record and proceedings in Suit No. 261 of 1922 of the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Nadiad, and to order that the plaint be returned for presentation to the proper Court, on the ground, inter alia, that the former Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit. A Rule was granted on December 1, 1922. It has now come on for argument before us.

The material facts of the case are these. In March 1922, at a general election of Councillors for the Municipality of Nadiad, twenty-five persons were elected to hold office for a period of three years commencing with April 1. In August following seventeen out of that number resigned the office, whereupon a bye-election was held when eight Councillors were elected. As nine vacancies still remained to be filled, and as there was a failure to elect the full number, the Commissioner, Northern Division purporting to act under section 10 (2) of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, nominated the nine persons who figure as the first nine defendants in the plaint.

On October 17, the plaintiffs (now opponents Nos. 1 and 2) claiming to be rate-payers and voters brought the suit which has given rise to this application. By their plaint (paragraph 3) they contended that "the Commissioner Saheb of the Northern Division directly nominated the defendants Nos. 1 to 9. The Commissioner Saheb has got no authority to nominate in this way. And as the appointment of such nominated members is illegal, they have got no right to sit in the Municipality as members and to work therein. In spite of this, we strongly apprehend that they taking shelter of the unlawful orders of the Commissioner Saheb are about to sit in the Municipality as members and to work therein." Then the plaint proceeds: "The cause of action has arisen on the date October 14, 1922, when the nomination of the defendants Nos. 1 to 9 was declared by the Municipality." And relief is sought in these terms: "That it may be declared that the nomination of the defendants Nos 1 to 9 as members of the Nadiad City Municipality made by the Government is illegal, and that they may be restrained by a permanent injunction from attending the meetings of the Municipality and from doing any work on behalf of the Municipality, and that the defendant No. 10 (i. e., the Municipality) may be restrained by a permanent injunction from treating them as members, their nomination being illegal." On the same day the plaintiffs applied for and obtained a temporary injunction restraining the tenth defendant "from allowing the defendants Nos. 1 to 9 to sit as members of the Municipality, and from dealing with them."

On October 20, the Government Pleader at Kaira applied to the Court praying that on the allegations contained in the plaint the Secretary of State for India in Council should be brought on the record of the case; it was also alleged that plaintiffs had "purposely omitted to make the Secretary of State a necessary party." The learned Subordinate Judge, on October 26, made him a party, as defendant No. 11, as in his opinion the powers of the Commissioner to nominate Councillors would have to be considered when deciding the suit on the merits. But he also said:—

"I allow the application but on condition that if it afterwards appears that the application has been made simply with a view to oust the jurisdiction of this Court and the plaintiffs are prejudiced thereby, it will be open to the plaintiffs then to apply that the name of the appellant as defendant be struck off and the case be tried as if he was not a party. Of course, this does not mean that the plaintiffs' application will be granted as a matter of course. The order only means that the point will then be fully considered and final orders passed then."

Four issues were then framed by the Court, the first two being: (1) Whether Government is a necessary party in the suit? (2) Whether this Court has jurisdiction to hear the suit? These two issues were tried first, probably on the ground that "the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on the issues of law only" (O. XIV, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code). On the first issue the Subordinate Judge held that although the Secretary of State for India in Council was a proper party, he was not a necessary party. On the second he held that notwithstanding the fact that he had made the Secretary of State a party defendant, section 32 of Act XIV of 1869 did not stand in the way of his trying the suit, the reason being that the Secretary of State was brought on the record on his own application and not at the request of the plaintiffs.

On the rule coming on for argument before us, a preliminary objection was raised, on behalf of opponents Nos. 1 and 2, that inasmuch as the trial Judge had not finally decided the suit, but only given his decision on certain issues of law, his order was merely interlocutory, and therefore the present application made under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure was not competent. This question has given rise to a diversity of judicial opinion. Arguments on both sides of it have been sufficiently discussed and considered in a large number of decided cases. We are, however, bound to give effect to authoritative pronouncements of this Court. The proper grounds and limits of the extraordinary jurisdiction of this Court "under the Code of Civil Procedure or otherwise" were fully considered by a Full Bench in Shiva Nathaji v. Joma Kashinath (1). The results of the earlier decisions were summed up thus (page 357): "The High Court will interfere to enforce the exercise of jurisdiction, or to restrain an excess of jurisdiction, in cases apparently calling for such interference, even though there may be a remedy by suit. When there is a remedy by appeal, the cases do not appear to warrant such interference, except under circumstances in which an appeal would manifestly be ineffectual." And the principle, here pertinent, was laid down (page 372) that: "Where an appeal is provided, the Court will not interfere by any peremptory order with the ordinary course of adjudication, save in cases wherein a defeat of the law, and a grave wrong, are manifest, and are irremediable by the regular procedure." There is much to be said in favour of this rule. The language of section 115 confers on the High Court wide powers—sufficiently wide to include an interlocutory order: Motilal Kashibhai v. Nana (2) and Bai Atrani v. Deepsing Baria (3). The word "case" is not specifically defined in the Code but it is a word of wide and comprehensive import and "inasmuch as section 115 is merely an empowering section granting certain jurisdiction to the High Court, and as the use or exercise of that jurisdiction will, within the prescribed limits, be regulated by the discretion of the High Court, the section ought to receive rather a liberal than a narrow interpretation:" Bai Atrani v. Deepsing Baria (3) (page 92*). The Full Bench decision above referred to was approved by another Full Bench of this Court in Vithal Krishna v. Balkrishna Janardan (4). In Motilal Kashibhai v. Nana (2), however, the opinion was expressed that the word "case" may be wide enough to include an interlocutory order, but a word of such general import must be controlled by due regard to the purpose with which the section was framed. That purpose was "to enable a party to a suit to get a decision or order of a lower Court rectified by the High Court, when there would otherwise be no remedy" (page 37). No reference was made to the opinions expressed in the two Full Bench decisions above alluded to and it may be respectfully pointed out that the section itself does not make the absence of another remedy a necessary condition of its applicablity. This Court, however, continued to exercise its revisional jurisdiction even in cases where a remedy by way of an appeal from the final decree was open: cf. Somchand Bhikhabhai v. Chhaganlal (5). In Irbasappa Mallappa v. Basangowda (6) the appellant asked this Court to revise an order made by the Collector under the Mamlatdars Courts Act. The opponents before us rely on the following observations occurring in the judgment of the learned Chief Justice: "In our opinion the Court should be slow to exercise its powers of revision under section 115 of the Code unless the party applying to the Court has no other remedy. But in a case where the proceedings which are sought to be revised are purely summary proceedings, which did not finally decide the dispute between the parties, then as far as we are concerned we do not think that we should exercise our powers of revision" (page 747*). This view is entirely consistent with the sixth principle laid down in the Full Bench decision in Shiva Nathaji's case (1) (page 372).

(1) 7 B. 341; 7 Ind. Jur. 656; 4 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 229 (F. B.).
(2) 18 B. 35; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 532.
(3) 33 Ind. Cas. 358; 40 B. 86; 17 Bom. L. R. 1097.

In support of the preliminary objection reliance is placed on the decision of Macleod, C. J. and Heaton, J., in Bai Rami v. Jaga Dullabh (7). There are, no doubt, observations in the judgments which, if not read in their context, might favour the opponents, contention. But in order to be able to correctly appreciate those observations, it is essential to know the facts of that case. The applicant before the High Court was one of six defendants in the suit; although served with a summons to appear on October 18, 1918, she failed to appear; an order was then passed directing the suit to proceed ex parte against her; on December 8 and 12 the case was heard and adjourned till July 12; on that day she appeared and applied for leave to defend the suit; the Trial Judge rejected this application and declned to set aside his order of October 1. It was in these circumstances that the applicant invoked the revisional jurisdiction of this Court, under section 115. In his judgment the learned Chief Justice fully sets out the above facts and then makes the following observations on which the opponents now rely: "We have no power to call for the record of any case which is under trial by a Court subordinate to the High Court. It seems necessary to point out that an application like this made during the course of a trial asking the Court to exercise its powers under section 115 in the matter of interlocutory orders cannot be countenanced. If such applications are made in future they should not be admitted" (page 802*). And Heaton J., "If there is one kind of case which section 115 most emphatically points to as not falling within its terms, it is a case like the present, where there is an interlo-

(4) 10 B. 610; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 795 (F. B.).
(5) 10 Ind. Cas. 803: 13 Bom. L. R. 207; 35 B. 243.
(6) 57 Ind. Cas. 432; 22 Bom. L. R. 746; 44 B. 595.
(7) 57 Ind. Cas. 556; 22 Bom. L. R. 801; 44 B. 619.

*Page of 40. B.—[Ed.]
*Pages of 22 Bom. L. R.—[Ed.]

cutory order on an incidental matter which does not prevent the further progress of the suit" (page 802*). The remarks, it is true, are not confined to the particular case then before the Court for they were obviously meant to apply to a class of cases. But the class intended was one, of which that particular case was but a type. The judgments contain no reference to the earlier Full Bench decisions of this Court, and it is impossible to say that their Lordships were dissenting from those authoritative pronouncements.

I, therefore, hold that this application is competent under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In any event, our powers derived from section 5 of Bombay Regulation II of 1827 are very wide. The powers thereby conferred on the Sudder Dewany Adawlat were transferred to this Court by section 9 of the High Courts Act, 1861, and they continue still in force by virtue of section 106 of the Government of India Act.

The question then is whether the application before us discloses a fit case for the exercise of our extraordinary jurisdiction. In my opinion it does.

The main question in the suit relates to the legality and validity of the nomination of nine Municipal Councillors, whose ordinary life is three years. The plaint was filed in October 1922. If we do not interfere now, but allow the litigation to run its full course through the Trial Court and the Court of Appeal, the applicant's ultimate success can yield no practical results, beyond a mere waste of time, energy and money. Moreover, delay in a matter of this nature must necessarily prejudicially affect public interests.

On the first issue, there can be no doubt on the case as made in the plaint that the Commissioner ought to have been joined as a party defendant. The lower Court concedes that he is a proper party. I hold that he is also a necessary party. The sole aim and purpose of the suit is to avoid the nominations made by him, in the exercise of statutory powers. Those powers are conferred on him by the Statute in the interests of the public. It is necessary to hear him before it could be decided that the nominations made by him were illegal. For what is the relief which the plaintiffs claim; The plaint says: "It may be declared that the nomination of the defendants Nos. 1 to 9 as the members of the Nadiad City Municipality made by the Government is illegal." It is obvious, then, that Government is a necessary party.

On the second issue, the finding of the Subordinate Judge is manifestly wrong. He has already added the Secretary of State for India in Council as a party to the suit; he is a necessary party. Section 32 of Act XIV of 1869 comes in the way of his trying the suit. The learned Judge does not attempt to ascertain the meaning of the section itself. He says: "There are very few reported cases" on that section. He therefore proceeds to consider some decided cases bearing on section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure and concludes that 'the Court has jurisdiction to hear the suit when the Secretary of State has been made a party by the Court at his own request and no suit has been instituted against him by the plaintiffs." It is not easy to follow his process of reasoning. Section 32 is in these terms:—

"No Subordinate Judge or Court of Small Causes shall receive or register a suit in which the Government or any officer of Government in his official capacity is a party, but in every such case such Judge or Court shall refer the plaintiff to the District Judge, in whose Court alone (subject to the provisions of section 19) such suit shall be instituted."

It was urged before us that that section merely prohibits a Subordinate Judge from receiving or registering a suit of the nature therein described, but that it does not prevent him from trying it. I am unable to accept this desperate construction of the enactment. A Subordinate Judge is not a ministerial officer appointed for the purpose of receiving or registering suits. When he receives and registers a suit he does it for the purpose of trying it. There can be no object in preventing him from receiving and registering a suit, if it was intended to leave him free to try it. The section confers the exclusive jurisdiction of trying suits of a specified description on the District Judge. The other construction would leave the enactment at the mercy of a litigant; he could avoid these provisions of the Act by contrivances which are easy to imagine and not necessary to describe.

*Page of 22 Bom. L. R.—[Ed.]

For these reasons I would make the Rule absolute and direct that the lower Court should return the plaint to the plaintiffs to be presented to the proper Court. Plaintiffs to pay costs of this application; and also costs of the defendants in the lower Court—one set.

Shah, Ag. C.J.—I am of opinion that this Court has jurisdiction to interfere in a case of this kind, and that under the circumstances of this case we should interfere in the exercise of that jurisdiction.

The preliminary objection as to the jurisdiction of this Court to call for the records of this case under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been elaborately argued. But I am not prepared to accept the contention that at no interlocutory stage of a suit this Court can interfere under that section. Various decisions have been cited at the bar on both sides as to the meaning of this expression "any case which has been decided by any Court subordinate to the High Court, and in which no appeal lies thereto." I do not think that it can serve any useful purpose to attempt to lay down any definition of "a case which has been decided." Where the question of jurisdiction such as arises in this case is involved, and where the subordinate Court has decided that question, the case cannot be held to be outside the scope of the expression. The interlocutory stage of the proceedings will evidently be a point to be considered in deciding whether it is a fit case for interference. On a question of jurisdiction arising at an interlocutory stage under circumstances which in essential particulars bearing on the preliminary point are similar to the circumstances in the present case, this Court interfered in Somchand Bhikhabhai v. Chhaganlal (5). Among the decisions which have been cited I have not been able to find any case, where it is held by this Court that the High Court has no jurisdiction to call for the record of a case, in which the question of jurisdiction is involved at an interlocutory stage under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The real safeguard against undue or improper interference at interlocutory stage is not to put a restricted meaning upon an expression which is comprehensive enough to include a case like the present but to exercise it with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and the nature of the question of jurisdiction. As pointed out in Shiva Nathaji v. Jema Kashinath (1) "the Court cannot impose on itself limitations without regard to circumstances." Even assuming that the case is not covered by section 115, I think it would clearly be covered by the words of the second clause of section 5 of Bombay Regulation II of 1827. Though the Regulation on this point is repealed, this Court still retains the power under the Statutes, which the Sudder Dewany Adawlat had under the said repealed clause.

As regards the second question, on the cause of action, as disclosed in the plaint and the nature of the relief claimed, I think that the Commissioner or the Secretary of State for India in Council is a necessary party. The distinction between a necessary party and a proper party is real; and it is not always easy to draw that distinction. The learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that he was only a proper party and not a necessary party. It is true that the relief by way of injunction is directed against the other defendants and it may be said that the relief by way of declaration is not absolutely essential. But it is clear that the principal, if not the only, question of real importance involved in the suit relates to the validity of the Commissioner's order; and on the whole I think that the presence of the officer concerned or the Government before the Court is necessary in order to enable the Court to effectually and completely adjudicate upon the question involved in the suit. This suit cannot be justly tried and decided and the declaration sought cannot be made in the absence of the officer of the Government. I, therefore, consider the applicant a necessary party. The judgment of the lower Court proceeds upon the basis that he is not a necessary party. It is not essential for the purposes of this case to decide the question whether section 32 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act will necessarily oust the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge in a case where the Government or the public officer is not a necessary party but is kept on the record merely because the case between the private parties may be more effectually dealt with. It is conceivable that an order such as was made by this Court in Narayan Venku v. Sakharam Nagu (8) may imply that the jurisdiction was not necessarily ousted. I reserve my opinion on this point. But where the Government or any officer of Government in his official capacity is a necessary party, as in this case, it is clear that section 32 of the Bombay Civil Courts Act must apply. It makes no difference in its application that the public officer or the Government has not been joined by the plaintiff as a defendant from the beginning before the suit is received or registered. The argument, advanced by the learned Counsel for the opponents, that if the suit is once received or registered and if the Government or the public officer is made a party afterwards, the bar created by section 32 against the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge cannot apply, does not deserve any serious treatment. I reject that argument.

It is clear to my mind that it would be futile to allow this suit to go on in the Court of a Subordinate Judge. It is a case in which we ought to prevent further proceedings in the Court, which according to law cannot entertain them. In the view which we take as to the Secretary of State for India in Council being a necessary party it would be a case of illegal assumption of jurisdiction, if that Court were to try the suit.

I, therefore, concur in the order proposed by my learned brother.

Z. K. Rule made absolute.

(8) 11 B. 519 at p. 523; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 342.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1734 OF 1918.

May 25, 1921.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Abdul Qadir, GURDIT SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KARAM DAD—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 101—Suit on unregistered bond—Execution admitted—Full consideration denied—Burden of proof—Question of fact or law—Second appeal.

In a suit on an unregistered bond, the defendant admitted execution. The receipt of consideration was not denied but it was not admitted in full and it was pleaded finally that whatever debt had been incurred had been repaid. The Trial Court placed the onus of proving absence of consideration on the defendant but the Appellate Court took a contrary view. On second appeal:

Held, (1) that the onus of proving absence of consideration lay on the defendant; [p. 247, col. 1.]

(2) that under the circumstances of the case, the question of the burden of proof was a question of law and could be agitated in second appeal. [p. 247, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jhelum, dated the 2nd March 1918, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Jhelum, dated the 12th November 1917.

Sardar Sewa Ram Singh, for the Appellant.

Mr. Devi Dyal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Gurdit Singh instituted a suit against Karam Dad for the recovery of Rs. 1,400-being the principal and interest due on a bond executed by Karam Dad on the 13th of June 1910 for Rs. 600. The defendant admitted execution of the bond in suit but alleged that the bond had been executed as the final one of a series of other bonds and that the amount consisted mainly of interest and compound interest and for that reason the defendant was unable to admit consideration in full. It was also pleaded that whatever debt had been incurred had been repaid.

The execution of the bond having been admitted and a plea of repayment having been raised the Trial Court placed the onus of proving want of consideration on the defendant and after recording such evidence as the parties cared to produce a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff for Rs 1,200. Against this decree Keram Dad preferred an appeal to the learned District Judge. This appeal was accepted and the plaintiff's suit dismissed, the learned District Judge being of opinion that the onus of proving consideration should have been placed on the plaintiff and that this onus had not been discharged. Against this decision Gurdit Singh has come up to this Court on appeal through Mr. Sewa Ram Singh while the respondent has been represented by Mr Devi Dial.

In our opinion the view taken by the learned District Judge is erroneous. No doubt, the bond was an unregistered one but on the pleadings we are unable to hold that the onus of proving consideration was on the plaintiff. The execution of the bond had been admitted. The receipt of consideration was not denied it merely being alleged that full consideration could not be admitted. Finally, repayment of the debt was definitely alleged. In these circumstances the Trial Court rightly placed the onus on the defendant to show that the bond was without consideration. In any event having regard to the frame of the issue as to consideration, the appellant would have been entitled to a remand in order to be given an opportunity of proving consideration, a fact which the learned District Judge has lost sight of. Mr Devi Dial contended that the proper allocation of the onus probandi was a question of fact which could not be examined in second appeal and in support he referred us to a decision by Johnstone, C. J. reported as Kaura v. Kalu Ram (1). That decision, however, is really against Mr. Devi Dyal, for there it was held that there was no general rule that "the question of imposition of onus probandi is not a question of law for the purposes of second appeal." In the present case we have no hesitation in holding that the question involved is one of law and in our view as above expressed, the learned District Judge was wrong.

(1) 40 Ind. Cas; 1003; 36 P. W. R; 1917;

We accordingly accept this appeal with costs throughout and setting aside the order of the learned District Judge restore the decree passed by the Trial Court.

N. H. Appeal accepted.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT NO. 2405 OF 1923.

July 17, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mulla.

SUBHADRABAI—PLAINTIFF

versus

MAHOMEDBHAI I. M. ROWJI—DEFENDANT.

Vendor and purchaser—Interest on unpaid purchase-money, agreement as to—Liability of purchaser—Wilful default of vendor—Default of both parties, effect of.

Where a contract of sale of immoveable property provides that if from any cause whatever the purchase-money is not paid by the date fixed the purchaser shall pay interest on the unpaid purchase-money at a certain rate, the vendor cannot claim interest if delay in payment of the purchase-money occurs owing to his wilful default, as he cannot take advantage of his own wrong. [p. 249, col. 2.]

Williams v. Glenton, (1866) 1 Ch. App. 200 at p. 206; 35 L. J. Ch. 284; 12 Jur. (N. S) 175; 13 L. T. 727; 14 W. R. 294 and In re Woods and Lewis' Contract, (1898) 2 Ch. 211 at p. 213; 67 L. J. Ch. 475; 78 L. T. 665; 46 W. R. 643; 14 T. L. R. 457 affirming (1898) 1 Ch. 433; 78 L. T. 250; 46 W. R. 373, relied on.

Lapse of time occasioned merely by the defect of the vendor's title not known to him at the date of the contract, especially where immediate steps are taken by the vendor to remedy the defect will not, however, exempt the purchaser from paying interest on the unpaid purchase-money under such a clause as the above. [p. 250, col. 1.]

In re Woods and Lewis' Contract, (1898) 2 Ch. 211 at p. 213; 67 L. J. Ch. 475; 78 L. T. 665; 46 W. R. 643; 14 T. L. R. 457 affirming (1898) 1 Ch. 433; 78 L. T. 250; 46 W. R. 373, In re Young and Harston's Contract, (1885) 31 Ch. D. 168; 54 L. J. Ch. 1144; 53 L. T. 875; 34 W. R. 84; 50 J. P. 245; In re Hetling and Merton's Contract, (1893) 3 Ch. 269; 62 L. J. Ch. 283; 2 R. 543; 69 L. T. 266; 42 W. R. 19; In re Mayor of London and Tubbs' Contract, (1894) 2 Ch. 524 at pp. 539, 540; 63 L. J. Ch. 580; 70 L. T. 719 and Bennet v. Stone, (1903) 1 Ch. 509; 72 L. J. Ch. 240; 88 L. T. 35; 51 W. R. 338, referred to.

Where delay in the payment of the purchase-money is occasioned by the default of both parties the purchaser is still liable to pay interest under the clause, as it cannot be said that the delay was caused exclusively on the part of the vendor, which alone entitles the purchaser to exemption from liability to pay interest under the clause. [p. 251, col. 1.]

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, for the Plaintiff and Defendant No. 2.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General, for Defendant No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—This is an originating summons taken out by the plaintiff and the second defendant (purchasers) for the determination of the question whether the first defendant (vendor) is entitled to interest on the balance of the purchase-money from February 18, 1923, as claimed by him.

On January 18, 1923, the plaintiff and the second defendant purchased certain immoveable property at an auction-sale held by the first defendant as mortgagee of the property for Rs. 1,19,500 subject to certain conditions of which a print is Exhibit A herein. On the same day the purchasers paid Rs. 30,000 as earnest. The sale was to be completed on February 18, 1923. After the date of the agreement for sale, the purchasers' attorneys took search of the register of assurances when they discovered that the property was subject to a mortgage dated August 11, 1873, but there was no re-conveyance. The amount of the mortgage was Rs. 2,000, the parties to the mortgage were Hindus; and, having regard to the rule of damdupat the mortgagee would not be entitled to more than Rs. 2,000 for interest.

The above facts were brought to the notice of the vendor's attorneys, on February 17, 1923. On February 27 the vendor's attorneys wrote to the purchasers complaining that the purchasers had not completed the purchase and that the vendor would claim interest as provided by condition No. 6. To this the purchasers' attorney replied on March 1, stating that as the said mortgage was still subsisting the title was not marketable, and they enquired what the vender proposed to do to make the title marketable. To this there was no reply.

The purchasers then took out an originating summons for the determination of the question whether they were entitled to retain Rs. 4,000 to meet the mortgagee's claim. The summons was argued before me on April 13, and I delivered judgment on April 17, declaring that the vendor was bound to complete the sale on payment of the balance of the purchase-money less Rs. 4,000 for principal and interest and Rs. 150 for the costs of the re-conveyance, and I directed the purchasers to deposit Rs. 4,150 in Court to meet the mortgagee's claim. No arguments were addressed to me on the question of the costs of the summons, and, believing that the costs of the sale were to be equally divided between the parties, I directed that the costs of the summons should be costs in the sale. This order was made under a misapprehension, for under condition No. 18 all costs of the sale were to be borne by the purchasers. The matter was mentioned to me on June 12, and on June 14, I modified the order and directed in effect that each party should bear his own costs of the summons.

In the meanwhile, on April 17, the purchasers' attorneys wrote to the vendor's attorneys that the order for costs was made under a misapprehension. The vendor's attorneys replied on April 18, stating that the order was usual order made on summonses of this kind, and they required the purchasers to complete the matter. To this letter the purchasers' attorneys replied on the same day reiterating that the order as to costs was made under a misapprehension and they claimed to retain Rs. 1,000 with them until the question of costs was finally determined by me. The vendor's attorneys replied on April 25, denying the purchasers right to retain Rs. 1,000 or any other sum. The vendor also claimed interest from February 18, being the date fixed for completing the sale. Further correspondence passed between the parties, and on May 2, the vendor's attorneys made what I think was a very fair proposal to the purchasers' attorneys, namely, that the purchasers should pay the balance of the purchase-money and complete the purchase without prejudice to the contentions of the parties on the question of interest. As to costs they wrote that they would retain Rs. 1,000 with them and not part with the money until the question of costs was determined by the Court. The purchasers did not accept the offer and by their letter of May 2, they insisted on retaining Rs. 1,000 with their attorneys. On May 4, the vendor's atterneys wrote to the purchasers' attorneys as follows:—

"With reference to the 2nd paragraph of your letter, in view of your attitude regarding the sum of Rs. 1,000, we are instructed to state that our client insists upon interest also being paid or the amount thereof being deposited either with your firm or with our firm before completion. Of course your clients must take steps as regards the question of costs and also as regards the question of interest on or before June 15 next, failing which the amount of interest will become payable to our client."

The purchasers did not reply to the above letter. On June 11, the purchasers' attorneys applied to me to reconsider the question of costs, and on the same day they wrote to the vendor's attorneys enquiring whether he was prepared to complete without claiming any interest. They knew full well that the vendor insisted upon his claim for interest, and I do not see any reason why they made the above inquiry. Then on June 14, I made the order directing each party to bear his own costs of the summons.

The present summons was taken out by the purchasers on June 22, 1923. The question to be determined on the summons depends on the true construction of condition No. 6. That condition is as follows:—

"The purchaser of the property shall pay the balance of his purchase-money to the said mortgagee within one calendar month from the day of sale and if the same from any cause whatever be not so paid the purchaser shall pay interest on his unpaid purchase-money at the rate of 10½ per cent. per annum from the end of one calendar month from the date of sale to the day on which the same is actually paid. The purchaser shall not, however, be entitled to claim any rents or income that might be earned out of the said property before payment of the entire balance of the purchase-money. This stipulation is without prejudice to the rights reserved to the mortgagee under other conditions."

It was contended for the purchasers that the delay in the completion of the purchase was caused by the wilful default of the vendor in refusing to complete unless the whole balance of the price was paid, though the mortgage of 1873 was still subsisting, and that the purchasers were not liable to pay any interest. On the other hand, it was argued for the vendor that the refusal did not amount to wilful default, and that the purchasers were bound to pay interest at the rate of 10½ per cent. per annum from February 18, 1923, being the date fixed for completion until the sale was completed.

The words used in condition No. 6 are "from any cause whatever," but it has long since been settled that the generality of these words do not allow a vendor to claim interest where delay occurs by his "wilful default." The Courts have so construed those words as to prevent a vendor from taking advantage of his own wrong: See Williams v. Glenton (1) and In re Woods and Lewis' Contract (2). In Williams v. Glenton (1) the vendor contracted to sell a moiety of an estate to Glenton, the purchase to be completed on June 24, 1854, and if "from any cause whatever," the purchase should not be completed on that day, the purchaser was to pay interest. After the agreement for sale the other part-owner set up a claim to the entirety, and refused to produce the deeds. The vendor filed a bill for partition and a decree for partition was made in July 1862. The purchaser applied at distant intervals to know whether the vendor would complete, and never expressed a wish to rescind. After the decree was obtained, the purchaser insisted that he was entitled to complete without paying interest on the purchase-money. It was held by the Court of Appeal that the circumstances were not such as to exempt the purchaser from payment of interest according to the contract. In the course of his judgment, Sir J. L. Knight-Bruce, L. J. said(p. 206) :—

(1) (1866) 1 Ch. App. 200 at p. 206; 35 L.J. Ch. 284; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 175, 13 L. T. 727; 14 W. R. 294.

(2) (1898) 2 Ch. 211 at p. 213; 67 L. J. Ch. 475; 78 L. T. 665; 46 W.R. 643; 14 T. L. R. 457; Affirming (1898) 1 Ch. 433; 78 L. T. 250; 46 W. R. 373.

"The vendor may be, in a sense, wrong in not having his title ready at the time specified; but I repeat it has notoriously been long settled that the mere existence of difficulties as to the title, justifying the purchaser in refusing to complete until they are removed, does not exempt him from that clause relating to interest.....There must be something more than that kind of default which I have mentioned: there must be, I might almost say, some serious misconduct on the part of the vendor to exempt the purchaser from liability to interest. Here there is nothing of the sort. The purchaser might possibly have exempted himself from interest by investing the purchase-money; he might, and possibly with success, have refused to be bound by the contract; but he did neither."

The above case is an authority for the proposition that lapse of time occasioned merely by the defect of the vendor's title not known to him at the date of the contract, especially where immediate steps are taken by the vendor to remedy the defect, as was done in In re Woods and Lews' Contract (2), does not exempt the purchaser from paying interest.

In In re Young and Harston's Contract (3), the clause as to interest contained the words, "if from any cause whatever other than wilful default on the part of the purchaser." In dealing with the expression "wilful default," Bowen, L. J. said (page 174) —

"The term 'wilful default'....is not a term of art.....Default is a purely relative term, just like negligence. It means nothing more, nothing less, than not doing what is reasonable under the circumstances—not doing something which you ought to do, having regard to the relations which you occupy towards the other persons interested in the transaction. The other word which it is sought to define is 'wilful'. That is a word of familiar use in every branch of law, and although in some branches of the law, it may have a special meaning, it generally, as used in Courts of Law, implies nothing blamable, but merely that the person of whose action or default the expression is used, is a free agent, and that what has been done arises from the spontaneous action of his will. It amounts to nothing more than this, that he knows what he is doing, and intends to do what he is doing, and is a free agent."

The observations of Bowen, L. J., were cited with approval in In re Hetling and Merton's Contract (4) in In re Mayor of London and Tubb's Contract (5) and in Bennett v. Stone (6).

I now pass to consider whether the delay in the present case was occasioned by the wilful default of the vendor. Applying the above observations to the facts of the present case, I think that the delay was caused by what I may call in the words of Knight-Bruce, L. J., "serious misconduct on the part of the vendor." Immediately the purchasers' attorneys discovered the defect in the title, they brought it to the notice of the vendor by their letter of February 17. The mortgage of 1873 being still subsisting, the vendor was not entitled to payment of the whole of the purchase-money as if the mortgage did not exist. He insisted, however, on payment of the whole of the purchase-money, which obviously he was not entitled to do. The purchasers had no alternative but to take out an originating summons which they did on March 28, 1923. In the language of Bowen, L. J., he did not do what he ought to have done. He ought, I think, to have accepted the price less the amount of the mortgage claim, but he refused to do so. The refusal was unreasonable: it was arbitrary and unjustifiable. What, then, is the period for which the purchasers should be exempted from payment of interest? The mortgage was discovered by their attorneys on or about February 17. But the originating summons was not taken out

(3) (1885) 31 Ch. D. 168; 54 L. J. Ch. 1144; 53 L. T. 875; 34 W. R. 84; 50 J. P. 245.

(4) (1893) 3 Ch. 269; 62 L. J. Ch. 783; 2 R. 543; 69 L. T. 266; 42 W. R. 19.

(5) (1894) 2 Ch. 524 at pp. 539, 540; 63 L. J. Ch. 580; 74 L. T. 719.

(6) (1903) 1 Ch. 509; 72 L. J. Ch. 240; 88 L. T. 355; 51 W. R. 338.

until March 28, 1923, and this delay has not been explained. Further, the purchasers were wrong in insisting upon retaining Rs 1,000 for costs. I think they would have been well advised if they had accepted the offer made by the vendor's attorneys by their letter of May 2. Had the offer been accepted, the purchase could have been completed by May 8. If no such offer had been made, I should have held that both parties were in the wrong, the vendor in refusing to complete unless interest was paid for the full period of the delay, and the purchasers in refusing to complete unless they were allowed to retain Rs. 1,000 for costs. Both parties being in the wrong, it could not be said that the delay was caused exclusively by default on the part of the vendor, which alone entitles the purchaser to exemption from liability to interest under the interest clause : See In re Mayor of London and Tubbs' Contract (5). Again, there was no reason why the question of interest should not have been raised by the first summons. The vendor had set up that claim by his attorneys' letter of February 27. Having regard to all the facts of the case and the conduct of the parties, I think that the purchasers should pay interest from February 19, 1923, up to July 9, 1923, being the date on which the purchase was completed, except from March 28, 1923, the date of the first originating summons (No. 1208 of 1923) to May 8 when the sale ought to have been completed, to which ought to be added a further period of ten days, being the period necessary for preparing papers for the originating summons after the date of the discovery of the mortgage. The total period of exclusion will thus be fifty-two days. Each party to bear his own costs of the summons. First defendant to be at liberty to add his costs to his mortgage claim. Counsel certified.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1454 OF 1917.

May 18, 1921.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof and Mr. Justice Harrison.

KANSHI RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS —APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat HARO—PLAINTIFF —RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 101—Construction of document—Agreement by surety—Security deposit, confiscation of—Justification—Burden of proof.

The plaintiff deposited security money with the defendants, a partnership firm, on behalf of one of the members thereof, the agreement being that if the business suffered any loss, the other partners would be entitled to deduct the share of the loss of that member from the security money. After the partnership came to an end the plaintiff sued to recover his deposit. The defendants contended that in order to succeed the plaintiff was bound to prove that there had been no loss in the business:

Held, that upon a correct interpretation of the agreement the burden of proof was on the defendants to show that the business had suffered any loss and in the absence of such proof, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. [p. 252, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated the 23rd April 1917, confirming that of the Sub-Judge First Class Amritsar, dated the 12th December 1916.

Mr. Manohar Lal, for the Appellants.

Dr. G. C. Narang, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are few and simple On the 10th of April 1906 Pala Mal and Kanshi Ram entered into a partnership business with one Mohan Lal. Mohan Lal was to be the managing partner, and was to keep the accounts. Pala Mal and Kanshi Ram had to find funds. On the 30th of July 1906, Musammat Haro, the plaintiff in this case, stood surety for Mohan Lal and executed a security-bond under which she mortgaged a house for Rs. 1,000, and deposited Rs 1,000 in cash. The partnership was entered into for a period of two years. The plaintiff brought this suit for the recovery of Rs. 1,000 which were deposited in cash on the allegation that the partnership business had come to an end, and that no loss had been incurred. She also claimed interest. The suit was at first dismissed upon a technical ground by the Trial Court. On appeal it was remanded under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedur Code. An appeal against the order of remand to the Chief Court having failed the case went down to the Trial Court for decision. The chief question for decision on the pleadings was the question of burden of proof. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 contended that the plaintiff in order to succeed was bound to prove that there had been no loss in the business. The plaintiff, on the other hand, argued that it lay upon the defendants to prove that the business had suffered loss, and that they were entitled to detain the money due to her. On the case coming back to the Trial Court the second time, Mohan Lal, for whom the plaintiff had stood surety, was also impleaded as a defendant to the suit. Both the Courts below found that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had a right to call upon the defendant No. 3 to give accounts, and that they were not entitled to detain the money belonging to the plaintiff without showing that the business had resulted in loss. The suit was accordingly decreed by the Trial Court and the decree was upheld by the lower Appellate Court.

The defendants have come up in second appeal to this Court, and it has been contended on their behalf by Mr. Manohar Lal that the decision of the two Courts below on the question of burden of proof was wrong. We are clearly of opinion that the two Courts below have taken the right view of the question of the burden of proof. A reference to the hypothecaton bond itself clearly shows what the contract between the parties was. One of the clauses in the document is that in case the business suffered any loss and Mohan Lal refused to pay his share of such loss on demand being made, Pala Mal and Kanshi Ram would be entitled to deduct from the security money, the share due to them on account of the loss.

Upon a correct interpretation of the words of this deed there is no doubt that the burden of proof lay upon defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to show that the business had suffered any loss, and that they had called upon Mohan Lal to pay his share of the loss. This they have failed to show, and the Courts below were right in decreeing the suit. We accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

N. H.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 594 OF 1920.

March 21, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ross.

Munshi GOBIND PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Lala JAGDEEP SAHAI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Transfer of land—Deed of relinquishment—Title to property, whether passes.

A deed of relinquishment does not confer a title and title to land cannot pass by admission when the Statute requires a deed of conveyance. [p. 253, col. 1.]

Mr. Rai T. N. Sahai, for the Appellant.

Mr. Janak Kishore, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff who brought a suit alleging that he had purchased 2 bighas 18 kanals 10 dhurs of land in 1900 in the farzi name of the defendant and that on the 7th May 1918 the defendant executed a deed of release in his favour but refused to deliver it.

The plaintiff claims declaration that the defendant was a benamidar purchaser in 1900 and prays for a decree ordering the defendant to deliver the deed of release to the plaintiff. In his written statement the defendant denied that he was the farzidar of the plaintiff or that the plaintiff had purchased the property.

He further alleged that the deed of release was intended to be a coveyance but the consideration had not been paid.

The learned Munsif thought the deed to be a genuine deed of release and gave a decree. The District Judge, however, first considered the question whether the plaintiff or the defendant was the beneficial owner of the property.

On this question he finds that the defendant was the beneficial owner. He then went into the question of the Ladavi deed and held that if there was no consideration the defendant was not bound by the deed but that in fact the defendant had proved that he executed this document because the plaintiff promised to pay him Rs. 250 which had not been paid. He, therefore, modified the decree of the Munsif by ordering the plaintiff to pay Rs. 250 and the defendant to deliver the sale-deed on receipt of this amount. The contention in second appeal is that under section 92 of the Evidence Act no evidence was admissible to show any contemporaneous agreement for the payment of Rs. 250 and that as the execution of the deed is admitted, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for delivery thereof unconditionally. Now the learned District Judge has found as a fact that the defendant was the beneficial owner of this property.

The prayer in the plaint, therefore, must be refused and the only question is whether the plaintiff is entitled to the delivery of this deed. Now it has been held repeatedly that the deed of relinquishment does not confer a title and that title to land cannot pass by admission when the Statute requires a deed.

Jadu Nath Poddar v. Rup Lal Poddar (1) and Dharam Chand Boid v. Mouji Sahu (2). Here the parties have been trying to effect by release what could only be effected by conveyance. This document is of no effect whatsoever in transfering the title from the defendant to the plaintiff.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

N. H. Appeal dismissed

(1) 33 C. 967; 4 C. L. J. 22; 10 C. W. N. 650.
(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 440; 16 C. L. J. 436.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 2771 OF 1920.

July 20, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Chotzner.

KUNJA MOHAN CHAKRAVARTY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MANINDRA CHANDRA ROY CHAUDHURY AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 16 (4), 20, 21, O. XXI, r. 3—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 144—Rent suit—Cause of action—Place of suing—Execution of decree—Sale of immoveable property outside jurisdiction, validity of—Jurisdiction, want of, effect of.

Section 144 of the Bengal Tenancy Act merely lays down where the cause of action in suits between landlord and tenant shall, for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure, be deemed to have arisen; it does not say in which Court the suit is to be instituted. To ascertain this recourse must be had to the provisions of section 20 of the Code. [p. 254, col. 2.]

Where the landlord only wants a money-decree the suit may be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the tenant resides; where, however, the landlord seeks a decree for rent or ejectment, the suit must be treated as one for recovery of immoveable property within the meaning of section 16 (4) of the Civil Procedure Code and must be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate. [p. 259, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

The only case in which a Court is entitled to sell immoveable property beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction is that provided in O. XXI, r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code. A sale of such property in any other case is without jurisdiction and a nullity. If a Court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter, its judgments and orders are mere nullities, and may not only be set aside at any time by the Court in which they are rendered, but be declared void by every Court in which they are presented. If a Court has no jurisdiction, its judgment is not merely voidable but void and it is wholly unimportant how precise, certain and technically correct its proceedings and decisions may have been; if it has no power to hear and determine the cause, its authority is wholly usurped and its judgments and orders are the exercise of arbitrary power under the forms, but without the sanction, of the law. These principles apply, not only to original Courts but also to Courts of Appeal. Accordingly where an Appellate Court does not possess jurisdiction to review the action of the Court below, jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon it by consent of the parties, and any waiver on their part cannot make up for the lack or defect of jurisdiction. [p. 256, col. 1.]

Ledgard v. Bull, 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 741; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561 (P. C.), Minakshi Naidu v. Subramanya Sastri, 11 M. 26; 14 I. A. 160; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 54; 11 Ind. Jur. 393; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 18 (P. C.), and Gurdeo Singh v. Chandrika Singh, 1 Ind. Cas. 913; 36 C. 193; 5 C. L. J. 611, referred to.

The provision contained in section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code is an exception to the well established rule that where the Court has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of suit, its decree is a nullity, even though the parties may have consented to the jurisdiction of the Court, and cannot be so interpreted as to have a wider application than what is justified by its terms. [p. 256, col. 2.]

Section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code does not bar a defendant from questioning the validity of an execution sale held without jurisdiction which is the root of the plaintiff's title. [p. 256, col. 2; p. 257, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Rangpur, dated the 20th July 1920, reversing the decree of the Munsif, First Court, at Kurigram, dated the 2nd June 1919.

Babus Surendra Chandra Sen and Dwijendra Krishna Dutt, for the Appellants.

Babu Mohini Mohan Chakravarty, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the defendants in a suit for recovery of possession or, in the alternative, for assessment of rent. The disputed tenure was held by the defendants under the plaintiffs and fell into arrears. The plaintiffs thereupon instituted a suit for arresrs of rent and obtained a decree. In execution of that decree the tenure was sold on the 8th January 1907 and was purchased by the landlord decree-holders for the sum of Re. 1. On the 29th April 1918 the plaintiffs landlords instituted the present suit for ejectment on the allegation that the defendants were in unlawful occupation, notwithstanding the sale of their tenure. The defendants urged that the decree had been made and the sale had been held without jurisdiction. So that their interest in the tenure had not been affected thereby. The Trial Court accepted this contention as well founded and dismissed the claim for ejectment. The Court, however, made a decree for arrears of rent. Upon appeal the District Judge has reversed that decision and made a decree in ejectment with mesne profits. On the present appeal the view taken by the District Judge has been assailed as contrary to law.

It is not disputed that the tenure is situated within the jurisdiction of the Court of the Munsif at Kurigram within the district of Rangpur. The suit for rent however, was instituted in the Court of the Munsif at the head-quarters of that district. The defendants did not appear, with the result that the suit was decreed ex parte. The decree was then executed at the instance of the plaintiffs and the tenure was brought to sale in the Court where the decree had been passed. On these facts, the defendants contend that the decree was made and the sale was held without jurisdiction.

In support of the contention that the decree was made without jurisdiction, reliance has been placed upon sub-section (1) of section 144, Bengal Tenancy Act, which is in these terms:—"The cause of action in all suits between landlord and tenant as such shall, for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure, be deemed to have arisen within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the possession of the tenure or holding in connection with which the suit is brought." This provision, it will be observed, does not specify the Court where the suit is to be instituted. It merely defines the expression 'cause of action' as applied to suits between landlord and tenant for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure. That this is the true scope of the section is clear from the decision in Fazlur Rahim Abu Ahmed v. Dwarka Nath Chowdhry (1). In that case, it was ruled that section 144, Bengal Tenancy Act, was controlled by sections 15 and 17 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, and that consequently a suit for rent was required to be instituted, subject to pecuniary limitations, in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. Sir Francis Maclean, C. J., pointed out that section 144 merely lays down where the cause of action in suits between landlord and tenant shall, for the purpose of the Code of Civil Procedure, be deemed to have arisen: it does not say in which Court the suit is to be instituted. To ascertain this, we must go to section 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, which provides that all other suits, that is, other than those mentioned in section 16, shall be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action arises. This, in the case of suits between landlord and tenant, is controlled by section 144, Bengal Tenancy Act which tells us where, in such suits, the cause of action shall be deemed to have arisen : i. e., within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the possession of the holding or tenure in connection with which the suit is brought. We must consequently turn to the provisions of section 20 of the Code of 1908 which replaces section 17 of the Code of 1882. Now section 20, provides that subject to the limitation aforesaid, that is the limitations set out in the preceding sections, every suit shall be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction (a) the defendant or each of the defendants, where there are more than one, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business, or personally works for gain; or (b) any of the defendants, where there are more than one, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, provided that in such case, either the leave of the Court is given, or the defendants who do not reside, or carry on business or personally work for gain as aforesaid, acquiesce in such institution, or (c) the cause of action wholly or in part, arises. Consequently under section 20 (c) of the Code of 1908 read with sub-section (1) of section 144, Bengal Tenancy Act, a suit for rent may be instituted in the Court within the local limits of the jurisdiction of which lies the property in respect of which a suit for possession may have been brought. This, however, does not exhaust all the provisions of section 20. Clauses (a) and (b) of section 20 allow a landlord to institute a suit for rent where the tenant resides. This must obviously be limited to cases where the landlord seeks a decree for money. Where however, the landlord seeks a decree for rent as also ejectment under section 66, Bengal Tenancy Act, the suit must be treated as one for recovery of immoveable property within the meaning of clause (4) of section 16 and can consequently be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate. In the case before us, there is evidence to show that at the time the suit for rent was instituted, the defendants resided within the local limits of the Court of the Munsif at the headquarters of the District of Rangpur. The suit was consequently brought in a Court which had jurisdiction and the decree cannot successfully be impeached on that ground. The view we take is supported by the decision in Chintaman Narayan v. Madhavrav Venkatesh (2) where it was ruled that a suit to recover the rents of land situated in District T. may be brought in District S., where the defendant is residing, although in such suit the plaintiff's title to the land in respect of which the rent is sought to be recovered may incidentally come in question.

(1) 30 C. 453; 7 C. W. N. 402.

We have next to consider whether the sale was held with jurisdiction. As we have already stated the sale was held by the Court which had made the decree. That Court had jurisdiction over the person of the defendants but not over the disputed property. In these circumstances, it is plain that the Court was not competent to bring the property to sale. The only case in which a Court a is entitled to sell immoveable property beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction is that provided in O. XXI r. 3 of the Code of 1908 which provides as follows:—"Where immoveable property forms one estate or tenure situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of two or more Courts any one of such Courts may attach and sell the entire estate or tenure." This provision was inserted for the first time in the Code of 1908 and gave effect to the decision of this Court in Ram Lall Moitra v. Bama Sundari Dabia (3). We must hold

(2) 6 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 29.
(3) 12 C. 307; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 209.

accordingly that the sale was held without jurisdiction.

This brings us to the question of the effect of such sale. In our opinion, there is no room for controversy, that the sale was a nullity. In support of this conclusion reference may be made to the decision in Rajlakshmi Dasee v. Katyayani Dasee (4). It is an elementary principle of law that if a Court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter, its judgments and orders are mere nullities, and may not only be set aside at any time by the Court in which they are rendered, but be declared void by every Court in which they are presented. If a Court has no jurisdiction its judgment is not merely voidable but void and it is wholly unimportant how precise, certain and technically correct its proceedings and decisions may have been; if it has no power to hear and determine the cause, its authority is wholly usurped and its judgments and orders are the exercise of arbitrary power under the forms, but without the sanction of the law. These principles apply, not only to Original Courts but also to Courts of appeal. Accordingly where an Appellate Court does not possess jurisdiction to review the action of the Court below, jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon it by consent of the parties; and any waiver on their part cannot make up for the lack or defect or jurisdiction. This view has been recognised by the Judicial Committee in Legdard v. Bull (5) and Minakshi Naidu v. Subramanya Sastri (6). Reference may also be made to the decision of this Court in Gurdeo Singh v. Chandrika Singh (7) where the authorities on the subject are reviewed.

It was contended, however, on behalf of the respondents that although the sale was held without jurisdiction, and although the proceedings could not be validated on the ground of acquiescence, still the proceedings might be deemed as those of an arbitrator chosen by the parties. In support of this proposition reliance was placed upon a passage from the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Legdard v. Bull (5) where Lord Watson observed that when, in proceedings pending before the Court, the parties agree to accept the Judge's decision as final even though the Court may not have jurisdiction, they thereby constitute the Judge a quasi-arbitrator. The effect of such agreement is that the decision of the Judge is not appealable and cannot be questioned in any way. But though the Judge may be considered as an arbitrator, his decision is not, and does not, in any way resemble, an award; Burgess v. Morton (8). This principle, however, has no application to the circumstances of the present litigation. The decree was made ex parte; the sale was held ex parte; and consequently it cannot be assumed that the parties, that is, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, agreed to constitute the Judge as their arbitrator and to abide by the sale held by him.

Finally, reference has been made, in the course of the argument, to section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code, which forms the basis of the view taken by the District Judge. That section provides that no objection as to the place of suing shall be allowed by any Appellate or Revisional Court unless, such objection was taken in the Court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement; and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice. That provisions was inserted for the first time in the Code of 1908 and is framed on the analogy of section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act of 1884. The provision is an exception to the well-established rule that where the Court has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit, its decree is a nullity even though the parties may have consented to the jurisdiction of the Court. This exception cannot obviously be so interpreted as to have a wider application than what is justified by its terms. It is possible for us to hold that section 21 debars the defendants from questioning

(4) 12 Ind. Cas. 464; 38 C. 639 at p. 668.
(5) 9 A. 191; 13 I. A. 134; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 741; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561 (P. C.).
(6) 11 M. 26; 14 I. A. 160; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 54; 11 Ind. Jur 393; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 18 (P. C.).
(7) 1 Ind. Cas. 913; 36 C. 193; 5 C. L. J. 611,
(8) (1896) A. C. 136; 65 L. J. Q. B. 321; 73 L. T. 713.

the validity of the execution sale which is the root of the title of the plaintiff's. When the Judge has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit, the parties cannot, by their mutual consent, convert it into a proper judicial process, although they may constitute the Judge their arbitrator and be bound by his decision on the merits when these are submitted to him. This, however, can be accomplished, only when the parties have expressly consented to such a procedure.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the District Judge is set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored, with costs both here and in the lower Appellate Court.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1210 OF 1921.

November 11, 1921.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway.

HASHAM ALI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

UMAR HAYAT—PLAINTIFF, Musammat MULAIMI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Succession—Several heirs—Possession of one heir—Adverse possession—Finding of fact.

In each case where several co-heirs succeed to the property of a deceased Muhammadan it has to be found whether an entry by one co-heir is an entry on behalf of himself alone or on behalf of all the heirs and the finding is one of fact. [p. 258, col. 1.]

Khadersa Hajee v. Puthen Veettil, 6 Ind. Cas. 50; 34 M. 511; 20 M. L. J. 288; 8 M. L. T. 4; (1910) M. W. N. 447. Nasr-ud-din v. Lal Bibi, 89 P. R. 1888, Lachman Singh v. Sohan Singh, 97 P. R. 1890, referred to.

Second appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Sialkot, dated the 21st March 1921, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Sialkot, dated the 22nd December 1920.

Lala Amar Nath Bhatia for Sheikh Gulab-ud-Din, for the Appellant.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Umar Hayat sued for possession by partition of certain immoveable property. The principal contesting defendant was Hasham Ali. The Trial Court having granted Umar Hayat a decree, Hasham Ali appealed to the Sub-Judge urging that the suit was barred by limitation. His appeal having been dismissed he has come up to this Court in second appeal and I have heard Mr. Amar Nath Bhatia on his behalf. The property in suit originally belonged to Samand and Sakandar who died 50 years or so ago, and for the appellant it was contended that he and his ancestors had been in possession as sole owners during this period for which reason it was incumbent on Umar Hayat to show that he had been in possession within the last twelve years; for Umar Hayat it was apparently urged that when the estate fell in, all the persons entitled to share took possession or that at any rate whoever took possession did so on behalf of all the persons entitled to share.

The lower Appellate Court in reliance on Khadersa Hajee v. Puthen Veettil (1), and Lachman Singh v. Sohan Singh (2), held the suit to be within time. It has however gone further and has held that the property in suit is joint at the present time, as deposed to by even the defendant's own witnesses.

In Khadersa Hajee v. Puthen Veettil (1), it was held that when a Muhammadan died intestate his estate at once vested in his heirs as tenants-in-common and there was no one charged by law with its distribution. It was also held that to a suit brought by one of the heirs to recover his share Art. 144 of the Limitation Act applied so far as immoveables were concerned. Mr. Bhatia contended that as the Muhammadan Law did not recognise a joint family such as is recognised by Hindu Law no tenancy-in-common comes into existence on the death of a Muhammadan and limitation commences to run against each individual heir from the date of the death. In support of this

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 50; 34 M. 511; 20 M. L. J. 288; 8 M. L. T. 4; (1910) M. W. N. 447.

(2) 97 P. R. 1890.

contention he referred to Nasir-ud-din v. Lal Bibi (3) an authority which certainly is in point.

The decision Lachman Singh v. Sohan Singh (2) referred to by the lower Appellate Court and relied on by Dr. Nand Lal for the respondent is a little difficult to apply to the present case.

At page 290 Plowden, J., says: "I do not doubt that when an estate devolves in its entirety upon several persons jointly and one of them enters upon or takes possession of the estate that entry may be an entry on behalf of all, and that the consequent possession of a co-heir, who has thus entered on behalf of all, is the possession of all the co-heirs. Whether the entry is an entry on behalf of all the co-heirs or on behalf of the entering co-heir alone is a question of fact; and in the absence of any evidence it may be presumed and often would be presumed as a presumption of fact, and not of law, to be an entry on behalf of all the co-heirs."

At page 292, however, Benton, J., does not accept this proposition; as to the nature of the presumption, he says "Generally speaking in this country one of several sharers who enters on an inheritance should I think be regarded as acting on his own behalf only unless there be circumstances which point to a different intention."

That case deals with Sikhs or Hindus and the above remarks, even if not so conflicting, can scarcely be held to be of general application.

In each case it has to be found whether an entry by one sharer was an entry on behalf of himself alone or on behalf of all and the finding is one of fact. In the present case the lower Appellate Court seems to have held that the entry was one on behalf of all as a matter of law.

Even if this be erroneous however there is the finding that the property sought to be partitioned is actually joint. It would seem to be immaterial therefore what the nature of the original entry may have been. The plaintiff comes into Court asking for the partition of joint property and the Courts have found on the evidence that as a fact the property is joint. On this finding of fact the suit is within time and I accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(3) 89 P. R. 1888.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECNDO CIVIL APPEAL NO. 536 OF 1921.

May 22, 1922.

Present:—Mr. MacColl, A. J. C.

MAUNG CHIT U—APPELLANT

versus

MAUNG THA KU AND ANOTHER —RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 15—Execution of decree—Record destroyed—Proof of decree—Secondary evidence.

When a decree-holder wishes to obtain execution of a decree the record of which he alleges has been destroyed, he must prove the contents of that decree, and this can only be done by means of secondary evidence. For this purpose statements of persons who merely heard the judgment pronounced are not admissible in evidence. What is required is an oral account of the contents of the judgment or decree by someone who had read the one or the other. [p. 259, col. 2.]

Mr. N. M. Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. Dutt, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In 1919 the respondents sued the Appellant for ejectment from a piece of land.

The suit was contested and it is said to have been decided on the 1st November 1919. The Court House was burnt on the 13th November 1919 and with it the record. No appeal was filed and no steps were taken by either side until the 26th January 1921 when the respondent Maung Tha Ku alone applied for execution saying that a decree had been passed in his favour. He prayed that the Appellant might be ejected from the land and that he might be arrested and imprisoned for failure to pay costs, which he said amounted to Rs. 26. The appellant contended that as in other cases in which the record had been burnt fresh suits were instituted that course should also be taken in this case. The Township Judge beldan enquiry with a view to finding out what the decision in the suit had been and then without coming to any exact finding on the point directed Maung Tha Ku to be put in possession of the land and later had the appellant arrested and imprisoned for failure to pay costs, though there was no evidence what the costs amounted to and not a single witness had stated that the appellant had been directed to pay them. The appellant appealed unsuccessfully and has now come up on second appeal. It is urged that the decree must be proved by secondary evidence and that there is no such evidence on the record. For the respondent Maung Tha Ku it is urged that on the authority of Nuzur Banoo v. Hosseln Ali Khan (1) cited on page 94 of Messrs. Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's Civil Procedure Code, 2nd Edition, a fresh suit for possession of the land would be barred and that if the provisions of section 91, Evidence Act, have not been strictly complied with a fresh decree can be prepared from the materials on the record and executed. There is another ruling cited on the same page of the same book viz., Ranee Emamun v. Hurdyal Singh (2) in which it was held that in such circumstances a fresh suit would lie. Both these cases are said to be reported in the Weekly Reporter of 1864 but unfortunately there seems to have been a misprint because I have been unable to trace these cases.

The appellant does not admit that it was decided that he should give possession of the land to Maung Tha Ku or that he should pay costs. If it be impossible to prove what the decision was, I am not sure that a fresh suit would not lie. It could only be barred under section 11, Civil Procedure Code, and for that section to act as a bar I think it might reasonably be held that there must have been an effective decision and that what was an effective decision would depend upon circumstances Suppose for instance that at the time a Judge pronounced judgment no one was present and immediately afterwards the Court House and record was burnt and the Judge perished in the fire. In such a case no one could know what the decision had been and the decision would be ineffective. The point, however, does not arise in this case as a fresh suit has not been brought. It is clear that if the respondent Maung Tha Ku wishes to obtain execution of the decree which he says he has obtained he must prove the contents of that decree and he can only do so by means of secondary evidence and there is no secondary evidence of the decree on the record. None of the witnesses professes to have seen the decree. There is in fact no evidence that a decree was ever drawn up and seeing that the record was burnt twelve days after the day on which judgment is said to have been pronounced it is not at all unlikely that no decree ever was drawn up. The Township Judge has mistaken the nature of the evidence required. Statements of persons who merely heard judgment pronounced were not admissible in evidence and as a matter of fact none of the witnesses stated that they had heard the judgment read out. What was required was an oral account of the contents of the judgment or decree by some one who had read the one or the other. If any credible witness who read the judgment or the part of the judgment which contained the decision can depose to what he read, a decree can be drawn up now. There is nothing in the Civil Procedure Code to prevent that. A decree must agree with the judgment and if a decree be drawn up which does not agree with the judgment it can be amended. As I have said there is no evidence that a decree was drawn up. If such a reconstruction of the judgment or decree, if there was one, be now attempted great care will have to be exercised to see that there is no defect as regards the description of the land.

There is another aspect of the case that may require consideration. * * * * * It may be that either party has a right to require the Court to draw up a decree as there is no evidence that a decree has ever been drawn up. In that case the Court might have to treat the suit as still pending. I express no opinion on the point. The respondent Maung Tha Ku applied for execution of a decree, which he alleged entitled him to certain relief. He further alleged that one Maung Kya Bwin was a joint decree-holder with him but Maung Kya Bwin did not sign the application for execution nor has he joined with Maung Tha Ku in contesting this appeal. The Courts below altogether overlooked the provisions of O. XXI, r. 15, which made it more than ever necessary to prove the exact contents of the decree, which is alleged to have been passed, before ordering execution. I do not think, therefore, that a remand should be ordered.

(1) W. R. (1864) 378.
(2) W. R. (1864) 301.

If Maung Tha Ku or he and Maung Kya Bwin jointly are able to prove what is required, there is nothing to prevent him or them from making a fresh application for execution. If they are unable to prove the contents of the decree or judgment they must be left to take what remedy may be open to them and on that point I refrain from expressing any definite opinion. If they suffer they have only themselves to blame for not having taken immediate steps when they heard of the burning of the Court House.

Maung Tha Ku failed to prove that he was entitled to the relief which he claimed and the orders of the Courts below are accordingly set aside and his application for execution is dismissed with costs in all three Courts.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 87 OF 1923.

June 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Foster.

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY—PETITIONERS

versus

THE NADIA COAL COMPANY—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss 51, 52—Performance of contract—Reciprocal promise, breach of—Liability of party in default—Railway agreeing to give delivery after weighment—Failure to weigh, effect of.

Plaintiff consigned a certain quantity of coal to the defendant Company for carriage to a certain station. On arrival at destination the consignee suspected that there was a considerable shortage in the quantity of coal consigned and he refused to take delivery without weighment. The defendant Company agreed to do this, but failed to carry out the agreement. The consignee refused to take delivery, and the plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant Company for the price of the coal:

Held, that although the defendant Company was not ordinarily bound to give delivery after weighment, they had agreed to do so in this case and having failed to carry out their agreement they were liable to the plaintiff irrespective of the terms of any Risk Note that the plaintiff may have signed. [p. 261, col. 1.]

Revision from an order of the Small Cause Court Judge, Dhanbad, dated the 18th January 1923.

Messrs. N. C. Sinha, B. B. Ghosh and N. C. Ghosh, for the Petitioners.

Mr. S. C. Mazumdar, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff received an order from one Raj Mohan Saha of Raiganj, district Dinajpur, to send him a certain amount of coal. The plaintiff Company not having that coal engaged the assistance of a firm Matroo Mal whose colliery is adjacent to that of the plaintiff. Matroo Mal apparently as agent of the plaintiff loaded the waggon and consigned it and the plaintiff's manager had before this signed the Risk Note in Form H. The consignment arrived at a station Waria where the axle of a wheel of the truck became hot and the coal had to be taken out snd put into another truck. For a considerable time the consignment was lost sight of and at last in about five months after the date of consinging it reached Raiganj. Raj Mohan Saha suspected that the weight of the coal was only about half of what had been consigned and it is his evidence that he agreed to take delivery if the Railway Company on their behalf would weigh or measure the amount of coal so delivered. He got a letter from the East Indian Railway Company stating that the Eastern Bengal State Railway was being asked to have the coal re-weighed by measurement, the standard being 63 cubic feet to a ton. The Eastern Bengal State Railway refused to do this and the consignee Raj Mohan on his part refused to take delivery. The plaintiff now has sued for compensation for this non-delivery alleging that the consignee has not paid him the price of the coal. The suit has been decreed against the defendant No. 1, East Indian Railway Company and dismissed against defendant No. 2, the Eastern Bengal State Railway.

It is urged that the plaintiff has no cause of action and cannot sue as plaintiff. As it appears to me, the plaintiff was in fact the consigner and Matroo Mal was the plaintiff's agent. It is also urged that the plaintiff cannot sue unless and until the consignee took delivery. I fail to appreciate this contention, for reasons which I shall give presently.

The third point that is argued is that the Risk Note exonerates the Railway from all claims based upon short delivery. It seems to me that the plaintiff can claim that there has been no delivery of the consignment. The plaintiff has shown that he offered to take delivery on re-weighment and the East Indian Railway Company, the present applicants, agreed to this; so the performance of the contract was based upon reciprocal promises, of which obviously the prior in order of sequence was the promise to weigh or measure. When the Company failed to perform its promise to weigh or measure the consignee was at liberty to protect his own interest by refusing to take delivery. The matter is quite outside the question whether there was a Risk Note or not and it depends on the ordinary law as to the performance of contracts to be found in sections 51 and 52 of the Contract Act. Reading the judgment of the Subordinate Judge it seems to me that he must have this in his mind in the last paragraph of his judgment. It is no answer to this argument to quote the well-known rule that the Railway has no obligation to weigh goods before delivery; for it is obvious that if the Railway makes the special contract to weigh, the individual with whom the contract is made can take advantage of the contract. The defendant Company has not disclosed the amount of loss, nor in fact asserted a loss: so the amount of damages could not be other than that decreed. I see nothing that is against the law in the decision arrived at by the learned Subordinate Judge. The application is rejected with costs. Hearing fee three gold mohurs.

Z. K. Application rejected.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 69 OF 1920.

May 17, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cuming.

Rani HEMANTA KUMARI DEBI —APPELLANT

versus

THE MIDNAPUR ZEMINDARI CO., LTD.—RESPONDENT

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 5 (5)—Tenant, status of—Tenure-holder—Area of holding—Presumption—Mode of user, evidence of, whether admissible—Transfer of tenure—Settlement by Government—Agreement between Government and settlement holder, whether can be taken advantage of by tenant.

Defendants were entered in the revenue papers as "tenure-holders" of an area exceeding fourteen hundred bighas, and had from the very inception of their tenancy cultivated the land through tenants:

Held, that the defendants must be held to be the tenure-holders of the land. [p. 263, col. 1.]

Bilhudendra v. Debendra Nath, 27 Ind. Cas. 432; 20 C. L. J. 140 and Debendra Nath Das v. Bibudhendra Mansingh Bhramarbar Roy, 45 Ind. Cas. 411; 27 C. L. J. 543: 5 P. L. W. 1; 22 C. W. N. 674; 16 A. L. J. 522; 23 M. L. T. 384; (1918) M. W. N. 379; 20 Bom. L. R. 743: 35 M. L. J. 214; 45 I. A. 67; 45 C. 805 (P. C.), followed.

Where a tenure is treated as transferable in the hands of the original tenure-holder it must be treated as transferable in the hands of the transferee also. [p. 263, col. 2.]

An engagement between the Government and a settlement holder that the latter would respect the rights of the tenants as recorded in the settlement papers, may be invoked by a tenant for his own benefit and protection even though he may not be himself a party thereto. [p. 263, col. 2.]

Chandramoni Mohanti v. Manmatha Nath Miller, 5 Ind. Cas. 301; 11 C. L. J. 68; Jahandar Baksh Mullick v. Ram Lal Hazra, 5 Ind. Cas. 565; 37 C. 449; 11 C. L. J. 364; 14 C. W. N. 470 and Manmath Nath Roy v. Ameer Khan, 46 Ind. Cas. 98 3 P. L. J. 394, relied on.

In considering the status of a tenant a reference to the mode of user of the land is legitimate when the terms of the original grant are ambiguous or cannot be proved by direct evidence. [p. 263, col. 1.]

Bamapada Roy v. The Midnapur Zemindary Co., 16 Ind. Cas. 376; 16 C. L. J. 322 and Secretary of State v Digambar Nanda, 45 Ind. Cas. 43; 27 C. L. J. 334, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Berhampore, dated the 17th December 1919.

Babu Braja Lal Chakrabarti (with him Babus Debendra Nath Bagchi and Bansari Lal Sarkar), for the Appellant.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chuckerbutty and Kshitis Chandra Chuckerbutty, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The subject-matter of the litigation, which has culminated in this appeal, is a large tract of alluvial land formed by the recession of the river Padma and recorded as an estate on the revenue roll of the Collector of Rajshahi. The land became fit for cultivation more than a quarter of a century ago and was occupied by Robert Watson & Co. There is no evidence to show that the Watsons entered into an engagement with the Collector before they took possession; but, as is not unusual, they occupied the land and were accepted as tenants; Nityanund Ghose v. Kissen Kishore (1), Kali Prosanna Das v. Bhagaban Mali (2), Birendra Kisore v. Gagan Chandra (3), Gagan Chandra Chuckerbutty v. Birendra Kisore Manikya (4). The land was assessed and the dues were periodically paid by them direct to the Collector. In 1901, the revenue authorities made a five-year mallkana settlement of the lands with the plaintiff who was one of the proprietors of an adjoining estate. There can be no doubt that the Revenue Authorities were competent to create such an intermediate interest between the Crown and the Watsons; Jokar Mull Bhutra v. Bhupendra Nath Basu (5). On the expiry of the five year term, the settlement with the plaintiff was renewed for another term of five years On the expiration of this second term, the settlement was renewed for shorter periods from time to time, and at the date of the commencement of this litigation, the plaintiff held under a settlement for one year only.

Meanwhile, on the 23rd December 1902; the Watsons had transferred their interest to Ronaldson Gordon Macdonell, and on the 3rd December 1906, the latter transferred his interest to the defendant Midnapore Zemindary Co. On the 3rd December 1918, the plaintiff instituted this suit for ejectment of the defendant Company as trespassers on the allegation that the interest of the Watsons was non-transferable. The Subordinate Judge has negatived this contention and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court and reiterated the chief points urged on her behalf in the Court below. From the arguments addressed to us two substantial questions emerge for consideration, namely, first, what was the status of the Watsons as tenants under the Government; and, secondly, was the tenancy transferable?

As regards the question of the status of the Watsons as tenants under the Government, the Subordinate Judge has given weighty reasons in support of his conclusion that they were tenure-holders The statutory presumption formulated in sub-section (5) of section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, namely, that where the area held by a tenant exceeds one hundred standard bighas, the tenant shall be presumed to be a tenure-holder, until the contrary has been shown, favours this view. The area of the tenancy in the present case exceeds fourteen hundred bighas; we consequently start with the rebuttable presumption that the tenancy of the Watsons was a tenure; Bibhudendra v. Debendra Nath (6), Debendra Nath Das v. Bibudhendra Mansingh Biramabar Roy (7). This presumption has not been rebutted. On the other hand, we have two facts of fundamental importance, which confirm the presumption. In the first place, from the very inception of the tenancy the lands have been cultivated by tenants under the Watsons and their successors-in-interest; such reference to

(1) W. R. 1864, Act X, Rul. 82.
(2) 17 Ind. Cas. 587; 17 C. L. J. 431; 17 C. W. N. 348.
(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 902; 22 C. L. J. 132.
(4) 30 Ind. Cas. 931; 22 C. L. J. 135.
(5) 67 Ind. Cas. 108; 34 C. L. J. 79; 49 C. 495; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 412.
(6) 27 Ind. Cas. 432; 20 C. L. J. 140.
(7) 45 Ind. Cas. 411; 2 C. L. J. 543; 5 P. L. W. 1; 22 C. W. N. 674 16 A. L. J. 522; 23 M. L. T. 384; (1918) M. W. N. 3, 9; 20 Bom. L. R. 743; 35 M. L. J. 214; 45 I. A. 67; 45 C. 805 (P. C.).

the mode of user of the land is legitimate when the terms of the original grant are ambiguous or cannot be proved by dircet evidence: Bamapada v. The Midnapur Zemindary Co. 8), Secretary of State v. Digambar Nanda (9). In the second place, the Watsons, as also their transferee Macdonell were recorded by the Revenue Authorities as tenure-holders. Indeed, when Macdonell objected on the 8th August 1905 to be recorded as a tenure-holder, he was peremptorily informed that if he insisted upon the status of an occupancy raiyat, he must forthwith vacate the land. The result was that Macdonell withdrew his objection and was recorded as a tenure-holder. We are of opinion that there can be no reasonable doubt that the Watsons were tenure-holders under the Government.

As regards the question whether the Watsons had a transferable tenancy the Subordinate Judge has answered in favour of the defendant Compary. We have already stated that the Watsons held possession as tenants under the Government for several years before the plaintiff obtained a five-year mallkana settlement in 1901. There is no room for controversy that the title acquired by the plaintiff was subject to such interest as the Watsons then possessed. During the subsistence of her settlement, the Watsons, on the 23rd December 1902, transferred their interest to Macdonell. On the 20th August 1904, the Revenue Authorities commenced the usual proceedings with a view to re-settlement. We find it recorded on the 1st July 1905, in the order-sheet of the Settlement Officer that Macdonell had his name registered in place of the Watsons, and this was approved by the Collector on the 26th July 1905 Macdonell, as already indicated, made an infructuous attempt to be treated, not as a tenure-holder but as an occupancy raiyat. He ultimately signed the rent-roll as a tenure-holder on the 6th December 1906. The order-sheet makes it abundantly clear that the plaintiff herself was a party to the re-settlement proceedings, as she was an applicant for renewal of the superior interest. On the 21st December, 1906, she filed a petition and accepted the settlement which was confirmed by the Collector on the 6th February 1907. The settlement with her was thus renewed for a term of five years with effect from the 1st April, 1905, when the previous settlement had expired.

Two points are thus beyond dispute on the face of these proceedings, namely, first, that the tenancy of the Watsons was treated by the Government as transferable and the rights of Macdonell as transferee were recognised by the Settlement Authorities; secondly, that the plaintiff, on re-settlement with her, took the property subject to the interest of Macdonell as the holder of a transferable tenure. We are fortified in this conclusion by the fact that the standard form of kabuliyat executed by temporary settlement holders in Government Khas Mahals shows that they expressly undertake to "respect the rights recorded in the settlement papers as possessed by tenants of all grades" (Survey and Settlement Manual, 1917, p. 198). The balance of modern authorities is in favour of the view that such engagement between the Government and the settlement-holder may be invoked by the tenant for his own benefit and protection, even though he may not be himself a party thereto; see Chandramoni Mohanti v. Manmatha Nath Mitter (10), Jahandar Baksh Mullick v. Ram Lal Hazra (11), Manmath Nath Roy v. Ameer Khan (12). The reference to a Full Bench in Manmatha Nath Mutter v. Rai Kishore Mahanti (13), enumerates the earlier authorities which proceeded on the narrow view that a stranger to a contract can in no circumstances claim a benefit thereunder; this position can no longer be maintained as a universal rule in the face of the decision in Khwaja Muhammad Khan v. Nawab Husaini Begum (14), which

(8) 16 Ind. Cas. 376; 16 C. L. J. 322.
(9) 45 Ind. Cas. 43; 27 C. L. J. 334.
(10) 5 Ind. Cas. 301; 11 C. L. J. 68.
(11) 5 Ind. Cas. 565; 37 C. 449; 11 C. L. J. 364; 14 C. W. N. 470.
(12) 46 Ind. Cas. 98; 3 P. L. J. 394.
(13) 17 C. L. J. 70*n*.
(14) 7 Ind. Cas. 237; 37 I. A. 152; 32 A. 410; 12 C. L. J. 205; 14 C. W. N. 365; 7 A. L. J. 871; (1910) M. W. N. 313; 8 M. L. T. 147; 12 Bom. L. R. 638; 20 M. L. J. 614 (P. C.).

was explained in Deb Narain Dutt v. Ram Sadhan Mandal(15), and Har Shyam v. Shyam Lal (16). We hold accordingly that the tenure of the Watsons, which was treated as transferable when Macdonell was recorded as a tenure-holder by the Revenue Authorities before the renewal of the malikana settlement with the plaintiff, must be treated as a transferable tenure also in the hands of Macdonell, who was thus competent to create a valid title in the Midnapur Zemindari Co. This conclusion receives support from the significant fact that the plaintiff received rent successively from the Watsons, from Macdonell and from the defendant, her officers granting them receipts in their respective names.

The inference follows that the plaintiff is not entitled to eject the defendant Company as trespassers and her suit has been rightly dismissed. The appeal consequently fails and must be dismissed with costs.

No costs will, however, be allowed to the respondents in respect of the paper-book beyond the first twenty-four pages.

Z. R. Appeal dismissed.

(15) 20 Ind. Cas. 630; 41 C. 137; 18 C. L. J. 603; 17 C. W. N. 1143.

(16) 31 Ind. Cas. 22; 20 C. W. N. 601; 43 C. 69; 22 C. L. J. 227.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 267 OF 1921.

July 18, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Odgers and Mr. Jutice Hughes.

AISAMMA—DEFENDANT NO. 2—APPELLANT

versus

MOIDIR KUNHI BEARI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANT NO. 1—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 63—Execution of decree—Claim proceedings—Order dismissing claim, effect of—Adverse possession.

On a claim petition the following order was passed :—

"There is no time to investigate into this claim. Petition is dismissed without investigation on the ground of delay. I may add that the sale will not affect the rights, if any, of the petitioner;"

Held, that the order which expressed no final judgment on the rights put forward was nevertheless an order against the claimant, notwithstanding the erroneous statement that the petitioner's rights would not be affected, and was subject to the provisions of O. XXI, r. 63 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 266, col. 1.]

Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Vadrevu Ranganayakamma, 48 Ind. Cas. 270; 41 M. 985 at p. 992; 35 M. L. J. 335; 24 M. L. T. 197; (1918) M. W. N. 599; 8 L. W. 292 (F. B.), followed.

Parambil Saharabi v. Ali, 72 Ind. Cas. 857; 44 M. L. J. 141; 17 L. W. 182; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 295 and Lakshmi Ammal v. Kadiresan Chettiar, 63 Ind. Cas. 431; 41 M. L. J. 198; 14 L. W. 12; (1921) M. W. N. 495, distinguished.

The rejection of a claim, if not contested by suit within a year from the date of the order, will estop the claimant from pleading adverse possession at the date of the order in a suit to eject him, where possession since the date of the order is insufficient to establish title. [p. 266, col. 1.]

Velayuthan v. Laksmana, 8 M. 506; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 346, followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the District Court, South Kanara, in A. S. No. 148 of 1920, preferred against a decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Mangalore, in O. S. No. 399 of 1918.

Mr. B. Sitarama Rao, for the Appellant:—The point for decision is whether the order on the claim petition is one under O. XXI, r. 63 rejecting my claim so as to compel me to institute a suit within a year. The matter is not covered by the Full Bench judgment in Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Vadrevu Ranganayakamma (1). The order does not negative my right, on the other hand it is reserved and kept in tact. I was not aggrieved and am not bound to sue.

See Lakshmi Ammal v. Kadiresan Chettiar (2) and Parambil Saharabi v. Ali (3).

Again the defendant was in possession for ten years before the date of the claim order. The present suit is brought more than twelve years from the date of my original possession. I have prescribed for

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 270; 41 M. 985 at p. 992; 35 M. L. J. 335; 24 M. L. T. 197; (1918) M. W. N. 599; 8 L. W. 292 (F. B.).

(2) 63 Ind. Cas. 431; 41 M. L. J. 198; 14 L. W. 12; (1921) M. W. N. 495.

(3) 72 Ind. Cas. 857; 44 M. L. J. 141; 17 L. W. 182; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 295.

absolute title by twelve years' possession. The order of the Court is at the highest only declaratory and does not purport to decide against me as to my possession. I could not then set up my ten years' possession since on that date my title was not yet perfect. My possession could not be, therefore, held to have been negatived by the order.

Mr. K. Yegnanarayana Adiga, for the Respondent:—The case is covered by the Full Bench judgment in Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Vadrevu Ranganayakamma (1). So long as an order does not release the properties from attachments, the order whatever may be its language or form or its ground, must be construed as in effect legally negativing the right set up. Observations in Full Bench, especially of Seshagiri Iyer, J.

The order is either in favour of the decree-holder or the claimant. Clearly there is none here in the claimant's favour and indeed the petition is as a fact dismissed. The further observations after the dismissal of the petition merely amount to an expression of opinion which is obiter and cannot prevent the legal operation of the preceding order of dismissal.

So far as possession is concerned, O. XXI, r. 63 applies not to claims of title but includes also claims of possession. If possession be with a stranger, under the section the claim petition ought to be allowed. The dismissal operates as an adjudication on possession as well. The prior possession cannot be relied on and is of no legal effect. The decision in Velayuthan v. Laksmana (4) is one on all fours with the present case.

I may add twelve years have not elapsed since the date of the order on the claim petition. The judgment of the lower Court is correct.

JUDGMENT.

Hughes, J.—The point to be decided now is whether the question of second defendant's title has been concluded against her by reason of the order passed in R. E. A. No. 243 of 1910, in R. E. P. No. 375 of 1910.

The suit property was attached in R. E. P. No. 375 of 1910 and the second defendant filed a claim petition [R. E. A. No. 243 of 1910] claiming right to the property. The order passed on that petition is Ex. E and runs as follows:—"There is no time to investigate into this claim. This petition is dismissed without investigation on the ground of delay. I may add that the sale will not affect the rights, if any, of this petitioner" The plaintiff's contention is that as the second defendant did not file a suit witnin a year from the date of this order her right to the property is barred.

Now if the order had been merely "This petition is dismissed without investigation on the ground of delay," the matter would have been quite simple. It would be covered exactly by the Full Bench case Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Vadrevu Ranganayakamma (1) wherein it was held that such an order was an order rejecting the claim, to which the provisions of O XXI, r. 63 will apply. The question is, what is the effect of the added sentence "the sale will not affect the rights, if any, of this petitioner." Can it be said that when the order expressly declared that the sale would not affect the right of the petitioner, the order was one passed against the party? The answer to this is, I think, to be found in the Full Bench case referred to. In that case the order that was under consideration was as follows:—

"As this petition was filed late, this claim is ordered to be notified to the intending bidders." It was held that the order amounted to a rejection of the claim on the ground that it was filed too late. It was pointed out in the judgment of Seshagiri Aiyar, J. that "when a claim is preferred the usual prayer is that the attachment should be raised as the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor but belongs to the claimant. On the presentation of such a petition if the order is not that the property be released from attachment, it must be taken to be an order against the claimant," and further "his right to raise the attachment must be deemed to have been negatived, when the property was ordered to be sold, without releasing it from attachment. Therefore an order on a claim petition which expresses no final judgment upon the right put forward but simply directs the sale after notifying the claim, is an order against the claimant." In the present case the fact that the order wrongly stated that the petitioner's right would not be affected does not help her. She asked for a relief of the property from attachment and she sought to establish her right. She did not succeed. I think, therefore, following the judgment of the Full Bench case as quoted supra it must be held that the order was against her and it was her duty to proceed to assert her title by suit within one year.

(1) 3 M. 506; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 346.

The case of Lakshmi Ammal v. Kadiresam Chettiar (2) has been referred to but that is not in point because in that case the attachment had terminated and the District Munsif had no authority to dispose of the petition of claim.

One other case has been quoted, the case of Parambil Saharabi v. Ali (3) but in that case the claimant's petition had not been dismissed and his claim to an undefined share in the property attached had not been negatived. In the present case the petition was dismissed and though it may be argued that the rider attached to the dismissal, to the effect that the order would not affect the claimant's right, means that that was not negatived, it is plain the right was not established and, in the light of the observations in the Full Bench case, the order was one against the party. I think, therefore, the District Judge was right in the view taken by him of the effect of the order on the claim petition. It has then been urged that the second defendant can still rely upon adverse possession but the case of Velayuthan v. Laksmana (4) is an authority for the positon that the rejection of a claim, if not contested by suit, will estop the claimant from pleading adverse possession at the date of the order, in a suit brought to eject him. Since the date of the order the possession has been insufficient to establish a title.

The decision of the District Judge is right and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Odgers, J.—I agree.

V. N. V. Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION APPEAL NO. 2 OF 1923.

June 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

MORARJI PREMJI GOKULDAS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MULJI RANCHHOD VED & CO.—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Principal and agent—Broker and sub-broker—Scope of sub-broker's authority—Money of third person paid to principal—Principal, whether liable to refund—Knowledge of fraud—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 72, 182, 186, 187, 188, 251.

Sections 186 and 187 of the Contract Act show that the authority of an agent is to be gathered from either "words" or "circumstances" and is not implied in the mere fact that he is an agent. [p. 268, col. 1.]

The word "agent" does not itself imply full authority to bind the principal in the same way that a partner can bind his co-partners under section 251 of the Contract Act. [p. 267, col. 2.]

An agreement opened with the words "G will act as our agent in our share-brokerage business" and then followed provisions which showed that G. was appointed to carry on business on the usual terms of sub-brokers:

Held, (1) that the general words in the beginning of the agreement did not enlarge the authority of G. so as to enable him to bind his principals as if he were a general agent; [p. 268, col. 1.]

(2) that any business brought by G. was subject to the acceptance of his principals, this being the usual condition between brokers and sub-brokers. [p. 268, col. 1.]

Where, by any wrongful or unauthorised act of an agent, the money or property of a third person comes to the hands of the principal, or is applied for his benefit, the principal is liable jointly and severally with the agent to restore the amount or value of such money or property. But this rule is subject to the qualification that the principal must have had knowledge or means of knowledge that the money belonged to a third person. [p. 269, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

The Contract Act is not exhaustive of all cases in which a person under the English Law would be taken to have a right of action against another as for money paid to his use. [p. 270, col. 1.]

Ranganaikammal v. Ramanuja Aiyangar, 11 Ind. Cas. 570; 35 M. 728 at p. 737; 21 M. L. J. 600; 10 M. L. T. 57; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 285, relied upon.

Though a case may not be one of 'coercion' falling under section 72 of the Contract Act, yet that does not prevent the application of the principle that, where the defendant has received money which in justice and equity belongs to the plaintiff, under circumstances which render a receipt of it, a receipt by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is entitled to recover it. [p. 270, col. 2; p. 271, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

MORARJI PREMJI GOKULDAS v. MULJI RANCHHOD VED & CO.

Per Coyajee, J.—Under ordinary circumstances a person, be he banker or other, who takes money from his debtor in discharge of a debt is not bound to inquire into the manner in which the person so paying the debt acquired the money with which he pays it. However that money may have been acquired by the person making the payment, the person taking that payment is entitled to retain it in discharge of the debt which is due to him. But if the person receiving the money has reason to believe that the payment is being made in fraud of a third person and that the person making the payment is handing over in discharge of his debt money which he has no right to hand over, then the person taking such payment would not be entitled to retain the money. [p. 272, col. 2; p. 273, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decision of Mr. Justice Shah.

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mirza, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Fawcett, J.—In this appeal the facts are not in dispute, and are clearly detailed in the judgment of the Court below.

Briefly, the defendants are a firm doing business as share-brokers and employed one Gordhandas Purshottamdas in the course of their business as a sub-broker. There is a question as to the exact extent of his authority, but the word 'sub-broker' appropriately describes the main functions of Gordhandas. There was a transaction on August 10, 1922, between him and the plaintiff, and the result was that the plaintiff had to pay him Rs. 15,000. Gordhandas owed the plaintiff Rs. 1,000 and the plaintiff gave him a crossed bearer cheque of Rs. 14,000 in favour of the defendants. Gordhandas paid this cheque into his own account with a Bank, and on the same day drew two cheques in favour of the defendants for sums amounting in all to Rs. 10,645-10-0, which they duly received. Subsequently Gordhandas absconded without having taken any steps to carry out the plaintiff's contract. The main question is whether the defendants are liable in respect of the transaction. Though the plaintiff did not know of it at the time of the transaction, there was a written agreement between the defendants and Gordhandas (Exhibit A) regarding the terms of the latter's employment. The learned Trial Judge held that under this document Gordhandas was in merely the same position as an ordinary sub-broker, and that it was a reasonable inference that any business transacted through Gordhandas was conditional on acceptance by the defendants. He also held that the transaction was of an unusual character and not within the scope of Gordhandas' authority. He accordingly held that Gordhandas had no authority to bind the defendants in respect of the transaction in question.

In this appeal Mr. Setalvad for the appellant raises two main issues: namely, (1) what was the scope of Gordhandas' authority, and (2) whether the particular transaction was within that scope. His main contention was that the document, Exhibit A, opens with a statement that Gordhandas "will act as an agent of Messrs. M. R. Ved & Co. in the share-brokerage business of Messrs. M. R. Ved and Co."; that this constituted him not only an ordinary sub-broker but an agent with full authority to act for the defendants in all their share-brokerage business; and that in fact Gordhandas had as much authority as any partner in the defendants' firm to bind the latter in any transaction entered into by him for the purpose of carrying on that share-brokerage business. He urged that the words quoted above are perfectly general and that there is nothing in the following words to cut them down; and that the provisions as to the half-commission business to be conducted by Gordhandas were not inconsistent with his acting as defendants' agent in their general share-business as well. Accordingly he contended that defendants were bound to accept all business brought by Gordhandas, who could irrevocably accept it on behalf of the defendants. He further relied upon section 188 of the Indian Contract Act and Illustration (b) to that section.

In my opinion this contention attaches an unjustifiable effect to the mere words "agent in the share-brokerage business"; and I agree with the lower Court that, reading Exhibit A as a whole, it does not amount to anything more than this that Gordhandas was expressly assigned the same position as would ordinarily be occupied by a sub-broker.

The word "agent" does not of itself imply full authority to bind the principal, in the same way that a partner can bind his co-partner under section 251 of the Indian Contract Act. The question of the scope of his authority as agent is left entirely open. The definition of 'agent' in section 182 of the Indian Contract Act covers a person employed to do any act for another, and the same applies to its use in ordinary parlance. Sections 186 and 187 of the Indian Contract Act show that the authority of an agent is to be gathered from either "words" or "circumstances," and is not implied in the mere fact that he is an agent. The second paragraph of section 188 and Illustration (b) thereto only cover the case of an agent appointed "to carry on a business." If for instance Exhibit A had said that Gordhandas was appointed an agent to carry on the defendants' share-brokerage business, or an agent with full authority to represent the defendants in that business, then there would no doubt be substantial ground for Mr. Setalvad's contentions. But in the absence of any such expressions, the words relied on are entirely insufficient to justify the wide construction that is sought to be put upon them. All the subsequent provisions of the agreement deal merely with the case of Gordhandas' acting as a sub-broker in the ordinary way, and it seems to me clear that the general words at the beginning were not intended to go further than appointing him an agent for the particular kind of share business referred to in those subsequent provisions. In my opinion it is a case where the words relied on give no full authority and the authority is to be gathered from the document read as a whole, and not a case where the principle applies that a full authority clearly given in one part of an instrument, is not to be cut down on account of ambiguous and uncertain expressions elsewhere: Halsbury, Volume I, p. 163. Article 354.

Then as regards the question of Gordhandas' authority to bind the defendants, unless they accepted the business brought by him, it seems to me that the words "placed with" favour the inference adopted by the learned Judge in the Court below that there was a condition of acceptance by the principals. Otherwise "obtained for" or similar words would seem more appropriate. The evidence shows that such acceptance is a usual condition in the case of sub-brokers, and in the circumstances I think express words would have been used if it had been intended to dispense with this condition. It is no doubt true that ordinarily defendants would have accepted any legitimate business brought by Gordhandas. But it does not follow that they, therefore, renounced the power to reject it, should they think fit to do so. It is quite conceivable that a case might arise in which they would desire to exercise that power.

The second issue raised by Mr. Setalvad as to this particular transaction being within the scope of Gordhandas' authority is not, in this view of the case, of material importance. For, if the transaction was subject to the condition precedent of acceptance by the defendants, it follows that, as they did not accept it, it does not matter whether the transaction was, or was not, within the scope of Gordhandas' authority. But, supposing the first issue has been decided otherwise, then I think there is substance in Mr. Setalvad's complaint that the finding of the lower Court that the transaction of August 10 was of an unusual character and so was not within the scope of Gordhandas' authority is opposed to the observation of the learned Judge that "it is the nature of the transaction which has to be looked to and not the time when it was entered into." I should not, merely on account of the transaction having been entered into at an unusual time, hold that it was not within the scope of Gordhandas' authority, assuming that he had full authority to represent the defendants in his dealings with third persons.

The third point taken by Mr. Setalvad is that, in any case, in so far as the defendants obtained the benefit of the Rs. 10,645-10-0 paid to them by Gordhandas out of the Rs. 14,000 received by him from the plaintiff, the latter is entitled to recover the first named sum from the defendants. Apparently this contention was not pressed in the lower Court, for the judgment does not discuss the point and refers to an admission by the learned Counsel for the plaintiff that the fact of the payment of Rs. 10,645 was merely a matter of prejudice. But the point seems sufficiently covered by the second part of issue No. 3 in the lower Court: and in any case (the requisite facts being in evidence and undisputed) it is purely a point of law, which can be raised before us. It was urged that the defendants cannot retain these moneys and at the same time repudiate the transaction; and reliance was placed upon Sinclair v. Brougham (1). That case is not really in point, for it is not one of "principal and agent" at all; and the main decision following the principle of In re Hallett's Estate: Knatchbull v. Hallett (2) has no application to the present case. Hallett's case (2) [as summarised at page 404 in the course of the arguments in Sinclair v. Brougham (1)] decided that if A holds property of B in a fiduciary character and pays it together with his own money into his Banking account and draws money out of the account, he must be taken to have drawn out his own money in preference to B's. That does not help the plaintiff in this case. But there are no doubt observations in the judgments in Sinclair v. Brougham (1) which do bear on the present question. I refer, for instance, to the remarks of Lord Haldane on the question of "following money" at pages 418-420 of the report, of Lord Dunedin at pages 431-32, and of Lord Sumner at pages 453-54. Reference is there made to the equitable principle that no one has a right to keep either property, or the proceeds of property which does not belong to him: pages 431, 436; and it is held that it can propely be given effect to on an action "for money had and received" in cases where the law can consistently impute to the defendant the fiction of a of a promise to pay (cf. pages 410, 417). But it is also held that such a promise could not be imputed where it would be ultra vires to give it (page 417): and that the action for money had and received should not be extended beyond the principles illustrated in decided cases (page 453). Mr. Setalvad did not cite any authorities for applying these principles in a case of the present kind, and (as already remarked) Hallett's case (2) does not help the plaintiff here. It is one of the class referred to in Article 111 at page 375 of Bowstead on Agency, 6th Edition. But there is authority which can be cited in support of Mr. Setalvad's contention, viz., Article 103 at page 348 of the same work, which says.—

"Where, by any wrongful or unauthorised act of an agent, the money or property of a third person comes to the hands of the principal, or is applied for his benefit, the principal is liable jointly and severally with the agent to restore the amount or value of such money or property."

The law is similarly summarised in Halsbury, Volume I, Article 432, paragraph 2, at pages 202 and 203 and Volume VII, Article 986, at page 486. Illustrations 2 and 3 at page 349 of Bowstead, which summarize In re Japanese Curtains and Patent Fabric Co., Ex parte Shoolbred (3) and Marsh v. Keating (4) seem in particular to cover the present case. The payment of the Rs. 10,645-10-0 to defendants through the Bank by Gordhandas was virtually a payment made directly from Rs. 14,000 received from plaintiff, for Exhibit B at pages 19, 20 of Part III of the paper-book shows that, on Agust 10, 1922, Gordhandas had a balance of only Rs. 174-10-1 and deducting the other debits of that day (Rs. 62) this balance is reduced to Rs. 112-10-1. In In re Japanese Curtains and Patent Fabric Co., Ex parte Shoolbred (3) there was a similar payment into the agent's account and drawing cheques upon it. It can also be contended that the fact of Gordhandas being indebted to the defendants to the extent of about Rs. 27,000 on August 10, 1922, is immaterial: but for this misappropriation of plaintiff's money Gordhandas would presumbly never have made the payment, and the exception mentioned in foot-note (i) at page 203 of Halsbury, Volume I, only extends to the case of the third person being indebted to

(1) (1914) A. C. 398; 83 L. J. Ch. 465; 111 L. T. 1; 58 S. J. 302; 30 T. L. R. 315.
(2) (1880) 13 Ch. D. 696; 49 L. J. Ch. 415; 42 L. T. 421; 28 W. R. 732.
(3) (1880) 28 W. R. 339.
(4) (1834) 1 Bing, (N. C.) 198; 1 Scott 5; 2 Cl. & F. 250; 8 Bligh (N. S.) 651; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 592; 37 R. R. 75; 131 E. R. 1094.

the principal. But an important question is whether it makes any difference that defendants neither knew, nor had the means of knowing, that the funds from which Gordhandas paid the Rs. 10,645-10-0 had been misappropriated. In Marsh v. Keating (4) it was expressly held that the defendants had the means of knowledge that the money was the property of the plaintiff; but this does not seem to have been always regarded in later cases as an essential condition. In Reid v. Rigby & Co. (5) the point was taken in argument, but is not noticed in the Court's judgments; and in Jacobs v. Morris (6) Vaughan Williams, L. J. at page 830 says: "I am not sure that in Marsh v. Keating (4) either the House of Lords or the Judges whose opinion was taken meant to decide either that ignorance and want of means of knowledge will exonerate a person, through whose account a sum of money has passed, from responsibility, or that knowledge of the fact is essential to liability. Nothing more seems to me to have been decided than that there the defendants could not rely upon ignorance if they had the means of knowledge."

On the other hand Stirling, L. J., held (at page 833) that it was necessary to establish the principal's knowledge or means of knowledge in such a case. Cozens-Hardy, L. J., appears to have been of the same opinion. But a stronger authority on the point is afforded by the decision of the House of Lords in Thomson v. Clydesdale Bank, Limited (7). In that case Lord Shand says (page 291):—

"Where questions arise with third parties into whose hands the money can be traced, as in this instance, liability against them for recovery of the sum misapplied arises only where it can be shown directly, or as a reasonable inference from facts proved, that these parties were cognizant that the money was being wrongfully used, in violation of the agent's duty and obligation."

This case is cited by the Privy Council in Bank of New South Wales v. Goulburn Valley Butter Co. (8) as settling the law that in the absence of notice of fraud or irregularity a banker is bound to honour his customer's cheque: but it is clear from the judgment in Thomson v. Clydesdale Bank, Limited (7) that the principle is a general one, not based on any peculiarity of banking law. Thus Lord Herschell in his remarks (at page 287) says "a person, be he banker or other", and Lord Shand laid down the general principle I have already quoted.

This is an important qualification of the general rule laid down in Article 103 of Bowstead on Agency, which applies also to the corresponding right of the principal to follow property into the hands of third persons: see Illustration (3) to Article 110, ibid, page 374.

If, therefore, this suit had been brought in England, I think there is clear authority for holding that plaintiff is not entitled to recover the Rs. 106,45-10-0 from the defendants. Is there any difference in the law applicable in India?

The case is not expressly provided for in the Indian Contract Act. Thus sections 69 and 70 do not cover the case. But there is good authority for holding that the Indian Contract Act is not exhaustive of all cases in which a person under the English Law would be taken to have a right of action against another as for money paid to his use: see Ranganatkaammal v. Ramanuja Aiyangar (9) and cases there cited. In Jugdeo Narain Singh v. Rajah Singh (10) and Narayanasami Reddi v. Osuru Reddi (11) it has been held that though a case may not be one of 'coercion' falling under section 72 of the Indian Contract Act, yet that does not prevent the application of the principle that, where the defendant has received money which in justice and equity belongs to the plaintiff, under

(5) (1894) 2 Q. B. 40; 63 L. J. Q. B 451; 10 R. 280.
(6) (1902) 1 Ch. 816; 71 L. J. Ch. 363; 86 L. T. 275; 50 W R. 371; 18 T. L. R. 384.
(7) (1893) A. C. 282; 62 L. J. P. C. 91; 1 R. 255; 67 L. T. 156.
(8) (1902) A. C. 543 at p. 550; 71 L. J. P. C. 112; 87 L. T. 88; 51 W. R. 367; 18 T. L. R. 735.
(9) 11 Ind. Cas. 570; 35 M. 728 at p. 737; 21 M L. J. 600; 10 M. L. T. 57; (1911) 2 M W. N. 285
(10) 15 C. 656 at pp. 664, 665; 13 Ind. Jur. 217; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1021.
(11) 25 M. 548 at p 552;

circumstances which render a receipt of it, a receipt by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is entitled to recover it. These decisions are not in this respect affected by the Privy Council case of Kanhaya Lal v. National Bank of India, Ld. (12) which places a wider meaning on the word 'coercion' in section 72 of the Indian Contract Act than the Indian Courts were disposed to give it. I can see no sufficient reason for not following the principle laid down in the two cases of Jugdeo Narain Singh v. Rajah Singh (10) and Narayanasami Reddi v. Osuru Reddi (11) in view of the fact that the Legislature in Article 62 of Schedule I of the Indian Limitation Act expressly recognizes a suit to recover money received by the defendant for the plaintiff's use, and under section 26 of Bombay Regulation IV of 1827, the principles of law and equity laid down in English decisions are proper guides, in the absence of specific law or usage to the contrary. Section 238 of the Indian Contract Act no doubt says that "misrepresentations made, or frauds committed, by agents, in matters which do not fall within their authority, do not affect their principals." But this is a section which falls under the general heading (above section 226) of "effect of agency on contracts with third persons," and is restricted (as the illustrations and the first part of the section show) to the question of the effect of such misrepresentations or frauds on agreements made by the agents. It does not purport to deal with the third person's right to recover from the principal money which the latter has obtained through the agent's fraud or misrepresentation. If, however, the English case-law is applied, it must be applied in full; and I think it is clear that the money received by the defendants in this case cannot, in the absence of knowledge, or means of knowledge, on their part that it was plaintiff's money, which had been misappropriated by Gordhandas, be treated as money received by the defendants for the plaintiff's use. I also think that the Privy Council have painly shown that their view is the same as that taken by the House of Lords in Thomson v. Clydesdale Bank Limited (7) not only by their reference to it in Bank of New South Wales v. Goulburn Valley Butter Co. (8), but also by their decision in Texas Company, Ltd. v. Bombay Banking Company (13). I may cite in particular the remarks in their Lordships' judgment at pages 146, 147.—

"Had Vaidya's account, to which the proceeds of the oil business were paid, been kept with the Bombay Bank under circumstances that could fairly impute to them knowledge that the monies were not Vaidya's, different considerations would apply."

In my opinion, therefore, Mr. Setalvad's contention fails, and I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Coyajee, J.—The main contentions urged before us in this appeal are:—

1. What was the scope of Gordhandas' authority?

2. Whether the transaction in suit was within that scope?

I have had the advantage of seeing the judgment of my learned colleague. I entirely agree with his conclusions on those issues and with the reasons which he has there set out in support of those conclusions.

At the end of his opening address, appellant's Counsel contended that, at any event, the respondents (defendants) should not be allowed to retain the two sums of Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 5,645-10-0 paid to them by Gordhandas out of the Rs. 14,000 which he had wrongfully obtained from the appellant, and that the appellant was entitled to follow these sums of money and to require the respondents to pay them over to him.

Assuming that this contention is covered by the third issue in the Trial Court, it was certainly not pressed there, for the learned Judge observes in his judgment that "it was admitted by the learned Counsel for the plaintiff" (now appellant) 'that the fact of the payments by these two cheques was merely a matter of prejudice." In my opinion the admission was made for substantial reasons. I agree with my learned colleague in holding that this contention is untenable, and will briefly give my reasons. The material facts bearing on this contention are these. The agreed price of the fifteen shares, which formed the subject-matter of this transaction, was Rs. 15,000. Plaintiff withheld a sum of Rs. 1,000 in satisfaction of a debt due to him by Gordhandas personally, he then made out a crossed cheque of Rs. 14,000 in favour of "Mulji Ranchod Ved Esq. or bearer" and gave it to Gordhandas. On August 10, Gordhandas paid this cheque into his own account with the Bank of India, Limited. Gordhandas was at that time indebted to the respondents in a sum of about Rs. 27,000. The existence of that debt is not called in question. In part payment of that debt Gordhandas, on August 10, drew two cheques in favour of the respondents for the sums of Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 5,645-10-0 respectively—which amounts they duly received. On the same day (August 10) Gordhandas gave them two more cheques, one of Rs. 1,000 and the other of Rs. 5,000: but we do not know more about these, beyond the fact that they were dishonoured.

(12) 18 Ind. Cas. 949; 40 C. 598; 17 C. W. N. 541; (1913) M. W. N. 406; 13 M. L. T. 406; 11 A. L. J. 413; 17 C. L. J. 478; 15 Bom. L. R. 472; 184 P. L. R. 1913; 25 M. L. J. 104; 40 I. A. 56 (P. C.);

(13) 54 Ind. Cas. 121; 44 B 139; 22 Bom. L R. 429 at p 434; 26 M L. T. 370; 30 C. L. J. 446; (1920) M. W. N. 70; 2 U. P. L. R. (P.C.) 21; 11 L. W. 320; 24 C. W. N. 469; 46 I. A. 250 (P. C.);

The position then is this. Gordhandas had no authority, express or implied, from the respondents to act on their behalf in this particular transaction. He obtained Rs. 14,000 from the appellant on certain representations which he failed to make good. He appropriated this sum of Rs. 14,000 to his own use. A part of it, namely, Rs. 10,645-10-0, he used in discharge pro tanto of a debt which he then owed to the respondents. The respondents did not know, nor had they the means of knowing, that the money which they were receiving in discharge (pro tanto) of the debt due from him, had been wrongfully obtained from the appellant.

Under these circumstances the appellant, in my opinion, is not entitled to follow this money, and to require its payment to him by the respondents. The principles laid down in Thomson v. Clydesdale Bank, Limited (7) are applicable to this case. The appellants in that case, who held as trustees certain shares in the Commercial Bank of Scotland, instructed D. B. Thomson, a stock broker in Edinburgh, to sell the shares and to deposit the proceeds in certain Colonial Banks in the names of the appellants. The shares were sold by Thomson in the ordinary course of business, the dealing being between him and another member of the Stock Exchange who knew him only in the transaction, and accordingly gave in payment for the shares in the ordinary way a cheque payable to Thomson or order. This cheque Thomson paid in to his credit with the respondent Bank on the same day on which he received it. At that time Thomson's account with the respondent Bank was overdrawn to an account exceeding the amount so paid. Thomson having become insolvent, the appellants claimed to be entitled to have the amount of the cheque repaid to them by the respondent Bank. The question then arose whether, under those circumstances, the appellants were entitled to follow the money and to require its payment to them by the respondent Bank, or whether the Bank were entitled to retain it in discharge pro tanto of the debt which was due from Thomson. Dealing with this question Lord Herschell, L. C., observes (page 287).—

"It cannot, I think, be questioned that under ordinary circumstances a person, be he banker or other, who takes money from his debtor in discharge of a debt is not bound to inquire into the manner in which the person so paying the debt acquired the money with which he pays it. However that money may have been acquired by the person making the payment, the person taking that payment is entitled to retain it in discharge of the debt which is due to him."

Then, commenting on the argument that the bankers took with notice that the sum which they received was a sum of money not belonging to their debtor personally, but which he held or had received for other persons, and that, having had this knowledge or notice, they were not entitled to retain it in discharge of Thomson's debt, his Lordship says (page 287):

"I cannot assent to the proposition that even if a person receiving money knows that such money has been received by the person paying it to him on account of other persons, that of itself is sufficient to prevent the payment being a good payment and properly discharging the debt due to the person who receives the money. No doubt if the person receiving the money has reason to believe that the payment is being made in fraud of a third person, and that the person making the payment is handing over in discharge of his debt money which he has no right to hand over, then the person taking such payment would not be entitled to retain the money, upon ordinary principles which I need not dwell upon. But in the present case there appears to me to be an absolute absence of any evidence of that kind."

And Lord Watson observes (page 290):

"The broker knew that he was insolvent, and that he was using his customers' money to pay his own debt to the Bank without any reasonable expectation of his being able to replace it. That was an undoubted fraud upon the appellants; but, in my opinion, the broker's fraud is of no relevancy in this case, unless it is coupled with bad faith on the part of the respondents. The onus of proving that they acted in male fide rests with the appellants."

The decision in Sundar Lal v. Fakir Chand (14) has a bearing upon this question. There, a benamidar, Mahesh Das, realized upon a bond standing in his own name money to which other parties including the plaintiff were beneficially entitled, and paid over the money so obtained, in the course of a transaction apparently bona fide and not collusive, to a third party Fakir Chand, who had no knowledge of plaintiff's interest therein; it was held that the plaintiff could not recover against Fakir Chand. The learned Judges observe (page 64):

"We fail to see how it can be successfully contended that he got any portion of this money for the use of the plaintiff, or that, under the circumstances of this case, the money which was in the hands of Mahesh Das can be followed into the hands of Fakir Chand.... There was no fiduciary relation or privity existing between him and the plaintiff, and no collusion whatever between him and Mahesh Das has been suggested....If Fakir Chand had known or had had reason to believe that the money secured by the bond belonged in part to the plaintiff, different considerations would arise.... But it does not appear that he had any such knowledge, and no collusion on his part, as we have said, or fraud, is alleged."

The learned Judges then refer to the case of Thomson v. Clydesdale Bank, Limited (7). Here, also, the respondents had no reason to believe that Gordhandas, in discharge of his debt, was handing over money which he had wrongfully obtained from the appellants and had, therefore, no right to hand over.

I have found it difficult to understand the basis of the appellant's claim to recover this money from the respondents. The facts of this case do not fall within the principle enunciated by Romer, L. J., in Bannatyne v. M cIver (15). This is not a case where an agent, having obtained money from a third person wrongfully, has applied it for his principal's benefit, e. g., in discharging his legal debts and obligations. Neither does the case come within the principle of "unjust enrichment." But in justification of this claim, the appellant's Counsel has relied on certain observations of Lord Haldane, L. C., in Sinclair v. Brougham (1) I have read those observations with respectful attention. The difficulty, however, is how to apply them to the facts of the particular case now before us. On what principle is the appellant entitled to compel the respondents to refund the money? There is no promise to pay, actual or imputed by law. There is no implied promise on the respondents' part

(14) 25 A. 62; A. W. N. (1902), 185.

(15) (1906) 1 K. B. 103; 75 L. J. K. B. 120; 94 L. T. 150; 54 W. R. 293.

to re-pay to the appellant money which Gordhandas gave them in discharge of his debt under the circumstances stated above. The decision in Sinclair v. Brougham (1) does not proceed on the footing of money had and received. And as observed by Lord Sumner (at page 453 of the report): "The action for money had and reeeived cannot now be extended beyond the principles illustrated in the decided cases." No decided case has been brought to our notice justifying a claim to money received and retained by the respondents under circumstances such as we have here.

For these reasons I agree in holding that this appeal fails.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2436 OF 1921.

March 8, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir William Chevis, Kt.

KUNDAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MAM RAJ—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Limitation (Ancestral Land Alienation) Act (I of 1900), Art. 2—Attestation of mutation—Two sales—Combined mutation—Limitation.

F., a person governed by the Customary Law, sold certain property to H. and M. in March 1907. The defendants threatened to bring a pre-emption suit and the matter was settled by the village punchayat by which the defendants paid off H. and M. and took over the sale. The mutation in favour of the defendants was duly attested by the Revenue Officer in the presence of F., H. and the defendants in February 1908. Plaintiffs, as reversioners of F., brought a suit for possession in January 1920, alleging that the sale by F. was without legal necessity and that time began to run from the date of the attestation of the mutation. The defendants contended that there were really two alienations one by F. to H. and M. and a second one by H. and M. to themselves and that what had been attested was a sale by F. in favour of themselves, an alienation which as a matter of fact never really took place:

Held, that the mutation was really a combined one covering both the alienations and therefore there was an attestation of the alienation disputed by the plaintiffs and their suit brought within twelve years of the date was within time: [p. 275, col. 1.]

Fazla v. Badan Singh, 11 Ind. Cas. 765; 48 P. R. 1911; 141 P. W. R. 1911; 237 P. L. R. 1911, followed.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Karnal, dated the 28th July 1921, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Kaithal, District Karnal, dated the 16th July 1920.

Lala Gopal Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in this case are reversioners of Fattu who, on the 26th March 1907, sold the property in suit to the sons of Daya, namely, Hans Raj and Mam Raj, for Rs. 500. The sons of Budh Ram threatened to bring a suit for pre-emption and the matter was settled by the village panchayat, the sons of Budh Ram paying off the sons of Daya and taking over the sale. The matter was reported to the village Patwari who entered up the mutation and on the 27th of February 1908, the Tehsildar in the presence of Fattu, Mam Raj son of Daya and the sons of Budh Ram attested the mutation in favour of the sons of Budh Ram. The plaintiffs now sue for possession of the land and house covered by the sale, alleging that the sale was without consideration and necessity The First Court dismissed the suit holding that it was time-barred.

The learned District Judge holds that the suit is within time and has remanded the case to the First Court for decision of the other issues on the merits. The defendants have lodged a further appeal to this Court, and on their behalf it is urged that the suit is not within time.

The suit was brought on the 15th of January, 1920. Under Punjab Act I of 1900 the date to be taken for commencement of limitation is the date on which the alienation was attested by the Revenue Officer. The contention on behalf of the defendants is that the alienation was a sale by Fattu to the sons of Daya and that what had actually been attested is an alienation by Fattu to the sons of Budh Ram. It is urged, that there were really two alienations, one by Fattu to the sons of Daya, and a second by the sons of Daya to the sons of Budh Ram, and that what had really been attested is neither of these alienations but an alienation by Fattu to the sons of Budh Ram, an alienation which, as a matter of fact, never really took place.

I note, however, that one of the sons of Daya was present at the mutation and that the Tehsildar at the time of mutation was fully acquainted with all the facts of the case. The mutation was, in my opinion, really a combined mutation covering both the alienations and I am unable to hold that the attestation is not one of the alienations which is disputed by the plaintiffs in the present case. My ruling is in accordance with Fazla v. Badan Singh (1).

I note that Counsel for the defendants-appellants has been unable to distinguish this ruling and he simply urges that it is incorrect. It has also been urged before me that the plaintiffs place their suit on an alleged alienation by Fattu in favour of the sons of Budh Ram. This is, however, merely a misinterpretation of what actually took place and does not affect the merits of the case. If it be held that the alienation by Fattu was without necessity and consideration the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree.

The only other point argued before me is that as only one of the two plaintiffs appealed to the learned District Judge the suit should be regarded as having been dismissed so far as the half share of the other plaintiff is concerned. This, however, overlooks the provisions of O. XLI, r. 4, which lays down that if the decree appealed against proceeds on a ground common to all the plaintiffs any one of the plaintiffs may appeal from the whole decree and thereupon the Appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs.

This appeal fails, and is dismissed with costs.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 11 Ind. Cas. 765; 48 P. R. 1911; 141 P. W. R. 1911; 237 P. L. R. 1911.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION
APPEAL NO. 18 OF 1923.
August 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

KARSANDAS KALIDAS GHIA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
CHHOTALAL MOTICHAND—
PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 12, 22—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VIII, r. 7, O. XXIII, r. 1—Contract to sell immoveable property—Time of essence of contract—Reasonable time—Repudiation of contract—Breach—Specific performance—Discretion—Appellate Court, interference by—Deposit, when can be recovered—Abandonment of relief—Alternative reliefs—Damages.

Where time is not originally made of the essence of the contract, in a contract, for the sale of immoveable property, it is open to one party, if unnecessary delay is caused by the other, to limit a reasonable time within which the contract should be performed by the other. What is a reasonable time must depend upon the facts of each particular case. The question of reasonableness of notice should be considered with reference to the past attitude of the parties. What remains to be done at the date of the notice is of importance, but it is by no means the only relevant fact. The fact that the purchaser has continually been pressing for completion, or has before given similar notices which he has waived, or that it is specially important to him to obtain early completion, are equally relevant facts. [p. 287, col. 2; p. 288, col. 1.]

Where one party repudiates his obligation under the contract he is debarred from claiming specific performance of the contract by the other party. [p. 280, col. 2; p. 281, col. 1.]

No one has an absolute right to a decree for specific performance, but as laid down in sections 18 and 22 of the Specific Relief Act the grant or refusal of this relief is purely discretionary with the Court. After a suit has been filed for specific performance, the question whether a decree should be granted or refused is one purely for the Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction on judicial principles, and the domain of strict law is superseded by the domain of discretion and equity. [p. 281, cols. 1 & 2.]

Frost v. Knight, (1872) 7 Ex. 111; 41 L. J. Ex. 78; 26 L. T. 77; 20 W. R. 471 and Sabapathi v. Vanmahalinga, 23 Ind. Cas. 581; 38 M. 959; 15 M. L. T. 203; 26 M. L. J. 331; (1914) M. W. N. 256, distinguished.

In exercising a discretion under section 27 of the Specific Relief Act, the Courts are not tied down by the rules laid down by the Contract Act and by those alone. It can take into consideration the plaintiff's abandonment of his claim to specific performance and it can come to the conclusion that in the circumstances the plaintiff's proper and equitable remedy is to get a decree for specific performance, and that if he refuses to take this his suit should be dismissed with costs. [p. 282, col. 1.]

KARSANDAS KALIDAS GHIA v. CHHOTALAL MOTICAND.

Gobinda Chandra Chackravarti v. Nanda Kumar Das, 22 Ind. Cas. 910; 18 C. W. N. 689 and Hipgrave v. Case, (1885) 28 Ch. D. 356; 54 L. J. Ch. 399; 52 L. T. 242, relied on.

The above principle has, however, no application to a case where the plaintiff expressly makes an alternative prayer in the plaint for damages, not only as a substitute for specific performance but also coupled with a prayer in the alternative for rescission of the contract. [p. 282, col. 2.]

Where a Trial Court has decided that in exercise of its discretion it would not grant a decree for specific performance, an Appellate Court should be slow to interfere with the exercise of such a discretion. [p. 282, col. 1.]

Where there is no repudiation of the contract by the purchaser, nor any conduct on his part amounting to repudiation, he is entitled to a return of the deposit, though specific performance is refused. [p. 283, col. 1.]

A plaintiff is dominus litis, and the ordinary rule is that if he claims alternative reliefs he can choose at the hearing which he will ask for. [p. 282, col. 2.]

Farrant v. Olver, (1922) W. N. 47; 91 L. J. Ch. 758; 127 L. T. 145; 66 S. J. 283, relied on.

Under O. VII, r. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code the Courts in India have a general right to give such relief as they may think just, and are not so tied down as the Courts in England used to be. [p. 282, col. 2.]

Defendant agreed to sell certain immoveable property to the plaintiff and the time fixed for completion was six months. The market, however, improved and the defendant evaded the performance of the contract. After considerable delay the plaintiff served the defendant with notice to complete within seven days. Defendant failed to do so and plaintiff sued him for specific performance of the contract and in the alternative for damages. The market declined considerably during the pendency of the suit and the defendant expressed his willingness to perform the contract, but the plaintiff refused to accept specific performance and pressed his claim for damages:

Held, (1) that although time was not originally of the essence of the contract it was open to the plaintiff, having regard to the conduct of the defendant, to give notice to the latter making time of the essence of the contract; [p. 279, col. 2.]

(2) that under the circumstances of the case the period of seven days fixed by the plaintiff in his notice was reasonable; [p. 279, col. 2.]

(3) that defendant having failed to perform the contract within the time fixed was guilty of breach and the date of breach was the date on which the period fixed in the notice expired; [p. 280, col. 1.]

(4) that it was open to the plaintiff to abandon his claim for specific performance and confine his claim to damages, and that the defendant could not insist that the plaintiff must accept specific performance. [p. 281, col. 2.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Shah.

Mr. Munshi, (with him Mr. Coltman), for the Appellant.

Mr. Lalji, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Fawcett, J.—The facts in this case are sufficiently detailed in the judgment of the Court below and that of my learned brother. I proceed to consider the contentions urged before us in this appeal.

I first take up the contention of the respondent's Counsel, Mr. Lalji, that in any case the contract could not be enforced for want of mutuality. This is based on the ground that two of the defendant's brothers were minors at the time of the contract and on the ruling of the Privy Council in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed Chowdhuri (1). In my opinion this plea must be rejected. First of all the objection of want of mutuality has never before been raised by the plaintiff and no issue was framed upon that point. In fact it amounts to an inconsistent plea which would require an amendment of plaint (O. VI, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code). No such amendment has been asked for. Secondly, the plaintiff has by his conduct precluded himself from raising this point, especially in view of his consent to the application to the Court to sanction the sale on behalf of the minors: see Halsbury, Vol. XXVII, Art. 14 (2), p. 12; and Fry on Specific Performance, Art. 468, p. 224. The case, in my opinion, falls under section 115 of the Indian Evidence Act. Thirdly, the case of Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed Chowdhuri (1) was quite different from the present case. In that case the contract for sale was by, or on behalf of, the minor alone, whereas in the present case it is by a person, who is the manager of a joint Hindu family which included minor brothers. The difficulty about the minors in such a case is in Bombay got over by an appointment of a guardian and sanction to the proposed alienation in accordance with the ruling in In re Manilal Hargovan (2).

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 331; 39 I. A. 1; 14 Bom. L. R. 5; 16 C. W. N. 74; (1912) M. W. N. 22; 9 A. L. J. 33; 15 C. L. J. 69; 39 C. 232; 21 M. L. J. 56; 11 M. L. T. 8 (P. C.).

(2) 25 B. 353; 3 Bom. L. R. 411.

The authority given by the Court in such a case is accepted by conveyancers in Bombay as sufficient and no question was raised by the plaintiff's attorneys as to the Court's authority to pass the proposed order, and apparently there was no contest regarding the matter at the trial: cf. the finding of the lower Court on issue No. 10. Mr. Lalji also cited Baluswami Aiyar v. Lakshmana Aiyar (3), but the applicability of that ruling depends on facts which have not been proved to exist in this case. The remark in the lower Court's judgment in the last line of p. 54, part I, of the Paper-Book, shows that the defendant's power to convey alone was not even discussed before it. And supposing he had no such power, the contract could still have been performed in the manner by which defendant put himself in a position to fulfil it in March 1921.

The two main issues raised by the appellant's Counsel, Mr. Munshi, are (1) whether the defendant committed breach of the contract, and (2) whether the plaintiff kept the contract alive, so that he was bound by the defendant's offer to perform it on April 1, 1921. His main contention is that time was not of the essence of the contract under the original contract, and that though the plaintiff subsequently made time of the essence of the contract by his letter of June 28, 1920, this was waived by his conduct in continuing the negotiations; that the contract being kept open, the other side could take advantage of this to offer to perform it; that the filing of the suit for specific performance implied that the contract was still subsisting at the date of the suit; that the plaintiff by dropping his claim for specific performance refused to perform the contract though defendant was ready and willing to perform his part of the contract; that the result was that he could not maintain his claim to damages and there was also a repudiation of the contract, entitling the defendant to forfeit the deposit; and that accordingly the plaintiff's suit should have been dismissed with costs. He relied mainly upon two cases, namely, Frost v. Knight (4) and Hipgrave v. Case (5). But before considering these cases and the other contention put forward, it is desirable to note exactly what it was that the learned Judge decided. He holds (1) there was a breach of the contract on the part of the defendant (pages 57, 59 and 60 of the Paper-Book); (2) the plaintiff did not keep the contract alive, as contended by the defence (pages 57, 60, 61); (3) the plaintiff is entitled to the alternative relief of damages (pages 57, 58, 59); and (4) in any case the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, would not decree specific performance (page 59)

In regard to the first point the judgment has not dealt as fully or definitely as it might have with the question: What was the time for performance and what was the actual date on which the defendant committed a breach of the contract? This is an important question, because it is not sufficient to show that the defendant was not able to perform his part of the contract within the period of seven days mentioned in the letter of June 28, 1923, unless it is also shown that the time for performance of the contract had then expired. The original time fixed for the completion of the conveyance expired in April 1920. But, as time was not of the essence of the contract, it must be taken that no time for the performance was specified within the meaning of section 46 of the Indian Contract Act, that is, the plaintiff's engagement had to be performed within a reasonable time. A subsidiary question arises as to whether the plaintiff was justified in making time the essence of the contract as he did in the letter of June 28, 1920, and whether the time so specified of seven days was a reasonable time to allow. Unfortunately no issues were raised upon this point apparently because of the undesirable practice of raising an issue on every statement of the plaint which is contested, without confining the issues to the main question for decision, in accordance with the observations of Scott, C. J. in West End Watch Company v. Berna Watch Company (6). The point is not, therefore, discussed as a particular issue in the lower Court's judgment. However, at page 60 the learned Judge says:—

(3) 63 Ind. Cas. 374; 44 M. 605; 13 L. W. 562; 29 M. L. T. 306; (1921) M. W. N. 316; 41 M. L. J. 129 (F. B.).

(4) (1872) 7 Ex. 111; 41 L. J. Ex. 78; 26 L. T. 77; 20 W. R. 471.

(5) (1885) 28 Ch. D. 356; 54 L. J. Ch. 399; 52 L. T. 242.

"In the first place when the Court refused to sanction the sale in June 1920 the defendant was unable to perform the contract. There was a breach on his part."

Again at page 61 the learned Judge says:—

"Further it seems to me that in view of what happened in June 1920 it was perfectly open to the plaintiff to make time of the essence of the contract and to give to the defendant a final opportunity to fulfil the contract. When he could not do that the plaintiff was entitled to sue on the footing of a breach by the defendants."

And at page 57 of the Paper-Book the learned Judge says:—

"It is clear from the correspondence between the parties that the plaintiff insisted upon making time of the essence of the contract in June as I think at that stage he was entitled to do and that the defendant treated the contract as at an end:"

I take it, therefore, that the lower Court found that the plaintiff was justified in making time of the essence of the contract, as was done by the letter of June 28 and that the period of seven days fixed for completion of the sale in that letter was a reasonable one, so that on the defendant's failure to perform the contract within that period there was breach on his part. The learned Judge has also apparently held that there was no waiver on the part of the plaintiff, although this point is not discussed in detail. At page 58 he says that the plaintiff did not by his conduct definitely commit himself so as to be precluded from claiming either specific performance or the alternative relief of damages, and at page 61, in connection with the passage already quoted as to the plaintiff being justified in making time of the essence of the contract, no reference is made to any subsequent waiver by the plaintiff of his action.

The first question, then, is whether the lower Court has erred in holding that there was a breach on the part of the defendant in failing to complete his part of the contract by July 5, 1920, when the period of seven days specified in the letter of June 28, 1923, expired? Mr. Munshi's contention on this part of his case was mainly based on the assumption that the defendant could convey a good title as the manager of the joint Hindu family consisting of himself and his brothers, and that his offer to convey the property on that basis, which was made in his attorney's letter of July 6, 1920, was, therefore, a good one. As already remarked, however, the lower Court's judgment shows that no attempt was made at the hearing to justify the position that defendant alone was competent to convey a good title. And, in my opinion, such a position is entirely opposed to condition No. 4 of the contract, under which "the vendor and all other persons whom the purchaser or his attorneys shall consider to be necessary parties" were to execute the conveyance. This leaves it to the plaintiff to say who were necessary parties, and he could properly insist on defendant's adult brothers and a duly constituted guardian of the minor brothers joining in the conveyance. Condition No. 4 was obiously intended to protect the plaintiff from having to accept a title, which, though outwardly good, would render him liable to litigation; and a conveyance by a manager of a joint Hindu family, which contains minor members, is just the sort of transaction which would lead to such litigation. In this particular case defendant's brothers objected to the sale in February 1923 and warned plaintiff that if he proceeded with this purchase he would do so at his own risk (Paper Book, Part I, page 18, Part III, page 28). Plaintiff was, therefore, clearly justified in requiring that all the brothers should join in the conveyance, and this was recognised by the defendant, who took steps accordingly (cf Paper Book, Part. I, pp. 31, 35, 36).

(6) 10 Ind. Cas. 805; 35 B. 425; 13 Bom. L. R. 242.

Though the learned Judge has held on the second issue that it is not proved that there was any collusion between defendant and his adult brother, Narotam, the circumstances of the case strongly suggest this. I also think that there is substantial ground for the allegation in paragraph 9 of the plaint that defendant's petition to the Court was intentionally made in a way that would almost necessarily lead to its rejection, as was at the time pointed out in plaintiff's attorney's letter of April 16, 1920, (Paper-Book, Part I, p. 22), though the learned Judge has on Issue No. 4 held it not proved that the petition was a dishonest one. The correspondence, to my mind, contains conclusive evidence of defendant's desire to delay the completion of the sale owing to the considerable rise in the market value of the property since the date of the contract; and as remarked by the learned Judge (Paper-Book, Part I, p. 55) "the defendant was anxious to sell to some body else if possible." The circumstances, in my opinion, clearly prove that there was deliberate delay on the part of the defendant, who was not really willing to complete. No doubt the rise in the value of the property would make it difficult for him to obtain the Court's sanction to the sale on behalf of his minor brothers, but this was in accordance with defendant's own desires. This position continued up to the date of the suit, and it was only when the market subsequently fell that defendant's wishes and ability to complete the sale again corresponded, but in an opposite direction to the former position. The facts seem to me perfectly clear, and though there is no actual evidence on record as to the market fluctuations of immoveable property in Bombay in 1920-22, it would be absurd for the Court to shut its eyes to what is plain to it from the different positions taken up by the parties at different times and its knowledge of a notorious fact from (inter alia) litigation that has come up before this High Court on its Original Side: cf. Cooper v. General Accident, Fire, and Life Assurance Corporation, Limited (7). I entirely concur with the view taken by the Judge below that "when the Court refused to sanction the sale in June 1920 the defendant was unable to perform the contract" (p. 60). I also concur with his finding (p. 57) that the plaintiff was entitled to make time of the essence of the contract as he did by his letter of June 28, 1920. There had been a previous warning to defendant in his letter of April 6, 1920 (Paper Book, Part III, p. 34), which led to the application to the Court to sanction the sale; and when that application was refused, the inability of defendant to give plaintiff a good title under conditions Nos. 4 and 5 of the contract became definitely ascertained. There was a failure on his part to make out the title contracted for and obtain the concurrence of other parties, as required by condition 4 of the contract. This was a breach going to the root of the contract, and the correspondence and other circumstances clearly show that the defendant up to the date of the suit had no intention of fulfilling his part of the contract.

That being so, I think the period of seven days allowed by the notice of June 28, 1920, was a reasonable one (cf. Fry on Specific Performance, Art. 1095. at p. 512). It did not really matter whether seven days, or seventy days, were fixed: the defendant would not have got himself into a position to fulfil his contract (as he did in 1921), even if the period fixed had covered the four months prior to the institution of the suit, or indeed any period before the time when the market turned in his favour. The case is quite different to the ordinary one, where there are difficulties in the way of clearing the title, which require time for their removal, and where the notice gives insufficient time for that purpose. The general rule is that when a substantial defect is ascertained, the purchaser must exercise his right of repudiation or of seeking the aid of the Court for specific performance without undue delay (cf. Halsbury, Vol. XXV, Art. 692, at p. 404, and Fry on Specific Performance, Art. 1100, at p. 514). Also, as ruled in Stickney v. Keeble (8) the prior delay of defendant must be taken into consideration in determining the reasonableness of the time fixed by the notice. The case was, therefore, one in which a short period for completion of the contract might reasonably be fixed. To use the language of section 46 of the Indian Contract Act, defendant by failing to get the Court's sanction by July 5 had failed to perform his engagement within a reasonable time. I hold accordingly that there was a breach of contract by defendant on July 5, 1920.

(7) (1922) 39 T. L. R. 113 at p. 115; 2 Ir. R. 214.

But it is said that there was waiver by plaintiff of his right to act on such a breach by his continuing in negotiation as to the title. In support of this reliance is placed on the letter of plaintiff's attorneys, dated July 6, 1920 (Paper-Book, Part III, page 41) in which they ask defendant's attorneys to give them inspection of a supposed agreement between defendant and one Lukmanji regarding the assignment of the Improvement Trust lease to defendant, and of the Letters of Administration of his father's estate that had been granted to defendant. It is not clear that these documents were really wanted for the investigation of defendant's title, and as there is no evidence on the point, it is a matter of speculation why their inspection was desired. But assuming that it was for the purpose of such an investigation, it is to be remarked that the request does not appear to have been complied with, and plaintiff's attorney's letters of July 22 and 24, 1920, (Paper-Book, Part III pages 46 and 47) make it quite clear that plaintiff would not accept any other title than one passed by a conveyance in which defendant's brothers joined. Also the plaintiff's attorneys' second letter of July 6, 1920 (Paper-Book, Part III, page 41) implies that plaintiff was not willing to accept the conveyance by defendant alone which was offered in the letter of defendant's attorneys of the same date. A suit had already been threatened, and the defendant's letter of August 3, 1920 (Paper-Book, Part III, page 47) shows that his attorneys were aware that the idea had not been dropped. No other evidence of a desire, or effort, on the part of the plaintiff to continue the negotiations is adduced, except the third para of plaintiff's letter of July 14, 1920, in which he asks if defendant is prepared to comply with his requirement that the brothers should join in the conveyance. That merely amounts to a statement that defendant could not comply, for it is coupled with a reference to the Court's refusal to sanction the sale; and it was met by a refusal to discuss the matter, as plaintiff was understood to have filed a suit. In these circumstances, it is, in my opinion, absurd to suggest that there was any waiver by plaintiff. There was no "course of conduct inconsistent with the intention of insisting on such an objection" (Fry on Specific Performance, Art. 1120, at page 520). It is quite clear that plaintiff and his advisers were all along determined to sue, for he really wanted at that time to buy the property, probably in order to take advantage of the rising market (cf. the statement in his letter of April 16, 1920, that he had received a good offer for the property, (Paper-Book, Part I, page 22).

I, therefore, hold that there was no waiver on the part of the plaintiff as alleged. It follows that he is entitled to recover the damages allowed by the lower Court (viz., the costs of and incidental to the investigation of title up to the date of suit) unless Mr. Munshi's second contention is correct.

This contention is that in any case plaintiff's abandonment of his claim to specific performance at the hearing entitles the defendant (a) to forfeit the plaintiff's deposit and (b) to ask the Court to dismiss his suit with costs. Mr. Munshi submitted an elaborate argument on this point, and in regard to the first part of it I concur with him that the plaintiff treated the contract as subsisting up to the date of the suit. It was in fact necessary for him to do so, if he hoped to get a decree for specific performance, for if the plaintiff repudiates his obligation under this contract, this debars him from claiming specific performance of the contract by the other party : see Halsbury, Vol. XXVII, Art. 101, page 59. But Mr. Munshi relies on the principle laid down in Frost v. Knight (4) that, if the promisee keeps the contract alive for his own purpose, he also keeps it alive for the benefit of his opponent; "he remains subject to all his own obligations and liabilities under it, and enables the other party not only to complete the contract, if so advised, notwithstanding his previous repudiation of it, but also to take advantage of any supervening circumstances which would justify him in declining to complete it."

(8) (1915) A. C. 386; 84 L. J. Ch. 259; 112 L. T. 664.

I take it that it is in this sense that the lower Court found on Issue No. 8 that the plaintiff did not keep the contract alive down to the date of hearing (see Paper-Book, pages 60, 61), i. e., he did not keep it alive so as to enable the promisor to take advantage of this in the way laid down in that case. As I have already said I do not think it can be held that the plaintiff did not treat the contract as still subsisting, but in my opinion the contention that, therefore, the plaintiff could not abandon the claim to specific performance except under penalty of dismissal of his suit with costs and to forfeiture of his deposit is incorrect for the following reasons.

(1) This contention overlooks the fact that no one has an absolute right to a decree for specific performance, but as laid down in sections 12 and 22 of the Specific Relief Act the grant or refusal of this relief is purely discretionary with the Court. I think that the right held to be kept open under the doctrine of Frost v. Knight (4) is a purely legal right implied in the "continuance" of the contract, which is referred to in the last sentence of section 39 of the Indian Contract Act. It seems to me doubtful whether such a right exists in a case like this falling under the provisions of section 54 of the Indian Contract Act, which expressly enacts that the promisor cannot, after a breach on his part, "claim the performance of the reciprocal promise" (cf. Sabapathi Pillay v. Vanmahalinga Pillai (9). But assuming that it does the fact remains that, after a suit has been filed for specific performance, the question whether a decree should be granted or refused is one purely for the Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction on judicial principles, and the domain of strict law is superseded by the domain of discretion and equity. I concur with the view taken in Gobinda Chandra Chakravarti v. Nanda Kumar Das (10) that in exercising a discretion under section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, the Courts are not tied down by the rules laid down in the Indian Contracts Act and by those alone.

(2) In exercising its discretion, the Court can take into consideration the plaintiff's abandonment of his claim to specific performance, a position he is entitled to take up under O. XXIII r. 1, of the Civil Procedure Code. A somewhat similar point arose in Bombay Cycle & Motor Agency, Ltd. v. Rustomji Dossabhai N. Wadia (1921) O. C. J. Appeal No. 7 of 1921, decided by Macleod, C. J., and Shah, J., on June 20, 1921 (Unreported). In that case also there was a change of position by the parties. The plaintiff sued for specific performance. Abandoning that, he wanted to fall back upon the alternative relief of damages, if on an inspection of defendant's accounts he found it worth while to do so. The main question decided was one of procedure with which we are not concerned in this case. The remarks which I am going to cite are purely obiter, but they deal with the point in consideration and I think they may properly be mentioned. In the Appeal Court's judgment the learned Chief Justice says:—

"It is the Court alone which has to decide whether specific performance ought or ought not to be granted, and unless the parties come to the Court agreed as to what the terms of the decree should be, the Court has to come to a decision on that question, and it is open to the plaintiffs to say that considering all the facts of the case, the Court ought not to grant the prayer for specific performance in the plaint, but to grant the alternative prayer for damages."

(9) 23 Ind. Cas. 581; 38 M. 959; 15 M. L. T. 203; 26 M. L. J. 331; (1914) M. W. N. 256.

(10) 22 Ind. Cas. 910; 18 C. W. N. 689.

Mr. Justice Shah in his judgment says:

"The plaintiffs' claim has been dismissed, as they were not then prepared to submit to decree for specific performance by consent. They were in no sense bound to consent to such a decree, and just as the defendants changed their position, they were also in my opinion entitled to consider their position with reference to the state of the market as it developed during the pendency of the suit, and to limit their prayer to damages, if so advised."

(3) The Court can no doubt come to the conclusion that in the circumstances the plaintiff's proper and equitable remedy is to get a decree for specific performance, and that if he refuses to take this his suit should be dismissed with costs. But the present is certainly not a case of that kind. As remarked by the learned Judge at page 57, Part I, of the Paper-Book "the controversy between the parties from time to time has changed with the market value of the property and even the form it has taken at the hearing is due largely to the fluctuations in the market value of the property." There can be no doubt, in my opinion, that the defendant's failure to perform the contract prior to the suit and his desire to perform it after the suit is entirely due to such fluctuations. The maxim applies "that he who comes into equity must come with clean hands," and the defendant is really in the same box as the plaintiff in regard to the latter seeking to avod the performance of the contract.

(4) The lower Court has decided that in any case in the exercise of its discretion it would not grant a decree for specific performance (p. 59 of the Paper-Book) and the Appellate Court should be slow to interfere with the exercise of such a discretion. I fully agree with the Judge below that in all the circumstances it would not be equitable to give the defendant, in view of his previous conduct, the advantage he seeks to obtain from the turn of the market. It is true that he does not here seek a decree for specific performance. But the basis on which he claims that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed with costs is on the basis of his right to specific performance.

(5) Hipgrave v. Case (5) is, no doubt, a decision which goes to support Mr. Munshi's contention. But it is to be read in the light of the peculiar history of the circumstances under which the alternative remedy of damages came to be allowed first under Lord Cairns' Act and then, under the Judicature Act of 1873. A succinct account of this will be found in the Encyclopoedia of Laws of England, Vol. II, at pp. 670, 671. Also the stricter rules in England as to pleadings and amendment thereof, compared with those of India, have to be taken into consideration, as pointed out in the lower Court's judgment. The case, in my opinion, has no application to one like this where the plaintiff expressly makes an alternative prayer in the plaint for damages, not only as a substitute for specific performance but also coupled with a prayer in the alternative for rescission of the contract. The Courts in India have a general right to give such relief as they may think just, under O. VII, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, and are not so tied down as the Courts used to be in England: cf. Callianji Harjivan v. Narsi Tricum (11). There is also no question of defendant's being taken by surprise.

(6) Apart from the considerations like those which weighed with the Court in Hipgrave v. Case (5) the plaintiff is dominus litis, and the ordinary rule is that if he claims alternative reliefs he can choose at the hearing which he will ask for, cf. O. XXIII, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code, and Farrant v. Olver (12). No doubt the facts in the latter case are different from those here, but that does not affect the above principle.

(7) The defendant's ability to give a good title arose only after the suit; and

(11) 19 B. 764 at p. 770; 10 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 512.
(12) (1922) W. N. 47; 91 L. J. Ch. 758; 127 L. T. 145; 66 S. J. 283.

it is at least doubtful whether, having failed to obtain the requisite concurrence of his adult brother and the Court's sanction prior to the suit and having thus incapacitated himself from performing his contract, he could recapacitate himself by such subsequent action. Thus it has been held that—"If A agrees to convey land to B at a future date and before that date conveys the land to a third person, A commits an anticipatory breach of his agreement, and B can repudiate it. It is immaterial that B might, by repurchasing the land before the date fixed, recapacitate himself to perform his contract with B." See Ashburner's Principles of Equity, page 549, and the cases there cited.

(8) As regards the defendant's claim to forfeit the deposit I take the law to be that where there is no repudiation of the contract by the purchaser, nor any conduct on his part amounting to repudiation, he is entitled to a return of the deposit, though specific performance is refused; see Pollock and Mulla's Contract and Specific Relief Acts, 4th Edn., page 887 and cases there cited. Here there has been no such repudiation prior to suit, and the claim is based merely on his abandonment at the hearing of the claim to specific performance. In my opinion, he was at liberty to abandon it, and this is not a case which can properly be treated as a repudiation entitling the defendant to forfeit the deposit. Further the right of the purchaser to recover his deposit springs out of breach of contract by the vendor (Halsbury, Vol. XXV, Art. 688, page 401) and on the finding that there has been such a breach by the defendant the plaintiff is clearly entitled to recover his deposit.

(9) Mr. Coltman contended that the sale of the property by the defendant was held up for two years by the suit, and it was only fair in the circumstances that the plaintiff should be deemed to have made a final election when he brought his suit for specific performance; for if he had not treated the contract as subsisting, the defendant could have sold the property to some other party. If the defendant's conduct had been free from blame, there would no doubt be considerable force in this contention. But the balance of equities of the case is not in favour of the defendant, and I do not think that this consideration can be held to outweigh the other considerations that go against him. Substantial justice is, in my opinion, done by the decision of the lower Court.

I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

Coyajee, J.—On October 2, 1919, the defendant (now appellant) entered into an agreement in writing, Exhibit B to sell the immoveable property therein described to the plaintiff-respondent for the price of Rs. 1,60,001. A sum of Rs. 25,000 was paid by the purchaser as "earnest money" and it was agreed that "the balance viz., Rupees one lac and thirty-five thousand and one shall be paid on the completion of the purchase. The purchase was to be completed within six months. The vendor agreed to deduce at his own cost "a marketable title free from all reasonable doubts" and to "do all such things and take such actions and proceedings as may be necessary for clearing up any defect in such title," and also to "put the purchaser in vacant possesssion of the second, third and fourth floors of the said hereditaments and by getting the tenants of the remaining portion to attorn to the purchaser (clause 5). It was also agreed that "upon payment of the purchase-money at the time and in manner aforesaid, the vendor and all other persons whom the purchaser or his attorneys shall consider to be necessary parties shall execute a proper assignment of the said premises to the said purchaser or to such other person or persons as the purchaser may nominate" (clause 4).

At the date of the contract the said property admittedly belonged to a joint Hindu family consisting of four brothers, namely, the defendant, Narotam, Nandlal and Manilal—the last two beirg then minors. The purchaser, however, had no knowledge of these facts. The further relevart history of the property is thus stated by the Trial Judge: "The original lease of the property was taken from the Improvement Trust by one Lookmanji Noorbhoy. He agreed to assign his right..to Karsandas Kalidas and his brother Narotam Kalidas in March 1911 for Rs. 46,500. The lease which was not then executed in favour of Lookmanji was ultimately executed by the Trustees of the Improvement Trust directly in favour of and in the name of Karsandas Kalidas i. e. the defendant, only on October 17, 1911."

The main question for determination is, whether, on the facts of this particular case. the purchaser is entitled to the return of the deposit money Rs. 25,000, or whether the vendor should be permitted to retain it?

The evidence bearing on this question is documentary. It consists, with a few exceptions, of letters which have passed between the parties. The correspondence began soon after the contract, and was kept up until this suit was brought (November 12, 1920); and it continued even thereafter. The conclusions to which this evidence leads me are:

(1) Throughout the period intervening between the date of the contract and the date of filing the plaint, the plaintiff had continually been pressing for completion of the sale.

(2) As for the defendant, he apparently entertained the hope of making a still better bargain. He wanted to gain time, and was therefore anxious on the one hand to keep the plaintiff to his promise. On the other hand he did all he could up to the time this suit was brought, to delay from time to time the fulfilment of the contract. The difficulties arising from the fact of his brothers having an interest in the property were held in reserve to serve as an excuse for backing out of the contract in the event of his being able to find a higher price elsewhere.

(3) There was such a protracted default on the part of the vendor as to give the purchaser the right to say that the vendor had refused to perform his part of the contract.

Soon after the contract, the plaintiff applied for and obtained the sanction of the Improvement Trust Board to the proposed assignment of the lease in his favour. By clause 3 of the contract, however, it was the vendor's duty to secure it. Plaintiff sent a draft assignment to the defendant for his approval. It was not returned. On February 4, 1920, Messrs. Mehta, Dalpatram and Lalji, as attorneys of the vendor's brothers, wrote to the plaintiff as follows:

"We undestand that our client's brother Mr. Karsandas Kalidas has contracted to sell the above-mentioned property to your client. This is, therefore, to give your client notice that the said property belongs jointly to the said Karsandas Kalidas and our clients although the lease from the Improvement Trust was taken in the name of Mr. Karsandas Kalidas for the sake of convenience. If your client completes the purchase notwithstanding this notice he will do so at his own risk.

"We have, therefore, to request you to let us know if your client after this intimation desires to complete the purchase in which case we have instructions to take proceedings to restrain the sale."

On the same day plaintiff's attorneys sent a copy of it to defendant's attorney and asked: "please let us know by to-morrow evening what your client has to say in this matter." It is found by the lower Court—and the finding is not challenged here—that until this date the plaintiff had no knowledge of the defendant's brothers' being interested in the property. No reply was given, and plaintiff's attorneys wrote again on February 2:—"By the reason of your client's studied silence, our client is led to believe that your client has put up his brothers to make a false claim with a view to delay the completion of the sale." On February 10, defendant's attorney wrote denying any desire to delay completion, and added: "As regards the claim made by my client's brothers' the fact is that they are all joint with my client and the property was erected out of joint family funds and the lease was taken in my client's name as the eldest member of the family. The attitude taken up by my client's brothers is unreasonable and I have this day written to them to join in the conveyance." On the next day the plaintiff's attorneys called for "the names of all your client's brothers...and if any of your client's brothers...are minors, we shall thank you to let us know accordingly." This apparently had reference to clause 4 of the contract. Another letter of the same date contains the plaintiff's complaint that "Neither in kacha nor in the pucca agreement for sale any mention is made of the alleged jointness of your client and his brothers, nor was the fact (if a fact it is) even mentioned or information as to it conveyed to our clients." On February 19, the defendant's attorney wrote: "So far as my client understands his brother is willing to sign the conveyance," and added that the plaintiff knew all along that the defendant was a member of a joint Hindu family. Plaintiff replied on the same day denying this and inquiring whether the minor brothers would be made parties to the conveyance and whether the defendant was prepared to obtain an order from the Court permitting him to convey the minors' interests. On March 8, plaintiffs attorneys wrote: "Your client has been observing a studious silence regarding all our letters in this matter. Please note that unless your client makes out a marketable title and gets all the necessary persons joined in the conveyance by the second proximo our client will proceed in the matter." The second proximo has reference to the termination of the six months' period allowed by the contract. On March 24, the defendant's attorney replied that he had addressed a letter to Messrs. Mehta, Dalpatram and Lalji to obtain the necessary order from the Court as regards the minors' interests. Plaintiff's attorneys wrote on the same day, stating that that could not abate their client's anxiety, for what he really wanted was speedy completion of the matter which was being unnecessarily delayed. The six months' period having expired, plaintiffs attorneys wrote as follows on April 6:—

"Notwithstanding our repeated reminders your client has not answered our client's queries nor has he made out a marketable title as contracted nor have you as yet returned the draft assignment duly approved.

"Our client's moneys are lying idle and please note that our client will charge at 12 per cent. per annum on the balance of the consideration money.

"We also require your client to make out a marketable title and to execute a proper assignment to our client as provided by the agreement for sale on or before the 29th instant. Please note that in default our client will without further intimation file the necessary suit against your client."

On April 15, plaintiff's attorneys called for the papers for obtaining the Court's order for perusal, and added that "this is of course without prejudice to..our letter of the 6th instant." The draft petition being supplied, plaintiffs attorneys wrote on April 16:

"The petition does not comply with any of the material requirements of law nor does it place before the Court the materials on a consideration of which the Court may make an order..It is evident that your client's desire is to get out of the bargain and for that purpose he has all along suppressed the facts from our client, has failed to give the necessary information..and has now hit upon the plan of presenting to the Court a petition disclosing scarcely any material fact so as to make it probable that the Court should not grant the order and then to make an excuse of it for non-completion..Our client has received a good offer for the property and he insists upon completion of the sale."

The petition is Exhibit E: read by the light of the defendant's conduct it is fairly open to this criticism. I agree with my learned brother when he observes that the circumstances of the case strongly suggest a collusion between the defendant and his brother Narotam whose opposition is evidenced by Exhibit F. Thus in June 1920 the defendant was unable, and in my opinion also unwilling, to complete the sale. In these circumstances, on June 22, the plaintiff offered to buy the defendant's own interest on certain terms; but the offer was rejected as "absurd." The plaintiff then adopted the course which I think he was perfectly justified in doing. On June 28 he allowed the defendant one week's time within which to complete the sale making time of the essence of the contract. The time so allowed expired on July 5 On the 6th, the defendant took up a different attitude he alleged that he was the manager of the joint Hindu family and as such was entitled to sell the property on behalf of all the members and it was unnecessary to obtain the Court's order with regard to the minors' interests. No attempt was made to justify this position either in the lower Court or before us, moreover the position disregards the clear provisions of the fourth clause of the contract. More letters followed. On July 21, the defendant's attorney wrote: "Please let me know if you have accepted the title." The reply was: "It is no use pretending ignorance of our client's contentions as to your client's title to the property. We see no reason why you should be ignoring all the previous correspondence in the connection. Please let us know what your client has done regarding our client's requirements as to his title to the property, before you ask us whether our client has accepted the title." Plaintiff's letter of the 24th is to the same effect and reminds the defendant that he had failed to obtain the Court's sanction to the proposed sale. In the opinion of the learned Trial Judge, with which I agree, the further correspondence shews that the defendant was anxious to sell the property to some other purchaser, but was waiting to see what steps the plaintiff was going to take. On August 30, plaintiff gave a warning to the defendant "against dealing with the property in any manner" and intimated that draft plaint was ready. Some more letters followed. As I understand them, the plaintiff was anxious to make it clear that it was not he who was repudiating the contract but that there was a protracted default on the part of the defendant.

The plaint was filed on November 12, 1920. It was thereby alleged that the defendant had deliberately contrived to recede from the contract by putting up his adult brother to resist its completion and by failing to make a genuine effort to secure the Court's permission to convey the minors' interests. Plaintiff claimed specific performance of the contract. In the alternative he claimed (1) a return of his deposit, (2) costs of investigation of title, and (3) a sum of Rs. 40,000 "as damages for the defendant's wilful default in carrying out the said agreement and consequent breach of the contract." With this third item we are no longer concerned.

About this time, events were happening which were beyond the control of these litigants, but which, by the time the case was set down for hearing in December 1922, induced them to reconsider their respective positions. As the learned Judge observes: "The controversy between the parties from time to time has changed with the market value of the property and even the form it has taken at the hearing is due largely to the fluctuations in the market value of the property."

On March 10, 1921, the defendant applied to the Court to appoint him guardian of the property of one of the said minors (the other having then reached his age of majority) and to authorize him to convey his interest also. A perusal of his petition, Exhibit G, clearly shews a real attempt on his part to secure a favourable order—which indeed was made on March 12. This indeed is the first real endeavour made by the defendant to carry out the contract made on October 2, 1919. But this attempt was made nearly four months after the plaint was filed. The petition, Exhibit G, may be compared—contrasted rather—with the earlier one, Exhibit E. On April 22, defendant's attorney wrote to the plaintiffs: "We fail to understand your client's object in proceeding with this suit as our client is willing to convey the property and has as a matter of fact obtained the necessary Judge's Order authorizing him to complete the sale on behalf of his minor brother." On April 25, plaintiff's attorneys replied: "Before your client would object to our client proceeding with the suit we shall thank you to let us know to which of the reliefs claimed in the plaint your client is willing to submit." And on the 6th May this reply was amplified by making it clear that the plaintiff would insist on claiming compensation.

In his written statement, declared on August 20, 1921, reference is made to the Judge's order obtained on March 12; the defendant declares that he is ready and willing to complete the sale.

The learned Trial Judge has held that at the date of the contract plaintiff had no knowledge that other persons besides this defendant had an interest in the property; that defendant was guilty of a breach of the contract; that in November 1920 when the plaint was filed the plaintiff had a clear cause of action; that plaintiff had not kept the contract alive up to the day of hearing; that in the peculiar circumstances of this case, in the exercise of his judicial discretion, he would not force specific performance on the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff was entitled to the deposit and to costs incidental to the investigation of title.

In my opinion he has reached the right conclusions.

The nature of a deposit is thus explained by Cotton, L. J., in Howe v. Smith (13):

"The deposit, as I understand it, and using the words of Lord Justice James, is a guarantee that the contract shall be performed. If the sale goes on,....it goes in part payment of the purchase-money for which it is deposited but if on the default of the purchaser the contract goes off, that is to say, if he repudiates the contract, then....he can have no right to recover the deposit.

"I do not say that in all cases where this Court would refuse specific performance, the vendor ought to be entitled to retain the deposit. It may well be that there may be circumstances which would justify this Court in declining, and which would require the Court, according to its ordinary rules to refuse, to order specific performance, in which it could not be said that the purchaser had repudiated the contract, or that he had entirely put an end to it so as to enable the vendor to retain the deposit. In order to enable the vendor so to act, in my opinion there must be acts on the part of the purchaser which not only amount to delay sufficient to deprive him of the equitable remedy of specific performance, but which would make his conduct amount to a repudiation on his part of the contract."

In the present case the contract is silent as to what should happen to the deposit money in case the contract goes off. Upon the special facts of this case I do not see any reason for refusing the plaintiff's claim to recover this deposit, and for allowing the defendant to retain it. From first to last, from the date of the contract up to the institution of this suit, the plaintiff had been making a continuous and pressing demand for completion of the sale. The defendant on the other hand was doing all he could to delay and even to defeat it; he was in my opinion clearly guilty of default.

It is true, the parties did not by the terms of their agreement make time of the essence of the contract. But in such a case, if unnecessary delay is created by one party the other has a right to limit a reasonable time within which the contract should be perfected by the other: Taylor v. Brown (14). Accordingly the plaintiff expressly made time of the essence of the contract by his letter of June 28, 1920. But it is urged that the time so allowed was only one week, and that it was, therefore, too short. What is a reasonable time must depend upon the facts of each particular case. The question of reasonableness of notice should be considered with reference to the past attitude of the parties. Ordinarily, one week's time would be too short; in the circumstances of this case it was not. The contract allowed the parties six months for completion of the sale. Even though time was not of the essence of the contract, it was clearly the duty of the vendor to begin making some progress towards fulfilment of the contract. He had no right to expect the purchaser to wait an indefinite time. The defendant here did nothing beyond causing unnecessary delay; he was both unable and unwilling to fulfil the contract, and his inability was of his own making. The first genuine effort he made to fulfil his contract was in March 1921, and that was nearly four months after the plaint was filed In considering the question of sufficiency of time, his past conduct is relevant. As observed by Lord Parker of Waddington in Stickney v. Keeble (8): "In considering whether the time so limited is a reasonable time the Court will consider all the circumstances of the case. No doubt what remains to be done at the date of the notice is of importance, but it is by no means the only relevant fact. The fact that the purchaser has continually been pressing for completion, or has before given similar notices which he has waived, or that it is specially important to him to obtain early completion, are equally relevant facts." In my opinion, therefore, there was a breach on the part of the defendant, at any rate, on July 5, 1920, if not earlier. On July 6, he, as I have endeavoured to point out, took up a different attitude, which, moreover, he has made no attempt to justify. The further letters which passed between the parties do not, in my opinion, amount to a waiver of objection on the part of the plaintiff. In his letters of July 22 and 24 he was referring to the provisions contained in the fourth clause of the contract, and he warned the defendant not to ignore "all the previous correspondence in this connection," and he reminded the defendant that "he had failed to obtain the Court's sanction to the proposed sale." By his plaint he claimed damages for defendant's "wilful default in carrying out the said agreement and consequent breach of contract. This position he has done nothing to give up. In my opinion, therefore, the learned Judge was right in awarding to the plaintiff by way of damages all costs incurred by him in consequence of the failure on the part of the defendant to perform the contract in time I also hold that he was right in permitting the plaintiff to recover the deposit money.

(13) (1884) 27 Ch. D. 89 at p. 958; 53 L. J. Ch. 1055; 50 L. T. 573; 32 W. R. 802; 48 J. P. 773.

(14) (1839) 2 Beav. 180; 9 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 141; 50 R. R. 152; 48 E. R. 1149.

It was contended on behalf of the defendant that the plaintiff, having at the hearing of the suit abandoned his claim to specific performance, was not entitled to a return of the deposit money The plaintiff, however, had not claimed specific performance alone. The claim to damages and to a return of the deposit was expressly made in the plaint. It was the defendant's non-performance or breach of the contract which gave rise to the suit. The plaint sets out all the necessary facts bearing on both these reliefs. It was competent to him to make those claims. And, as shown in the judgment of my learned brother, it was equally competent to him at the hearing to abandon any part of his claim (O. XXIII, r. 1, Code of Civil Procedure). The interval of time between the date of the contract and the date of hearing was over three years. Plaintiff was in no sense responsible for this delay. Under the stress of circumstances, as explained by the lower Court, the plaintiff abandoned his claim to specific performance. He had done nothing to keep the contract alive in the sense that the defendant who was himself in default became entitled to say that if for any reason the claim to specific performance was either abandoned or disallowed, the plaintiff should not be permitted to recover the deposit. Moreover, the jurisdiction to decree specific performance of a contract is discretionary, and the Court is not bound to grant such relief (section 22, Specific Relief Act). And if, while disallowing specific performance, the Court finds that the plaintiff is entitled to a remedy, it is competent to the Court to award the appropriate remedy. Here the learned Judge observes that in the exercise of his discretion he would not—on the special facts of this case—have forced specific performance on the plaintiff; he would have disallowed it, not because of any fault of the plaintiff but because it would enure to the benefit of the defendant who was definitely unable or unwilling to fulfil the contract before the suit was filed. I agree then that to permit the defendant to retain this deposit or part payment would be to permit him to take advantage of his own default.

The appeal, therefore, fails.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 184-B OF 1923.

November 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

PARASHRAM—PARTY No. II—APPLICANT

versus

GOPAL RAMCHANDRA AND OTHERS—PARTY No. I—NON-APPLICANTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 147—Jurisdiction—Preliminary order—Addition of applicants—Revision.

Unless there are special circumstances giving rise to an apprehension of the breach of the peace, there is no jurisdiction to make an order under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 290, col. 1.]

The bringing of new applicants on record after the preliminary order in proceedings under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, is passed, is undesirable but it is a mere irregularity which does not vitiate the proceedings. [p. 290, col. 1.]

It is not usual for a High Court to interfere in revision with the discretion of the Magistrate who has passed an order under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, unless it is made without jurisdiction or if the Magistrate has not followed the procedure which has been laid down. [p. 290, col. 1.]

Revision against an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Akola, in Miscellaneous Criminal Case No. 9 of 1923, dated the 20th April 19 3.

Messrs. A. V. Khare, M. B. Niyogi and D. V. Pingle, for the Applicant.

Mr. G. G. Hatwalne, for the Non-Applicants.

ORDER.—A large number of the inhabitants of Akola petitioned the Deputy Commissioner of that District complaining that P. C. Joglekar of that town had stopped the public from taking water from the two wells situated in S. No. 9 of Sukhapur, a part of Akola. The Tahsildar was told to enquire into the matter, and he did so, and found that Joglekar had sold water from the two wells to the Sir Hukumchand Mills and, therefore, stopped the public from taking water from those wells, and came to the conclusion that the wells were public property, and suggested that under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code, action be taken. The report passed to the Deputy Commissioner as District Magistrate, who eventually sent to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate for proceedings to be initiated under sections 133 or 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Magistrate took the statements of five of the signatories to the application as one statement, and they spoke to Joglekar preventing the persons who signed the application from using the wells, and to the likelihood of the breach of the peace if any of them went to take water there. Upon this on 5th July 1922 a preliminary order was passed, and other persons were joined as applicants on 17th August 1922, but no new written statements were taken from them, and eventually the case resulted in an order under section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code in which it was stated that party No. 1, i. e., the signatories to the application had a right of using the wells for a very long period and that such right was being exercised by them within three months of the institution of these proceedings, and further that there exists a dispute concerning the use of the wells which is likely to occasion breach of the peace. It was further directed that party No. 1 be restored to their right of using the two wells and Joglekar was forbidden from obstructing them in the use of the wells. The order was to remain in force until and unless some other competent Court held otherwise. Against that order the present application in revision has been filed.

It is contended here that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace and that the order under section 147 was, therefore, wrong. It seems to me that if the public have from a very long series of years used and have been allowed to use the water of certain wells, whether the wells be public or private, and have been allowed to make use of them as a matter of right, and then if certain person claims ownership forbids the use of the wells, there is every probability of a breach of the peace. I am referred to Dhanput Singh v. Chhatterput Singh (1), Kali Kissen Tagore v. Anund Chunder Roy (2), Anesh Mollah v. Ejaharuddi Mollah (3) and

(1) 20 C. 513; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 348.
(2) 23 C. 557; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 370.
(3) 28 C. 446; 5 C. W. N. 428.

P. C. PERUMAL, In re.

Tularam Sao v. Bheoram (4). It can be accepted as correct that unless there are special circumstances giving rise to an apprehension of the breach of the peace, there is no jurisdiction to make an order under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code. But it seems to me that the special circumstances which justify the apprehension of the Magistrate exist in the present case. In this connection it is also stated that the public cannot acquire ownership of immoveable property by prescription: see Ussan Kasim Sait v. Secretary of State for India in Council (5). What can be proved in these cases is actual grant, or dedication, if direct evidence of one is available, or to be presumed, in cases where such evidence is not available; and in the latter case evidence of enjoyment is relevent and goes far towards supporting the inference that a grant or dedication, which is lost, at some time was made.

An objection is taken to the bringing of new applicants on record on the 17th August 1922. Of course it is undesirable, but still at the most it is merely an irregularity which does not vitiate the proceedings. There seems to me no doubt, taking the evidence of both sides together, that the case is a proper one for enquiry under section 147, and the evidence does support the finding that the wells had been used within three months of the institution of the proceedings. The conditions precedent to the application of the section exist, and it is not usual for a High Court to interfere with the discretion of the Magistrate in these cases unless the order is made without jurisdiction, or if the Magistrate has not followed the procedure laid down. Under the circumstances of the present case, the Magistrate is right in taking the action he did.

It is contended for the applicant that it would be impossible for him to sue in a Civil Court a number of the Akola public for a declaration that each of such persons has no right to use the water from the wells; but there is no necessity for him to do so. A suit brought against the signatories of the petition that started these proceedings would suffice. Whether the wells are public or private, there seems to be no reasonable doubt that the public living in their vicinity have for a large number of years used these wells, and I think the applicant has been rightly referred to Civil Court to establish the fact of his alleged sole enjoyment.

With these remarks I dismiss this application.

Application dismissed.

G. R. D.

(4) 12 C. P. L. R. 2 Cr.

(5) 74 Ind. Cas. 25; 44 M. L. J. 638; 17 L. W. 610; (1923) M. W. N. 315; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 624.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE NO. 508 OF 1923.

(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 400 OF 1922).

December 13, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Odgers.

In re P.C. PERUMAL alias CHELLAPERUMAL—ACCUSED—PETITIONER.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 540—Court-witness—Discretion—Power of Court.

It is not improper for a Court to call a Court-witness under section 540, Criminal Procedure Code, after the case for prosecution and defence has been closed.

Although a Court has to exercise proper discretion in calling Court-witnesses, the terms of section 540 are extremely wide and the Court may at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceedings summon any person as a Court-witness if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case. [p. 292, col. 1.]

Empress of India v. Kaliprosonno Doss, 14 C. 245; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 163 and Natabar Ghose v. Adya Nath Biswas, 75 Ind. Cas. 541; 37 C. L. J. 415; 27 C. W. N. 675; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 690; 24 Cr. L. J. 957, distinguished.

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Trichinopoly, in Criminal Appeal No. 1 of 1923 preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Town Second Class Magistrate, Trichinopoly, in C. C. No. 668 of 1922.

P. C. PERUMAL. In re.

Messrs. S. Subramania Iyar and A. S. Srinivasa Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. V. L. Ethiraj, for Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.— In this case the accused was charged under sections 342, 323 and 379, Indian Penal Code, in that at about 5 o'clock on the evening of the 18th November 1922, he bound the complainant to a tree, snatched away his loin cloth and the towel he had on the upper part of his body and the two rupees that he had in the folds of his loin cloth. He was acquitted under section 379 but convicted under sections 342 and 323. The conviction was upheld by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate. Mr. S. Subramania Aiyar for the accused presents three points for consideration. He says, first, that there is good and sufficient alibi evidence that the accused who was employed as a Building Sub-Inspector in the Loco Scheme, Golden Rock S. I. Ry., Trichinopoly was at work there on that day and not at the place where the offence is said to have been committed which is agreed to be about seven miles distant. The second point is that the Court improperly called a Court-witness after the case of each side had been closed; and the third point is that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the case at all as the offence really amounted to roboery and, therefore was only cognisable by a First Class Magistrate.

With regard to the first point the First Court disbelieved the alibi evidence and the lower Appellate Court says:

"The lower Court also disbelieved the alibi evidence of defence witnesses Nos. 1, 2 and 4 as the appellant did not mention a word about it in his long statement" and proceeds to confirm the conviction. I have allowed the learned Vakil, as I thought it was a case which needs some examination, to take me through the evidence of the alibi witnesses. The first alibi witness D. W. No. 1 says that the accused was at the work spot in the office until 5 P. M. on the date in question. He and the accused apparently left the work together and went to Trichinopoly Junction by train together. He is a fellow workman with the accused. He and the accused work in one and the same section under the Sub-Divisional Officer, and the Head Draftsman in the witness's office is the maternal uncle of the accused. Further the witness states from memory and not from any official record that the accused worked with him until 5 P. M., on the 18th November. I am not prepared to say that this witness can be trusted to establish the alibi of the accused. To begin with he is indirectly interested and again he only relies on his memory. With regard to D. W. No. 2 he first stated that he did not know where the accused was working on the 18th November. However, he speaks to his having met the accused on the Golden Rock platform at 5-30 that evening. This man is a draftsman. Although his office does not work on the Penultimate Saturday, he says he specially worked on the 18th November, though there is no record to show that he did. I cannot believe this man in any way. D. W. No. 3 was not relied on by Mr. Subramania Iyar because he says that no such occurrence as is charged occured at all. I am not prepared to believe that D. W. No. 4 produces a diary of the accused. He is a clerk in the Railway Executive Engineer's Office. The diary was made up on the 22nd November and the complaint was made on the 18th. The diary is made up by the accused himself, and I must say I am unable to rely on that in any shape or form. I am of opinion that the alibi evidence was sufficiently considered by the lower Court, and having considered it myself, I find it does not establish an alibi in favour of the accused.

With regard to the second point, the Court-witness was called under section 540, Criminal Procedure Code, when both the prosecution and the defence evidence had been closed. But neither the prosecution nor the defence had called Kambarasampettai Perimana Muthirian who is mentioned as second witness in the complaint of Nachiar Ammal, who is the boy's (complainant's) mother. It is true that this witness is not mentioned in the list put in by the Police in the charge-sheet which contains the names of seven witnesses of whom five were called. The Magistrate, acting under section 540, the terms of which are extremely wide, called him as a Court-witness and apparently relied on his evidence. Two cases are quoted for the defence to show that this witness ought not to have been called. The first is Empress of India v. Kaliprosonno Doss (1) where a Single Judge of the Calcutta High Court refused to exercise his powers under section 540 on the ground that there was no matter necessitating enquiry or question to be cleared up and the witness proposed to be called was not one on whose testimony the Court could place confidence. Here the Magistrate apparently thought there was a matter to be cleared up as it appeared that this witness could corroborate the prosecution witness as to the occurrence on the 18th November. The other case quoted, I may state that no Madras case has been quoted, was Natabar Ghose v. Adya Nath Biswas (2). That was a protracted hearing by the Special Deputy Magistrate lasting for a out ten months and after the case had been posted for judgment two witnesses were examined before the Magistrate under section 540. I consider that that was an exceptional case, and although it is true that proper discretion has to be exercised under section 540, still the terms of the section are extremely wide and any Court may at any stage of any enquiry, trial, or other proceedings, summon any person as a witness if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case. There is no ground for assuming here that the Magistrate did not think that the evidence of this man might be of importance one way or the other, either to support the prosecution or to destroy the prosecution theory.

The third point is that there was no theft but robbery. I am quite unable to accede to this proposition. The Magistrate has found that the reason why the boy was tied up was to punish him for having thrown stones in the street. It is quite unreasonable to suppose that the accused meant to rob the boy of his cloth and two rupees. It is quite unnecessary that a man should have to tie up a small boy in order to take his cloth from him; so that the object of tying up the boy was not theft at all. Therefore, the offence of robbery was not committed. The boy was tied up to punish him and then the cloth was taken away from him to put him to shame and two rupees were found in the cloth. It has been found that the accused did not take the two rupees. In fact the accused was not guilty of theft at all. I find these three points against the petitioner and dismiss the criminal revision case.

V. N. V. Rivision case dismissed.

(1) 14 C. 245; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 163.
(2) 75 Ind. Cas. 541; 37 C. L. J. 415; 27 C. W. N. 675; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 690; 24 Cr. L. J. 957.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 70-B OF 1923.

October 29, 1923

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J.C.

GANPAT—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XL V of 1860), s. 302—Culpable homicide—Intention or knowledge—Statement of witness in Police investigation—Statement retracted before Committing Magistrate and Sessions Judge—Evidential value.

It is not saf to rely upon a statement made by a witness before the Police during the investigation but retracted before the Committing Magistrate and the Sessions Judge. [p. 293, col. 2.]

Dal Singh v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 311; 13 N. L. R. 100; 15 A. L. J. 475; 1 P. L. W. 661; 19 Bom. L. R. 510; 21 C. W. N. 818; 26 C. L. J. 13; 6 L. W. 71; 22 M. L. T. 31; (1917) M. W. N. 522; 18 Cr. L. J. 471; 86 L. J. P. 140; 33 M. L. J. 555; 44 C. 876; 11 Bur. L. T. 54; 44 I. A. 137 (P. C.), relied upon.

The offence of culpable homicide presupposes an intention or knowledge of likelihood of causing death. The intention must be directed either deliberately to putting an end to human life or to some act which to the knowledge of the accused is likely to eventuate in the putting an end to human life. The knowledge must have reference to the particular circumstances in which the accused is placed and the intention demanded by the section must stand in some relation to the person who is alive. [p. 295, col. 2.]

GANPAT v. EMPEROR.

Appeal against the decision of the Sessions Judge, East Berar, Amraoti, in Sessions Trial No. 9 of 1923, dated the 13th July 1923.

Mr. N. G. Sarkar, R. B., for the Appellant.

Mr. G. P. Dick, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The accused Ganpat is the father of the deceased Rangu, a girl of 2½ years of age, who was born to him from his first wife, Gangu, who was divorced by him on 24th March 1923, by a registered deed of that date on receipt of Rs. 500 cash. By the term of the agreement he was to have the custody of the girl. In fact he insisted on having the girl and refused the temptation of receiving Rs. 200 to part with the girl's custody (P. W. No. 13). Accordingly he brought her over to his place of residence and she lived with him and his pet wife Soni. Owing to her tender age she occasionally remembered her absent mother and used to cry and the accused is said to have beaten her cruelly on that account several times. His neighbours (P. W. No. 12, P. W. No. 13 and P. W. No. 14) say that they saw the accused beating the girl on other occasions and heard the girl screaming aloud in consequence of the beating. The last such occasion was on 8th May 1923.

2. In the evening of that day the girl is said to have been very severely beaten and dashed away by the accused in consequence of which she died at night. The dead body was early next morning buried in a grave dug by P. W. No. 8, Bhurusha. It was afterwards exhumed from the grave and examined by the Sub-Assistant Surgeon, Morsi (P. W. No. 13) on 11th May 1923. His opinion as embodied in Exhibit P-4 and P-8 was that the death was caused by fracture of the skull. The exact location of the fracture will be seen from the diagram slip attached to Exhibit P-8.

The accused was consequently arrested on the 12th early morning. After some further investigation and seizure of certain articles of evidence the accused was put on his trial before a Sub-Divisional Magistrate who committed him to the Sessions under section 302, Indian Penal Code, on the 6th of June 1923.

3. The Sessions Judge held the trial with the help of Assessors and came to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of having committed an offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder by causing the death of his daughter and he thought that the act done was such as the accused knew was likely to cause death but that as he had no intention to cause death, he sentenced him to five years' rigorous imprisonment.

The Assessors although unanimous in their opinion that the accused was not guilty differed as to the cause of death; while according to one, it was due to accidental fall, the other thought that the girl was dashed by the accused in a fit of anger but that the accused had no intention to cause death of the girl. The Sessions Judge, however, did not see his way to acquit the accused. Therefore the accused has now presented this appeal against the conviction urging that he was not guilty but that the death was caused by an attack of the cow in the evening. According to him the witnesses have given evidence out of animosity against him. He urged that it was very unlikely that he would kill his own daughter.

4. A perusal of the record shows that the prosecution have based their story upon a statement made by Musammat Soni (P. W. No. 11), in the course of the Police investigation, to the effect that the girl was beaten and dashed to the ground by the accused and that she died subsequently.

In the course of his argument, Mr. Dick, Bar-at-Law who appeared for the Crown conceded, and I think very rightly, that as Soni did not stick before the Committing Magistrate and in the Sessions Court to her former statement to the Police and said that she made the statement under Police threat, it was not safe to rely on such retracted statement of this witness. He very frankly admitted that there was no other evidence on record to show that any of the witnesses saw the accused dashing the girl on the ground.

GANPAT v. EMPEROR.

The position, therefore, is that if Soni's evidence is excluded from consideration as I think it ought to be, [See Dal Singh v. Emperor (1)] there is no direct evidence to prove that the accused dashed the girl on the ground and thereby caused her death. There is also no evidence to show that the accused beat the girl on the head. It is, therefore, contended on behalf of the accused that as the Sessions Judge was principally influenced by the evidence of Soni, the whole judgment is vitiated and the conviction is, therefore, not sustainable. It was also pointed out that the other evidence, even if believed, when scrutinised, reduces itself to evidence of corporal chastisement of the girl by her father, which as some of the prosecution witnesses themselves characterise is not unusual. At any rate it does not appear that it was so very harsh as to lead to the necessary conclusion that the accused knew, when he beat her last on 8th May 1923 that death would ensue instantaneously or after some hours, from that beating. The subsequent conduct of the accused of burying the dead body with the help of Manha and Bharusha early morning, did not, it was urged, bring the guilt home to him either. There was nothing unusual in that, because it is common experience that in the case of death of infants you do not send for neighbours and friends to accompany you to the burial ground. The accused's contradictory versions, (1) to the Police that some days before her death the girl climbed upon a heap of wood and had a fall therefrom and she died of some injuries received on the temples and the head in consequence of the fall and (2) to the villagers who questioned him that the girl died of illness, whether true of false, were, it is argued, not necessarily inconsistent with the last statement that his cow struck the girl while she was standing in a door and that she fell on some stones lying there. That this is likely to have caused the fracture of the skull is clear from the evidence of the Sub-Assistant Surgeon (see his deposition as P. W. No. 13 before Committing Magistrate). Every one of these causes may have contributed towards the untimely end of the girl's life. My attention is also drawn to the fact that the accused as also his pet wife, Soni, entertained affection for her, and, therefore, the act complained of could not be said to be an act done with the intention to cause death or with the knowledge that he was likely by such an act to cause death. The accused has stated in his memorandum of appeal that several people saw the cow striking her head against the head of the girl but not a single witness has been examined by the accused on this point. His next complaint is that his evidence was not taken. This also is not attempted to be supported by the learned Pleader who appeared for him before me. In the absence of any evidence on the side of the accused I am not prepared to accept any of the three theories advanced as having been the direct cause of the girl's death. But with that I am not concerned. What I have to see is whether the prosecution has been successful in establishing the story set up by it.

5. P. W. No. 4 says he and one Sheikh Gulab and Dhonda while passing in the evening along the public road that runs by the accused's house, saw the accused beating the child with his fists and that he had also a small stick in his hand. He was actually beating the child near the door of his house. He says he and his companions remonstrated with the accused and asked him why he was beating the child. The accused paid no attention to him and so they all went away. He says in cross-examination that the accused struck the girl with his fist, that the girl was standing and was crying and that the girl remained standing even after the blow. He admits every one beats his children. The stick in the hand of the accused was a thin bamboo stick. He did not konw whether the girl was ill when the accused was beating her or not. There is no corroboration to this witness's testimony. Pandurang, witness No. 12 for the prosecution, says accused used to beat his daughter often. While he was sleeping in the angan about 10 P. M. he heard the accused's daughter crying and the sound of the beating. The girl began to scream and the accused told her to keep quiet. After a time the crying stopped. He did not think it was anything unusual as this happened often. The next morning he heard that the girl had died. He had seen the girl playing in the compound, that afternoon about 4 P. M. He heard two sounds of blows. He says the time was night and not evening. Here again we find a very material discrepancy which detracts from the truth of the version given by the prosecution. P. W. No. 10, Mukaji barber, is another witness who says the accused went to his house to request him to come to his house at night, that he asked him why he called him and where he wanted him to go and he says he was told by the accused that his daughter was dead. On being asked how she died he replied he had beaten her and "she happened to die" This evidence is attempted to be given to prove an admission of guilt by the accused that the beating was the immediate cause of death. The witness is a barber; it was not necessary for the accused to seek his help. He deposes that the wife objected to the dead body being buried in the compound and it appears the accusad could not bury the dead body in the night. This evidence does not seem to be quite convincing. This is all the evidence of beating or admission about beating. It does not to my mind prove clearly that the girl's death resulted from the beating. At the same time I cannot ignore the fact that there is no evidence to show that the accused had actually struck the girl on any vital parts; much less on the head. The Sessions Judge while recording evidence of witnesses who spoke of the blows by fists and of the beating by stick ought to have located particular part or parts of the body where the blows were given or the stick fell in their presence.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 311; 13 N. L. R. 100; 15 A. L. J. 475; 1 P. L. W. 661; 19 Bom. L. R. 510; 21 C. W. N. 818; 26 C. L. J. 13; 6 L. W. 71; 22 M. L. T. 31; (1917) M. W. N. 522; 18 Cr. L. J. 471; 86 L. J. P. 140; 33 M. L. J. 555; 44 C. 876; 11 Bur. L. T. 54; 44 I. A. 137 (P. C.).

6. Under these circumstances I differ from the Sessions Judge in thinking that the act of the beating, if any, was not (?) done by the accused with intention to cause, or with knowledge that it will cause death either instantaneously or within a few hours. The offence of culpable homicide presupposes an intention or knowledge of likelihood of causing death. The intention must be directed either deliberately to putting an end to human life or to some act which to the knowledge of the accused is likely to eventuate in the putting an end to human life. The knowledge must have reference to the particular circumstances in which the accused is placed and the intention demanded by the section must stand in some relation to the person who is alive. Ratanlal's Law of Crimes, 9th Edition, page 614.

7. I am not, therefore, prepared to uphold the conviction or the sentence pronounced by the Sessions Judge. Even if the witnesses be believed when they speak of the accused having beaten the girl, I do not think that in view of the witnesses' own version about the beating being nothing more than usual chastisement of a child by his parents, the accused can be considered to have committed any offence; technically it would not amount to anything more than simple hurt. The accused has already been in Jail for all this time and I think that is quite sufficient. I, therefore, order that he be at once set at liberty.

G. R. D. Conviction set aside.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 100 OF 1923.

October 9, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

BINDRA—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

Musammat BHAGWANTA—COMPLAINANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss:

BINDRA v. BHAGWANTA.

247, 435, 436—Dismissal of summons case for default—Acquittal—Second complaint on same facts—Jurisdiction.

Where a complaint under section 447, Penal Code, is dismissed for default of appearance of the complainant, the order must be taken to have been passed under section 247, Criminal Procedure Code, though the latter section is neither mentioned nor is the order in terms of that section.

Such an order as the above is tantamount to an acquittal and the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction either under section 435, or under any other section of the Code to set it aside.

The powers of a District Magistrate directing further enquiry into any complaint are limited to the cases mentioned under section 436 of the Code and an order passed under section 247 of the Code does not fall within the purview of that section.

Application against an order of the District Magistrate, Gonda, dated the 16th June 1923, reversing that of the Honorary Bench Magistrate, Second Class, Gonda, dated the 19th April 1923.

Mr. P. C. Gupta, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—One Musammat Bhagwanta filed a complaint on the 20th August 1922 before a Bench of Honorary Magistrates, exercising jurisdiction in the town of Gonda, against six persons including the present applicant, Bindra. In this complaint the accused were primarily charged with an offence under section 447 of the Indian Penal Code alleged to have been committed by them on the 26th August 1922. The Magistrates took cognizance of this complaint and issued summons to Bindra according to the provisions of the law. On the 28th December 1922 the case was taken up for hearing by the learned Magistrates. The complainant was absent but Bindra was present on that date. In consequence of this the complaint was dismissed for default in prosecution and consigned to records. On the same date Musammat Bhagwanta again filed a complaint against five persons including Bindra, the applicant, before the same Magistrates. This complaint was substantially founded on the same facts which were the basis of the previous complaint. On the 19th April 1923 the Magistrate decided that the second complaint was not maintainable in view of the order passed in respect of the first complaint so long as that order subsisted and was not set aside on revision. They, therefore, dismissed the second complaint. Musammat Bhagwanta was aggrieved with this order of the Magistrates. She filed an application to the District Magistrate of Gonda under section 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, praying that the order of the Magistrates be set aside and an order directing further inquiry be passed. The learned District Magistrate has accepted that application and directed that the complaint may be inquired into. The application before me impugnes the legality of the order of the learned Magistrate.

I am of opinion that the application must be allowed. The original complaint of Musammat Bhagwanta disclosed a summons case and the order of the Bench of the Honorary Magistrates, dismissing the complaint for default in prosecution, must be taken to have been passed under section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Unfortunately that order neither mentions section 247 of the Code, as one under which it was passed, nor it is in terms of that section. This, however, cannot stop the application of that section to the facts of the case. The order of dismissal for default was, therefore, tantamount to an order of acquittal as one contemplated by the provisions of that section. The learned District Magistrate seems to have acted under section 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. That section gave him jurisdiction merely to call for and examine the record of the case for the purpose of satisfying himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of the finding or order passed therein. He had no jurisdiction either under that section or under any other section of the Code to set aside an order of acquittal passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction under section 247 of the same Code. His powers of directing further inquiry into any complaint are limited to the cases mentioned in section 436 of the Code. An order passed under section 247 of the Code does not fall within the purview of section 436.

I, therefore, accept the application and set aside the order of the learned

District Magistrate dated the 16th June 1923.

G. H. Application accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION NO. 374 OF 1923.

December 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Odgers and Mr. Justice Wallace.

NATARAJA PILLAI—PETITIONER

versus

RANGASWAMY PILLAI AND OTHERS—COUNTER-PETITIONERS—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act XVIII of 1923), s. 195—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195 (6)—Sanction to prosecute—Sanction proceedings under amending Act—Petition to set aside order revoking sanction—Appeal under old Act—Interpretation of Statutes—Procedure Law, alteration of—Retrospective effect—Appeal, right of, if affected.

A High Court cannot entertain sanction proceedings under the Criminal Procedure Code, as amended by Act XVIII of 1923. Therefore, a petition to set aside an order (passed under the old Act of 1898) revoking an order for sanction to prosecute does not lie to a High Court. [p. 298, col. 1.]

Section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, did not give a right of appeal. [p. 298, col. 1.]

The amendment of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, by Act XVIII of 1923, has effected only an alteration in procedure. [p. 297, col. 2.]

Per Odgers, J.—A new procedure affects bygone transactions and alterations in procedure are always retrospective. [p. 297, col. 2.]

Gardner v. Lucas, (1878) 3 A. C. 582 at p. 603, relied upon.

Where the right of appeal is given by law a suitor cannot be deprived of that right, in a pending action, by an alteration of the law. [p. 298, col. 1.]

Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving, (1905) A. C. 369; 74 L. J. P. C. 77; 92 L. T. 738; 21 T. L. R. 513, relied upon.

Petition praying that in the circumstances stated therein the High Court will be pleased to set aside the order, dated the 24th April 1923, of the Court of the Additional District Magistrate, Tanjore, in Criminal Miscellaneous Petition No. 17 of 1923, revoking the sanction accorded for the prosecution of the respondents herein by the order of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Tanjore, in M. C. No. 48 of 1921.

Mr. K. S. Jayarama Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. V. L. Ethiraj, for Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

Mr. A. V. Viswanatha Sastri, for Respondents Nos. 1 to 3.

ORDER.

Odgers, J.—This is an application to set aside the order of the Additional District Magistrate of Tanjore wherein he revoked the sanction to prosecute the respondents granted by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Tanjore. The application is under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code which has been amended by Act XVIII of 1923. The old section allowed applications to be made by a private party. This has now been abolished by the amended section and no Court can take cognizance of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 of the Indian Penal Code, except on the complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, etc., or of the Court when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to any proceeding in that Court. Mr. A. V. Viswanatha Sastriar, who appears for the respondents, takes more than one preliminary objection. We have only heard him so far on one, and that is the question whether sanction proceedings can now be entertained under the Criminal Procedure Code as amended. Mr. Viswanatha Sastriar maintains that this is not an appeal under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, and that the amendment of that section has effected an alteration in procedure. Now it is settled law that new procedure affects bygone transactions and alterations in procedure are always retrospective [Gardner v. Lucas (1).] It is conceded by Mr. K. S. Jayarama Aiyar for the petitioner that if this is a matter of procedure, the contention of the other side is correct. Mr. Jayarama Aiyar, how-

(1) (1878) 3 A. C. 582 at p. 603.

ever, contends that there is a right of appeal given under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, itself and this section is self-contained and independent of, or additional to, any other right of appeal given by the Code. If this is an appeal than the right of appeal inhered in the parties at the time the original application for sanction was made, which was on or before the 8th December 1921, for it is clear law that you cannot deprive a suitor of a right in a pending action of an appeal to a superior Tribunal which belonged to him as of right [Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving (2)] so that, if this is an appeal, we can hear the notice; if this is not an appeal, but a mere matter of procedure, then alterations in procedure being retrospective, we are not at liberty to entertain it. That this is not an appeal under the ordinary appellate chapters of the Code Chapters XXXI and XXXII is clear from the ruling in Bapu v. Bapu (3). That was a decision of the Full Bench where the Court said they were not prepared to dissent from the conclusion arrived at by the Full Bench in Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4). They added "we think, however, the power conferred upon this Court by section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code, is not a part of the appellate and revisional jurisdiction of this Court conferred by Chapters XXXI and XXXII of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is a special power conferred by section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code. They decided that when the Judges are equally divided on a question under section 195 the matter is governed by section 36 of the Letters Patent and not by section 429 or 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The bearing of this case on the case in Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4) will be considered in a moment. Meantime it is instructive to refer to the opinions of the Referring Judges because, in the first instance there were differing judgments and also an order of reference to the Full Bench, in all of which the matter was considered in some detail. Sundara Aiyar, J., in his first opinion held that clauses 6 and 7 of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, do not provide in terms that an appeal lies from an order granting or refusing sanction, nor does Chapter XXXI, relating to appeals, provide that an appeal shall lie from such an order, that the power of the superior Court under these clauses is similar to what it possesses in appeals and that the same may be said of the powers of the High Court in proceedings in revision. As to the language of section 429, Criminal Procedure Code, the learned Judge was of opinion that the language referring to the powers of a Court of Appeal under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, was employed "only because it is the Court to which an appeal lies from the decisions of the Court granting the sanction that has got power to revoke a sanction or to give a sanction refused by an inferior Court." Spencer, J., also held that there was no rule of law which subjects applications made under the special provisions of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, to the periods of limitation contained in the Limitation Act. The learned Judges, therefore, in their first judgment both concurred that an application under section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code, cannot strictly be regarded as an appeal. To come to the Full Bench decision in Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4) that case decided that the right of appeal conferred by section 195, (6), Criminal Procedure Code as read with sub-clause 7 is not restricted to a right of appeal to the Appellate Court to which the Court of first instace is immediately subordinate. It also decided that a revocation of a sanction is a refusal of a sanction in the same way as an order confirming a grant of a sanction is a giving of a sanction for the purposes of the section. Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4) followed Palaniappa Chetti v. Annamalai Chetti (5) where it was held that "under sub-section (6) a petition by way of

(2) (1905) A. C. 369; 74 L. J P C 77; 92 L. T. 738; 21 T. L. R. 513.

(3) 14 Ind Cas 305; 39 M 750; 11 M L. T. 367; (1912) M W. N 499; 22 M. L. J 419; 13 Cr. L. J. 209

(4) 30 M. 382; 2 M L. T. 239; 17 M. L. J 266; 6 Cr. L J. 102.

(5) 27 M 223; 14 M L J 74; 1 Cr L J 321; 2 Weir 208 & 577.

appeal lies to the High Court in every case in which a Civil or a Criminal Court subordinate to it within the meaning of sub-section 7 (a) gives or refuses a sanction whether in respect of an offence committed before it or in respect of one committed before a Court subordinate to it, and in the latter case, whether it gives a sanction refused by the Subordinate Court or revokes a sanction accorded by such Court. In all these three cases it is to be noted that the main question before the Court was, put shortly, whether there was one right of appeal or more than one, and what Palaniappa Chetti v. Annamalai Chetti (5) and Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4) decided is that in such a case there is more than one right of appeal. This is the point on which Bapu v. Bapu (3) confirmed Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4). As stated above Bapu v. Bapu (3) went further and held that the power conferred by section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code, is not part of the appellate and revisional jurisdiction conferred by Chapters XXXI and XXXII, Criminal Procedure Code. Section 404, Criminal Procedure Code says that: "No appeal shall lie from any judgment or order ....except as provided for by this Code." It is, therefore, necessary in my opinion to find a distinct and definite right of appeal given by section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, itself before it can be assumed that any such right of appeal exists. Now, sub-section 6 says that "any sanction....may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate etc." The wording itself seems to point to an original refusal or an original grant by the High Court as a superior authority itself. Sadasiva Aiyar, J., in In re Gaddam Penchulu Reddi (6) says that the power given by section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code to the superior "authority" is a specific statutory power. Though it is usual to call the application to the superior authority a petition of appeal, the learned Judge doubted whether it could be called an appeal, and in In re Subbasari (7) the same learned Judge was inclined to hold that the application to the Appellate Court to revoke or grant a sanction granted or refused is not an appeal, but an original application. In Public Prosecutor v. Raier Unithri (8) it was said that a confirmation of sanction by the Appellate Court is equivalent to a fresh grant of sanction by that Court. No doubt, section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, in speaking of the High Court's powers of revision, confers on the Court any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by sections 195 etc. But, I am of opinion, which I think is supported by authority quoted above, that the "Court of Appeal" referred to is only a designation of the superior authority to which application for revocation or grant is to be made. Further, it will be noted that section 429, Criminal Procedure Code, which provides for a difference of opinion between Judges composing the Court of Appeal is not confined to appeals under Chapter XXXI, whereas section 428 (1), Criminal Procedure Code deals with appeals under "this Chapter." This distinction is important in relation to the decision in Bapu v. Bapu (3) which held that clause 36 of the Letters Patent applied and not section 429, Criminal Procedure Code, on a difference of opinion between the Judges composing the superior Court to which application is made under section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code. Further I am of opinion that the alterations made by the amendments to the Code are merely alterations of procedure. Prosecutions for various offences committed in relation to proceedings before public servants or Courts are still punishable but those proceedings are to be initiated on complaints either of the public servants or the Courts concerned themselves and not on the application for sanction to prosecute by a private

(6) 48 Ind Cas. 890; 42 M. 96 at p 100; 35 M. L. J. 686; 20 Cr. L. J. 90; (1918) M. W. N. 68; 9 L. W. 237.

(7) 61 Ind Cas 228; 44 M 47; 12 L. W. 605; 22 Cr. L. J 372.

(8) 24 Ind. Cas 145; 26 M. L J. 511; 15 M. L. T. 403; 15 Cr. L. J. 409.

party. The public servant or Court will still generally be set in motion by the party aggrieved though of course it will be open to either to take proceedings suo motu.

For these reasons I am of opinion that no appeal is provided for in the Code under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code and further that the amendments made affect only procedure. We have, therefore, since the amendment no power to entertain this petition, which must be dismissed.

Wallace, J.—This is a petition to set aside an order of the Additional District Magistrate, Tanjore, revoking the sanction granted by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Tanjore, for the prosecution of the respondents for an offence under section 188, Indian Penal Code.

A preliminary legal point is raised by the respondents, namely that, since the new amended Criminal Procedure Code has abolished such sanctions and since that is now the law in force in this case, this petition does not lie. The petitioner rejoins that the right to move this Court for sanction is of the nature of a substantive right, such as a right of appeal which cannot be taken away by any alteration of the processual law. I think the respondents' contention must be upheld for two reasons; first that there is no substantive right now taken away; and the right conferred by the old section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code is not a right in the nature of a right of appeal; and secondly, to comply with the petitioner's request and grant a sanction now, would be a futile proceeding since no Court can now take cognizance of complaints under any such sanction.

To take the first point the substantive right which the petitioner possesses is the right of setting up a criminal prosecution in train against a party who has committed a breach of an order under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code. The necessary preliminary under the old section 195 (1) to such a prosecution was the obtaining by the party of a sanction or the presentation of a complaint by a public servant named therein. Now the method of proceeding by first obtaining a sanction has been abolished. Clearly the change is a change in the processual law and does not deprive petitioner of his substantive right to set the Criminal Law in motion. The petitioner still has a method under the new procedure for setting the law in motion, since he may apply to the public servant, or any authority to whom that public servant is subordinate to present a complaint.

Such an application as is now before us is not defined anywhere in the old Criminal Procedure Code as an appeal; nor do any provisions of Chapter XXXI extend to it. The petitioner points out that under section 439, old Criminal Procedure Code, it was laid down that the High Court may in proceeding under that section exercise any of the rights conferred on "a Court of Appeal" by sections 195 etc., which seems to imply that section 195 confers some powers of the nature of appellate powers on a superior Court and the omission of section 195 in the new section 439 emphasises the fact that the phrase "Court of Appeal" as hitherto used had reference to the powers conferred on Courts in the matter of sanctions now abolished. However the question whether in taking proceedings under the old section 195 (6), this Court is a Court of Appeal has been fully discussed in the Full Bench case of this Court reported as Bapu v. Bapu (3) which lays down that the power exercised under the old section 195 (6) is neither an appellate nor a revisional power but a special power. The previous rulings of this Court which used the words "appeal" and "Appellate Court" with reference to these powers, for example, In re Paree Kunhammad (9); In re Muthukudam Pillai (10); Palaniappa Chetty v. Annamalai Chetti (5), Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (4), Jamna Das v. Sabapathy Chetti (11) must, therefore, be taken to have been using these words loosely and not with strict technical accuracy. Section 439 also indicates plainly enough

(9) 26 M. 116; 2 Weir 189
(10) 26 M. 190; 2 Weir 200.
(11) 12 Ind. Cas. 521; 36 M. 138; 10 M. L. T. 278; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 259; 21 M. L. J. 1074; 12 Cr. L. J. 545.

that the powers of this Court as a Court of Appeal under the old section 195 (6) are to be found in that section alone and are limited to the terms of that section. It is significant that there was no other section which laid down that the powers of the High Court under the old section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code, consisted of any of the powers which were under the old sections 423, 426, 427 and 428, the other sections quoted in section 439 conferred on it. Another significant fact is that nowhere was any period of limitation fixed for petitions under section 195 (6) whereas a regular right of appeal has always a defined period fixed within which it must be exercised. Old section 195 (6) to my mind indicates that in a case like the present, the power of the Court as a "Court of Appeal", to adopt the phraseology of old section 439, is limited to granting a sanction refused by the lower Appellate Court, which sanction is a fresh sanction and is not a revival or resuscitation of the original sanction granted by the original Court which had been revoked by the lower Appellate Court. No reportable case controverting this view has been quoted to us. There is no reported case in this Presidency, so far as I know, which e. g., lays down that when a sanction has been granted and revoked and again granted, the six months are to date from the date of the original grant as if that had been resuscitated. The case reported as In re Muthukudam Pillai (10) is not in point as there the original sanction had never been interfered with.

The same result will be obtained by considering the matter from another point of view. Assuming, without deciding, petitioner's contention that for the purposes of a petition under old section 195 (6) the District Magistrate as a public servant is within the meaning of section 195 (1) subordinate to this Court, it is clear that petitioner might have applied in the first instance in this Court for the sanction he now seeks. It follows that his right to move this Court does not depend on there being in existence an order against him against which he can "appeal." Such right as was given him by the section was a right to apply to this Court for a sanction, irrespective of what had happened to similar application in any Court subordinate to this Court.

For the above reasons I hold that petitioner's right to apply for a sanction is purely a matter of processual law and not a right of the nature of a right of appeal.

As to the second point, it rests on petitioner's contention that the grant of sanction by this Court will restore the sanction of the Original Court so as to enable the prosecution already instituted on that sanction to continue from where it left off when the sanction was revoked; that is, in his view, the revocation of sanction has not destroyed the sanction but merely holds it in abeyance if and while an appeal is pending. The petitioner goes further and contends that, since the Criminal Procedure Code does not contamplate a case once begun ending merely because a requisite sanction had not been obtained or because the sanction on which it was instituted has been revoked, no subsequent discovery of absence of sanction or revocation of sanction can interfere with its jurisdiction. Such a position, I must hold to be untenable, since it would imply that the right to have a sanction revoked would be quite futile, if a complaint based on a sanction had already been put in, since on this theory any subsequent revocation would not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed with the trial of the complaint already filed. The petitioner appeals to section 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code for his position; but it does not really help him since that section has no application to cases under trial when it is discovered that no sanction exists or that the sanction given has been revoked. Obviously the Court has power to discharge or acquit an accused person of a charge which requires previous sanction if, in the course of the trial and before judgment is pronounced, it is brought to its notice that no sanction has been obtained, and I can see no difference between such a case and a case where the sanction on which the trial is proceeding has been set aside during the trial. Revocation of a sanction must have some legal effect and can only imply, to my mind, that the prosecution started under the sanction can proceed no further and has come to an end.

For reasons, already given, I have held that the petitioner can now ask and is now asking this Court only to grant a fresh sanction and that this is not a petition of appeal against, or a petition to revise, any order of the lower Court, and for reasons now given I hold that the original sanction given has by the revocation been swept away for ever and cannot be revived by any order on this petition.

The new Criminal Procedure Code has abolished the right to present such a petition and this petition must be heard under the existing processual law. That law now forbids any prosecution being instituted merely upon a sanction granted to a private party. It follows then that even if this Court does grant the petitioner the sanction that he seeks, such a sanction would be of no avail for instituting any prosecution; and this is an additional reason for refusing to grant the petitioner the sanction which he seeks, since to grant it would be a merely empty formal proceeding of no use whatever to the potitioner.

As I have already pointed out the petitioner is not left without a remedy since it is still open to him to move the authority to whom the Additional District Magistrate is subordinate within the meaning of section 195 (1) to present a complaint on which the respondents may be prosecuted for their disobedience of the order passed by the original public servant.

I, therefore, agree that the petitioner's petition is not maintainable and must be dismissed.

V. N. V.

S. D. Petition dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION No. 97 OF 1923.

November 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

SITAL DIN AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 110—Substantive offence not proved—Proceedings under s. 110, whether proper.

Where a man has been arrested on a substantive charge (e.g., of dacoity) but released for the reason that that charge cannot be sustained, the prosecution under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure on the same evidence on which the charge for the substantive offence was founded or on evidence which arises as a natural sequal to the charge of the substantive offence, is not desirable. [p. 303, col. 1.]

Application against an order of the District Magistrate, Rai Bareli, dated the 21st July 1923, confirming that of the Magistrate, First Class, Rai Bareli, dated the 25th June 1923.

Mr. H. K. Ghose, for the Applicants.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision. These applicants have been convicted under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and each has been ordered to furnish two sureties in Rs. 100 each and execute a personal bond in Rs. 200 as security for their good behavior for a period of one year. The judgment of the Court of first instance is so full of details that we are all agreed here that the case could be decided with reference to that judgment. The whole of the evidence produced on behalf of the prosecution has been summarised in that judgment. Equally well that evidence has been set forth which was produced on behalf of the accused. I have gone through this judgment carefully and considered the resume of evidence stated as against the name of each of the witnesses. I find that there is a great mixture of admissible and inadmissible evidence. Some of this evidence, which was inadmissible, has been carefully eliminated by the learned Magistrate, CHINNIAH, In re.

There still remains evidence of the same character, on which, to a certain extent, the judgment of the learned Magistrate is based, though not wholly, for instance reference to the fact that as against two of the accused there exist history sheets. Be that, as it may, there still remains ample evidence on the record which is admissible in law and is enough to support the order passed against these applicants under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The law on the subject as to what is evidence of general repute has so repeatedly been considered and stated in several rulings of this Court that it will serve no useful purpose to repeat once more the substance of those decisions. The conviction, therefore, cannot be set aside on the ground that it is based on purely inadmissible evidence.

It appears, that these applicants were arrested on a charge of dacoity, but were released under section 169 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and soon after their release, they were arrested to stand their trial under section 110 of the Code. Now there are decisions of this Court expressing the opinion, that where a man has been arrested on a substantive charge but released for the reason that that charge could not be sustained, a prosecution under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure on the same evidence on which the charge for the substantive offence was founded or on evidence which arose as a natural sequel to the charge of the substantive offence was not desirable. I respectfully say that I agree with that opinion. In this case, however, the evidence in support of the charge under section 110 is not only antecedent to the charge for the dacoity as against these applicants but is wholly independent of it.

It was also urged, that there was a large number of defence witnesses, who have been accepted by the Court of first instance as furnishing unimpeachable testimony in respect of the good character of the accused. Surely the mere fact that the witnesses on the side of the defence are more in number than on the side of the prosecution can be no ground for rejecting the latter in favour of the former. It must be the quality of the evidence on which the judgment of the Court should be founded. The evidence of the defence witnesses, though in some respects unimpeachable was not accepted by the Magistrate as sufficient to demolish the evidence produced on the side of the prosecution and I, sitting here as a Court of revision, decline to question the opinion of the Court of first instance in respect of sufficiency or insufficiency of evidence. The application fails and is dismissed.

Application dismissed.

S. D.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE NO. 382 OF 1923.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 286 OF 1923.)

November 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

In re CHINNIAH alias KRISHNASWAMI NAIDU—ACCUSED NO. 1—PETITIONER.

Madras Towns Nuisances Act (III of 1889), s. 6—"Common gaming house," what is.

A common gaming house is one in which a large number of persons are invited habitually to congregate for the purpose of gaming and it makes no difference that the use of the house and the gaming therein was limited to the subscribers and members of the club and that it was not open to all persons who might be desirous of using the same. [p. 304, col. 1.]

In re Srinivasa Chary, 1 Weir 917; Jenks v. Turpin, (1884) 13 Q. B. D. 505; 53 L. J. M. C. 161; 50 L. T. 808; 15 Cox C. C. 486; 49 J. P. 20 and 15 Halbsbury 217, followed.

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the First Class, Magistrate, Chittoor Town, in Bench Case No. 69 of 1923.

Mr. V. Viswanatha Sastriar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. N. Ganapathi, for Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The offence with which the accused is charged is that of keeping a common gaming house, punishable under section 6 of Madras Act III of 1889. A common gaming house is defined thus in 15 Halsbury 217: "It is one in which a large number of persons are invited habitually to congregate for the purpose of gaming." In Jenks v. Turpin (1) Hawkins, J., says: "Neither.... do I think that it makes any difference that the use of the house and the gaming therein was limited to the subscribers and members of the club and that it was not open to all persons who might be desirous of using the same. If this could be set up as a defence to an indictment, any indictment for keeping a common gaming house might be defeated." I am willing to accept this statement of the law and I do not think that this is at variance with that contained in In re Srinivasa Chary (2) where the learned Judge Sir Arthur Collins, C. J., and Parker, J., observe "In the absence of any technical definition, the term 'common gaming house,' must at least imply that the house was one used as a place of public resort."

They do not say what a place of public resort is and, in the circumstances, I am not prepared to hold that the definition given in the Madras case is necessarily opposed to that given in the English case and in Halsbury.

The next question is, has the evidence in this case established that the accused keeps a gaming house in this sense? P. W. No. 3, a dismissed and disreputable Police Constable, no doubt says: "The accused is the owner of house. The accused collects the pool for himself for every 'rung' or 'run' for the use o his house and for the cost of the cards. The accused benefits up to Rs. 12 a day, never less than Rs. 5." It is extremely unsafe to act upon the uncorroborated testimony of a witness of this sort. He admits that he was himself taking part in the game and then turned an informer at the request of the Police. The only independent witness who speaks to the transaction from personal knowledge is P. W. No. 4 and he hopelessly contradicts P. W. No. 3, because, according to the former the accused was himself a player and he took money from the pool whenever he happened to be the winner. P. W. No. 4's station in life is not such as to inspire confidence, and I am not prepared, therefore, to act upon evidence of this kind and convict the accused.

It is somewhat remarkable that the Police should have attempted to prove a case of this nature by such worthless evidence, when, according to them, it is a notorious fact that the accused keeps a common gaming house, several persons have from time to time complained and the gaming house has been kept for about 10 years previous to the prosecution.

In the circumstances, I set aside the conviction and direct the fine, if it has been collected, to be refunded to the accused. The order as to confiscation is also set aside.

Conviction set aside.

V. N. V.

(1) (1884) 13 Q. B.D. 505; 53 L. J. M. C. 161; 50 L. T. 808; 15 Cox C. C. 486; 49 J. P. 20.
(2) 1 Weir 917.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 476 OF 1922.

July 23, 1923.

Present:— Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

LAXMAN MANKAR KASAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAVJI DHANSING PATIL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Vendor and purchaser—Sale, oral—Possession—Subsequent sale by registered deed—Subsequent vendee, whether can eject prior vendee—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54.

A purchaser of land under an oral sale who has paid the consideration for the sale and has been put in possession cannot be ejected by a subsequent purchaser of the property under a registered sale-deed who takes with notice of the sale in favour of the prior purchaser. It is immaterial that on the date of the suit for ejectment the remedy of the prior purchaser by way of specific performance of the contract of sale in his favour had become barred by time. [p. 306, col. 1.]

Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa, 66 Ind. Cas. 868; 46 B. 722; 24 Bom. L. R. 242; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 9, followed.

Lalchand v. Lakshman, 28 B. 466; 6 Bom. L. R. 510, distinguished.

Bapu Appaji v. Kashinath Sadoba, 39 Ind. Cas. 103; 41 B. 438; 19 Bom. L. R. 100 (F. B.), referred to.

Second appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, A. P., at Nasik, in Appeal No. 110 of 1921, reversing a decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Malegaon, in Civil Suit No. 157 of 1920.

Mr. R. J. Thakor, for the Appellant.

Mr. R. G. Pradhan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, Ag. C. J.—The few facts which have given rise to this appeal are these. The original owner of the property orally sold the land in suit to defendant No. 1 on July 4, 1911, for Rs. 150. The defendant No. 1 was put in possession and the consideration was paid, but there was no registered conveyance to complete the sale as required by section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act. On January 19, 1920, the owner, who is defendant No. 2, sold this very land to the present plaintiff for Rs. 1,000. In that sale-deed there is the following recital:—

"In all Rs. 1,000 I have received as consideration. By this document I permanently sell to you for the above amount the below-mentioned immoveable property consisting of one field called 'Sonare' (being) jirait land belonging to me by right of ownership which has now been given under oral sale to Ravji Dhansing Patil has been in his possession and enjoyment."

It also appears that in 1911 when there was this oral sale without the necessary conveyance, there was mutation of names in favour of defendant No. 1.

The present suit was filed by the plaintiff on June 1, 1920. He based his claim on the sale-deed in his favour by defendant No. 2, and he was prepared to pay to defendant No. 1 Rs. 150, in pursuance of the conditions in his sale-deed, admitted to have been received by defendant No. 2 from defendant No. 1.

The Trial Court came to the conclusion that the title of defendant No. 1 was not proved, as there was no registered conveyance in his favour, and as the oral transaction between defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 was a mortgage. Accordingly a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff for possession of property on his paying Rs. 150 to defendant No. 1.

The defendant No. 1 appealed to the District Court, and the learned First Class Subordinate Judge, with appellate powers, who heard the appeal, reversed that decree and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. He came to the conclusion that the transaction between defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was a sale, though it was not completed by a registered conveyance. He definitely found against the theory of that transaction being a mortgage. The learned Judge also found that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession under the circumstances as defendant No. 1 was entitled to rely upon his possession and the payment of consideration.

The plaintiff has appealed to this Court, and two points have been urged on his behalf: first, that the transaction of 1911 between defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was really a mortgage and not a sale. It is also urged that the Purshis given by the plaintiff's Pleader, Exhibit 29 in the case, has been misconstrued by the lower Appellate Court. Secondly, it is urged that even if it be a sale, the claim for specific performance of the agreement for sale being barred at the date of the suit, the defendant cannot resist the plaintiff's claim for possession based upon a completed title. In support of this contention reliance is placed upon the decision in Lalchand v. Lakshman (1); and it is urged that the subsequent Full Bench decision in the case of Bapu Appaji v. Kashinath Sadoba (2), does not apply to the facts of this case, and that the subsequent interpretation of that decision in Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa (3), should not be accepted as it is inconsistent with the decision in Lalchand v. Lakshman (1).

As regards the first point, we think that the finding of the lower Appellate Court should be accepted as a finding of fact. It is quite true that the learned Judge has referred to the Purshis in his judgment, but the finding on this point is not based upon the Purshis. Even taking the Purshis to mean what the learned Pleader for the appellant contends it means, the finding of the lower Appellate Court cannot be disturbed. It is really a finding of fact based upon the circumstances and the evidence in the case. Having regard to the expression used in the sale-deed of January, 1920 it was open to the lower Appellate Court to come to the conclusion that the transaction was intended to be a sale, and not a mortgage. The very fact that the parties did nothing for nearly eight years shows that it was intended to be a sale. It is quite true that it was not completed by a registered conveyance, as it should have been, according to law.

This gives rise to the second point in the case to which I have referred. We think, however, that the decision in Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa (3), would clearly apply to the case. The fact that at the date of the suit the claim for specific performance was barred, even assuming it to have been barred, would not be a sufficient answer to the defendant's plea that he is entitled to rely upon his possession which he got in pursuance of the agreement for sale. The only difference between the case of Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa (3), and the present case is that in the former case the suit was filed by the original vendor and in the present case the suit is filed by the purchaser from the original vendor. But on principle the position is exactly the same, and if defendant No. 2 could not have successfully sued defendant No. 1 in 1920, I do not see how the plaintiff could do so on the sale-deed from defendant No. 2. The decision in Lalchand v. Lakshman (1) has been distinguished on the special facts of that case. I am unable to accept the contention that there is necessarily a conflict between that case and the decision in Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa (3). When the claim for specific performance is definitely negatived by the Court the position of the defendant in possession without a registered conveyance may be different. The authority of Lalchand v. Lakshman (1) is much shaken by the subsequent decisions and its scope must be limited to the facts of that case. Whether in a case, which on facts would be indistinguishable from that case, it should be followed or not must be considered when the question arises. The decision of the lower Appellate Court is right. I would confirm the decree of that Court and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Coyajee, J.—I agree.

Decree confirmed.

Z. K.

(1) 28 B. 466; 6 Bom. L. R. 510.
(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 103; 41 B. 438; 19 Bom. L. R. 100 (F. B.).
(3) 66 Ind. Cas. 868; 46 B. 722; 24 Bom. L. R. 242; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 9.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SMALL CAUSE REVISION APPLICATION NO. 17 OF 1922.

March 21, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Khanhaiya Lal, J. C.

MIHI LAL—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

BABU LAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT NO. 1—NON-APPLICANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2, 52—Legal representative—Personal decree.

ATMARAM v. BALAJI RAGHUNATH.

Where a person takes possession of the property of a deceased person, he can be made personally liable, as a legal representative, to the extent of the property of the deceased which he has appropriated or disposed of or which may still be in his possession.

Nathuram Siviji Sett v. Kutti Haji, 20 M. 446; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S) 316, relied on.

Mr. P. C. Gupta, for the Applicant.

Mr. H. D. Chandra, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—Bhagwandin owed certain money and died without repaying the same. He left no widow or issue. The applicant and another person took possession of his moveable property including bullocks and other things. They allege that they gave a portion thereof to certain persons to whom arrears of rent are alleged to have been due. In the suits brought by the creditor for the recovery of money due to him by Bhagwandin, the defence of the applicant was that he was not in possession of any assets of the deceased and was not his heir but the Court below found that he had taken possession of the assets of the deceased along with another person, the value of which was sufficient to pay the debts due by the deceased, and that they had disposed of a portion of the property without any right. It passed a decree accordingly against the applicant and the other person.

In view of section 52 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the observations in Nathuram Siviji Sett v. Kutti Haji (1), the applicant can be made personally liable as a legal representative to the extent of the property of the deceased which he has appropriated or disposed of or which may still be in his possession. Their value has been found to exceed the debts.

The application is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

N. H.

Application dismissed.

(1) 20 M. 446; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 316.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 528 OF 1922.

July 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett and Mr. Justice Coyajee

ATMARAM BHILA BHATKAR—APPELLANT

versus

BALAJI RAGHUNATH JOSHI—RESPONDENT.

Possessory title—Ejectment suit against person having no title.

A person who has been in possession of property for over twelve years without a title is entitled to maintain a suit for ejectment of a person who has wrongfully dispossessed him from the property and who has no title to it. [p. 309, col. 1.]

Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Ghous, 20 I. A. 99; 20 C. 834; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 305; 17 Ind. Jur. 321; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561 (P. C.); Pemraj Bhavaniram v. Narayan Shivaram Khisti, 6 B. 215; 6 Ind. Jur. 416; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 601, followed.

Dharani Kanta v. Gabar Ali, 18 Ind. Cas. 17; 15 Bom. L. R. 445; 13 M. L. T. 185; (1913) M. W. N. 157; 17 C. W. N. 389; 17 C. L. J. 277; 25 M. L. J. 95 (P. C.), distinguished.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Ratnagiri, in Appeal No. 282 of 1920, confirming a decree passed by the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ratnagiri, in Civil Suit No. 101 of 1919.

Mr. A. G. Desai, for Mr. T. N. Walavalkar, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Coyajee, J.—The plaintiff (respondent before us), who is one of two Khoti sharers in the village of Panhali, brought this suit to recover possession of certain lands which formed part of an occupancy tenancy khata. The lands comprised in that khata originally belonged to the family of the Bhatkar defendants (Nos. 1 to 7). Plaintiff's case is this. At a partition effected in or about the year 1890, between the first defendant Dhana and his three brothers, Shiva, Ragho and Zil, the suit lands fell to the share of Dhana. In 1895, they were put up to sale in execution of a money-decree passed against Dhana, and purchased by the eighth defendant. In 1899, he obtained possession of the lands through the Court and in 1901 surrendered them to the plaintiff. Since then, plaintiff had been in continuous possession and enjoyment of the lands until 1916 when he was wrongfully dispossessed by defendants Nos. 2 to 7.

The first defendant Dhana did not resist the plaintiff's claim. It was contested by the third defendant (now appellant) who is a son of Zil. He contended that at the said partition Dhana did not get any share at all in the family estate, and was never in possession of the suit lands; the auction-sale was void, being in contravention of section 9 of the Khoti Settlement Act, 1880; the auction-purchaser never obtained possession of the lands; and finally he did not admit that plaintiff had ever been in possession.

On those pleadings and on the evidence adduced by the parties the learned Appellate Judge, in agreement with the Trial Judge, held that after the said partition Dhana had been in possession and enjoyment of the lands in suit, that he never objected either to the auction-sale or to the purchaser taking possession; that in 1911 he himself executed a rent-note in favour of the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff came into actual possession of the lands in 1901 and continued therein until 1916 when he was dispossessed by defendant No. 3 who had no title to those lands. He refers to certain rent-notes relied on by the plaintiff and says :—

"They prove Dhana's possession of the bagayet land as plaintiff's tenant. Taking this along with the sale-certificate and the tabapatti the clear inference is that all the suit lands belonged to Dhana and passed to the possession first of defendant No. 8 and then of plaintiff. Defendant No. 3 has lately come back from Bombay and he has taken possession...of the suit property."

As for the validity of the auction-sale the Judge observes :—

"From the deposition of the other Khoti sharer (Exhibit 53) and the admission of defendant No. 3 in his examination-in-chief that the rent used to be paid to plaintiff, I conclude that the suit-lands are wholly in the Khoti share of plaintiff. He brought these lands to sale and consequently his consent to alienation may be presumed. In fact all these transactions took place with the consent of the Khot plaintiff and the permanent tenant Dhana. Section 9 therefore of the Khoti Act does not stand in plaintiff's way."

The ninth section, as it now stands, is the result of Amending Act VIII of 1912; and it was urged before us on the appellant's behalf that the auction-sale having taken place in 1908 its legality should be determined according to the provisions of that section as it then was. It seems to me, however, that upon the concurrent findings of facts to which I have above alluded, that question has lost all its importance. It is not shown that the lands in suit ever stood in Dhana's khata. When the property was put up to sale in 1908 neither he nor any other person offered any objection. The purchaser having received possession through the intervention of the Court surrendered it to the plaintiff Khot in 1901. Later, Dhana himself executed the rent-note Exhibit 39 in his favour. It was not until 1916 that he was wrongfully dispossessed by defendant No. 3 who has no title whatever to these lands. It was this dispossession which led to certain proceedings which culminated in this suit. Assuming then that the auction-sale was void, as being in defiance of the provisions of the said Act, plaintiff has been in possession for about fifteen years without a title. In my opinion, this long possession is sufficient to enable him to eject the third defendant. This adverse possession has extinguished Dhana's right to the actual possession of the land. It may be that it did not also operate to annihilate his occupancy rights (if any) which it was competent to him to transfer to the Khot: Vishnu Bhikaji Adhikari v. Babla Lakha Jathar (1). It is admitted, however, that the plaintiff alone has been recovering the rents all these years; and the other Khoti sharer (Exhibit 53) lays no claim to these lands. Dhana submitted to his interest being sold in 1895, and later took up the lands as plaintiff's tenant. He does not dispute the plaintiff's claim in these proceedings.

(1) 61 Ind. Cas. 594; 23 Bom. L. R. 411; 45 B. 1001.

It is, therefore, clear that if he possessed occupancy rights before 1895, he resigned the lands within the meaning of section 10 of the Act. But, however, that may be, we are now concerned not with Dhana but with defendant No. 3, who is a wrong-doer.

It is true that the plaintiff did allege title by sale-certificate; but he by his plaint also referred to and relied upon his long possession between 1901 and 1916. This possession, which by the concurrent findings of the lower Courts has been satisfactorily proved, entitles the plaintiff to maintain ejectment against the third defendant, who has no title, who is a wrong-doer, and who dispossessed him in or about 1916: Pemraj Bhavaniram v. Narayan Shivaram Khisti (2). The following pronouncement, made by the Privy Council in Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Ghous (3), is to the point:

"The possession of the plaintiff was sufficient evidence of title as owner against the defendant. By section 9 of the Specific Relief Act (Act I of 1877), if the plaintiff had been dispossessed otherwise than in due course of law, he could, by a suit instituted within six months from the date of the dispossession, have recovered possession, notwithstanding any other title that might be set up in such suit. If he could thus recover possession from a person who might be able to prove a title, it is certainly right and just that he should be able, against a person who has no title and is a mere wrong-doer, to obtain a declaration of title as owner, and an injunction to restrain the wrong-doer from interfering with his possession. The Appellate Court.....has dismissed the suit. Consequently, the defendant may continue to wilfully, improperly, and illegally interfere with the plaintiff's possession, as the learned Judges say he has done, and the plaintiff has no remedy. Their Lordships are of opinion that the suit should not have been dismissed."

(2) 6 B. 215; 6 Ind. Jur. 416; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 601.

(3) 20 I. A. 99; 20 C. 834; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 305; 17 Ind. Jur. 321; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561 (P. C.).

The learned Pleader for the appellant has relied on certain observations made by the Privy Council in Dharani Kanta v. Gabar Ali (4); he argues that those observations shew that in a case of the nature it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to prove his prior peaceful possession —he must also prove his title. I do not agree with him; those observations should be read in their context. In that case, plaintiffs as zemindars sued to eject the defendants from possession of seven puras or 592 bighas of land. In the course of their judgment their Lordships recorded their finding, which is important, in these terms (page 450*):

"The defendants-respondents were for more than twelve years before the commencement of this suit in possession of the seven puras or 592 bighas of land in dispute."

It was with reference to the facts so found that they made these observations on which reliance is now placed (page 451*):

"The suit is one for the ejectment of persons who admittedly were at the date of suit in possession of the seven puras of land from which it is sought to eject them. It lay upon the plaintiffs to prove not only a title as against the defendants to the possession, but to prove that the plaintiffs had been dispossessed or had discontinued to be in possession of the lands within the twelve years immediately preceding the commencement of the suit."

It is obvious that there is nothing either in these observations or elsewhere to indicate that their Lordships dissented from the principles laid down in Asher v. Whitlock (5). In the present case plaintiff had been in exclusive possession of the lands in suit for over twelve years when he was wrongfully dispossessed by the appellant.

For these reasons, I would affirm the decree and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Fawcett, J.— I agree.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 17; 15 Bom. L. R. 445; 13 M. L. T. 185; (1913) M. W. N. 157; 17 C. W. N. 389; 17 C. L. J. 277; 25 M. L. J. 95 (P. C.).

(5) (1866) 1 Q. B. 1; 35 L. J. Q. B. 17; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 925; 13 L. T. 254; 14 W. R. 26.

*Pages of 15 Bom. L. R.—[Ed.]

SARSUTI PRASAD v. EHTISHAM ALI.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 84 OF 1913.
PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL NO. 8 OF 1915.
April 11, 1922.

Present:—Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, J.C.,
Mr. Daniels, A. J. C., and
Mr. Ashworth, A. J. C.

SARSUTI PRASAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
M. EHTISHAM ALI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 22—Mortgage—Redemption suit—Accounts, method of— Appeal—Respondent whether can object to method agreed to by him—Estoppel—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 61—Appropriation of surplus profits—Construction of deed of further charge—Covenant to redeem along with earlier deeds, effect of—Covenant to pay interest out of pocket, effect of.

Plaintiff mortgaged with possession certain properties by two deeds of mortgage. Subsequently he executed three deeds of further charge one of which contained a provision for compound interest. In a suit for redemption the First Court disallowed compound interest and in the accounting which followed adopted the mode suggested by the plaintiff. In appeal the decision of the First Court was modified and compound interest was allowed. The plaintiff-respondent thereupon contended that a different method of accounting should be adopted:

Held, Per Kanhaiya Lal, J. C, and Ashworth, A. J. C. (Daniels, A. J. C. dissenting):—(1) that as soon as the Appellate Court set aside the decision of the First Court, in favour of a decision to award compound interest, the decision of the lower Court as to the method of accounting became adverse to the respondent and he could rely on O. XLI, r. 22, Civil Procedure Code, and claim to have the method of accounting adopted by the lower Court set aside; [p. 323, cols. & 12.]

(2) that whether the respondent could or could not claim a reversal of the method of accounting adopted by the lower Court, it was open to the Appellate Court to reverse the method as soon as it upset the decision of the Trial Court as to the nature of the interest to be allowed; [p. 323, col. 2.]

Per Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.—Where there are successive mortgages, the later ones qualifying or restricting the terms and conditions entered in the preceding ones, the rights of the parties must be governed, so far as may be, by the covenants as they ultimately stand. [p. 313, col. 1.]

There can be no estoppel in a matter of right accounting or true construction. A covenant by which a mortgagor binds himself to pay the mortgage-money out of his own pocket is a covenant of a non-essential nature and cannot be pleaded in bar of a set-off. A covenant in a deed of mortgage or further charge postponing the payment of earlier deeds till the last deed is paid does not prevent the payment of the latter, after it falls due, before the earlier deeds are paid. [p. 314, col. 2.]

Per Ashworth, A. J. C.—Where mortgaged property is made subject to a further charge, surplus profits in the hands of the mortgagee should, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, be used to liquidate the interest on the further charge in preference to liquidating other deeds which have no connection with the property. [p. 326, col. 1.]

Notwithstanding anything contained in section 61 of the Contract Act, in the absence of appropriation, payments of surpluses should be appropriated to interest before they are appropriated to principal on any particular debt. [p. 326, col. 1.]

In many cases where it is provided that a deed of further charge shall be paid up along with an earlier deed the meaning is nothing more than thatit shall not be paid up before. [p. 326, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Additional Judge, Hardoi, at Unao, dated the 20th March 1913.

Messrs. A. P. Sen and Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellants.

Messrs. M. Wasim and J. N. Chak, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.—This appeal was heard on the 8th November last and after the determination of the points raised an account was directed to be prepared in accordance with the findings arrived at. The account has since been prepared by the office, but the defendants-appellants have taken objection to its correctness.

The appeal arose out of a suit for redemption of certain mortgages and deeds of further charge, the terms of which have to be carefully examined in order to determine whether any money is due on the said transactions to either party.

The first mortgage was made on the 9th November 1873 and contained a provision that out of Rs. 244 per year, derivable from the profits of the bazar mortgaged, the mortgagee was to appropriate Rs. 180 towards the payment of interest due on the said deed and Rs. 24 on account of the salary of the chaukidar every year and pay the balance of Rs. 40 per year to the mortgagor. The time fixed for redemption was six years and the amount secured by the mortgage was Rs. 1,000 repayable with interest at Rs. 1-8-0 per cent. per mensem. The mortgagee realised the profits but he did not pay the sum of Rs. 40 per year, representing the surplus derived from the mortgaged property, to the mortgagor.

The second mortgage was made on the 19th September 1875 for Rs. 500 repayable with interest at Rs. 1-8-0 per cent. per mensem within six years. The property mortgaged comprised the remaining income of the bazar, amounting to Rs. 160 per year, together with all the zamindari rights appertaining thereto, and among other things a portion of field No. 497, yielding a profit of Rs. 9 per year. Out of the above amount the mortgagee was to appropriate Rs. 90 per year towards the interest due to him and keep the balance of Rs. 79 per year as surplus in his hands until it amounted to Rs. 500 which was the principal money secured by the mortgage.

If these mortgages stood alone, there would have been no difficulty in adjusting the account. But on the 4th of May 1876 the mortgagor executed a deed of further charge for Rs. 99 which was tacked on to the mortgage of the 9th November 1873. It contained a covenant that the mortgagee was to appropriate Rs. 18 per year on account of the interest, due on that deed, from the surplus, amounting to Rs. 40 per year, which the mortgagor was to receive from the mortgagee under the mortgage of the 9th November 1873. The mortgagor undertook to pay the principal money due on that deed at the time of the redemption of the previous mortgage. The effect of this deed of further charge was to leave with the mortgagee a surplus of only Rs. 22 per year with effect from the 4th May 1876.

This was followed by another deed of further charge, which was executed in lieu of Rs. 99, repayable with interest at Rs. 1-8-0 per cent. per mensem, on the 16th September 1876. The mortgagee was to appropriate Rs. 18 per year from the surplus left with him, and the mortgagor undertook to pay the principal money at the time of the redemption of the bazar mortgaged by him on the 9th November 1873.

There was another deed of further charge, executed on the 11th January 1878, in which both the properties, covered by the mortgages of the 9th November 1873 and the 19th September 1875, were mortgaged. It was executed in lieu of Rs. 375 repayable with interest at 2 per cent. per annum compoundable half yearly. There was a covenant for the payment of interest at an enhanced rate in case of default in the payment of interest every half year; but this covenant was found by the Court on the 8th November 1921 to be penal and unenforceable. By virtue of this deed, the mortgagor undertook not to redeem any of the mortgaged properties entered in both the deeds abovementioned and surrendered his right to take any surplus out of the income of the bazar until the principal and interest due on that deed were paid up. He further undertook to pay the money due thereon after the expiry of the term fixed by the mortgages of the 9th November 1873 and the 19th September 1875 along with the mortgage moneys due on the said deeds and on the two deeds of further charge of the 4th May 1876 and the 6th September 1876 already referred to.

The account, prepared by the office, does not accurately carry out the terms of the contract, embodied in the above transactions. The surplus referred to in the mortgage of the 19th September 1875 was, for instance, to accumulate till the entire principal sum secured by that mortgage was paid up; but the account prepared by the office credits it in satisfaction of the principal and interest payable on the deed of further charge of the 11th January 1878. The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs-respondents contends that by virtue of the last deed of further charge, the redemption of the mortgage of the 19th September 1875 was postponed till the money due on the last deed of further charge was paid up, but redemption implies the surrender of possession on full payment and is not the same thing as gradual set off by agreement as provided for by the terms of the mortgage. The delivery of possession might in such a case be postponed till the deed of further charge is paid up. Again the deeds of further charge of the 4th May 1876 and 16th September 1876 mentioned the source from which the interest due on each of them was to be paid and provided for redemption after the 9th November 1879; but the office has mixed up those accounts and allowed credit towards the principal money forthwith.

It is obvious that by virtue of the deeds of further charge of 1876 the right of the mortgagor to receive Rs. 40 per year on account of surplus from the mortgagee under the mortgage of the 9th November 1873 was curtailed, and Rs. 36 out of that amount were to be credited towards the interest due on those deeds year after year. It is also clear from the mortgage of the 9th November 1873 that the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem that mortgage before the expiry of six years and the surplus left in the hands of the mortgagee could not, therefore, be applied in reduction of the principal money due on that mortgage till the said six years had expired and the deeds of further charge had been satisfied. By the deed of further charge of the 11th January 1878 it was provided that the mortgagor would not be entitled to redeem the mortgages of the 9th November 1873 and the 19th September 1876 till the money due on the last deed of further charge of the 11th January was repaid or to get the surplus available to him under those mortgages till such payment was effected. In fact the last deed of further charge contemplated an account being taken of the moneys due on all the deeds when the redemption of the last deed might be sought. The possibility of any of the deeds being satisfied earlier out of the usufruct was not outside the contemplation of the parties; but it was not intended that the mortgagee should be deprived of his possession of the properties respectively mortgaged till the last farthing due to him on the deeds of further charge, wherein they were hypothecated, was repaid.

The learned Counsel for the parties practically agree that the surplus profits of the mortgaged properties might be credited towards the mortgage moneys; but while the plaintiffs respondents desire that the surplus should be credited in satisfaction of the deeds of further charge, beginning with the last one and then in satisfaction of the moneys due on the mortgages to which they relate, the defendants-appellants desire that they should be allowed to appropriate the same after the mortgages fell due in order of priority throughout. The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs-respondents waives his right to claim interest on the surplus, if it is credited in the manner suggested by him, till such time as all the debts due on the mortgages and the deeds of further charge are discharged.

The right course seems to be that from the 9th November 1873 to the 4th May 1876 the surplus payable to the mortgagor under the mortgage of the 9th November 1873 should be allowed to accumulate, because the mortgagor had no right to redeem the mortgage before the expiry of 6 years. Before the expiry of that period the deed of further charge of the 4th May 1876 was executed, diverting Rs. 18 per year out of that surplus to the payment of the interest due thereon. The balance of Rs. 22 per year, which the mortgagee did not pay to the mortgagor, would remain in the hands of the former till the 16th September 1876, when the second deed of further charge was executed, because the deed of further charge of the 4th May 1876 did not allow redemption till the 9th November 1879 when mortgage-money due under the mortgage of the 9th November 1873 became payable. After the 16th September 1876 the surplus would be reduced to Rs. 4 per year, which would again accumulate, because the deed of further charge of the 16th September 1876 did not allow redemption before the expiry of a certain period.

On the 9th November 1879 the mortgage of the 9th November 1873 became due according to the original contract; but before that date a fresh deed of further charge was executed on the 11th January 1878, whereby the mortgagor agreed not to take the surplus until the money due on that deed was repaid. From the 11th January 1878 the surplus due on that mortgage after paying the interest due on the deeds of further charge of 1876 would, therefore, be applied in satisfaction of the money due on the deed of further charge of the 11th January 1878.

The mortgage of 19th September 1875 contains a stipulation for the accumulation of the surplus till the principal money was repaid. Before the end of January 1882 the principal money due on this deed would be paid up and the profits mortgaged would thereafter be set free and become available for the discharge of the last deed of further charge of the 11th January 1878 in addition to the surplus available under the previous mortgage. The logical effect of the covenants contained in the last deed of further charge is to divert the surplus available under the mortgage of 1873 and the profits set free by the mortgage of 1875 to the satisfaction of the principal and interest due on the deed of further charge to which they are tacked. If any surplus remains, it can be applied to the payment of the deeds of further charge of 1876 in order of priority. As the redemption of the mortgage of the 9th November 1863 was postponed till all the deeds of further charge were paid up, the surplus profits available must be applied to the discharge of that deed last of all.

The mortgage of 1875 stands on a somewhat different footing, because the covenant contained therein for the accumulation of the surplus till it was sufficient to pay off the principal amount was not qualified by the last deed of further charge which provided for an "adjustment of accounts" of what might be due thereon at the time of the redemption of the last deed.

It is hardly necessary to discuss at length the reasons why the alternative methods of accounting, suggested by the defendants-appellants cannot be accepted. Where there are successive mortgages, the later ones qualifying or restricting the terms and conditions entered in the preceding ones, the rights of the parties must be governed so far as may be, by the covenants, as they ultimately stand.

The memorandum of accounts, filed by the plaintiffs in the Court below, was prepared in accordance with the directions and findings of the Court below. In the very beginning of the explanatory note appended to it, it was stated that the accounts had been prepared in the light of the judgment of the Court below and though an attempt was made therein to support certain methods of accounting and construction then adopted they do not debar the plaintiffs from supporting the decree by a different method, particularly when the defendants want to reopen the accounts and claim compound interest on their moneys which they do not wish to allow to the plaintiff on their surplus.

In his judgment the learned additional Judge held (page 113) that the plaintiffs were entitled, on taking the mortgage accounts, to credit for any unpaid money reserved to the mortgagor by the mortgage-deeds of 1873 and 1875 and not paid to him. He said further that any sum left in the hands of the mortgagee to the credit of the mortgagor would carry simple interest at Re. 1 per cent. per mensem. In regard to the possessory mortgage of 1875 he said that out of the income of Rs. 169 per year the mortgagee could take Rs. 90 towards payment of interest and appropriate the remaining Rs. 79 in reduction of the principal. In regard to the last deed of further charge he said (page 108) that the mortgagee should get simple interest at Rs. 37-8-0 per cent. per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree and that the interest so calculated amounted to Rs. 4,891-6-6.

The plaintiffs had to prepare the accounts on the basis of those findings to make them tally with the order of the 23rd October 1912; and as no compound interest was then allowed, it was immaterial at the time how the surplus was applied. The award of the compound interest now alters the whole position, and the plaintiffs can question the correctness of the method adopted by their Counsel. A man might not be willing to accept a method of account if compound interest is allowed, which he might have been willing not to contest, if simple interest was allowed. In a matter of right accounting or true construction, there can be no estoppel, and if fresh accounts have to be prepared, they must be prepared by the right method with due regard to the covenants contained in the various deeds, sought to be enforced.

The defendants want that if the accounts are to be prepared afresh, the surplus income should either be allowed to accumulate till it is sufficient to pay all the deeds together, or applied to the discharge of all the deeds, other than the mortgage of 1875, in order of priority under section 61 of the Indian Contract Act (I of 1872). The question here is, however, not one of an application of a payment but that of a set off. Section 76 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) provides that where the receipts of the mortgaged property exceed the interest due the surplus, if any, shall in the absence of a contract of the kind referred to in section 77 be applied in reduction or discharge of the mortgage money. The deed of further charge is not in itself a possessory mortgage; but it is tacked to two possessory mortgages, and the surplus income derived from it should go primarily to the discharge of the tacked deed. The same cannot be said about the deed of 1875 which is covered by the exception contained in sectior 77 of the Act.

The defendants also object to the surplus being applied half yearly to the payment of the moneys due on the deeds of further charge. There is evidence to show that the bazar in Asiwan is held bi-weekly, that is, on every Tuesday and Wednesday throughout the year. The defendants have not filed the accounts of their receipts and in the absence of any such accounts, the income must from the nature of the property be deemed to have been realised bi-weekly, that is, on every market day. The mortgage-deeds give the total annual income and do not suggest that it was only realizable at the end of the year and not half-yearly or at shorter intervals. If the defendants gave yearly leases or entered into any other arrangements to suit their own convenience without fixing the instalments by which the lease money was payable, the plaintiffs cannot be made to suffer for it. The interest was compoundable half yearly, and a half-yearly set off of the surplus is necessary in the circumstances. In the case of the mortgage of 1875, there is a covenant providing for the accumulation of the surplus till the principal amount secured by the mortgage is reached. The accumulation cannot be carried further.

The deed of further charge of the 11th January 1878 imposes a liability for the payment of compound interest and it has by reason of the covenants contained therein to be discharged first. It is not necessary, however, that the amounts due on all the five deeds, including anything due on the deed of 1875, should be paid together. A mortgage may not be redeemable till after a certain time, but part payments by set off may be made under section 76 (b) of the Transfer of Property Act from time to time.

Applying the surplus income of the bazar mortgaged in the deeds of 1873 and 1875 in satisfaction of the last deed of further charge and, when that deed is satisfied, in discharge of the deeds of further charge of 1876, which stand on an equal footing, in order of priority and then in satisfaction of the mortgage of 1873, a sum of Rs. 7,910-11-7 appears to be due to the plaintiffs on the date of the decree of the Court below. The account of the 21st February 1922 prepared by the office seems to be correct and in consonance with the covenants contained in the several deeds. A covenant by which a person binds himself to pay the money out of his own pocket is a covenant of a non-essential nature and cannot be pleaded in bar of a set off. A covenant postponing the payment of earlier deeds till the last deed is paid does not prevent the payment of the latter, after it falls due, before the earlier ones are paid.

The deeds of mortgages and further charges were clearly satisfied long before the institution of the suit. No cross-objections have been filed by the plaintiffs claiming interest at a higher rateeson the surplus or claiming future m ne profits.

The appeal should in my opinion be dismissed except in so far that the surplus allowed to the plaintiffs should be reduced to Rs. 7,910-11-7 as on the date on which the decree of the Court below was passed. The parties should in the circumstancs bear their own costs after the remand.

Daniels, A. J. C.—This is an appeal by the defendants-mortgagees in a redemption suit. The case has been before the Privy Council and has been remanded to this Court for decision of the remaining issues. The only question now remaining in dispute between the parties is the manner in which the account should be prepared. In fact the only ground of appeal passed before us is No. 5 of the Memorandum of Appeal which runs:

"That the lower Court should have at least allowed compound interest at the stipulated rate on the bond of 11th January 1878."

The appellants are willing to accept the method of accounting adopted by the plaintiffs-respondents in the Court below except in this one particular. The deed of 11th January 1878, allowed compound interest at two per cent. compoundable every six months on the amount secured by the deed which was Rs. 375. In default of payment of any six-monthly instalment of interest it allowed Rs. 3-2 per cent. instead of two per cent. The learned Subordinate Judge held that this stipulation amounted to a penalty and allowed simple interest at Rs. 3-2 per cent. The case was originally heard on 8th November 1921. On that date this Court was disposed to allow the contention of the appellants that they should be awarded compound interest at two per cent instead of simple interest at Rs. 3-2 per cent. The respondents suggested that if this alteration were made the whole account should be opened up. It was suggested that the office should be asked to prepare on this basis and the case was adjourned for this purpose. The parties were to be given an opportunity of criticising this account before final orders were passed on the appeal. That order was an interlocutory order and was not intended finally to decide the manner in which the account should be prepared. The question has been reargued before us after the submission of the account by the office.

There were five mortgage deeds executed by Ehsan Ali Khan predecessor of the plaintiffs in favour of Sohan Lal, predecessor of the defendants. The first two mortgages were usufructuary mortgages of portions of the income of bazar Ehsanganj, the third and fourth deeds were deeds of further charge on the income secured by the first deed, and the fifth deed was a further charge on the property secured by both the first two deeds.

The first deed was executed on the 9th November 1873 for a sum of Rs. 1,000. It was a charge on Rs. 244 of the annual bazar income. Of this Rs. 180 were payable to the mortgagees on account of interest and Rs. 24 for the pay of the chaukidar. The balance of Rs. 40 was to be paid by the mortgagees to the mortgagor year by year. There was no provision for applying this surplus towards the re-payment of the mortgage debt. The mortgage-debt was to be repaid in a lump sum by the mortgagor from his own pocket. The deed contemplated an annual cash payment of Rs. 40 by the mortgagees to the mortgagor on account of the surplus. The mortgagees have, however, in this suit accepted the position that they are liable to account for this surplus at the time of redemption.

The surplus of Rs. 40 payable to the mortgagor was successively reduced first to Rs. 22 and then to Rs. 4 by the third and fourth deeds (i.e. the first two deeds of further charge) executed respectively on 4th May 1876 and 16th September 1876.

The second deed was executed on 19th September 1875 for a sum of Rs. 500. It was a charge on an annual income of Rs. 169 consisting of Rs. 160, the remaining income of the bazar and Rs. 9 rent of a field. Rupees 90 of this income was set off against the interest in the deed leaving an annual balance of Rs. 79 in the hands of the mortgagees. There was a special covenant regarding this balance to the effect that it was to remain in deposit with the mortgagees till it amounted to Rs. 500. The amount was then to be applied in full satisfaction of the mortgage debt. No difficulty whatever arises with regard to this deed.

The third and fourth deeds were deeds of further charge. Each was for a sum of Rs. 99 and both contained similar covenants that the annual interest amounting to Rs. 18 was to be deducted from the surplus payable to the mortgagor under the first deed. In the case of the deed of 4th May 1876, the third o the five deeds executed between the parties, no definite term was fixed. The covenant was that the mortgage money was repayable along with the amount secured by the first deed. In the case of the deed of 16th September 1876 there was a nominal term of six years but it was accompanied by the same condition of payment along with the amount of the first mortgage and the earlier deed of further charge. The covenant was that the principal money was to be paid in a lump sum after the expiry of six years along with the mortgage-moneys of the aforesaid first deed and the deed dated 4th May 1876. The combined effect of these provisions was that the first, third and fourth deeds were all to be redeemed together.

The fifth deed was the only one as to which any dispute was raised in the appeal and the dispute related only to the rate of interest. This deed was for a sum of Rs. 375 carrying compound interest as already stated. It was repayable along with the four earlier deeds. The actual covenant was.

"I hereby agree and reduce it to writing that the principal amount specified above shall be paid by me after the expiry of the time under both the registered deeds dated 9th November 1873 and 19th September 1875 along with the mortgage-money of the deeds mentioned above and the two deeds of further charge, dated 4th May 1876 and 16th September 1876 amounting to Rs. 99 or whatever money more or less on adjustment of accounts may be found due in respect of the deed, dated 19th September 1875; the whole of this I will pay at one time (sab ek sath ada karunga)."

Interest was not to be paid from any surplus in the hands of the mortgagees; supposing there to be such surplus, but by the mortgagor in cash. The expression used is a very strong one:

"I will pay the money from my own possession (apne pas se pahunchata rahunga)."

The validity of this covenant in so far as it might operate to prevent a surplus in the hands of the mortgagees being applied in the reduction of the amount due under the mortgage of 1878 has been strongly challenged before us but there appears to be no doubt that the intention of the parties at the time of the execution of the deed was as stated above.

There is a further covenant at the end that the mortgagor shall not be entitled to redeem any of the mortgaged properties or get any surplus income from the bazar without payment of the principal and interest secured by this deed.

The first question which arises on the respondents' Counsel's contention is whether they are entitled to re-open the method of accounting accepted by the Court below at their own request. If the parties are to be confined to their strict rights it appears to me that the respondents are not entitled to do this. The parties put in before the Court below accounts prepared by different methods differing widely from each other. The Court accepted the plaintiff's method as correct and passed a decree on the basis of it. The appellants challenged the method of accounting in paragraph 9 of their Memorandum of Appeal but withdrew this plea at the hearing. They pressed only the plea contained in paragraph 5 regarding the rate of interest. The respondents have neither appealed nor filed cross-objections. It is quite true that under O. XLI, r. 22 a respondent is entitled to support the decree of the Court below on any point which has been decided against him but this is not a point which was decided against the respondents. It is a point which was decided in accordance with their wishes. The question to what extent the mortgagors should be relieved of the penal rate of interest under the deed of 1878 is absolutely distinct from the question of the manner in which the surplus arising under the earlier deeds should be credited and I can see no ground on which this Court's decision as to the rate of interest can be held to justify the adoption in the interest of the respondents of a fresh method of accounting.

It was suggested in the course of the argument that the account prepared was merely a mechanical thing and that the Court had given directions as to the manner in which it was to be prepared. This is incorrect. It is conceded that the Court had given no directions as to the manner of accounting under the deed of 1878 which is the real bone of contention between the parties. Moreover the report of the plaintiffs' Pleader accompanying the account (Exhibit Z 3) shows clearly that it was prepared in accordance with what he claimed to be correct. The report contains a paragraph stating that the Court has in effect held that the interest in the deed of 1878 would not form part of the yearly account between the parties but that principal and interest would be paid in a lump sum at the time of redemption. It then contains three arguments in support of this position numbered serially 1, 2 and 3 and concludes:

"Thus the finding of the Court is clearly supported by the contract between the parties as well as by the law on this subject and the mortgagee is not entitled to any accounting about the yearly profit of the property mortgaged and the yearly interest due on it so far as this deed is concerned and cannot get any thing beyond that which is fixed by the Court itself. (Vide page 99 of the Court's judgment)."

In allowing compound interest at two per cent. we have merely done away with excess interest allowed as a penalty for default and have reverted to the rate of interest agreed on by the parties themselves. Apart from the penalty clause, it is true that the result of allowing compound interest will be that a very large sum indeed will be found due to the mortgagees. This is not a reason for depriving them of their legal rights and it is to be remarked that this is not a sum which they can recover in cash from the mortgagors. Their only remedy is against the mortgaged property, and when once the amount of interest has exceeded the value of that property the difference between one lakh and ten lakhs makes no practical difference to the position of the parties. It may indeed be this consideration which has led the plaintiffs to refrain for so many years from any attempt at redemption.

The appellants-mortgagees are willing to allow simple interest at eighteen per cent., the same rate as was allowed under the earlier deeds, on the surplus in their hands. They have also expressed their willingness, not as a matter of right but as a matter of indulgence, to the preparation of a fresh account by which the surplus of the properties mortgaged by the deed of 1873 will be credited, after the term provided in that deed has expired, towards that deed and the two deeds of further charge, and, when these have been satisfied, towards the deed of 1878. They are also willing that after the deed of 1875 has been paid off from the surpuls profits of the property mortgaged by it all subsequent surpluses should be applied in reduction of the amount due under the deed of 1878. This offer was embodied in a statement signed by their Counsel Mr Sen, at the hearing on 25th January. He also agreed that interest on the surplus should be charged against him at 18 per cent. simple interest. By a subsequent application presented on 13th February 1922 the appellants have limited their claim to Rs. 50,000. As by either method of account the amount due to them exceeds this sum I would modify the decree of the Court below and pass a decree for redemption on payment of this amount with future interest at the usual rate.

As, however, my learned colleague is of opinion that the account should be re-opened as a matter of right it is desirable that I should express an opinion on the method by which, if this is done, the account should be prepared.

The deed of 1875 stands by itself. It contains its own covenant for redemption. The surplus was to remain in deposit until the mortgage-debt was extinguished. The respondents have contended that this covenant was superseded by the execution of the deed of 1878 and that from the execution of that deed the surplus should be credited against the interest of the latter deed. This is clearly wrong. There is nothing in the deed of 1878 which in any way purports to modify the terms of the deed of 1875. In support of their arguments the respondents rely on the covenant at the end of the deed by which the mortgagors were not to be entitled to redeem any of the mortgaged properties without paying up also the money due under the deed of 1878. This, however, is to be read along with the covenant in the body of the deed by which the amount of the five deeds was to be paid up together including "any amount which on adjustment of accounts may be found due in respect of the deed dated 19th September 1875." These words show that it was in the contemplation of the parties that the deed of 1875 might have been satisfied earlier out of the usufruct and that at the time of redemption on taking account it might be found that little or nothing was due under it. The only question which arises under this deed is what should be done with the income of the property after the deed was paid off, which occured sometime in 1881.

As regards the deed of 1873 and the two deeds of 1876 it is clear that there could be no accounting under these deeds until the term of six years from the execution of the first deed expired, which was on 9th November 1879. The question was raised at the hearing whether the term of six years mentioned in the second deed of 1876 meant six years from its execution or referred back to the six years' period of the deed of 1873. The parties appear to be agreed on the latter construction which is supported by the context "after the expiry of six years along with the mortgage-moneys of the aforesaid deeds" and this may be accepted.

In the meantime the deed of 1st January 1878 had been executed and the respondents' contention is that from the date of its execution all surpluses in the hands of the mortgagees should be applied in reduction of the amount of this mortgage. This overlooks the fact that this deed was consolidated with the deed of 1873 and that the mortgage-money did not become payable until after the expiry of the term provided in the earlier deed.

There remains the question how from 11th November 1879 the surplus income of the property mortgaged by the deed of 1873 and the two deeds of further charge of 1876 should be applied. A similar question arises with reference to the income of the property mortgaged in 1875 from the date on which that mortgage was paid off. The mortgagees contend that the various mortgages should be paid off in order of time. The plaintiffs contend that the deed of 1878 as being the most onerous should be paid off first or that failing that the money should be applied rateably to all the deeds.

The appellants rely on the provisions of section 61 of the Contract Act. Those provisions of the Transfer of Property Act which relate to contracts are by section 4 of the Act treated as forming part of the Contract Act. In this case there has been no appropriation either by the debtor under section 59 of the Contract Act or by the creditor under section 60. Section 61 provides that where no appropriation has been made by either party "the payment shall be applied in discharge of the debts in order of time, whether they are or are not barred by the law in force for the time being as to the limitation of suits". It is only where the debts are of equal standing in point of time that the payment is to be applied in discharge of each proportionately.

There is no authority for the suggestion that the money should be applied first in payment of the most onerous debt. There could be none in face of an express statutory provision to the contrary. The suggestion was based on a misunderstanding of a quotation from the judgment of the Master of the Rolls in Clayton's case (1) dealing with the rule of the civil law on the subject, which is reproduced in the judgment in Kundan Lal v. Jagan Nath (2). The actual rule laid down in Clayton's case (1) was entirely different. The Contract Act as the learned Judges point out in their judgment in Kundan Lal v. Jagan Nath (2) modifies the rule of the civil law and appropriates the payments in order of date in the absence of express appropriation by the parties.

It has been pointed out in the course of argument that the method of accounting proposed by the plaintiffs leads to results absolutely incompatible with the intention of the parties as expressed in the deed. According to this method the deed of 4th May 1876 has been practically paid up in full at the time of its execution from the surplus of the deed of 1875. The surplus from 11th November 1873 to 11th May 1876 would be Rs. 100 and the deed of further charge was executed only a week earlier. If it was the intention of the parties that the surplus should be credited before the mortgage-money became payable it is hardly possible that the mortgagor should have executed a deed for a further advance of Rs. 99 agreeing that the interest should be deducted from the surplus payable and that he would pay up the money of the later deed at the time of redemption of the earlier one. Similarly with the deed of 1878. According to the defendants more than three quarters of this was already paid up from the date of its execution. If so it is impossible that the mortgagor should have executed a deed for a further advance reciting the previous mortgages, charging the further advance on the same properties, agreeing to redeem all the deeds together and covenanting to pay compound interest. (It may be noted here that the translation of the deed of 1878 given in the paper-book is incomplete in several particulars.) There must be something wrong in a method of account which leads to results like this. The account originally prepared by the office shows twice as much due to the mortgagors as was found due to them by the First Court and this in spite of the fact that the only persons who appeal against the decree are the mortgagees and we are allowing their appeal and modifying the decree in their favour by allowing compound interest on the deed of 1878.

The only other ground on which the respondents' Counsel seeks to take the case out of the provisions of section 61 is that according to him if the money were applied first in payment of the deed of 1873 that deed would be redeemed before the others and the mortgagors would have been entitled to get back the property contrary to the terms of the contract. This reasoning is fallacious. So long as the deed of 1873 stood alone the mortgagors could have redeemed on payment of its amount. The effect of the covenants in the deeds of 1876 and 1878 was to consolidate all the debts so that the mortgagors could only get back the property when the entire mortgage debt on all the deeds was extinguished. There is a distinct covenant in the deed of 1878 that all the mortgages will be paid off one and the same time. The covenants in this deed have nothing to say as to the manner in which the mortgage amounts shall be paid off. In whatever order the debts are paid redemption will only be effected when the whole consolidated debt has been cleared off. I am of opinion, therefore, that if the debts are to be re-opened otherwise than as a matter of concession on the part of the mortgagees these four deeds must be paid off in order of time, under the provisions of section 61 of the Contract Act.

It is argued that the deed of 1873 was the only deed (apart from the deed of 1875) under which possession was held and that, therefore, whatever covenants the later deeds may have contained, the mortgagors could get back the property as soon as the first mortgage was held to have been paid off. The point would be immaterial if the interest on all the deeds ran at the same rate, as the mortgagees

(1) (1816) 15 R. R. 161; 1 Mer. 572; 35 E. R. 781.
(2) 30 Ind. Cas. 92; 37 A. 649; 13 A. L. J. 908.

are being charged interest at eighteen per cent. per annum on the surplus in their hands. The importance of the point is that the deed of 1878 was carrying a higher rate of interest. The language of the deed of 1873 regarding redemption is, however, exactly parallel to that of the later deeds. The words used are:

"I, the declarant, having paid up the entire mortgage-money in a lump sum from my own pocket shall get the redemption effected".

The effect of the covenant in the later deeds was that instead of redemption being effected on payment of Rs. 99 it could only be effected on payment of the entire amount secured by all the deeds. Possession was, therefore, really held under all the deeds and not under the deed of 1873 alone.

If I am right in my view that the respondents are not entitled to re-open the method of account accepted, and indeed contended for by themselves in the Court below, the discussion contained in the foregoing paragraphs does not arise. The decree which should, in my opinion, be passed is that stated earlier in the judgment at the conclusion of the discussion of this preliminary issue.

Kanhaiya Lal, J. C., and Daniels, A. J. C. —As we differ on two questions, one of which is a pure question of law and the other a question of construction of certain deeds of mortgages and further charges or of the effect of the covenants contained therein, as affecting the method of accounting, we refer the case to a third Judge of the Court under section 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure for determining

(1) whether the plaintiffs-respondents are entitled to have the method of account embodied in the statement of account filed by them in the Court below on 11th March 1913 re-opened or varied? and

(2) if the method of account can be re-opened or varied what amount, if any, would, on a true construction of the deeds of mortgages and further charges in suit, be due either to the plaintiffs or to the defendants on accounts on the date of the decree of the Court below?

Ashworth, A. J. C.—This is a reference under the proviso to sub-section 2 of section 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The present appellant M. Ehtisham Ali and one other co-plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants asserting their title to redeem certain mortgages on a bazar called Ehsanganj and alleging that upon the true taking of the accounts money was due to them from the representatives of the mortgagee. They asked for possession and for a decree for the surplus amount.

The Additional Judge of Hardoi decided this suit in their favour and after taking accounts awarded them a sum of Rs. 9,012-12-8. The mortgagee appealed to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. The appeal was allowed on the preliminary question of the title of the plaintiffs. On a second appeal to the Privy Council the finding against the title of the plaintiffs was set aside and the appeal remanded to the Judicial Commissioner's Court for decision of the further questions raised in it. Four grounds of appeal remained to be decided but three of them were not pressed. The only ground of appeal that was pressed was that the Additionel Judge should have allowed compound interest on a certain bond of the 11th January 1878. The appeal came up before the Judicial Commissioner and the First Additional Judicial Commissioner and it was decided by a judgment dated the 8th November 1921 that compound interest should be allowed and the decree-writer of this Court was directed to prepare accounts in accordance with a certain direction. This direction involved a different method of taking accounts to that followed by the Additional Judge. In attempting to prepare accounts according to this direction, the decree-writer found some difficulty as the direction was not sufficiently in detail to cover all points of doubt. Where the direction was incomplete he relied upon his own interpretation of the documents. He put in his account along with a note of 15th December 1921. The appellant-mortgagee objected that the method of account adopted by the Additional Judge should be followed in preference. The respondent-mortgagor would not agree to this unless the appellant agreed to forego his claim to compound interest and proposed his own method of taking the accounts. When the matter again came before the Judicial Commissioner and the First Additional Judicial Commissioner they disagreed. The Judicial Commissioner considered that the mortgagor-respondent was entitled to ask for a method of account different to that adopted by the Additional Judge on his, the mortgagor's, own request, as the situation had been changed by the allowance of compound interest and held that, on a proper construction of the deeds, the latest of the deeds should be discharged in the accounts first. The First Additional Judicial Commissioner held that the plaintiff-respondent was not entitled to ask for any alteration in the method of account adopted by the Additional Judge at his own request. In the event of a different method of account being allowed he was in favour of the deeds being discharged from the profits in order of priority. The appeal has been referred to me as third Judge of the Court for hearing upon the points of law on which they differed.

A description of the five deeds in question will be found in the judgments of both Judges dated the 3rd of March 1922. It appears that the profits of the bazar and of the rented field, which were mortgaged under the deeds in question in this case, amounted on the 9th November 1873, which was the date of the earliest deed, to Rs. 413 and those profits for the purposes of this case are to be deemed to have continued at the same figure up to date. By the deed of the 9th November 1873 Rs. 1,000 was advanced to be repaid in one lump sum after six years. The interest was to be at the rate of Rs. 1-8 per cent. per mensem which amounted to Rs. 180 a year. This interest together with Rs. 24 on account of the chaukidar's pay, in all Rs. 204, was to come out of the profits of the portion of the bazar mortgaged, which profits were to be taken as Rs. 244. Consequently there was a surplus of Rs. 40 a year which was to be paid over annually to the mortgagor.

The second deed dated the 19th September 1875 effected a mortgage of the remainder of the bazar bringing in an income of Rs. 413, less Rupees 244, that is Rs. 169 a year. Rupees 90 o this income was set off against the interest of the deed leaving a balance of Rs. 79 in the hands of the mortgagee. This yearly balance was to accumulate until the money advanced by the deed, namely, Rs. 500 was paid off.

The third and fourth deeds of further charge dated respectively 4th May 1876 and 16th September 1876 do not affect the second deed at all but only the first deed, that of 1873. Their effect briefly was to increase the mortgage-money of the first deed from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,198. They also by reason of the provision that the interest was to come out of the Rs. 40, excess payable to the mortgagor under the first deed, reduced that Rs. 40 to Rs. 4.

The last and the fifth deed dated the 11th January 1878 is the deed that has given trouble in this case. This deed was a deed of further charge both on the property mortgaged by the deed of 9th November 1873 and on that mortgaged by the deed of 19th September 1875. Rs. 375 were advanced. This sum was not to be repaid until the expiry of the time under both the deeds of 1873 and 1875. There was a third provision that the Rs. 375 should be paid with the principal mortgage-moneys due under all the other deeds. The interest on the Rs. 375 was to be two per cent. per mensem and was to be paid every six months by the mortgagor from his own pocket. If not paid the interest was to be Rs. 3-2 per cent. per month and compound with six-monthly rests. It was further provided that so long as any interest and principal was due under this last deed no surplus arising in favour of the mortgagor from the profits of the bazar should be paid over.

It is common ground in this case that no surplus profits were ever paid over to the mortgagor at any time. It will be observed that from the 9th November 1873 up to the date of the third deed, 4th May 1876, the excess profits were Rs. 40 and from the date of that deed they were Rs. 22 up to the date of the fourth deed on 16th September 1876. From the date of this fourth deed they were only Rs. 4. Although there is some contention as to the disposal of this Rs. 4, the main question in this case is as to the disposal of the Rs. 169 which on the 8th November 1881 became available by reason of the satisfaction out of the usufruct of the sum of Rs. 500 advanced under the second deed, for the liquidation of interest or principal due under the other deeds. In the Court of the Additional Judge it was held that this money should be treated as accumulating up to the date when the accounts were taken in the case and 12 per cent. per annum interest was allowed to the mortgagor on it. In the order of the Judicial Commissioner and the First Additional Judicial Commissioner dated 8th November 1921, wherein compound interest was allowed in respect of the fifth deed, the direction was on the contrary that this Rs. 169 as soon as set free, should be used for the satisfaction of interest due on the other four deeds. Inasmuch as the interest due on the first, the third and the fourth deeds was already provided for out of the profits it followed that this direction meant that Rs. 169 should be used from 8th November 1881 for defraying arrears of interest and current interest due under the fifth deed.

The first point I am asked to determine is whether the plaintiffs-respondents are entitled to have the method of account embodied in the statement of account filed by them in the Court below on the 11th March 1913 re-opened or varied.

For the purpose of deciding this point it is necessary to set forth the exact manner in which the Additional Judge came to adopt the method which he has adopted. There has never been any dispute as to the method of accounting that would be required if the fifth deed had not been in existence. In the plaint and written statement there was no allegation as to the effect of this deed on the method of accounting by the plaintiffs or by the defendants. Some attempt has been made to construe a certain paragraph of the plaint, namely paragraph 2 (d) (v), as an allegation favouring the method of account adopted by the Additional Judge but in my opinion this attempt fails. That paragraph of the plaint is merely an inaccurate recital of the terms of the deed itself, and, that the defendants understood this to be so, is clear, from the fact that in the written statement the reply to this portion of the plaint is "for the terms laid down in the deeds, the deeds may be perused." In the additional pleas of the defendants it is urged that the sum due to the mortgagee from the property in dispute amounts to more than five lakhs but this vague statement cannot be construed as asserting any method of account. The consequence was that no issue was framed by the Additional Judge as to the method of accounting or (and this is really the same thing) as to the construction to be placed on the language of the fifth deed. There was no denial that the fifth deed did provide for compound interest. The only question was whether the Court should enforce this compound interest. When the Court had decided that it would not enforce compound interest the office was ordered in the judgment to prepare an account in view of the terms of the findings. It is curious that the Court set forth in its judgment the terms of the first four deeds and then used these words "having understood the terms of these four deeds it would be easy to prepare the accounts." It never explained the terms of the fifth deed and, as a matter of fact, it was impossible to prepare the account without coming to a decision as to the construction to be placed on this fifth deed. It is probable that the office found some difficulty in preparing the account and we find that both parties put in applications giving their views as to the method in which the account should be filed. The plaintiffs-respondents in their petition, Exhibit Z 3 (which has played an important part in the arguments before me) stood out very strongly for the method finally adopted by the Additional Judge which is the very method which they reprobate now. The defendants-appellants set forth three methods and expressed their preference, in favour of one with which we are not now concerned. The Additional Judge passed an order, "the account filed by the plaintiffs, Exhibit Z 3 on the 11th March 1913 has been carefully gone into. I find the account has been prepared in accordance with the findings announced." It may be mentioned that the reason why the plaintiffs' Pleader urged the method of accounts which he did urge and which he now reprobates was that if compound interest was not to be allowed he got some advantage by that method over other possible methods. The Judicial Commissioner has held that the plaintiffs-respondents cannot be held down to their application, Exhibit Z 3, inasmuch as it was an application put in on the understanding that compound interest would not be allowed. The first Additional Judicial Commissioner has dissented from this view on the ground that the only section in virtue of which the plaintiffs-respondents could claim to have set aside the method of account adopted by the lower Court is O. XLI r. 22, which allows a respondent to support the decree of the lower Court on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below. He has held that there was a definite decision on this point not against the respondents but in their favour and that consequently the provision of law just mentioned will not apply. He rejected the suggestion that the method of account adopted by the lower Court was one adopted by the Court inevitably in pursuance of its decision in favour of simple interest and consequently one for the adoption of which the respondents could not be held responsible. If it appeared to be necessary to meet the argument that the decision by the lower Court to adopt the method of account that has been adopted was a decision in favour of the respondents and not against them, I would point out that this decision was only in favour of (not adverse to) the respondents so long as the decision to award simple and not compound interest was maintained. As soon as this Court set aside that decision in favour of a decision to award compound interest the decision by the lower Court as to the method of taking accounts became adverse to the respondents. I should not, therefore, be disposed to hold that they could not rely on O. XLI, r. 22. At the time that the respondents had to open their mouths in respect of the account the decision of the lower Court as to method had become unfavourable to them. At the same time I would prefer to support the finding of the Judicial Commissioner on another ground. It is this. All proceedings as to the method of taking accounts occurred in the lower Court after its decision to allow only simple interest. Such proceedings must be read along with that decision and as soon as that decision was upset by this Court it was open to this Court to give such directions as it thought fit as to the taking of accounts. It is to be observed that in the order of this Court dated the 8th November 1921 it was taken for granted that this Court could give such directions as it thought proper as to the taking of accounts, irrespective of any method adopted by the lower Court. This order was concurred in by the First Additional Judicial Commissioner so that it is clear that he took the view I am now favouring at the time. It was only subsequently that he changed round to the view that the method adopted by the lower Court could not be varied. In short my decision is that whether the respondents could or could not claim a reversal of the method of accounting adopted by the lower Court, it was open to this Court to reverse that method as soon as it upset the decision of the lower Court as to the nature of interest to be allowed. It has been argued before me that the emphatic statement in Exhibit Z 3 of the plaintiffs-respondents in favour of an interpretation of the fifth deed requiring the method adopted by the lower Court acts in some way as an estoppel. It is sufficient to say that the question of the proper construction to be placed on the deed was a question of law and that there can be no estoppel by a pleading of law inasmuch as the other side must be presumed to know what the law is. Accordingly I decide that the Judicial Commissioner was correct in holding that it was open to this Court to vary the method of account embodied in the statement of account filed by the plaintiffs-respondents in the Court below on the 11th of March 1913.

The second question is:—

What amount, if any, on a true construction of the deeds was due to the plaintiffs or the defendants on the date of the decree of the Court below?

With respect to this question I would point out that under section 98, Civil Procedure Code, it is necessary for me to concur in the view of law, that is in the construction placed on the fifth deed, adopted by one or other of the differing Judges in order that there should be a decision of the majority. If I do not concur with either of the other Judges, the appeal would fail.

The resume of the deeds given above by me will serve to sufficiently set forth the terms of the first four deeds but the decision in this case rests on the construction of the fifth deed and it appears to me desirable to set forth certain terms in this deed precisely. The money advanced was Rs. 375 and it was advanced as a further charge (zar-i-mazid) on the two shares in the profits of the bazar mortgaged respectively with possession in the first deed of the 9th November 1873 and the second deed of 19th September 1875. Then follows this sentence according to the translation of the First Additional Judicial Commissioner:

"I hereby agree and reduce it to writing that the principal amount specified above shall be paid by me after the expiry of the time under both the registered deeds dated 9th November 1873 and 19th September 1875, along with the mortgage-money of the deeds mentioned above and the two deeds of further charge, dated 4th May 1876 and September 1876, amounting to Rs. 99 or whatever money more or less on adjustment of accounts may be found due in respect of the deed dated 19th September 1875, the whole of this I will pay at one time (sab ek sath ada karunga)."

The time for redemption of the first deed was the 9th November 1879 and the time for redemption of the second deed of 1875 was when the surplus profits of Rs. 169 wiped out the principal. It is common ground that this was on the 1st January 1882. Consequently this fifth deed could be redeemed at this later date. The meaning of the rest of the passage must be that the principal money due under this fifth deed was to be paid "along with the mortgage-money due under the deed of 1873 as swelled by the two deeds of 1876 for Rs. 99 each and whatever money 'equal to or less' than the principal of Rs. 500 should be found due on the deed of 1875 after accounts." The question of the meaning of the words "along with" will be discussed later. The next sentence is:

"And I agree that I will pay from my own pocket the interest on the principal money secured by this deed until redemption of the deed every six months at the rate of two per cent. per mensem on the dates fixed below and that if the interest of any six months be not paid the interest on the principal amount calculated at six pies per rupee per mensem instead of Rs. 2 per mensem shall be added to the principal after every six-months and compound interest thereon also which may be found due under accounts shall be paid at the time of redemption after the expiry of the said term."

This has been taken by the First Additional Judicial Commissioner to mean that the interest must be paid independently of any surplus profits from the property. The deed goes on to state:

"I agree that unless I pay up the money I shall not be entitled to redeem any of the mortgaged properties entered in the above mentioned deeds, nor shall I get any surplus amount out of the income of the bazar without payment of the interest and principal amount due under this deed."

The First Additional Judicial Commissioner taking into consideration the three conditions, that the money under this fifth deed should be paid along with the money due under the other four deeds, that the interest on this fifth deed should be paid out of the covenantor's own pocket, and lastly that no profits should be paid over to the covenantor from the bazar until this deed was paid up in full, has expressed an opinion that the meaning was that there could be no redemption of the property until the covenantor tendered at one and the same time the moneys, principal and interest, due under the first four deeds and the money principal and interest due under the fifth deed. He was not to be allowed to set off any profits against the interest or principal of the fifth deed and consequently any surplus profits after redemption of the first four deeds would merely remain in suspense, with interest paid by the mortgagee at one per cent. until the date of decree of this Court. This opinion he has expressed in the preamble to his judgment. Further on he expressed the opinion that, right or wrong, the method of the lower Court cannot be varied; and finally he expresses the opinion that if it is varied the surplus profits should be used in the account to liquidate the deeds principal and interest according to their priority in time. It is not clear to me why having expressed in the first part of his judgment the view that the lower Court's method was correct, he should not have held that, even if one could go behind the method of account adopted by the Additional Judge, that method should be found the right one.

I disagree with his view. In my opinion it was so inequitable to require that the interest on this fifth deed should mount up at six pies per rupee per mensem i. e., Rs. 37-8 per cent. per annum while the mortgagee had more than enough in surplus funds to pay this interest (from the share of the bazar mortgaged under the deed of 1875 after that deed was satisfied out of the usufruct), that I would favour any construction of the deed in reason which would avoid such a result. Again the condition providing that the mortgagor should not get any surplus amount out of the income of the bazar without paying the principal and interest due under this fifth deed certainly suggests that this surplus amount should be used for liquidating the interest and principal of this fifth deed. I do not find that the provision that the mortgagee should pay out of his own pocket the interest on this fifth deed an insurmountable difficulty to this interpretation. It must be remembered that between the 11th January 1878 (the date of this fifth deed) and 1st January 1882 there were three years to elapse and the immediate intention of the parties may well have been that this interest should be paid out of the pocket of the mortgagor. Nor again do I consider that too much importance should be attached to the words "along with" in the provision that the principal due under this fifth deed should be paid along with the mortgage-money due under the other four deeds What appears to have been considered most important by the parties at this time was that this fifth deed should not be redeemed before the other four deeds, for the obvious reason that, if the other four deeds were redeemed first, the mortgagee would lose possession of the property which was security also for the money advanced by this fifth deed. I would interpret the words "along with" to mean "not before". The deed is not expressed generally in such exact language as to require a meticulous adherence to every word of it as apart from its obvious intention. It is clear for instance that the expression "more or less" is used for "equal to or less". In support of this interpretation of the words "along with", I would draw attention to a judgment of this Court Chandrika Pershad v. Jagannath (3). In that case the terms of the contract required that a certain prior mortgage should not be redeemed until a deed of further charge was paid up. The judgment of this Court contains the following passage:

"I am of opinion, therefore, that the deed of 1889 was intended to create a further charge on Gangapur and that the Court below has rightly held that the plaintiff should pay it off at the time of redeeming Gangapur".

Now in this judgment it is obvious that the meaning of the words "at the time of redeeming" was "not before". When therefore we find this Court in a judgment using the words "at the time of" loosely for "not before" it is not extraordinary if the same thing occurred in this deed. I think it may be said that in many deeds where it is provided that a deed of further charge shall be paid up along with an earlier deed the meaning is nothing more than that it shall not be paid up before. Accordingly I hold that the method adopted by the lower Court was not the correct one.

(3) 8 O. C. 227 at p. 230.

The next question is to consider whether accounting according to priority of the deeds, which is the method supported by the First Additional Judicial Commissioner in the last part of his judgment, is the proper one?

For the following reasons I hold that it is not. In the first place it is to be observed that this fifth deed is a further charge not only on the share in the bazar mortgaged by the deed of 1873 but also on that mortgaged by the deed of 1875. While hesitating to assent to the argument that this fifth deed was a deed under which the mortgagee took possession of the mortgaged property (inasumch as it gave the mortgagee a right to continue in possession of the property mortgaged by the deed of 1875 after that mortgage was redeemed from usufruct) and consequently brought into operation section 76 (h) of the Transfer of Property Act, at the same time I hold that where property is made subject to a further charge, surplus profits should be used to liquidate the interest on the further charge in preference to liquidating other deeds which have no connection with the property, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary. Secondly it has freqently been ruled that, notwithstanding anything in section 61 of the Contract Act, in the absence of appropriation, payments of surpluses should be appropriated to interest before they are appropriated to principal on any particular debt. The fifth deed being a further charge on both the properties mortgaged by the deed of 1873 and by that of 1875 has to be treated as constituting along with those deeds a consolidated debt. Any interest, therefore, due under this fifth deed should be paid off in preference to any principal due under the deed of 1873. Lastly I hold that the clear intention of the fifth deed was that the interest and principal under it should be liquidated before any principal due under any of the other four deeds.

We now come to the method adopted by the Judicial Commissioner. This method is based on the view that the fifth deed must be satisfied in preference to the others. It is stated as follows:

"Applying the surplus income of the bazar mortgaged in the deed of 1873 and 1875 in satisfaction of the last deed of further charge and when that deed is satisfied in discharge of the deeds of further charge of 1876, which stand on an equal footing in order of priority and then in satisfaction of the mortgage of 1873, a sum of Rs. 7,910-11-7 appears to be due to the plaintiffs on the date of the decree of the Court below. The account of the 21st February 1922 prepared by the office seem to be correct and in consonance with the covenants contained in the several deeds.....The appeal should in my opinion be dismissed except in so far that the surplus allowed to the plaintiff should be reduced to Rs. 7,910-11-7 as on the date on which the decree of the Court below was passed. The parties should in the circumstances bear their own costs after the remand."

I am of the opinion that this is in accordance with the proper construction of the fifth deed and my answer to the second question is that I agree with the Judicial Commissioner that the sum just mentioned should on a true construction of the deeds be found due to the plaintiffs.

Kanhaiya Lal, J. C. and Lyle, A. J. C.—In accordance with the opinion of the learned Second Additional Judicial Commissioner this appeal is dismissed except in so far that the surplus allowed to the plaintiffs by the Court below would be reduced to Rs. 7,910-11-7, as on the date on which the decree of the Court below was passed. The parties should in the circumstances bear their own costs in this Court after remand. The costs incurred by the plaintiffs in the Court of first instance and in the appeals to this Court and to His Majesty in Council prior to the remand shall be charged against the defendants.

Z. K. Order accordingly.

BADRI DAS JANAKIDAS v. MATHANMAL.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 173 OF 1921.

February 6, 1922.

Present :—Sir Shadi Lal, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Abdul Qadir.

THE FIRM BADRI DAS-JANAKIDAS OF DELHI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MATHANMAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Letters Patent (Punjab), cl. 10—"Judgment," meaning of—Interlocutory judgment—Order refusing stay of execution—Appeal.

The term "judgment" in section 10 of the Letters Patent (Punjab) includes an interlocutory judgment which decides, so far as the Court pronouncing such judgment is concerned, whether finally or temporarily, any question materially in issue between the parties and directly affecting the subject-matter of the suit. [p. 328, col. 1.]

The order of a Single Judge of the High Court refusing to stay execution of a decree, which is under appeal to the High Court, is a "judgment" within the meaning of the term in clause 10 of the Letters Patent (Punjab) and is appealable. [p. 328, col. 2.]

Brij Coommaree v. Ramrick Das, 5 C. W. N. 781 and Gokal Chand v. Sanwal Das, 55 Ind. Cas. 933; 1 L. 348; 12 P. W. R. 1920; 79 P. L. R. 1920; 2 L. L. J. 32, followed.

Letters Patent Appeal against the order of Mr. Justice Harrison, dated the 23rd June 1921.

Lala Sardha Ram, for the Appellant.

Lala Moti Sagar, R. S., Lalas Prem Lal and Rupram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal under clause 10 of the Letters Patent against an order of Mr. Justice Harrison, dated 23rd June 1921, rejecting an application for staying execution of a preliminary decree, passed against the defendants-appellants by the Senior Subordinate Judge of Delhi. The plaintiff firm sued the defendant firm for a dissolution of partnership and for accounts and obtained a preliminary decree on the 11th June 1921, by virtue of which the Official Receiver was authorised to go into the accounts of the defendants and to certify the result to the Court for the purpose of a final decree being passed. The defendant firm preferred an appeal to this Court against the preliminary decree and after the appeal was admitted, applied that the execution of the preliminary decree be stayed, on the ground that substantial loss would be caused to the defendants, if the Receiver would take charge of their assets and their account-books, as this might result in the closing of their business. They also urged that the time and money spent in carrying out the orders of the Court as embodied in the preliminary decree, would be wasted if it is set aside on appeal. The learned Judge in Chambers, who disposed of the application, passed the following order in rejecting it:—"I do not think that sufficient reason has been shown for staying execution and preventing the preliminary decree from developing into a final decree until the appeal has been decided."

The defendant firm has appealed against the above order and the main grounds of appeal are that if a final decree is allowed to be passed the appeal from the preliminary decree will become useless and that the proceedings in execution are likely to be expensive and protracted. Rai Sahib Moti Sagar on behalf of the respondents, has raised a preliminary objection, that the order under appeal is not a "judgment" and is therefore not appealable. It is contended that the word "judgment" for the purposes of an appeal under Letters Patent, means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability and that the order passed by the learned Judge in Chambers does not belong to the category of such orders as amount to judgments. We are referred to a decision of the Madras High Court, in Palaniappa Chetti v. Chidambaram Pillai (1) which relates to an order staying the further trial of a suit passed by a Single Judge of the High Court, against which it was held, there could be no appeal. The next case cited is a decision of the Bombay High Court Vanichand Rajpal v. Lakhmichand Maneckchand (2) in which it has been held that an order refusing to restrain the defendant from prosecuting a suit filed by him against the plaintiff in a Court of a Native State is not a judgment and no appeal lies against it. We have also been referred to Muralidhar Chamaria v. Dalmia (3), in which it is held that an order of a Single Judge sitting on the Original Side, refusing an application by a defendant for leave to file his written statement is not a judgment and no appeal lies from it. It is not necessary to mention all the cases cited on behalf of the respondents, as like the cases noted above, they were referred to only by way of analogy and are not directly applicable to the question before us.

(1) 30 Ind. Cas. 942; 18 M. L. T. 312.
(2) 53 Ind. Cas. 395; 21 Bom. L. R. 955.
(3) 49 Ind. Cas. 120; 45 C. 818.

Lala Sardha Ram, who argued before us the case for the appellants, relies on a decision of the Calcutta High Court, Brij Coomaree v. Ramrick Das (4) which is an authority in point. There a Single Judge to whom an application was made for staying execution of an order passed by the same Judge in the matter of Probate, refused to stay execution. It was held that a Letters Patent Appeal was competent against the said order. Reliance is also placed on Gokal Chand v. Sanwal Das (5) in which a Division Bench of this Court has laid down that an appeal lies from the order of a Single Judge refusing to stay execution of a decree, which is under appeal to the High Court and that "the term judgment in section 10 of the Letters Patent includes any interlocutory judgment which decides, so far as the Court pronouncing such judgment is concerned, whether finally or temporarily, any question materially in issue between the parties and directly affecting the subject-matter of the suit." This view appears to be in accord with the comprehensive definition of the word "judgment" given by Sir Arnold White, in the Full Bench ruling of the Madras High Court, published as Tuljaram Row v. Alagappa Chettiar (6). We cannot see much difference in principle between the case before us and that decided by the Calcutta High Court in Brij Coomaree v. Ramrick Das (4), Gokal Chand v. Sanwal Das (5) is clearly applicable to this case. The preliminary objection is, therefore, overruled.

As regards the merits of the case Lala Sardha Ram argues as indicated above, that the execution of the preliminary decree would mean substantial loss to the appellants. This is disputed by the other side and it is further urged that the learned Judge in Chambers having exercised a discretion vested in him by law in favour of the respondents, his order should not be disturbed, unless there is anything to show that it was without jurisdiction, or was passed with material irregularity, or there is any adequate proof that some loss would be occasioned by it to the appellants which can be called substantial. While recognizing the soundness of this proposition, we think, after weighing carefully the arguments addressed to us on both sides, that there are circumstances in this case which go to show that the appellants do stand to lose substantially if the preliminary decree is executed and is allowed to develop into a final decree before their appeal from the preliminary decree is adjudicated upon. One obvious loss is that the appeal which is pending becomes useless. Another probable loss is that the business of the appellant firm will be seriously disturbed by their account-books passing into the hands of the Receiver. Where the process is likely to be a protracted and expensive one, as appears to be the case in the present instance, the balance of convenience is in favour of staying the execution rather than proceeding with it. We, therefore, accept this appeal and stay the execution proceedings till the decision of the appeal from the preliminary decree. The appellants must, however, furnish security to the satisfaction of the Executing Court for any decree for which he may be found liable. We also direct that in order to avoid a undue hardship to the respondents, an early date be fixed for hearing of the said appeal in this Court. We leave the parties to bear their own costs of this appeal.

N. H. Appeal allowed.

(4) 5 C. W. N. 781.

(5) 55 Ind. Cas. 933; 1 L. 348; 12 P. W. R. 1920; 79 P. L. R. 1920; 4 L. L. J. 32.

(6) 8 Ind. Cas. 340; 35 M. 1; (1910) M. W. N. 697; 8 M. L. T. 453; 21 M. L. J. 1.

DWARA PRASAD v. RAM DEI.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 22 OF 1922.

April 19, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.
and Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

DWARKA PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat RAM DEI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by co-parcener—Separation—Suit by co-parcener to challenge alienation—Transaction, whole, whether can be set aside—Limitation, commencement of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 120.

Under the Mitakshara a single member of a joint Hindu family, whose rights have been infringed by a sale of joint family property, can have the entire sale set aside. [p. 330, col. 1.]

Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437 at p. 442; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.); followed.

A member of a joint Hindu family may purport to alienate his own share in the family property, but by doing so he does not effect separation. [p. 331, col. 1.]

A suit by a Hindu co-parcener for a declaration that an alienation of family property by another co-parcener is void ab initio is governed by Art. 120 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, and limitation begins to run from the date on which the plaintiff comes to know of the alienation. [p. 331, col. 2; p. 332, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Bahraich, dated the 20th February 1922.

Messrs. Gokaran Nath Misra and K. P. Misra, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. K. Ghosh, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

JUDGMENT.

Simpson, A. J. C.—This is a first appeal by a plaintiff. The suit was one to set aside a sale. The pedigree will be found on page 2 of the record but it is not entirely correct. The plaintiff's case is that he is the only son of Musammat Lalita, the second wife of Har Bhajan, while Mata Prasad, Ram Narain and Salig Ram are his half-brothers, being the sons of Har Bhajan by his first wife Musammat Dhanbhasa. The sale which is attacked is dated 11th June 1909 and the deed was executed by Musammat Dhanbhasa, defendant No. 3, Suraj Bakhsh, defendant No. 4, Mata Prasad, defendant No. 12, Ram Narain, defendant No. 15, and Salig Ram, defendant No. 18 in favour of Ram Nidh and Ram Adhin. Both vendees are dead. The first defendant, Musammat Ram Dei is the widow of Ram Adhin. The second defendant is the son of Ram Nidh. The other defendants will all be found in the pedigree. They are the people who executed the sale-deed and their sons. The plaintiff's case is that the family originally came from Gwalior and that they still hold some property there. Har Bhajan had two wives; the first Musammat Dhanbhasa of Bahraich district who lived in Gajadharpore and the second Musammat Lalita who came from Gwalior. Har Bhajan died, being then a member of joint family which consisted of himself, his three sons by his first wife, namely, Mata Prasad, Ram Narain, Salig Ram, his son by his second wife, Dwarka Prasad, and his nephew Suraj Bakhsh. Five months after his death his second wife Musammat Lalita, not getting on well with Musammat Dhanbhasa, went back to Gwalior, taking with her her infant son the plaintiff. Thus it came about that on 11th June 1909, the plaintiff being then a minor and absent in Gwalior, this sale-deed was executed without his knowledge and in derogation of his rights. Accordingly he sues to set it aside. The defendants Nos. 1 and 2 representing the vendees contested the suit on various grounds. The first was that the plaintiff is a fictitious person, that Har Bhajan had only three sons. Their next point was that the sale was for family necessity, and the third that the suit is barred by time. The defendant Nos. 3, 4, 12, 15 and 18 who had actually executed the sale-deed did not put in a written statement. It would have been difficult for them to do so. They must either have said that the plaintiff's claim was bad, which they are not prepared to do, for they are supporting him, or have admitted that they themselves had practised a fraud upon the vendees. The other defendants put in a written statement admitting the pedigree, saying that no cause of action had accrued against them, and claiming exemption from costs The Court of trial decided all the points in the plaintiff's favour. On the first issue it was found that the plaintiff was the legitimate son of Har Bhajan. On the second it was found that the joint family is still undivided. On the third it was found that the property in suit is ancestral property of the joint family. On the 4th and 5th and 7th it was found that there was no legal necessity and on the 8th it was held that the suit was in time. Accordingly a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. But the sale-deed was not set aside in toto. A declaration was given that the sale-deed was not binding on the plaintiff to the extent of his share in the disputed property, and that share was declared to be 1/8th. The only point taken by the plaintiff in appeal is that on the findings of the Court of trial the decree ought to have been for a declaration that the sale was void in toto. There is no doubt that that is the Mitakshara Law as it is administered in these Provinces and in Bengal. A single member of a joint Hindu family, whose rights have been infringed by a sale of joint family property, can have the entire sale set aside. Either the vendors were entitled to deal with the joint family property, in which case the alienation is valid, or they were not entitled to do so, in which case they cannot alienate even their own share. This proposition of law is not disputed by the respondents. Indeed it is elementary. But I may quote from the recent Privy Council ruling; Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1):

"Under the law of the Mitakshara the joint family property owned, as stated, by all the members of the family as co-parceners, cannot be the subject of a gift, sale or mortgage by one co-parcener, except with the consent, express or implied, of all the other co-parceners. Any deed of gift, sale or mortgage granted by one co-parcener on his own account or over the joint family property is invalid, the estate is wholly unaffected by it and its entirety stands free of it."

As regards the appeal, therefore, there is only one question of decision and that is whether the plaintiff can ask to have the sale set aside in toto, or only as regards his own share. The plaint is not as clear as it might have been, but there is more than one indication in it that the plaintiff was asking to have the whole sale-deed set aside. Thus in paragraph 7 of the plaint, it is stated that "the sale-deed is invalid and void" and in paragraph 10 in the relief a declaration is asked for "that the sale-deed is invalid and void and liable to be cancelled." It is true that in paragraph 7 the words are "contrary to the plaintiff's right" and in paragraph 10 "prejudicial to the plaintiff's rights." But we construe these words as being merely an assertion of the plaintiff's right to sue, not as limiting the relief sought. The word used in both cases is haquq (rights). There is no reference in the plaint to the plaintiff's hissa (share). Again the valuation of the claim for the purpose of jurisdiction is Rs. 11,000 which is the value of the whole of the property, not of the plaintiff's share. There is no more to be said about the appeal.

It is the cross-objection which raises the real points of the case. The vendees, defendants Nos. 1 and 2, have raised again most of the points which they raised in the Court of Trial. The points for decision are as follows:—

1. Is the plaintiff a son of Har Bhajan?
2. Has there been a separation between Suraj Bakhsh on one side and the plaintiff and his brothers, on the other?
3. Is the property in suit ancestral?
4. Are the vendees protected by section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act?
5. Is the suit within limitation?
6. Was the sale made for family necessity?

On the first point we agree with the finding of the Court of Trial. The question is one of fact and it has been adequately dealt with in the judgment under appeal. It is sufficient to say here that the plaintiff himself went into the witness-box, that his mother and his step-mother were both examined on commission, and that there were numerous other witnesses both from Bahraich and Gwalior to the plaintiff's parentage. There are also certain proceedings in the Revenue Courts of Gwalior in which Ram Narain obtained mutation of the village Hurras in the name of himself and his brothers Mata Prasad and Dwarka Prasad. This will be found at page 10 of Part III. It is dated 24th February 1905. Similarly there is Exhibit 6 on page 31 of Part III dated 12th February 1912 in which mutation of names in favour of Ram Narain is set aside and it is ordered that Dwarka Prasad and Mata Prasad's names must be added. These proceedings are all along before the present litigation. We find then that the plaintiff is really the son of Har Bhajan.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437 at p. 442; 21 C.W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 813; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).

The evidence offered of the separation consists of alienations of their shares made by the various members of his family. This is no doubt pro tanto evidence of separation but, taken by itself, it is not sufficient. A member of a joint family may purport to alienate his own share. By doing so he does not effect separation. These alienations are all earlier than the sale-deed now in question and they relate to the same property, which is described in the sale-deed as joint and ancestral. We find, therefore, that there was no separation. We may add that the point was never clearly pleaded.

The only point brought to our notice to prove that the property was not ancestral is Exhibit 12 on page 1 of Part III which shows that when Ghheda Singh died, mutation was effected in favour of Har Bhajan, his brother and Suraj Bakhsh Singh, his nephew. All these names will be found in the pedigree on page 2 of Part I. This entry, however, is not in favour of the respondents, for, if the property had passed as self-acquired property by inheritance, Har Bhajan would have got the whole of it. The fact that Suraj Bakhsh was entered as having a half share in it shows that he and Har Bhajan took the property by survivorship as ancestral property. Another important piece of evidence will be found on page 53 of Part III. This is an admission of the vendees as plaintiffs in a suit which they had to bring to get possession of the property, that it is ancestral (paragraph 8 of the plaint). We find, therefore, that the property is ancestral.

Are the vendees protected by section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act?

This is part of a larger question. If the plaintiff's suit is honest, section 41 has no application because there would be no consent of the plaintiff to the vendors appearing as ostensible owners. When Har Bhajan died, Musammat Dhanbhasa, the senior widow, succeeded in getting mutation in her own name, not only to the exclusion of the plaintiff and his mother, but also to the exclusion of her own three sons. The mere fact that the plaintiff allowed Musammat Dhanbhasa's name to stand in the khewat would not attract the provisions of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Is the suit within limitation?

This issue is also a part of the larger issue, whether the plaintiff's suit is honest? The plaintiff's account of the matter is that he did not know that there had been any sale-deed at all until he received the letter Exhibit 7 printed on page 89 of Part III. We are not impressed by this letter. It is written by one Ram Bahadur Singh who had no particular occasion to write it. He is not even of the same caste as the plaintiff. It reads to us like a letter manufactured for the purposes of the case and we find it difficult to believe that the plaintiff was up to that time in blissful ignorance. It is true that the vendees have never yet obtained possession of the property. This is why the present suit is one for declaration. But there has been a great deal of litigation. Now if the plaintiff was aware of these proceedings he is beyond limitation. Article 91 does not apply to a suit of this nature. The plaintiff is not suing to cancel or set aside the sale-deed but for a declaration that the sale-deed is void ab initio. On the other hand he is not suing for possession. The article applicable is 120. The period is six years beginning from the time when the right to sue accrued and that would be when the plaintiff came to know of the sale-deed. The present suit was brought on the 13th September 1920. It was in time if the cause of action accrued on or after 14th September 1914. The sale-deed was executed on 11th June 1909. The first attempt to defeat the vendees was by means of a lease dated 10th June 1909. The vendees had to bring the suit for the cancellation of this lease. This is Suit No. 2 of 1911 and it was settled by a compromise dated 13th February 1911 whereby a decree was passed for the cancellation of the lease. Still the vendees did not get possession and for that they had to bring another suit on 7th March 1918 for possession under their sale-deed. Suraj Bakhsh Singh and others, vendors, disputed the case, taking every plea they could think of except that they did not mention the existence of the plaintiff, Dwarka Prasad. The Court of Trial dismissed the suit on a finding that the alienation was not supported either by family necessity or by antecedent debt. An appeal was filed, which was heard by a Bench of this Court. It was considered advisable to settle for the Courts in Oudh a point whether a debt secured by a mortgage of joint family property but not yet time-barred as a simple money debt, is to be regarded as an antecedent debt such as would support an alienation of joint family property. It was decided by that Bench that such debt is an antecedent debt. Accordingly the appeal was allowed and the suit decreed with costs in both the Courts. The date of that decision is 6th July 1920. But as the date we are in search of is the year 1914 the whole of this second litigation is beside the point. There is nothing to show that the plaintiff was aware of the proceeding which resulted in the cancellation of the lease in the year 1911. He appears to have been born in 1894, so that he would appear to have been passed of age at that time, and so far as we know, he was living in Gwalior. The evidence that he made collections of rent in Bahraich is all later than 1914. When he was in the witness box he was not cross-examined at all effectively on this point. He said "During these three years I visited Gajadharpore on four or six occasions." But that is all. In the Court of Trial he set up a cause of action which was within time, and that was accepted. We are disposed to reject that cause of action. It remains probable that he had a cause of action within time. He cannot be expected to prove the negative that he did not know of the sale-deed and there is nothing to show that it was communicated to him at any period which would put him beyond time.

The question of family necessity was very faintly argued. It is a question of fact and the various items have been fully discussed in the judgment under appeal. The sale-deed was executed for the purpose of paying off various debts incurred by the individual members of the family and it is not shown that these individual debts were taken for family purposes.

There remains the general consideration whether the plaintiff's suit is honest. It is clear that the vendors have not been honest. After they had given this sale-deed and got good money for it, they proceeded to give a lease of the same property. Even after this lease was cancelled by the Court, they withheld possession of the property, and denied the execution of the sale-deed. When that case was finally decided against them, they remained silent. When the plaintiff brings the present suit no doubt they are supporting him, for both Suraj Bakhsh and Musammat Dhanbhasa are plaintiff's witnesses. It is with some regret that we find ourselves unable to give effect to this consideration. It is quite probable that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 might have succeeded if they had been represented by competent Counsel in the Court of Trial. Facts might have been brought out which would have established collusion between the plaintiff and the vendors. For example, Suraj Bakhsh went into the witness-box. If he had had to face a competent cross-examiner something would have been elicted from him. The question would have been put "When you executed this sale-deed, did you intend to cheat your half-brother Dwarka Prasad by selling joint family property which was partly his, or did you intend to cheat the vendees by pretending to sell what you knew you were not entitled to sell." But no question of the sort was put to him. On the record, as it stands, we find no material on which we can differ from the findings of the Court of Trial. All these findings therefore stand good and the cross-objection is dismissed with costs. The appeal on the other hand succeeds and the plaintiff will get a declaration that the sale is altogether void as far as he is concerned and that the whole of the family property stands unaffected by it. He will also get his costs in both Courts. As to the liability of the vendors to their co-defendants vendees, that question is not before us and we say nothing about it.

Dalal, A. J. C.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 180 OF 1920.

February 17, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and Mr. Justice Fforde.

RODHA RAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

AMAR CHAND—PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by father—Necessity—Inquiry—Burden of proof.

A person who takes a mortgage from a Hindu father in consideration of a present advance, as opposed to an antecedent-debt, is bound to establish in a suit brought by a son of the mortgagor to challenge the validity of the alienation, so far as it affects his interests, that the advance was made by him after a reasonable and fair inquiry which satisfied him, as a prudent man, that the money was required for the legal necessities of the family. [p. 334, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated the 28th October 1919, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Jullundur, dated the 2nd April 1919.

Diwan Mehr Chand, for the Appellant.

Messrs. H. D. Bhalla and Faqir Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was brought for a declaration that a certain sale-deed, dated the 20th October 1916, should be held not to affect the reversionary rights of the plaintiff.

The deed in question was for the sale of certain ancestral lands by Maya Mal the father of the plaintiff, to one Radha Ram.

Both the Courts below have held that the plaintiff is entitled to the declaration prayed for. The grounds relied upon by the plaintiff in his suit were that the lands being ancestral, and the family being a joint Hindu one governed by Hindu Law, the sale can only be valid as against the plaintiff if made for consideration and for valid necessity. The main point in issue was whether or not there was valid necessity. The necessity alleged by the defence was the requirement of the purchase-money for payment of the expenses of the plaintiff's marriage.

It was found, however, by the Court below that it was not proved that the money was in fact raised for the purposes of the marriage. It appeared that the alienor was possessed of considerable property, and was in no need to raise funds.

On behalf of the alienee, defendant No. 2, it was argued that even upon these findings the transaction could not be impeached unless it could be shown that he had knowledge of these facts. It was concluded that the alienee was not bound to inquire into the actual necessities for the sale, and still less was he under any duty to inquire into the actual application of the purchase-money.

In support of this proposition, Counsel for the defendant cited the case of Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Musammat Babooee Munraj Koonweree (1) and relied upon the following passage in the judgment delivered by Knight Bruce, L. J. :—

"Their Lordships think that the lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But they think that if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably-credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and they do not think that, under such circumstances, he is bound to see to the application of the money."

(1) 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81*n*.; Sevestre 253*n*.; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147.

The principles there expressed, however, when applied to the facts before us instead of supporting the appellant's case are entirely in favour of the respondent. The burden of proving that he acted bona fide and without knowledge that the necessity was fictitious lay upon the alienee. This has been very definitely established in Charanjit Singh v. Telu Mal (2) where it was held that a person who takes a mortgage of ancestral property from a father in consideration of a present advance, as opposed to an antecedent debt, is bound to establish in a suit brought by a son to challenge the validity of the alienation so far as it affects his interests, that the advance was made by him "after a reasonable and fair inquiry which satisfied him, as a prudent man, that the money was required for the legal necessities of the family."

In the present case it has been proved that the money was not required for the necessities of the family, and, moreover, the alienee has entirely failed to show that he made any inquiry whatsoever as to the necessity for the alienation. Not only has he not discharged this onus of proof, but it is quite obvious upon the indisputable facts before us that the smallest inquiry would have shown him that the alleged necessity was a pure fiction. The two defendants lived in adjoining villages within 200 karams of one another, and the vendee must have known perfectly well that the vendor was a man in excellent financial circumstances.

We are satisfied that the alienation was not for legal necessity, and that the decisions of the Courts below are correct, and we accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

But as the plaintiff and his father are members of a joint Hindu family, we amend the decree and make it one for a declaration that the alienation in question does not affect his rights.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(2) 152 P. R. 1888.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 735 OF 1920.

March 22, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ross.

MANNOO LAL CHOUDHURY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

LALJI CHAUBE AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 51—Rent-suits—Res judicata—Presumption.

Whether the decision in a previous rent-suit operates as res judicata in a subsequent rent-suit, must be determined with reference to the question whether the issue in the previous suit related to the amount of rent payable for a particular period or to the rent payable for the full term of the lease. In the former contingency, the decision is not res judicata, in the latter event it is. [p. 335, col. 1.]

The decision in a previous rent-suit for a particular period of the lease may, however, be taken to determine the rent claimed in that suit, and to give rise to a presumption under section 51 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that the rent for the subsequent years remained the same. The effect to be given to this presumption depends on the whole evidence. [p. 335, col. 2.]

Mr. Sambhu Saran, for the Appellants.

Mr. Lakshmi Narayan Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff is the tenant of 2 bighas 11 kathas 18 dhurs of land which he alleges he held at an annual Hunda rental of 15 maunds of grain. In the recent Revisional Survey his rent was recorded as 30 maunds, and he has brought this suit for a declaration that his rent is 15 maunds a year. The defence was that the rate of rent was 30 maunds, that in the Cadastral Survey it had been recorded erroneously as 15 maunds and that subsequently, the plaintiff agreed to pay at the higher rate. It was further pleaded that in Suit No. 2483 of 1918, rent was decreed for the years 1322 to 1325, at the rate of 30 maunds per annum. The Munsif decreed the plaintiff's suit and the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the appeal.

The main question raised in second appeal is whether the rate of rent is not res judicata by reason of the decision in the suit of 1918. It is further argued that even if the matter is not res judicata, the decision in that suit raises a presumption as to the rate of rent and it would be for the plaintiff to show a subsequent agreement reducing the rent. In Kishun Dayal Rai v. Kulpati Kuer (1). Mr. Justice Atkinson laid down that "a judgment in a rent-suit did not in point of law amount to an estoppel and did not accord with the principles of res judicata unless the rent was payable at a rate stipulated by contract." Mr. Justice Mullick observed. "The question whether a decision as to the rate of rent operates as res judicata depends on the frame of the issue." In Hurry Behari Bhagat v. Pargun Ahir (2) it was held that the question depended upon whether the previous decision was that the plaintiff should recover from the defendant the sum admitted by him to be due, or that the sum so admitted to be due was the proper amount of rent payable for the period in question. In Hara Chandra Bairagi v. Bepin Behary Das (3) the rule was thus stated by Mr. Justice Mukherji*: "Whether the decision in the previous suit operates as res judicata, must be determined with reference to the question. whether the issue in the previous suit related to the amount of rent payable for a particular period or to the rent payable for the full term of the lease. In the former contingeney, the decision is not res judicata, in the latter event it is."

In the present case the pleadings in the previous suit have not been produced, and from the judgment there is nothing to show that it was not simply a suit for rent for the years 1322 to 1325. The issue was: "What is the Hunda payable by the defendant to the plaintiffs for the rent claimed land." This issue is equivocal and may be either general or particular. It is true that the judgment is not based on any special considerations, particularly relating to the years then in suit; but on the other hand, there is nothing to show that the Munsif was deciding anything more than the claim to the rent for the years for which rent was claimed. This judgment does not satisfy any of the tests laid down in the decisions cited above. The true rule applicable in this case is that stated in Maharani Beni Pershad Koeri v. Raj Kumar Chowbey (4): "We think that, so far as the rents of the years, which were in contest in that suit were concerned, the decision no doubt is an absolute bar under the doctrine of res judicata to any suit for the rents of those years. But so far as the rents or rates of rent of subsequent years are concerned, we do not think that the judgment can be held to be an absolute bar, so as to prevent the parties from raising the question in a subsequent suit. In our opinion, the prior decision may be taken to determine the rent claimed in that suit, and to give rise under section 51 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to the presumption that the rents for subsequent years remained the same." All that this judgment does is to raise a presumption as to the rate of rent for the following years and that in the absence of evidence of a subsequent agreement it remained the same. The effect to be given to this presumption depends on the whole evidence. The defendants' case was that there had been a panchayat at which the plaintiffs agreed to pay 30 maunds. It has been found that this was not proved. It has further been found to be proved that the plaintiff had paid 15 maunds previously and also that the defendants

(1) 45 Ind. Cas. 316; 3 P. L. J. 372; (1918) Pat. 238;
(2) 19 C. 656; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 880.
(3) 6 Ind. Cas. 860; 13 C. L. J. 38.
(4) 6 C. W. N. 380.

*See 2 Ind. Cas. 11—[Ed.]

failed to prove payment at 30 maunds subsequently. The case is, therefore, concluded by the findings of fact.

The appeal must be dismissed with costs.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 558 OF 1921.

January 4, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Le-Rossignol.

FARIDA—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

KHAIRA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115 O. IX, r. 9—Dismissal of suit for default—Restoration, application for, dismissal of—Revision.

Where a Court refuses to restore a suit dismissed for default, holding that no sufficient cause has been established for the absence of the plaintiff on the date of hearing, the order is not open to revision, as the Court cannot be said to have acted illegally or with material irregularity.

Civil revision from an order of the Munsif, First Class, Zira, District Ferozepore, dated the 13th June 1921.

Mr. Abdul Ghani, for the Petitioner.

Mr. M. Hassan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The Court below has disbelieved the evidence that the plaintiff was unable to appear on the date fixed by reason of an attack of colic and it has refused to set aside the order of dismissal of the suit for default.

I fail to see how the Court below can be said to have acted illegally or with material irregularity. On the contrary, it appears to have had good reason for rejectin the plaintiff's story.

If plaintiff was ready to go on with the case and was absent only for a few minutes, wny did he not apply to the Court at once instead of on the next day? His witnesses say they were present and heard the case called. Why did they not go and call the plaintiff?

It is significant that on the day fixed for the hearing plaintiff had called no witnesses at all through the Court.

The Munsif's order was correct; in any case there is no scope for revision. I dismiss the petition with costs.

Z. K. Revision dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 434 OF 1922.

August 3, 1923.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

CHANBASAPA PUTTAPPA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

CHANBASAVA MALLAPPA YALIGAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Alienation—Necessity—Inadequacy of price.

Where a Hindu widow alienates a portion of her husband's estate for necessity, then unless the difference between the true price of the property alienated and the actual price paid by the alienee is particularly inadequate, the sale ought not to be set aside. A reasonable allowance ought to be made for the difference in price in favour of the alienation. [p. 337, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Dharwar, in Appeal No. 130 of 1920, reversing a decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Haveri, in Civil Suit No. 340 of 1919.

Mr. Nilkant Atmaram, for the Appellant.

Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit by the daughters of Mallappa to set aside an alienation made by the widow of Mallappa in 1905. It appears that Mallappa had mortgaged two lands, one of which was the land in suit, for Rs. 300. Though the terms of the mortgage have not been translated, it appears from the judgment that interest was to be paid in a regular manner, and if there was a default in the payment of interest, the mortgagor was liable to pay a much higher rate of interest. The widow, Hanmava, sold the property in suit for Rs. 300, as now found to the present defendants' father, and thereby paid off the mortgage effected by her husband. As result of this transaction she got the other land free from the mortgage for her own benefit, and parted with this land for good in favour of the defendants' father Hanmava died in 1918 and the present suit was filed by the plaintiffs in June 1919 to recover possession of the property on the ground that the alienation could not operate beyond the lifetime of their mother, Hanmava. The defendants, who are the minor sons of the original alienee, were represented by their mother who pleaded that the sale was for legal necessity. The Trial Court came to the conclusion that the sale was for necessity and accordingly dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. The lower Appellate Court, however, has reversed that decree and set aside the alienation on condition of the plaintiffs paying Rs. 300 with interest, an also Rs. 600 for improvements effected by the defendants. It is found now, and the finding must be accepted for the purposes of the present second appeal, that the property at the date of the alienation was worth about Rs. 450, and it must also be accepted that the alienation was for Rs. 300 paid by the alienee to the widow who paid off the mortgage created by her husband. In effect it was a sale of property worth Rs. 450 for Rs. 300. It is found that the sum of Rs. 300 has been paid by the alienee, and it is not proved that any excess sum was paid beyond the necessity nor is it suggested that any excess was kept by the widow for her own benefit. It is true that the defendants' case was that the real consideration was Rs. 418, and that that was the sum which was really payable in respect of the mortgage. But the finding of the lower Appellate Court is against that allegation, and, therefore, that must be left out of account. Taking the alienation to be for Rs. 300 of property worth Rs. 450 for legal necessity, the question is whether it ought to be set aside. We are of opinion that having regard to the circumstances of this case, the alienation ought not to be set aside. It was an alienation for legal necessity. Though the price paid for the land may not have been adequate, there was good reason for the widow to effect this arrangement in 1905, in order to secure one land free of the mortgage for her own benefit; and there is nothing in the case to suggest that in 1905 when this transaction was effected there was any kind of unfair advantage taken by the alienee, or that there was anything improper in the transaction. It is not inconceivable that the property which is now found to be worth Rs. 450 in 1905 may not actually fetch that price at the time. Given the necessity for the sale, it seems to us that unless the difference between the true price and the actual price paid is particularly inadequate, the sale ought not to be set aside. Reasonable allowance ought to be made for the difference in price in favour of the alienation. Having regard to all the circumstances of this case, we think that the decree passed by the Trial Court is right. We reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the Trial Court, except as to costs. Having regard to the circumstances of the case, we direct that each party should pay his or her own costs throughout.

Z. K. Decree reversed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

EXECUTION OF DECREE APPEAL NO. 3 OF 1923.

March 9, 1923.

Present:—Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, J. C. and Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

HARIHAR PRASAD, MINOR, UNDER THE GUARDIANSHIP OF Musammat CHHOGAR KUAR—OBJECTOR—APPELLANT

versus

Babu SHANKAR DAYAL—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 2—Execution of decree—Adjustment out of Court not certified within time, whether can be recognised.

An Executing Court is justified in refusing to take cognisance of an adjustment which is not certified to the Court within the time allowed by law under O. XXI, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 338, col. 2.]

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 23rd October 1922.

LIQUIDATOR UNION BANK OF INDIA v. GOBIND SINGH.

Mr. Daya Kishen Seth, for the Appellant.

Mr. Haider Husain, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—There is no force in this appeal. The appellant Harihar Prasad owed money under a decree, passed by the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, to the respondents Durga Prasad, Shankar Dayal and Pearay Lal. Harihar Prasad was a minor. His certificated guardian was Musammat Chhoger Kuar, his mother, who applied for permission to sell certain property in order to pay up the abovesaid decree. In the course of the proceeding, instituted in the Court of the District Judge, Lucknow, Durga Prasad, one of the decree-holders, appeared and stated that he would accept in full satisfaction of the decree held by him and his brothers, Shankar Dayal and Pearay Lal, Rs. 26,800 provided that sum was paid on or betore the 15th December 1920, and that he would consult his brothers and persuade them to agree to that proposal. He further stated that he was giving up Rs. 2,000 out of the decretal money due to him and his brothers, and that if the amount so found due be different, a deduction of Rs. 2,000 will be made from what might be found due. The District Judge appointed certain Commissioners for the sale of some of the property belonging to the minor, which were included in the mortgage, and Rs. 25,155 were eventually realised by the sale. One of the purchasers, Raghunandan Lal appeared before the District Judge, and paid Rs. 10,000 out of the purchase-money payable by him and promised to pay the balance on or before the 15th January 1921. The decree-holders, Durga Prasad and Shankar Dayal, were present and informed the District Judge that they were willing to receive Rs. 15,706-15-3 that day and the balance by the 17th January 1921. Pearay Lal was not present but an application was filed on that day before the District Judge, purporting to have been signed by Shankar Dayal and Pearay Lal, to the effect that they authorised Durga Prasad to receive all payments on their behalf. There is no authority given thereby to Shankar Dayal by Pearay Lal to surrender any portion of the claim. The amount promised to be paid on the 17th January, 1921 was moreover not specified, and final payment of Rs. 11,055 was made on 17th January 1921 to all the the decree-holders. Durga Prasad did in fact accept that money in full payment, as was stated in a subsequent letter sent by him on the 21st January 1921, but it is not possible to say whether the other decree-holders did the same because the receipt of the 17th January 1921 does not recite that Rs. 11,055 had been received in full satisfaction of the decree. In any case the adjustment was not certified to the Court which passed the decree within the time allowed by law under O. XXI, r. (2), of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Court below was justified in refusing to take cognizance of the alleged adjustment.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 240 OF 1922.

March 30, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

LIQUIDATOR, UNION BANK OF INDIA —PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GOBIND SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Companies Act (VII of 1913), ss. 186, 234—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 43—Company in liquidation—Compromise between Liquidator and contributory, whether binding on Company—Procedure—Debt due to Company by firm—One partner contributory—Debt whether can be recovered summarily.

A compromise between the Liquidator of a Company in liquidation and a contributory of the Company is not binding upon the Company until it is sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution of the Company, as provided by section 234 of the Companies Act. [p. 339, col. 2.]

Cyclemakers' Co-operative Supply Co. v. Sims, (1903) 1 K. B. 477; 72 L. J. K. B. 160; 88 L. T. 360; 15 T. L. R. 153, distinguished.

LIQUIDATOR, UNION BANK OF INDIA v. GOBIND SINGH.

When a debt is due to a Company by a firm, one of the partners in which is settled as a contributory of the Company, the Liquidator of the Company can call upon the contributory under section 186 of the Companies Act to liquidate the whole debt. The principle contained in section 43 of the Contract Act is applicable to such a case. [p. 340, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Broadway, published as 71 Ind. Cas. 724, dated the 11th November 1922.

Mr. Prem Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. C. Narang, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These cross-appeals arise out of liquidation proceedings in connection with the Union Bank of India, Ltd. The respondent Gobind Singh was a shareholder in the Bank and was also indebted to the Bank on promissory-notes. The Bank went into voluntary liquidation in October 1914 and one Pandya was appointed Liquidator. Up to the date when liquidation proceedings commenced the defendant had paid Rs. 1,750 on fifty shares and the Liquidator called upon him under section 186 of the Companies Act to pay the sum of Rs. 3,250 on account of unpaid calls and Rs. 5,507-14-0 on account of promissory-notes representing loans by the Bank to the defendant. With the addition of interest the total claim against the defendant amounted to Rs. 9,989-10-6. The learned Judge in Chambers appears to hold that the Liquidator Pandya did enter into a compromise with the defendant; that if he did that compromise would be binding on the Company; that inasmuch as the promissory-notes, though executed by the defendant, were executed by him as a partner in a firm, the debt was not recoverable by summary proceedings under section 186 of the Companies Act inasmuch as the firm itself was not a contributory. The learned Judge, therefore, accepted the defendant's appeal and held him liable to pay only the calls on his shares amounting to Rs. 3,250 together with interest at 6 per cent. and left the Bank at liberty to sue the defendant's firm known as Ralia Ram-Daya Ram in respect of the debt due on the promissory-notes. Before us there is one appeal on behalf of the defendant in which he contends that on the finding of the learned Judge that a compromise had been entered into by the Liquidator Pandya, and Gobind Singh and as the terms of the compromise had been fulfilled by Govind Singh, the defendant should have been discharged from all further liability in the case. The counter-appeal is on behalf of the present Liquidator who contends that the amount due on the promissory notes is recoverable by the summary procedure provided by section 186 of the Companies Act.

To deal first with the alleged compromise; from its terms it does not appear to be a completed transaction but merely a proposal. On its face, it was conditional on the acceptance of one Ganesh Das who appears to have been Manager of one of the branches of the Bank. This man Ganesh Das has not been called as a witness and we are unable to hold that he gave his consent to the proposed composition. In any case such a compromise, though it might, if proved, be binding upon the Liquidator personally, would not be binding upon the Bank until sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution of the Company, as provided in section 234 of the Companies Act. The defendant relies upon Cycle-makers' Co-operative Supply Co. v. Sims (1), but that case is readily distinguishable. In that case the Liquidator had made a compromise in a suit and it was held that until that compromise had been set aside no cause of action remained to the Company, and consequently the second suit did not lie in view of the judgment on the compromise. That case was of a peculiar nature and the general remarks of the learned Judges were made entirely with reference to the facts of that case.

For these reasons we dismiss the appeal of the defendant Gobind Singh with costs.

The next point is the applicability of the summary procedure under section 186 of the Companies Act to the debt due on the promissory-notes. Now the loan from the Bank was taken by the firm Ralia Ram-Daya Ram of which Gobind Singh is the principal partner. It was Gobind

(1) (1903) 1 K. B. 477; 72 L. J. K. B. 160; 88 L. T. 360; 19 T. L. R. 153.

Singh who signed the promissory notes, it was he who got the money. The partners of the firm are jointly and severally responsible on the bills and although the firm is not settled on the list of contributories one of the partners Gobind Singh is so settled and it is open to the Bank to select him from among the partners and call upon him as a contributory to liquidate the whole debt. We see no reason why the principles of section 43 of the Contract Act should not apply to the present case. We accordingly accept the appeal of the Liquidator and hold that the money due on the promissory-notes is recoverable from Gobind Singh by summary procedure under section 186 of the Companies Act.

There remains still one question, namely, whether the claim on the promissory-notes is within limitation and on behalf of the Liquidator it is contended that the claim was made within time inasmuch as the defendant has paid interest on the debt and also has re-paid principal in part and that the requirements of sections 19 and 20 of the Limitation Act have been fulfilled. The learned District Judge has calculated interest on the promissory-notes at 10 per cent. but inasmuch as the Official Liquidator did not claim more than 9 per cent., we do not think that the rate should be calculated at more than 9 per cent.

With the foregoing directions the case is returned to the learned District Judge for disposal after determination whether the claim on the promissory-notes was made within time. Costs to be costs in the case.

Appeal accepted;
Case remanded.

K. K.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 221 OF 1922.

April 17, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

UDAIRAJ SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM UDIT TEWARI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Mortgage by father—Necessity, absence of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 68 (c)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 2—Suit for possession—Mortgage money, right to recover—Abandonment of claim—Subsequent suit, whether barred.

An alienation of family property by a Hindu father which is not supported by family necessity is void ab initio. [p. 341, col. 2.]

Gajodhar Bakhsh v. Gauri Shankar, 61 Ind. Cas. 205; 8 O. L. J., 81, followed.

Where a mortgage of family property by a Hindu father is declared void, the mortgagee becomes entitled to sue for the mortgage-money under section 68 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act and limitation for such a suit begins to run from the date on which the mortgagee is refused, or is ousted from, the possession of the mortgaged property. [p. 341, col. 2.]

Where a mortgagee is refused possession of the mortgaged property he can sue for possession, or under section 68 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act, he can sue for the mortgage-money. If he sues for possession without suing for the mortgage-money a claim in respect of the latter will become barred by virtue of the provision contained in O. II, r. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 341, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 30th March 1922, confirming that of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 31st May 1921.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bishambhar Nath holding brief of Mr. Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal by defendants. The suit arises out of a mortgage-deed executed by Ram Lal Singh deceased, father of the two defendants-appellants in favour of the plaintiff on 23rd June 1906. The amount of the debt secured by the mortgage was Rs. 1,000. The rate of interest was Rs. 6-4 per cent. per annum. It was provided that if in any year the interest remained unpaid by the end of the month of Jeth the mortgagee was to take possession of the property mortgaged, the income of which is stated in the deed to be Rs. 85-4-0. He was then to pay Rs. 22-12-0 as land revenue and to appropriate Rs. 62 8-0 in lieu of interest. It was provided that the mortgagor can redeem it in any year at the time when there is no harvest on the ground, whether the mortgagee had obtained possession or not.

There was also this warranty, that if in the aforesaid land any defect should arise, then the mortgagor will be responsible for the loss and expense and that in the event of any particular plot going out in part or in whole he will provide other land of the same quality. It appears that there was a default in the payment of interest, and that in the year 1908 the mortgagee claimed possession and the mortgagor refused it. The mortgagee, therefore, brought a suit for possession in August 1917 against his mortgagor alone, not joining his sons, the present appellants, as parties. During the pendency of that suit, the father died, and the sons were brought on the record as his legal representatives. They then raised an objection that the property was ancestral, and that there was neither legal necessity nor antecedent debt to support the alienation. They succeeded on this point. They raised another objection that the mortgage was without consideration, and on this point they also succeeded. They raised a third objection that the mortgage had not been executed at all. But here they failed. On the other two findings, however, that suit was dismissed. The date of the judgment is 28th February 1918. The present suit was instituted on 12th August 1920. It is brought by the mortgagee to recover his money, Rs. 1,000 principal, and Rs. 883-9-8 interest. The suit was decreed by the learned Additional Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad. The defendants appealed to the District Judge and their appeal was dismissed

They come here on second appeal. Three grounds have been argued before me. The first is limitation. In the plaint, paragraph 5, the cause of action is the judgment in the previous suit dated 28th February 1918. This cause of action is explained in paragraph 4 to be that, when, the mortgage was held to be invalid, then, for the first time, the plaintiff became entitled to get back his money. The Issue No. 2 was directed on this point, and the view of the learned Subordinate Judge was that the suit is based on a breach of the warranty of title, that Art. 116 applies and the period of six years begins to run when the contract is broken, that is to say when the decision is given in the suit for possession. The learned District Judge took the same view. I am unable to agree with this decision. The deed dated 23rd June 1906 is the basis of this suit. It was a mortgage deed, but as such it was invalid and void ab initio, because the property which Ram Lal purported to mortgage did not belong to him but to the joint family. This point is settled for me by the decision in Gajodhar Bakhsh v. Gauri Shankar (1). There remains any other remedy which the mortgagee may have.

Whether or not there was a personal covenant to re-pay the money, there was a right on the part of the mortgagee to recover his money under section 68 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act. It is that right which he is exercising now. I do not think the clause which I have quoted about defect in the land really applies to the present suit. It is the fact that the mortgagee cannot get possession which entitles him to get his money back. The question is when this right accrued?

Now according to his plaint in the former suit the mortgagor refused to give him possession in the year 1908. That was his cause of action for the suit for possession which he brought in 1917. He could have sued then for his money. Thus that cause of action became barred by time in 1914. No other cause of action has accrued since.

There is another bar to the plaintiff's suit. It is the provision of O. II, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code. When he was refused possession he could bring the suit for possession. But under section 68 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act he could also bring a suit for his money. He is not allowed to bring first one suit, then the other, unless he obtains the leave of the Court at the time of bringing the first suit,

(1) 61 Ind. Cas. 205; 8 O. L. J., 81.

That rule is strictly interpreted in Muhammad Hafiz v. Muhammad Zakariya, (2).

On the point of res judicata I hold, following Giriya Chettiar v. Sabapathy Mudaliar (3) which appears to be on all fours with the present case, that there is no res judicata here, because the Munsif who tried the former suit could not, by reason of his limited pecuniary jurisdiction, have tried the present suit.

In the result the appeal succeeds and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed as barred by time. The appellants will get their costs in all the three Courts.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

(2) 65 Ind. Cas. 79; 49 I. A., 9.; 20 A. L. J. 17; 26 C. W. N. 297; (1922) M. W. N. 89; 35 C. L. J. 126; 42 M. L. J. 248; 15 L. W. 377; 24 Bom. L. R. 341; 30 M. L. T. 224; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 23; 44 A 121; 3 P. L. T. 279 (P. C.).

(3) 29 M. 65.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 658 OF 1921.

February 9, 1923.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

TALAKCHAND BHERAJI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

ATMARAM KESHAV VAIDYA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92, applicability of—Construction of document—Sale or mortgage—Burden of proof—Oral agreement, evidence of, admissibility of.

Plaintiffs conveyed certain property to defendant No. 1 by what purported to be a sale-deed, but the property remained in the possession of the plaintiffs. Defendant No. 1 subsequently sold the property to defendant No. 2. Plaintiffs attested the deed of sale. Part of the consideration was paid to defendant No. 1 and the balance to the plaintiffs and possession of the property was transferred to defendant No. 2. Some years afterwards the plaintiffs sued to redeem the property on the allegation that the transfers in favour of defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 were both mortgages:

Held, (1) that by attesting the sale-deed in favour of defendant No 2 and transferring possession of the property to him plaintiffs became in effect parties to the transfer and the onus lay on them of proving that the transaction was a mortgage and not a sale; [p. 344, col. 1.]

(2) that evidence of an oral agreement that defendant No. 2 had agreed to reconvey the property to the plaintiffs after he had paid himself the principal and interest out of the profits, was inadmissible under the provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act. [p. 344, col. 1.]

Maung Kyin v. Ma Shwe La, 42 Ind. Cas. 642; 44 I. A. 236 20 Bom. L. R. 278; 15 A L. J. 825; 33 M. L. J. 648; 3 P L. W. 185; 6 L. W. 777; 22 C. W. N. 257; 23 M. L. T. 36; 27 C. L. J. 175; (1918) M. W. N. 300; 45 C. 320; 9 L. B. R. 114; 11 Bur. L. T. 21 (P. C.), distinguished.

The language of section 92 of the Evidence Act in terms applies only as between the parties to an instrument and their representatives-in-interest. Whenever evidence is tendered as to a transaction with a third party it is not governed by the section or by the rule of evidence which it contains, and in such a case the oridnary rules of evidence of equ y and good conscience come into play unhampered by statutory restrictions. [p. 345, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decision of the Joint Judge, Thana, in Appeal No. 199 of 1920, reversing a decree passed by the Second Class Subordinate Judge at Dahanu, in Civil Suit No. 238 of 1919.

Mr. H. C. Coyajee (with him Mr. K. N. Koyajee), for the Appellant.

Mr. Rangnekar, (with him Mr. W. B. Pradhan) for Respondents No. 1 to 4.

Mr. A. G. Desai, for Respondent No. 5.

JUDGMENT.—The facts leading up to this suit are as follows: The plaintiffs who are four brothers executed a deed on May 30, 1907, purporting to convey the suit property to one Ramchandra Ganesh for Rs. 99. The sale-deed provided that if the vendors returned the sum of Rs. 99 with compound interest at the rate of one per cent. per mensem within one year the vendee should return the property and pass a legal document for the same with possession.

On August 12, 1910, the plaintiffs executed a sale-deed of the same property in favour of one Kesrichand Hiraji. The consideration was Rs. 150 which was made up by paying Rs. 72-8-0, the balance owing under the transaction of May 30, 1907, to Ramchandra and Rs. 77-8-0 to the plaintiffs, who still remained in possession. Kesrichand died leaving a minor son Fatehchand.

On August 10, 1912, Navalmal Hiraji, as guardian for the minor, conveyed the property to Talakchand Bheraji for Rs. 399 with possession. The four plaintiffs attested the deed.

The plaintiffs alleged that plaintiff No. 2 was an agriculturist at the dates of all these transactions. They further alleged that the sale-deed of August 12, 1910, was really a mortgage, that as they wanted further moneys and Navalmal was pressing for the money due to the minor Fatehchand, an agreement was entered into with Talakchand, defendant No. 2, to mortgage the properties to him for Rs. 399 of which Rs. 200 was to be paid to Navalmal and Rs. 199 to the plaintiffs. Defendant No. 2 was to be put in possession of the properties and out of the profits he was to deduct interest at twelve per cent. per annum and appropriate the surplus towards paying off the principal.

Accordingly they sued for a declaration that the sale-deeds of August 12, 1910 and August 10, 1912, were really mortgages, for accounts under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act of the mortgage in favour of defendant No. 2 and for redemption. Both the lower Courts have found that plaintiff No. 2 was not an agriculturist.

The trial Judge decided that the transactions of August 12, 1910, and August 10, 1912, were not proved to be mortgages and dismissed the suit.

The Joint Judge in appeal held that the plaintiffs were entitled to prove the real nature of the transactions and came to the conclusion on the evidence that all the three transactions referred to above were mortgages, and allowed plaintiffs to redeem on paying to defendant No. 2 Rs. 276-6-5 for principal and interest and Rs. 750 for improvements.

The second defendant has appealed.

The Joint Judge in discussing the evidence in paragraph 10 of his judgment says that the evidence coupled with the conduct of the parties proved beyond doubt that the transactions with Kesrichand of August, 1910, and with defendant of August, 1912, were mortgages. The object of the transfer by Navalmal to defendant No. 2 was no other than to pay off the prior debt which was demanded and to obtain a further advance on the same security. There would be no doubt that defendant No. 2 was aware of that intention because otherwise there would be no necessity to ask the plaintiff No. 2 to engross the deed and obtain the signatures of his brothers to the document. That conduct was incompatible with the ignorance of defendant No. 2 of the real nature of the transaction with Kesrichand. The amount paid was distributed as alleged by the plaintiffs. If, therefore, knowing the relationship between Kesrichand and the plaintiffs defendant No. 2 obtained a sale out and out from Navalmal, it would be to the knowledge of both parties a transfer non domino as was held in Maung Kyin v Ma Shwe La (1), the facts of which case the learned Judge thought to be on all fours with the facts in this case. It would be tantamount to fraud on the plaintiffs.

The flaw in this argument is apparent when we point out that, assuming for the moment that plaintiffs wished to sell the properties to defendant No. 2 for Rs. 399 to enable them to pay off Kesrichand's mortgage and keep the balance of the consideration for themselves, the transaction would have been effected in the same way as the transaction of August 10, 1912. As Kesrichand's son was the ostensible owner he would be the party to convey through his guardian and the plaintiffs by attesting the deed could be taken as giving their assent as owners of the equity of redemption. An attesting witness need not as such be considered as being aware of the contents of the document he attests, but this document was actually engrossed by plaintiff No. 2. The plaintiffs gave possession to defendant No. 2 and it is difficult to see in what other manner they could have acted, if they had, as a matter of fact, intended that defendant No. 2 should become full owner of the properties. Taking it for granted that defendant No. 2 knew that the transaction of August 12, 1910, was a mortgage, there could be no fraud on the part of defendant No. 2, unless it could be proved that defendant No. 2 agreed to re-convey on the understanding that possession was given to him to pay himself principal and interest out of the profits. If defendant No. 2 had got possession from Navalmal's guardian knowing that Navalmal was a mortgagee, then undoubtedly the plaintiffs would have the right to redeem the mortgage within twelve years under Art. 134. The learned Judge does not seem to have realised the importance of the fact that plaintiffs themselves gave possession to defendant No. 2 and so became in effect parties to the transaction of August 10, 1912, and it would lie upon them to prove that it was a mortgage. At any rate it would be difficult to contend that the defendant No. 2 took the property from one who was not the owner when by giving possession they could be taken as representing to defendant No. 2 that he was the owner.

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 642: 44 I. A. 236; 20 Bom. L.R. 278; 15 A. L. J. 825; 33 M. L. J. 648; 3 P. L. W. 185; 6 L. W. 777; 22 C. W. N. 257; 23 M. L. T. 36; 27 C. L. J. 175; (1918) M. W. N. 300; 45 C. 320; 9 L. B. R. 114; 11 Bur. L. T. 21 (P. C.).

It would be different if the plaintiffs were suing to redeem the mortgage of 1910 on the ground that their mortgagee had purported to sell as owner to defendant No. 2, the latter knowing that he was not the owner. But plaintiffs are suing to redeem on the footing that the transaction of August 1912 was a mortgage, and they are the mortgagors to defendant No. 2. It would seem, therefore, that in the peculiar circumstances of the case the provisions of section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act would apply and plaintiffs would be debarred from proving the agreement, they alleged was entered into when the sale-deed of August 1912 was executed. We now turn to the case cited by the learned Judge to see whether the decision therein can assist the plaintiffs. The facts were as follows:—

Myaing was the owner of four plots of land A, B, C, and D. On November 30, 1921, Myaing having borrowed from Maung Kyin and Ma Ngwe Zan his wife Rs. 8,500 at Rs. 1-8-0 per cent. per month granted an out and out conveyance of A and B to Kyin and his wife. No possession passed, interest was paid and Rs. 3,500 out of the loan were repaid leaving a balance of Rs. 5,000. On March 4, 1903, Kyin and his wife obtained payment of Rs. 5,000 from U Shwe Pe and his wife and conveyed A and B to them. On February 13, 1902, Kyin and his wife having advanced Rs. 11,565 to Myaing purchased properties C and D by public auction but no possession passed. On March 4, 1903, Kyin and his wife transferred their properties to U Shwe Pe and his wife for Rs. 11,000, Rs. 565 having been paid in the meantime by Myaing. U Shwe Pe and his wife, therefore, became by ex facie conveyances from Kyin and his wife vested in all the properties in suit. Myaing was no party to these transactions, but there was correspondence showing that he was desirous of having, and obtained the benefit of, a reduction in the rate of interest from one-eighth per cent. per month to one per cent.

On November 20, 1905, Myaing convered his equity of redemption to Kyin and his wife on the footing that he considered he had only granted mortgages over his property.

U Shwe Pe having died his widow and children brought the suit for possession of the lands against Kyin and his wife. They resisted possession being given on the ground that U Shwe Pe and his wife well knew that in spite of the absolute conveyance to them, the true nature of the transaction was one of mortgage upon the security of the properties, in particular that they knew that Kyin and his wife were not in fact the owners, but themselves only lenders thereon. So that the transfer, although absolute in form was in truth and to the knowledge of both parties a transfer a non domino and the Kyins were purporting to sell and the Shwe Pes were purporting to buy what they both knew belonged to Myaing. When the case first came before the Board on appeal from the Chief Court of Burma which had granted a decree for possession, it was held that the plaintiffs-appellants' case disclosed a charge of fraud against the respondents in relation to matters antecedent to the deeds of March 4, 1903, upon which charge much of the evidence tendered would be material, and that section 92 did not preclude evidence of fraudulent dealing with a third person's property, nor proof of notice that the property purporting to be conveyed absolutely belonged to a third party who was not a party to the conveyance. Accordingly a new trial was ordered with the direction that the evidence should be admitted subject to objection. The Trial Judge held that Myaing and the Kyins intended the transfers between them to be mortgages, that Myaing's object in the negotiations which resulted in the deeds of March 4, 1903, was to transfer the mortgages to U Shwe Pe and that the latter knew this and agreed to take over the mortgages and so were guilty of fraud in taking absolute conveyances. So the suit was dismissed. In appeal the learned Judges agreed with the findings as to the knowledge of U Shwe Pe and the intention of the parties but were of opinion that as Myaing knew the nature of the instruments there was no antecedent fraud, nor was fraud at the time of, or antecedent to, the deeds of March 4, 1903, alleged, and accordingly passed a decree for possession. The defendants appealed to the Privy Council. Their Lordships on the finding of fact that when Shwe Pe took the conveyance from the Kyins he knew that it was a conveyance of property which belonged to Myaing held that the fraud proceeded a non domino. If section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act applied, proviso 1 would be in point because it would be a fraud to insist upon a claim to property arising under such a transaction, the claimant knowing that the true owner had never parted with it. But in their Lordships' opinion section 92 did not apply because the evidence, the admissibility of which was in question, was evidence going to show what were the rights of a third person, namely, Myaing, in the property. The language of section 92 in terms applied and applied alone "as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest." Whenever, accordingly, evidence was tendered as to a transaction with a third party it was not governed by the section or by the rule of evidence which it contained, and in such a case accordingly the ordinary rules of evidence of equity and good conscience came into play unhampered by the statutory restrictions. It may also be noted that it was proved by the original Judge of the Chief Court that Myaing and the Kyins meant their transactions to be mortgages and that Myaing's object in the negotiations which resulted in the conveyances to U Shwe Pe and his wife was to transfer those mortgages at a lower rate of interest, and U Shwe Pe's letters showed he knew this and agreed to take over a mortgage, so that by deliberately getting deeds of sale executed a gross fraud on Myaing was perpetrated. On the other hand the Appellate Judges appear to have thought that Myaing was acquainted with the nature of the instruments so that the fraud could appear to be not so much the taking of absolute conveyances, but the assertions that they were absolute conveyances, and not transfers of the original mortgages from the mortgagee. But a defendant relying on a rule of evidence which prevents a Court from taking certain evidence can hardly be said to be guilty of a fraud. It may be otherwise in the case of a plaintiff. Applying the facts of that case to the facts of the case before us various discrepancies at once become apparent. The transaction of August 1912 was not in any event a transfer of the mortgage of August 1910, it was really a transaction between the owner and defendant No. 2 whereby Rs. 399 were paid out of which Rs. 200 went to the prior mortgagee, thus extinguishing that mortgage. No question of fraud arises unless it be fraud to contend that a document which is on the face of it a sale-deed cannot be proved by oral evidence to be something else, in which case section 92 would be practically useless. The plaintiffs are now asking the Court to admit evidence that at the time the conveyance of August 1912 was executed as a result of which they got free of their debt to defendant No. 1, obtained Rs. 199 for themselves and gave possession to the defendant No. 2, there was an oral agreement to re-convey, defendant No. 2 agreeing to pay himself his capital and interest out of the profits. Admitting that defendant No. 2 knew that defendant No. 1 was only a mortgagee, we cannot conclude that defendant No. 2 got no title considering the other circumstances. When the learned Appellate

Judge says that the object of the transfer to defendant No. 2 was to pay off the prior debt to obtain a further advance on the same security he is begging the question. If a sale had been intended it would have been effected in exactly the same way, and the plaintiff has to prove, not that he can redeem the first mortgage as having been transferred to defendant No. 2, but whether he can redeem an entirely different mortgage which he alleges exists between himself and defendant No. 2. Therefore, in our opinion, though the decision in Maung Kyin v. Ma Shwe La (1) enables the plaintiffs to prove that the transaction of August 1910 was a mortgage that alone will not entitle them to recover back the property from defendant No. 2. The learned Trial Judge points out that the real transferors in August 1912 were the plaintiffs, though Navalmal, as guardian of the minor defendant No. 1, executed the conveyance in order to avoid the trouble and expense of taking a reconveyance from Navalmal, and that the whole consideration of Exhibit 32 had gone to the plaintiffs. But he seems to have thought on the strength of the evidence of certain exhibits that the value of the property in 1912 was in excess of Rs. 399 though the Government assessment was very low, and he believed the plaintiffs' story about an agreement to re-convey because defendant No. 2 only derived it by saying he had left everything to Punamchand, and Punamchand was not called as a witness though he was in Court. The Joint Judge thought that the price paid was inadequate for an absolute transfer but the whole of his reasoning by which he comes to the conclusion that the transaction of August 1912 was a mortgage is in our opinion fallacious. We do not exclude the possibility that defendant No. 2 treated the transaction as a mortgage and that if the plaintiffs are believed when they say there was an agreement to re-convey to them, that would be a finding of fact which we could not refuse to acknowledge in second appeal. But if the findings are based on inference which, in the opinion of the Court, is wrong, then it becomes a question of law. The conclusion we have come to is that on the fact of this case it can be distinguished from the case of Maung Kyin v. Ma Shwe La (1) and that the provisions of section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act preclude the plaintiffs from proving the agreement they rely upon. We would allow the appeal and dismiss the suit with costs throughout except as against defendant No. 1.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 4 OF 1923.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 208 OF 1922.
March 19, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.

MOHKAM SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THAKUR CHANDRA PAL SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 7—Redemption, suit for—Usufructuary mortgage—Decree, form of—Accounts.

Under O. XXXIV, r. 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure it is open to the Court either to order that an account shall be taken of what will be due to the defendant for the principal and interest due on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit, if any, or to declare the amount due at the date of such order; but in either case the Court should proceed to ascertain the amount which would be found due on the date which is to be fixed for payment and specify what the consequence of the payment of that amount or the non-payment thereof would be. If it merely directs that an account should be taken of what would be due to the mortgagee for the principal and interest due on the mortgage, its order would be nothing more than an interlocutory order, to be followed by the making up of such an account, till which the preparation of the preliminary decree should be postponed. [p. 347, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated the 5th September 1921.

Mr. Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellant.

Pandit Gokaran Nath Misra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These appeals arise out of a suit for redemption instituted by one of the original mortgagors in respect of a usufructuary mortgage effected by him and other persons in favour of Umrao Singh, the grandfather of the defendant-respondent on the 1st October 1874. The main questions for consideration were whether the usufruct of the mortgaged property was sufficient to pay the interest payable under the deed of mortgage, whether any surplus or deficiency had accrued on account thereof and whether either party was entitled to claim interest thereon.

The Trial Court passed a preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken without determining the amount which was payable by the mortgagor on redemption. Subsequently it went into the accounts and determined the amount payable to the mortgagee and directed the plaintiff-appellant to pay the same within a certain period. No final decree was, however, framed in accordance with that direction.

The entire procedure adopted by the Court below was irregular. Under O. XXXIV, r. 7, of the Code of Civil Procedure it is open to the Court either to order that an account shall be taken of what will be due to the defendant for the principal and interest due on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit, if any, or to declare the amount due at the date of such order; but in either case the Court should proceed to ascertain the amount which would be found due on the date which is to be fixed for payment and specify what the consequence of the payment of that amount or the non-payment thereof would be. If it merely directs that an account should be taken of what would be due to the mortgagee for the principal and interest due on the mortgage, as was originally done by the learned Subordinate Judge here, its order would be nothing more than an interlocutory order, to be followed by the making up of such an account, till which the preparation of the preliminary decree should be postponed. The Trial Court proceeded to prepare a preliminary decree without waiting for the determination of the amount due on the mortgage and the consequence was that the preliminary decree omitted to specify the amount which the mortgagor was required to pay. When the accounts were finally adjusted no preliminary decree was prepared but a formal order was framed, for which in a case of this character it was wholly inappropriate.

The appeals are, therefore, allowed and the preliminary decree and the subsequent formal order prepared by the Trial Court are set aside and the suit remanded to that Court with a direction to reinstate it under its original number and to prepare a preliminary decree for redemption in accordance with law. The costs here and hitherto will abide the event.

Appeals allowed.

Z. K.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 145 OF 1921.

April 17, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Phillips and Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

THAREESARUMA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 6 TO 8—APPELLANTS

versus

THE DEPUTY COLLECTOR, COCHIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 23, 24—Compensation, assessment of—Special value, whether can be taken into account—Agricultural land assessed as building site—Trees, value of, whether can be allowed.

In determining the amount of compensation payable for the compulsory acquisition of land by Government under the Land Acquisition Act the correct principle to apply is to assess the market value of the property not according to its present disposition but as laid out in the most lucrative and advantageous way in which owners could dispose of it. In assessing the market value of land used for agricultural purposes, the Court must take into account its adaptability for building purposes and such other beneficial purposes to which it can be applied. [p. 349, col. 2.]

If, however, the special value exists only for the particular purchaser who has obtained power of compulsory purchase it cannot be taken into consideration in fixing the price. But when the special value exists also for other possible purchasers, the owner is entitled to have this element of value taken into consideration. [p. 349, col. 1.]

The Queen v. Brown, (1867) 2 Q. B. 630: 36 L. J. Q. B. 322. In re Lucas and Chesterfield Gas and Water Board, (1909) 1 K. B. 16 at pp. 30, 31: 77 L. J. K. B. 1009, 99 L. T. 767; 72 J. P. 437; 6 L. G. R. 1106; 24 T. L. R. 858; In re Bwllfa and Merthyr Dare Steam Collieries (1891), Limited and the Pontypridd Waterworks Company, (1902) 2 K. B. 135 at p. 141; 71 L. J. K. B. 613; 87 L. T. 291; 50 W. R. 627; 18 T. L. R. 694; Wernicke v. Secretary of State for India, 2 Ind. Cas. 562; 13 C. W. N. 1046 at p. 1049; Kailas Chandra Mitra v. Secretary of State, 18 Ind. Cas. 638; 17 C. L. J. 34 at p. 35; Premchand Burral v. Collector of Calcutta, 2 C. 103; 1 Ind. Jur. 267; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 363; Collector of Poona v. Kashinath Khasgiwala, 10 B. 585; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 778; In the matter of the Lands Acquisition Act X of 1870; Munji Khetsey, 15 B. 279; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 189 and Raghunath Rao v. Secretary of State for India, 60 Ind. Cas. 187; 13 L. W. 11; 39 M. L. J. 623; (1920) M. W. N. 759; 28 M. L. T. 397; 44 M. 264, considered and applied.

Where agricultural lands are valued as building sites, the claimants are not entitled to ask that the trees standing on the lands should be separately assessed and valued as fruit bearing trees, since what is awarded is an inclusive price. [p. 351, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the District Court, South Malabar, in Land Acquisition Case No. 2 of 1919.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. M. C. Madhavan Nair, O. T. Govindan Nambiar and T. S. Viswanatha Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Phillips, J.—I think the District Judge is inclined to allow insufficient weight to the award itself, which is the estimate of an impartial officer, based upon evidence and personal enquiry, and cannot therefore be ignored in coming to a conclusion on the evidence, but notwithstanding this I am not prepared to differ from his conclusions and I agree in the order proposed by my learned brother.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The land acquired is 6 acres 56 cents in extent and is in Cochin Town. The learned District Judge has very clearly set out in his judgment the situation of the land, and it is sufficient for the present purpose to say that it is close to Kalvetti densely covered with houses and that a tidal channel runs through it. On the west is the European quarter fronting the sea and on the north is the commercial land abetting on the back water. The learned District Judge has proceeded on the assumption that the value of the land in the aforesaid two localities cannot furnish any basis for purposes of comparison and this has not been seriously attacked before us.

The main question, however, is, is the value to be assessed on the footing that the land is agricultural, as has been done by the Deputy Collector or its adaptability for building purposes to be taken into consideration, as has been done by the District Judge? On behalf of the Government three witnesses were examined. The first witness, who is a Municipal Councillor, admits that on the acquired portion people have lived for a long time and that there were tiled dwelling houses. He, however, states that it is marshy and not fit for commercial purposes and that respectable people would not live there. The second witness says that, except for 60 feet breadth of the canal, the whole site is available for house building and admits that the most profitable way of developing the acquired land would be to deepen the channel and use the banks for warehouses. He also says that respectable people would not live on the site and the third witness similarly deposes that the land is not fit for mercantile purposes, that it is not healthy and that well-to-do people would not live there. The effect of the evidence is that the sanitary conditions are not satisfactory and that people, who can afford to live in more healthy surroundings or in more fashionable parts of the town, would not generally reside on the site acquired. The land has been acquired for building purposes and it is not disputed that, when it is reclaimed, it can be rendered suitable for house sites.

The learned District Judge has held that the owner is entitled to the value obtainable in open market for the land if put to its most lucrative use. It seems to me that he has stated the principle correctly. In the Queen v. Brown (1) agricultural land was held to have a potential value for building purposes, Cockburn, C. J., observing "Jury may take into account not only the present purpose to which the land is applied, but also any other more beneficial purpose to which in the course of events at no remote period it may be applied....."

.. ..

(1) (1867) 2 Q. B. 630; 36 L. J. Q. B. 322.

If the special value exists only for the particular purchaser who has obtained power of compulsory purchase it cannot be taken into consideration in fixing the price. But when the sepcial value exists also for other possible purchasers, the owner is entitled to have this element of value taken into consideration. See the observations of Lord Moulton in In re Lucas and Chesterfield Gas and Water Board (2). The principle underlying this dictum is that the purpose for which the land is acquired should not be taken into consideration, for, if it were so, the public would be purchasing as it were, its own improvements. See Werniche v. Secretary of State for India (3). Land Acquisition Act, section 24 (5) embodies this rule. But when the special value exists for other possible purchasers, there is a market in which the special value goes towards fixing the market price. See again the observations of Lord Moulton in In re Lucas and Chesterfield Gas and Water Board (2) above cited. Under section 23, the Court is to take into consideration the market value of the land. The expression "market value" has been described as the price that an owner, willing and not obliged to sell, might reasonably expect to obtain from a willing purchaser, Kaila Chandra Mitra v. Secretary of State (4), and the special adaptability for building purposes has been repeatedly held to be an element to be taken into consideration. "If, for instance, says Vaughan Williams, L. J., in In re Bwllfa and Merthyr Dare Steam Collieries (1891), Limited and the Pontypridd Waterworks Company (5) "he (the umpire) has to assess the value of land which is used as an agricultural land, he is entitled to take into consideration its adaptability for building land, because that is a fact which is in existence at the time the notice to treat is given."

The value for future purposes is generally referred to as the potential value of the land. "The Tribunals assessing compensation may take into account not only the present purpose to which the land is applied, but also any other more beneficial purpose to which, in the course of events, it might within a reasonable period be applied....." Lord Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. II, p. 37.

This is a well established principle and has been recognised in numerous decisions in India. It was held in Premchand Burral v. Collector of Calcutta (6) that the correct principle to apply is to assess the market value of the property not according to its present disposition but as laid out in the most lucrative and advantageous way in which the owners could dispose of it (page 108.) Similarly in Collector of Poona v. Kashinath Khasgiwala (7) where the land acquired was originally devoted to agricultural purposes, compensation was awarded on the footing of the most lucrative use of the land, and it was not disputed that there the most advantageous way was to use it for building purposes. This principle was applied in In the matter of The Land Acquisition Act X of 1870; Munji Khetsey (8) where the land acquired lay in the vicinity of a town where building was going on and there was a fair probability of the owner being able, owing to its situation, to sell or lease his land for building purposes. I may also refer to a recent decision of this Court in Raghunath Rao v. Secretary of State for India (9) which recognises this principle.

The Deputy Collector arrived at the value of the land by capitalizing income. The income was necessarily of the land according to its present disposition and not as laid out in the most lucrative and advantageous way in which the owner could dispose of it. The income was of the land as used for agricultural purposes. The method adopted is opposed to the principle

(2) (1909) 1 K. B. 16 at pp. 30, 31; 77 L. J. K. B. 1009; 99 L. T. 767; 72 J. P. 437; 6 L. G. R. 1108; 24 T. L. R. 858.
(3) 2 Ind. Cas. 562; 13 C. W. N. 1046; at p. 1049.
(4) 18 Ind. Cas. 638; 17 C. L. J. 34 at p. 35.
(5) (1902) 2 K. B. 135 at p. 141; 71 L. J. K. B. 613; 87 L. T. 291; 50 W. R. 627; 18 T. L. R. 604.
(6) 2 C. 103; 1 Ind. Jur. 267; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 363.
(7) 10 B. 585; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 778.
(8) 15 B. 279; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 189.
(9) 60 Ind. Cas. 187; 13 L. W. 11; 39 M. L. J. 623; (1920) M. W. N. 759; 28 M. L. T. 397; 44 M. 264.

as enunciated in the decisions on the subject both English and Indian. The learned District Judge, on the other hand, has adopted the method of valuation of fixing the price with reference to the value of the lands adjacent to the land acquired and possessing similar advantages. I have no doubt whatsoever that he has adopted the correct method.

I have so far dealt with the principle to be applied in determining the compensation. The next question to be decided is, has the District Judge come to a right conclusion on the evidence before him? In my opinion he has correctly appreciated the evidence and as I agree with his conclusion I shall deal with this aspect of the case very briefly. He has adverted to the sale-deeds covering the lands in the vicinity. Of these it seems to me that the following are material and furnish the basis for the valuation of the land in question (1) Exhibit IX relates to No. 369 sold in 1913 at Rs. 75 per cent. (2) Exhibit VI relates to No. 362 sold in 1916 at Rs. 80 per cent. (3) Exhibit VIII relates to No. 360 sold in 1917 at Rs. 100 per cent. (4) Exhibit XI relates to the 30 year leases granted by the Municipality in 1918 at Rs. 176 to Rs. 225 per cent of the Survey No. 578 reclaimed by the Municipality. Then we have another class of sale-deeds which have not the same direct bearing on the question but which in a greater or less degree prove that the value of the land has been rising and is generally high throughout Cochin (1) Exhibit VII which relates to No. 79 sold for Rs. 170 per cent in 1919 after the date of the notification, (2) Exhibit III which relates to No. 607 which fetched in 1918 Rs. 700 a cent, (3) Exhibit XXIII which elates to No. 571 which fetched Rs. 1,440 per cent. This was in 1919 after the date of the notification. On this material and on some oral evidence the District Judge came to the conclusion that Rs. 100 a cent fairly represents the value of the sites with a good road frontage in the locality in question. I am not prepared to disagree with him. As was observed in The Trustees for the Improvement of the City of Bombay v. Karsandas (10), no evidence of former sales can be obtained which shall be precisely parallel in all its circumstances to the sale of the land compulsorily acquired and differences exist and it is impossible to state with precision what allowance should be made for them. The learned District Judge has rightly refused to adopt a valuation based upon Exhibits III and XXIII. The lands comprised by them are situated in the northern portion which, as already observed is the valuable commercial land abutting on the back water. No, 79 fetched no doubt Rs. 170 per cent, but this fact is not very useful not only because the sale was subsequent to the date of the notification but also because the plot is as the District Judge describes it, 'a good corner block.' I may here state that, in respect of the land covered by Exhibit XI, it costs the Municipality Rs. 80 per cent to re-claim it. It was argued on behalf of some of the claimants that the 30 years leases of this re-claimed land fetched on the average Rs. 200 per cent and deducting Rs. 80 from it a compensation of at least Rs. 120 per cent should have been awarded. But this argument ignores the fact that the situation of the re-claimed land No. 578, is more favourable than that of the land in question. The former is much nearer the commercial quarter of the town. Dealing with individual claims in regard to Nos. 373 to 375, the District Judge thinks that as they constitute a compact site Rs. 100 per cent would be reasonable and he deducts as cost of re-clamation Rs. 60 and awards Rs. 40 per cent. I am satisfied that this is a fair valuation. It is difficult to say whether Rs. 100 or Rs. 120 or a little more or less is the proper value of the land and it is equally difficult to say whether the cost of re-clamation would be Rs. 80 or Rs. 60 or some other figure near it. The District Judge had before him the evidence that it costs the Municipality Rs. 80 per cent. to re-claim the land covered by Exhibit XI. It is, indeed, impossible to accurately estimate the cost of the reclamation. It will depend upon the state of the land acquired and cost of labour and material. As their Lordships of the Judicial Committee observed Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs v. Charlesworth Pilling & Co. (11), "In such an enquiry relating to subjects abounding with uncertainties there is more than ordinary room for guess-work and it would be very unfair to require an exact exposition of reasons for the conclusions arrived at." On the whole however I have come to the conclusion that Rs. 40 per cent, is a proper valuation.

(10) 1 Ind. Cas. 451; 33 B. 28 at p. 32; 10 Bom. L. R. 688.

(11) 26 B. 1; 28 I. A. 121; 3 Bar. P. C. J. 1 (P. C.).

In regard to the valuation of a house on this site there has been some dispute. The learned District Judge allowed Rs. 2000 for it. There is evidence that it is worth that sum and there is no evidence contra.

Mr. Anantakrishna Aiyar argued on behalf of the claimants to whom these portions of the land belonged that his clients were entitled to the value of the trees on the land on the footing that they were fruit bearing trees. This contention is untenable because the basis of the calculation being that the lands are valued as building sites, the claimants cannot also have an advantage to which they will be entitled only if the lands have been dealt with as agricultural lands, on the other hand what has been awarded is an inclusive price; and the claimants cannot be heard to say that the trees should be separately assessed as fruit bearing trees.

The next item to be dealt with is item No. 392. For the land and houses the District Judge has awarded Rs. 6,000. The valuation of Rs. 75 per cent allowing for the inferiority of the site is, in my opinion right. The houses are valued at Rs. 4,800 and I am not prepared to say that the amount is excessive. The District Judge also takes note of the fact that there was an offer of Rs. 6,000 for the land and the houses together. I see no reason to differ from the findings of the District Judge on any of these points.

These conclusions will entail the dismissal of Appeal No. 145 of 1921 and the memorandum of cross-appeal filed on behalf of the first respondent, the Deputy Collector of Cochin. They will accordingly be dismissed with costs. So far as the memorandum of objections is concerned, the costs will be paid by the first respondent to the appellant and third respondent separately and will be taxed on the respective amounts claimed against each in the memorandum of objections.

There remains only one matter to be dealt with, the compensation fixed in respect of No. 378. The District Judge allowed only Rs. 50 per cent on the ground that the land in question did not have a proper access or a good frontage. He further allowed Rs. 1,000 for a house standing on the site. Adding the statutory 15 per cent he fixed the total sum at Rs. 1,840. This valuation was not seriously disputed either by the claimant or by the learned Advocate-General who appeared on behalf of the Government. The District Judge however, was under a misapprehension as regards this portion of the claim. He thought that there was an omission on the part of the owner to make a claim pursuant to the notice given under section 9, and he held that section 25 (2) was, therefore, applicable and refused to grant as compensation more than the amount awarded by the Collector, namely, Rs. 1,530 odd although on the merits he came to the conclusion that Rs. 1,840 was the correct valuation. It is now conceded that there was a claim pursuant to the notice under section 9 and that there was an oversight on the part of the District Judge. The learned Advocate-General, however, sought to support the judgment on the ground that it appears from the record that the application by the owner under section 18 requiring a reference to the Court was made after the expiry of the period of six weeks mentioned in clause 2 of that section. The point was for the first time taken before us, and we are not in a position to say that if an opportunity had been given to the owner, he would not have had an answer on this part of the case, and we cannot see our way to allow this objection to prevail. That objection failing, we must necessarily allow the memorandum of cross-objections filed by the second respondent to the extent found in his favour by the District Judge. He will pay and receive proportionate costs both here and in the lower Court.

V. N. V. Decree modified.

Z. K.

SIVA RAM V. SALIK.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

RENT APPEAL NO. 34 OF 1922.

March 14, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

SIVA RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SALIK—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Shankalup grant, whether transferable—Marwat, whether transferable.

Land which is shankalup and resumable is not transferable.

A marwat grant though not resumable is not transferable.

Appeal from a decree of the Third Additional District Judge, Sitapur, dated the 12th September 1922, reversing that of the Assistant Collector, First Class, Sitapur, dated the 5th October 1921.

Mr. H. K. Ghosh, for the Appellant.

Mr. Rabi Shanker, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is second appeal by a plaintiff. The suit was one for arrears of rent. The land in suit forms part of a muafi. The facts are probably stated more or less correctly by Salik the defendant examined as D. W. No. 1. The grant was made to Salik's father Jhao Ram who was killed fighting for the taluqdar. The grant of this kind is called marwat and is not transferable. There is other evidence to which I will come later that the grant was not marwat but was shankalup and resumable. In that case also it was not transferable. I do not decide this point.

As I have said Salik is the son of Jhao Ram. Jhao Ram had altogether seven sons. But apparently five of them have died childless and Salik is the only surviving son. There is, however, Sudarshan, son of Bindra who was the eldest son. According to Salik, Bindra managed the land while Salik was away at another village. But Bindra used to pay him half of the profits. After Bindra's death Salik undertook the management of the land and for a time Salik cultivated part and Sudarshan cultivated part. Then Sudarshan gave a possessory mortgage, presumbly of his own portion of land, to one Raghubar who appears to have cultivated it in right of this mortgage. He died and apparently his son Beni Madho cultivated after him. Then Sudarshan redeemed this mortgage and granted possessory mortgage in favour of the plaintiff. But Salik had obtained possession of the land and was cultivating it. On these facts plaintiff sued Salik for the whole of the rent. The learned Assistant Collector gave him a decree regarding Salik as a tenant, Sudarshan as the owner and the plaintiff as the representative of Sudarshan. Salik appealed. The learned Sessions Judge reversed this decree. He held in the first place that Sudarshan had no right of alienation and consequently the plaintiff possessed no right in land. Secondly he held that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between the parties

As regards the second point it can be got over by a resort to section 127 of the Rent Act. Salik may not be the plaintiff's tenant, but if the plaintiff is entitled to eject him as a trespasser, he has an option of treating him as a tenant and suing him for rent.

If the first objection holds good, the plaintiff cannot resort to section 127 because he has no title to possession, his own title being defective.

According to Exhibit C which is a list prepared in the year 1863 this land is shankalup and resumable. No resumable grant is transferable. According to the defendant's evidence the land is marwat and in that case it is not transferable, although it is not resumable, and that point can undoubtedly be taken by Salik because he has certain rights of inheritance in this land which might be prejudiced by a decision against him. In the present suit also he is in possession and the plaintiff cannot get the land from him unless he shows a title in himself or at least an acceptance of his title by the defendant.

For these reasons the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

JANG BAHADUR SINGH v. RANJIT SINGH.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 267 OF 1922.

April 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

JANG BAHADUR SINGH—DEFENDANT —APPELLANT

versus

RANJIT SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS — RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by father—After-born son, whether can challenge alienation—Suit by son in existence, effect of—Necessity—Burden of proof—Presumption.

Where a Hindu son brought a suit to challenge an alienation of family property made by his father, but before the suit could be decided another son was born to the alienor:

Held, that the cause of action had not been exhausted before the birth of the second son and the latter was, therefore, entitled to bring a suit to challenge the alienation. [p. 354, col. 1.]

Bhup Kuar v. Balbir Sahai, 64 Ind. Cas. 885; 19 A. L. J. 978; 44 A. 190; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 342, relied on.

Where there has been a transfer of family property by a Hindu father for cash down and the son of the transferor contests the legality of the sale the burden lies on the vendee to prove the valid nature of the consideration. [p. 354, col. 1.]

Where a Hindu father makes a transfer of family property and his minor sons are nominally joined in the transfer the presumption is that the transfer has been made by the father in his capacity as manager of the family. [p. 354, col. 2.]

Mahesh Dat v. Ram Asre, 67 Ind. Cas. 814; 9 O. L. J. 138; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 38; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 114, distinguished.

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 25th May 1922, upholding that of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 3rd November 1921.

Mr. Rajeshwari Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. Husain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Gaya Bakhsh Singh has two sons, the plaintiff Ranjit Singh and the defendant Chhedi Singh. On 22nd May 1911, Gaya Bakhsh Singh sold a certain ancestral family property to the defendant Jang Bahadur. On that date Chhedi Singh was in existence, but not the plaintiff Ranjit Singh. On 21st January 1916, Gaya Bakhsh Singh and his two sons, under the guardianship of their mother, mortgaged some other ancestral family property for Rs. 700 to the same Jang Bahadur Singh and subsequently on 16th July of the same year a deed of further charge of Rs. 200 was executed under similar circumstances. Ranjit Singh brought the present suit in 1920 for possession of the property transferred under the sale-deed and the two deeds of mortgage on the ground that the transfers were not made by the manager of the joint Hindu family for legal necessity or for the payment of antecedent debts. The Court of first instance of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad decreed the suit on condition of the plaintiff paying to the transferee Rs. 3,149-5-0, the amount which he considered to be valid of the considerations of the sale-deed and the mortgage-deeds.

Jang Bahadur's appeal to the learned District Judge of Fyzabad was dismissed and he has come here in second appeal. It was first argued that the plaintiff had no cause of action as regards the sale because he was not in existence at the time of the sale-deed. Chhedi Singh was in existence at the time, but it was represented that the cause of action, which existed in Chhedi Singh, was exhausted by his bringing a suit in 1913 for the recovery of the property sold. It was admitted that Ranjit Singh on birth would have acquired a cause of action to sue on the basis of the sale-deed because of the existence of Chhedi Singh at the time of the sale, if Chhedi Singh had not brought a suit to contest the sale-deed prior to the birth of the plaintiff. It has to be noticed, however, that the suit was not decided till after the birth of Ranjit Singh. For this reason, I am of opinion that the cause of action still existed in the family and that Ranjit Singh on his birth acquired a right to it. Such was the opinion of the Allahabad High Court under circumstances similar to those of the present case in Bhup Kuar v. Balbir Sahai (1). It was argued by the appellant's learned Counsel that the dismissal of the suit was to have effect from the date of institution of his suit by Chhedi Singh and that, therefore, it should be held that Chhedi Singh had no cause of action on the date of the institution of the suit. This argument does not impress me. In that suit it was not held that Chhedi Singh had no right to sue. Chhedi Singh's suit failed on the merits. There can be no question about his having a cause of action to get the sale set aside so far as it was not executed for legal family necessity or for the payment of antecedent debt. The cause of action did exist, and the only question is whether it had come to an end when Ranjit Singh was born. If it had come to an end of course there would have been no cause of action when Ranjit Singh was born to sue to avoid the sale-deed. The present suit by Ranjit Singh is, therefore, tenable.

(1) 64 Ind. Cas. 885; 19 A. L. J. 978; 44 A. 190; (1922) A. I. R. (A) 342.

The next point was that the property having passed out of the family the burden lay on the plaintiff son to prove that the transfer was made for an immoral purpose by the manager of the family. This principle of law applies only where the property has passed out of the family by foreclosure or sale in execution of a decree or where such a decree has been passed and new rights have come into existence. Where there has been a transfer for cash down and the son contests the legality of the sale the burden lies on the vendee to prove valid nature of the consideration. The argument of the appellant's learned Counsel that the fact of Chhedi Singh filing a suit to recover half the property amounted to a partition between him and his father deserves no comment. Chhedi Singh was a minor at the time and there was no intention on his part to separate from his father. It has been held by both Courts that there has been no separation in the family. This argument was advanced to confine the plaintiff's suit to half the property in suit.

The other grounds of appeal were common to both transactions of sale and mortgage. It was argued that the bulk of the consideration in both cases was held to be valid and that, therefore, the suit should have been dismissed. In the case of sale, Rs. 2,000 out of the consideration of Rs. 3,000 was held by the lower Courts to be valid, and in the case of the two mortgages over Rs. 730 out of Rs. 1,900 was held to have been borrowed without legal necessity. It cannot, therefore, be said that the transfer was valid for the bulk of the consideration.

As regards the mortgages it was argued on the authority of Mahesh Dat v. Ram Asre (2) that the plaintiff could obtain possession of only his one-third share of the property in suit because he was a party to the transfers under the guardianship of his mother. The case referred to by the learned Counsel was one where a brother and his two minor brothers under the guardianship of their mother had executed a transfer. In such a case a presumption may arise that the manager (brother) was not acting as the karta or manager of the family. The present case where a father makes a transfer and his minor sons are nominally joined, the presumption is that the transfer has been made by the father in his capacity as manager.

As regards ground No. 5 Chhedi Singh did not sue in 1913 in a representative character, and the decision in his suit cannot bind the plaintiff.

I shall not consider grounds of appeal Nos. 6, 7, 8 and 9, because they relate to the validity or otherwise of certain items making up the considerations of the different transfers and in this matter the findings of the lower Courts are binding on this Court.

I dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 814; 9 O. L. J. 138; 4 U. P. L. R. (O.) 38; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 114.

JAMNABAI v. FAZALBHOY HEPTOOLA.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

June 12, 1923.

Present:—Lord Sumner, Lord Phillimore, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

JAMNABAI—APPELLANT

versus

FAZALBHOY HEPTOOLA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 22—Compromise—Mistake of fact—Substantial injustice.

A compromise arrived at by the parties to a suit under a mistake of fact by one of them cannot be set aside unless serious and substantial injustice is shown to result therefrom. [p. 356, col. 1.]

Consolidated appeals from a judgment and two decrees of the Bombay High Court.

Messrs. De Gruyther, K. C., and J. M. Parikh, for the Appellant.

Sir George Lowndes, K. C., and Mr. E. B. Raikes, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Sumner.—These are consolidated appeals by one Jamnabai, the widow and executrix of Tricum Nathoo, who died so long ago as 1892. He had been a partner in a muccadamage firm, Khimji Jiwa and Co., with a gentleman called Khimji Jiwa, who had retired from the firm and had died before the time at which Tricum Nathoo died. The widow Jamnabai commenced these proceedings against certain persons who continued to carry on the same business as had been carried on by her late husband in partnership, although they changed the name of the firm. She brought an action for accounts, the principal object of which, so far as the present appeals are concerned, was to obtain an account and a share of certain buildings and the rents produced by those buildings, which originally had been purchased by her late husband and his partner while they were still in partnership. The buildings consisted on the one hand of a house built on the estate of the Port Trust in Bombay, and on the other of sundry godowns which were used in some way, not very clear, down to the date of the proceedings, by the defendants.

There are two appeals, from two decrees, which have been consolidated.

The first appeal relates to the alleged right of the plaintiff to have an account taken oves a long series of years of the rents and profits of the godowns, she herself bringing into account the rents of the house, but this apparently is a secondary matter, for the house has fallen into decay and is almost worthless.

The second appeal is brought in order that the appellant, Jamnabai, may have the opportunity of establishing her late husband's interest in the partnership business beyond the date to which the partnership account had been stated and balanced, and may have an account for that purpose. In order to succeed in that appeal, she has to establish her right to have an order set aside, which was in point of fact consented to by her Advocate before the learned Judge who made the order. It may be convenient to dispose of the second appeal quite shortly.

The learned Judge records that when he had expressed the opinion that the form in which a previous order had been drawn up did not prevent the plaintiff from being entitled to have its terms rectified and to have the accounts, which she desired to obtain, taken on a footing wider than its terms stated, her Counsel, having apparently considered the matter, intimated that he did not press to have an account actually taken, and that he would be content with an order in her favour for payment of a particular sum which, according to the note which the learned Judge took, was accepted by the learned Counsel, because he conceived it to be an amount agreed up to the date of the death of Tricum Nathoo, whereas it appears that it was really an amount agreed only up to the date of the last adjustment made in his life time, which was something like two years earlier. To that extent there is ground for saying if the learned Judge's note was correct as a statement of the reasons which prompted the Advocate at the time, that the Advocate gave this consent under a mistake of fact, the gravity of which may be substantial or may not, and when the plaintiff discovered, as she afterwards did, that this order had been made, under which she would get payment of this particular sum, but would not get the account which she desired, she took proceedings to get the consent order set aside and to prefer her claim to the account.

Their Lordships have had on both appeals the advantage of an argument from Mr. DeGruyther, on behalf of the appellant, equally illuminating and candid. With regard to this appeal he accepted as the law, which governs his position, that serious and substantial injustice to his client must be shown to result from letting the consent order stand which was made under the circumstances mentioned. There has been some controversy as to whether his client was consulted by her Advocate at the time when the consent was given. Upon that the High Court express no definite opinion, and all their Lordships need say is that they have not formed the affirmative opinion that she and her brother, who was assisting her and was present in Court, were not cognisant of what was going on, but it is unnecessary to express a definite opinion about it. The High Court after examining the circumstances with some care came formally to the conclusion that, so far from any possible injustice having been done to the appellant by the course taken it probably was beneficial so far as she was concerned, because, while the account which she asked for apparently might have secured some few hundred further rupees in addition to the very much larger sum that she got under the consent order, she would have had to run risks as to costs and possibly otherwise, from which it was advisable to protect her.

Their Lordships see no reason whatever for revising the opinion upon this point formed by the High Court, and, that being so, the foundation upon which Mr. DeGruyther based his right to ask to have that order set aside and the account directed has failed. This appeal, therefore, is unsuccessful.

The first appeal Mr. DeGruyther has also frankly stated to have been rested all along upon the contention that the properties in question, the dwelling house and the godowns, were assets of the partnership firm of Khimji Jiwa and Co., and not merely buildings which these two gentlemen, the plaintiff's deceased husband and Mr. Khimji Jiwa, had bought for their own reasons and apparently held as co-owners in equal moieties.

The High Court examined the facts with some care and based their judgment upon the conclusion of fact that the true position was co-ownership in the properties and not that they were partnership assets belonging to the firm of Khimji Jiwa and Co.

Their Lordships cannot see their way upon this question of fact to say that the conclusion of the High Court in this appeal was wrong. They have been pressed by Mr. De Gruyther, who has missed no point which possibly could have been raised on behalf of his client, to say that because the record does not set out the account to which the High Court referred in one or two passages, and because it may be argued that the mode of dealing with the rents of the properties, which the learned Judges either inferred or had stated to them, might have been different, the conclusion that they were dealt with in the way assumed is one that ought not to be supported.

It appears to their Lordships that they ought to presume that the High Court did not make these statements and come to this conclusion as to the facts without having had materials before it. Although normally all the materials are to be found in the record in one shape or another, certain documents have not been printed in this record which were available in the Court below, and the proceedings were proceedings in which there was much common ground, and their Lordships, therefore, think that they have nothing to justify them in saying that the prima facie assumption of the correctness of the judgment below, which the appellant has to displace, has been successfully met.

The result, therefore, is that the appellant fails in this appeal also.

In their Lordships' opinion both appeals ought to be dismissed with costs, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

Solicitor for the Appellant:—Mr. E. Dalgado.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Nicholl, Manisty & Co.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER NO. 241 OF 1922.

April 27, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Dass and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahai.

PANCHU BANIA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ANAND THAKUR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 33—Decree against some of several defendants—Appeal against others—Execution of decree—Limitation, operation of.

Where a suit is decreed as against some of several defendants and dismissed as against the rest and the plaintiff prefers an appeal, he is entitled to wait till the decision of the appeal, before proceeding with the execution of the decree he has already obtained, if, in the case of the Appellate Court comin to the conclusion that his appeal had failed, there is a possibility of the suit being entirely dismissed under O. XLI, r. 33 of the Civil Procedure Code. If such a possibility is there, the time for the execution of the decree would run from the date of the decision of the appeal.

Christiana Sens Law v. Benarsi Prosad Chowdhury, 22 Ind. Cas. 685; 19 C. W. N. 287 and Loke Nath Singh v. Gaju Singh, 31 Ind. Cas. 426; 20 C. W. N. 178; 22 C. L. J. 333, followed.

In such a case as the above the Execution Court should see whether the original decree was really one decree, or an incorporation of several decrees and whether the appeal against it imperilled the whole decree or not for the execution of which the application is made.

Appeal from an order of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 24th June 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, Darbhanga, dated the 18th March 1922.

Mr. Muhammad Hassan Jan, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. C. Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Dass, J.—This appeal must be dismissed. It is contended that the order appealed from could not possibly have affected the decree sought to be executed because, as the judgment of the lower Appellate Court shows, the defendants Nos. 3, 7 and 15 claimed definite shares in the subject-matter of the dispute. We have been referred to the decree passed by the lower Appellate Court in support of the argument that defendants Nos. 3, 7 and 15 claimed definite identifiable lands. The decree of the lower Appellate Court, however, does not irresistibly lead to that conclusion; but in my opinion, the appellant must fail even if we assume that the defendants claimed definite identifiable lands out of the lands in suit. The plaintiff appealed against the decree of the lower Appellate Court by which the lower Appellate Court had dismissed the plaintiff's suit as against the defendants Nos. 3, 7 and 15. No doubt the plaintiff appealed only against that portion of the judgment of the lower Appellate Court by which it had dismissed the suit as against the defendants Nos. 3, 7 and 15; but in appealing against the decision of the lower Appellate Court the plaintiff put it in the power of the High Court to say that the whole suit of the plaintiff should be dismissed.

It is contended by the learned Vakil that the High Court had no such power under O. XLI, r. 33. The question is not whether the High Court would have exercised the power; the question is whether there was a possibility of the High Court in the appeal of the plaintiff dismissing the plaintiff's entire suit. In my opinion the case of the plaintiff being that all the defendants were joint tort-feasers and had jointly taken possession of the plaintiff's land, it was open to the High Court, under the provision of O. XLI, r. 33, to dismiss the plaintiff's entire suit if it came to the conclusion that his appeal as against the defendants Nos. 3, 7 and 15, could not succeed. I do not say that the High Court would, in the particular case, or in fact in any case, take that course, but the possibility was always there, and, in my opinion, the plaintiff was entitled to wait till the appeal was disposed of in the High Court before proceeding with his execution as against those defendants against whom his suit had succeeded in the Court of first instance. As it was laid down in Christiana Sens Law v. Benarsi Prosad Chowdhury (1) the Court should see whether the original decree was really one decree or an incorporation of several decrees and whether the appeal against it imperilled the whole decree or not for the execution of which the application is made. In my opinion the appeal presented by the plaintiff to this Court against the decree of the lower Appellate Court imperilled his whole decree. That being so according to the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Christiana Sens Law v. Benarsi Prosad Chowdhury (1) and Loke Nath Singh v. Gaju Singh (2) time would begin to run from the date of the decree of the High Court.

(1) 22 Ind. Cas 685; 19 C. W. N. 287;

The order of the Court below is right and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Kulwant Sahai, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

N. H.

(2) 31 Ind. Cas: 426; 20 C. W. N. 178; 22 C. L. J. 333.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 13 OF 1922.

October 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C., and Mr. Neave, A. J. C.

Shekh MOHAMMAD AHSAN ALI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Shekh MASUD ALI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Will, construction of—Devise of property in subordination to principal devisee, meaning of—Devise of profits whether includes corpus—U. P Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), ss. 111 (c), 138 (5)—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Partition of mahal—Question of title—Taluqdari property—Sanction of Local Government.

A testatrix provided in her Will that her daughter would be the taluqdar after her death, and then went on to direct that out of her entire property her daughter would be deemed to be the owner of an eight annas share and that the remaining eight annas would be owned by her husband's nephews in subordination to her daugther and that the profits of the property would be appropriated by the legatees according to their shares.

Held, that the proprietary share in half the property had been bequeathed to the nephews and that the subordination in which they were placed to the daughter was one of respect and position and not in respect of their proprietary title. [p. 360, col. 2.]

In order to show that an unlimited devise of profits is less than a devise of the corpus some evidence should be found in the context of the Will or in the circumstances affecting the property. [p. 361, col. 2.]

Faiz Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Said Khan, 25 C. 816; 25 I. A. 77; 2 C. W. N. 385; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 320 (P. C.), followed.

A discussion as to the power or willingness of a Revenue Court to partition a mahal is beyond the jurisdiction of a Civil Court. A Civil Court has authority to decide that a particular person is owner of a certain share in a mahal but cannot direct Revenue Court to separate that share by partition: Similarly, a Civil Court cannot prevent partition of a share even if the proceedings of the Revenue Court be contrary to the rules and regulations laid down for its guidance. [p. 362, col. 1.]

The question of stay of partition proceedings in respect of taluadari property for want of the sanction of the Local Government can be agitated only in the Revenue Court. [p. 362, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree of Assistant Collector, First Class, Lucknow, dated the 8th December 1921.

Mr. A. P. Sen holding brief of Messrs. Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava and Mohammad Ayub, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Niamat Ullah and E. R. Qidwai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs, Masud Ali and others, applied under section 107 of the Land Revenue Act for partition of certain mahals in which they alleged that they owned a specific share. Mohammad Ahsan Ali, who was arrayed on the opposite side, objected on the ground that the plaintiffs had no proprietary interest in the mahals. This objection raised a question of proprietary title, and the Assistart Collector proceeded to inquire into the merits thereof under section 111 (c). He held that the plaintiffs were owners of a 4 annas share and directed partition proceedings to continue. These proceedings took place in the Lucknow District with respect to mahals situated within the limits of that district and held binding in subsequent proceedings before an Assistant Collector of the Bara Banki district in partition proceedings relating to mahals situated in that district. The defendant Sheikh Mohammad Ahsan Ali has appealed from both the decisions. This is an appeal from the decision of the Lucknow Court.

Another objection of the defendant was that the mahals were taluqdari mahals of which the partition could not take place without the sanction of the Local Government under section 138 (5) previously obtained. The Assistant Collector has held that no sanction was necessary in these two cases. The questions which arise in appeal, therefore, are (1) whether the plaintiffs owned any share in the mahals or not, and (2) whether the sanction of the Local Government was necessary before the commencement of partition proceedings.

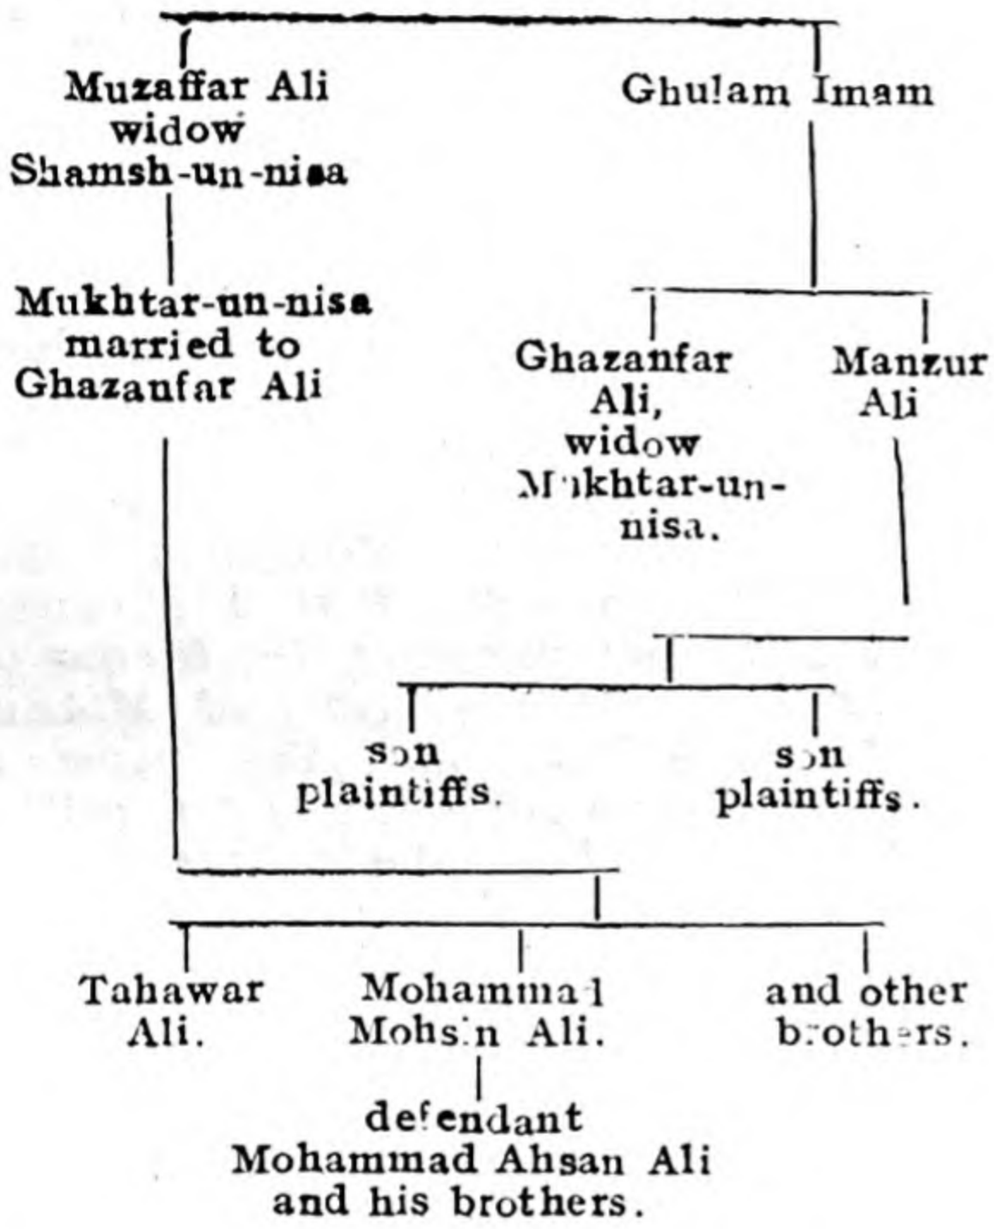
The following is the relevant portion of a long pedigree:—



At the time of the second Summary Settlement in 1858 Muzaffar Ali was dead and settlement was made with his widow Musammat Shamsh un-nisa, who was declared to be the taluqdar and given a primogeniture sanad. In 1860 when inquiry was made from taluqdars as to their intention regarding succession to the property the lady replied on 15th August 1860. "I desire and file this petition that after my death my estate should remain intact in my family without division according to the custom of Raj or Gaddi and that Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa, my daughter, who is married to Ghazanfar Ali, a nephew of my husband, should be the owner" (Exhibit B, page 21, Part III). It is noticeable that in the statements prepared in pursuance of this declaration (Exhibits B-2 and B-3) it was noted that the gaddinashini was to be in favour of Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa while the members of the family who were entitled to inheritance were one daughter and two nephews. On the 26th September 1875 the lady made a Will (Exhibit A-2, page 56, Part III). This is the bequest on which both parties base their title and must be considered in detail. In the first paragraph she mentions the villages in her taluqa, distinguishing two villages Shahpur and Jithauli from the rest because in those villages the names of her husband's nephews were also entered in the khewat. In spite of this entry she declares that over all the villages she as taluqdar had always remained in possession. In paragraph 2 she declares that Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa shall become taluqdar after her death and in paragraph 3 she gives her power to arrange with her male issues as to succession to the property. In paragraph 3 she also bequeathes her entire moveable property of Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa. Paragraph 4 is of importance as ths basis of the claim of the plaintffs to partition and may be quoted in full:—"But out of the entire property owned by me and specified in paragraph 1 of this Will my daughter shall be deemed to be the permanent owner of an 8 annas share....and the remaining 8 annas share shall be permanently owned by Sheikh Ghazanfar Ali and Sheikh Manzur Ali under the subordination (ba mataheti) of my daughter and the profits thereof according to the share of every person shall be appropriated by these legatees." In paragraph 5 she directs that the management of the Court of Wards as it existed at the time of the Will was to continue after her death and all the three legatees were to be liable to pay the debts due from the estate. In pargraph 6 she makes a bequest of property acquired out of profits of the ancestral estate in the same manner as that of the ancestral estate.

The lady died on the 6th September 1885 and in the Lucknow District mutations of names were made in favour of all the three legatees as propietors:

Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa to the extent of one-half and Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali to the extent of the other half. In the Bara Banki District, however, Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali were shown as under-proprietors of 8 annas share of the property. There are copies on this file of certain statements of Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa dated 11th January 1886, which were accepted by Manzur Ali. It is not clear how in the same mutation proceedings in Lucknow on the same date different statements came to be recorded. The statement (Exhibit A-3) is to the effect that Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali were to be proprietors of half while in the statement (copy A-5) the words used are that names may be entered in the column of under-proprietor and co-sharer (malahli wo hissadari.) A few months later inquiry was made from the lady and her cousin, how the taluqdari rights were to be arranged and the reply given by both parties was that the taluqdar will deduct from the profits due to the others their share of the expenses (Exhibits B-4 and B-5). In 1878 the Court of Wards released the property and discharge was given by Mukhtar-un-nisa alone as taluqdar of taluqa Jasmanda (Exhibit B-30).

On 15th October 1889 Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa made a Will of her 8 annas share of the property in favour of her second son Mohammad Mohsin Ali, father of the defendant-appellant and bequeathed to her other three sons a share of the profits specifically directing that these sons shall not be entitled to proprietary interest in the estate. Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa died on 22nd June 1890. After her death Mohammad Mohsin Ali took steps in the Lucknow District to have the names of Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali removed from the khewat, but his application was dismissed by all the Revenue Courts. The judgment of the Board of Revenue (Exhibit A-47 dated 25th May 1893, page 11, Part III) was delivered by an officer who enjoyed at the time considerable reputation for his knowledge of revenue tenures in the Provinces of Oudh and Agra. It was as follows:—"The names of the 8 annas co-sharers in the mahal were rightly entered in register No. 3 (that is the khewat). If the Bara Banki register No. 3 has been differently prepared..it was wrongly prepared. All that the Will said in respect of these Lucknow villages was that the daughter of the testator was to be taluqdar in succession to the testator that 8 annas of the villages were to be her daughter's in sole right and 8 annas were to be her nephews' in sole right in subordination to the taluqdar. That meant merely that the daughter was to be the lambardar of the whole estate being the taluqdar but the proprietary right of her nephews was the same in the 8 annas devised to them as was the daughter's in the 8 annas devised to her."

After the death of Ghazanfar Ali his eldest son Tahawar Ali desired to have a share in the property and the dispute was referred to the arbitration of the taluqdar of Gadya. His award was delivered on the 23rd November 1913 (Exhibit B-7, page 82, Part III), and it decreed a money payment in favour of Tahawar Ali. On the death of Mohammad Mohsin Ali in 1920 the name of Mohammad Ahsan Ali defendant-appellant alone was entered in the village records by an order of the Revenue Court dated 12th January 1921, (Exhibit A-40, page 90, Part III).

Such is the history up to date of the property in suit. After consideration thereof the interpretation we place on the Will of Musammat Shamsh-un-nisa is that she bequeathed proprietary share in half of her property to her husband's nephews. The wording of the Will does not support the argument of the appellant's learned Counsel that the bequest to these two men was of a kind of naukar rights of the receipt of monetary payment without any interest in the property. It is obvious that the lady thought of taluqdari right as something distinct from proprietary right. In paragraph 1 she admitted the proprietary title of her husband's nephews in two villages Shahpur and Jithauli, but at the same time she asserted that she was taluqdar of those two villages as well. The subordination in which she placed the nephews to her daughter was one of respect and position and not a proprietary title. She desired the prestige and honour of her daughter to be kept on the same level as hers without derogating from the proprietary rights of her husband's nephews. The distinction in language is very marked between her Will and that of her daughter and the daughter expressed thereby differently to convey her intention of limiting the rights of her sons other than Mohammad Mohsin Ali to money payment. Stress was laid by the appellant's learned Counsel on the lady's reply to the inquiry made by Government, but there is a gap of 15 years between the two events. By the time the Will was prepared Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali had grown up and must have been able to bring pressure to bear upon her n prosecution of their own rights. It has to be remembered that the property belonged to their family and not to hers. When Mukhtar-un-nisa made a Will in 1889 she disposed of only the 8 annas share and made no mention of the share of her father and uncle(?). If she had understood that her father and uncle(?) were entitled only to a money payment under her mother's Will she would have made mention of their right to recover that payment from Mohammad Mohsin Ali. It is true that the estate is detailed in the Will as consisting of 10 entire villages but the whole tenor of the Will and the absence of any mention of the rights of her father and uncle(?) from the document clearly establish that she was dealing only with an 8 annas share of the property. The learned Counsel for the appellant sought support for his contention of only nankar rights being bequeathed to Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali from the language of the award of 1913 and from the fact that Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa alone gave a discharge to the Court of Wards. The award, however, interpreted the Will of Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa and not that of her mother. In it the arbitrator makes separate mention of the 4 annas share in the estate belonging to Ghazanfar Ali. It cannot be taken from the result of a decree for an annual money payment that in the opinion of the arbitrator Tahawar Ali was not entitled to any share in one-fourth of the property belonging to his father. The words of the arbitrator with respect to this quarter share are "In addition to this, a 4 annas share in this estate belonged to the father of Sheikh Monhsin Ali and others in subordination to their mother." These words do not indicate that Ghazanfar Ali was merely an under proprietor of the 4 annas share in the property. Musammat Mukhtar-un-nisa was the person appointed by her mother's Will to manage the estate, so the Court of Wards may have considered a receipt by her to be a sufficient discharge. This dealing between her and the Court of Wards is not an indication of the extent of her proprietary rights. Mohsin Ali alone appears to have taken possesion of the 4 annas share of his father; but that fact is no indication of the rights of his father in the property. When he failed to have the names of his father and uncle removed from the khewat he did not bring a declaratory suit in the Civil Court. It will be conceded that the failure to bring a suit did not in any way affect his proprietary title so long as parties remained on the original footing. But his forbearance is an indication that he did not expect success in disputing his father's and uncle's proprietary title in the Civil Court.

Even if we accept the appellant's contention that the bequest to Ghazanfar Ali and Manzur Ali was of the receipt of profits in perpetuity, the result will be the same. There are no words in the Will to indicate that they were specifically debarred from claiming proprietary interest. In answer to an argument like the present their Lordships of the Privy Council observed in Faiz Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Said Khan (1). "Their Lordships have heard no reason founded on the language of the Will of 1873 for confining the interest of Sultan to a life estate except that the gift is only of profits. But in order to show that an unlimited gift of profits is less than a gift of the corpus some evidence should be found in the context or in the circumstances affecting the property." (Page 822 of the report). The context of the Will of

(1) 25 C. 816; 25 I. A. 77; 2 C. W. 385; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 320 (P. C.).

Musammat Shamsh-un-nisa points the other way. In our opinion its wording and the conduct of the legatees of the Will all point one way and we held that the plaintiffs are owners of 4 annas share in the mahals.

As the defendant-appellant's brothers, uncles and cousins, that is male descendants of Mukhtar-un-nisa, other than the defendant-appellant, are not parties to this appeal we feel disinclined to deal with the question whether the 8 annas share of property held by Mohammad Ahsan Ali is a taluqa or not. We are of opinion that for two reasons it is not necessry to decide it. An appeal lies to this Court under section 112 of the Land Revenue Act from a decree of the Revenue Court in so far as that Court decides a question of title under section 101 (3). A discussion as to the power or willingness of Revenue Court to partition a mahal is beyond the jurisdiction of this Court. This Court has authority to decide that a particular person is owner of a certain share in a mahal but cannot direct a Revenue Court to separate that share by partition. Similarly we are of opinion that this Court cannot prevent partition of a share even if the proceedings of the Revenue Court be contrary to the rules and regulations laid down for its guidance. The question of stay of partition proceedings for want of the sanction of the Local Government can, in our opinion, be agitated only in a Revenue Court. Secondly, even granting that the property held by the defendant-appellant is taluqdari property the rest of the mahal which is sought to be separated by the plaintiffs is not a taluqa and cannot be called a taluqdari mahal. The separation of the plaintiffs' property will not affect the existing property of the defendant-appellant, even though to be a taluqdari mahal.

In the result we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 338 OF 1922.

June 22, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Duckworth.

AUNG RHI—APPELLANT

versus

MA AUNG KRWA PRU AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 123—Gift—Attestation—Scribe, whether can attest—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 70—Admission of execution—Attestation, proof of, whether necessary.

A gift deed in order to be valid requires attestation just in the same manner as a mortgage. [p. 363, col. 2.]

The writer of a deed may also be an attesting witness provided he attests the execution of it. [p. 363, col. 1.]

S. V. S. T. Chetty v. Po Mya, 56 Ind. Cas. 945; 12 Bur. L. T. 261; Dinamoyee Debi v. Bon Behari Kapur, 7 C. W. N. 160 and Govind Baikhji v. Bhau Gopal, 39 Ind. Cas. 61; 41 B. 384; 19 Bom. L. R. 147, relied on.

An attesting witness must see the executant sign the deed and must subsequently sign his own name as witness in token thereof. [p. 363, col. 1.]

C. M. R. M. A. R. Perianan Chetty v. Maung Ba Thaw, 43 Ind. Cas. 916; 9 L. B. R. 159; 11 Bur. L. T. 114, relied on.

Where the executant of a deed admits execution of the deed it is not necessary to prove attestation, and the admission need not be made during the suit but may be an admission made antecedent to the institution of the suit. [p. 364, col. 1.]

Satish Chandra Mitra v. Jogendra Nath Mahalanobis, 34 Ind. Cas. 862; 44 C. 345; 20 C. W. N. 1044; 24 C. L. J. 175, Nageshwar Prasad v. Rachu Singh, 53 Ind. Cas. 70; 4 P. L. J. 511 and Hira Biti v. Ramdhan Lal, 62 Ind. Cas. 540; 6 P. L. J. 465; 2 P. L. T. 752; (1922) Pat. 42; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 3; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 70, relied on.

Second appeal against a decree of the Divisional Court, Arakan, in Civil Appeal No. 20 of 1922.

Mr. Lambert (Senior), for the Appellant.

Mr. Halker, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question argued in this second appeal is whether the deed of gift by Ma Hnin Zi U was valid under section 123, Transfer of Property Act. It is is not now urged that she did not execute the deed, or that the gift was invalid, as having been made in extremis, or that the property was not hers to give. The sole ground taken is that the evidence given has not proved that the deed of gift was attested by "at least two witnesses," as required by section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that it cannot, therefore, operate as a valid gift.

It appears that Ma Hnin Zi U put her cross mark to the deed, and thereby executed it. The writer of the deed, Maung Kyaw U, attested her mark, after writing her name followed by the words "Cross mark," by writing 'Attested by Maung Kyaw U." Below that he wrote the date 6th January 1922, and below that again he wrote "writer of the deed Maung Kyaw U." From this it is clear that he "attested" the deed, and did not only sign as scribe. That he was an attesting witness is shown by the cases of S. V. S. T. Chetty v. Po Mya (1). Dinamoyee Debi v. Bon Behari Kapur (2) and Govind Bhikaji v. Bhau Gopal (3). The question then arises as to whether any of the other four persons, Kyaw Hla Aung, U Saw, Kyaw Tun and Abdul Rahman, were "attesting witnesses," i.e., witnesses who Saw Ma Hnin Zi U execute the deed of gift, and subsequently signed their names as witnesses in token thereof, as is laid down in the case of C. M. R. M. A. R. Perianan Chetty v. Maung Ba Thaw (4). Abdul Rahman admits that he was not an attesting witness. Maung Kyaw Hla Aung was not called as a witness: nor was U Saw: and Kyaw Tun's evidence shows that he is doubtful, as to when, or if, Ma Hnin Zi U executed the deed of gift at all.

Kyaw U, the writer, is very clear and precise in his evidence, and he has been believed by both the lower Courts. He says that Ma Hnin Zi U executed the deed before witnesses, signed it, and that Kyaw Hla Aung and Kyaw Tun saw that she executed it. He adds that the other two witnesses (U Saw and Abdul Rahman) did not see her sign, but that they read the deed afterwards, and then signed the same. This is corroborated by what the headman, Abdul Rahman, testifies in his evidence as regards his own part in the affair.

There was no object in calling U Saw as a witness, in view of this evidence. It appears that Kyaw Hla Aung was not cited, on account of his illness, but at the end of the case, when it was pending for judgment, plaintiff applied to have him called and examined, but this application was refused.

The evidence of Kyaw Tun now requires close attention. He commences by saying that he "attested" the deed of gift, Exhibit A. But, in cross-examination, his statement was to this effect: "Maung Kyaw U read over the deed of gift. First Kyaw Hla Aung signed. Then I signed. Hnin Zi U signed it after all of us signed it. I don't know if Hnin Zi U executed the deed of gift or not. The headman went away first. I went away after all others had gone." Then, when re-examined, he stated: "I did not notice if Hnin Zi U executed the deed." It thus appears that his memory was defective, or else that he has given false evidence. He began by stating that he was an attesting witness as indeed Kyaw U, the writer, swears that he was. Abdul Rahman's evidence shows that Kyaw Tun's statement must be inaccurate, for Abdul Rahman states that, when arrived the deed had been duly executed, and the other three witnesses had all signed on it as witnesses. It is significant also that his signature comes last on the list. Further Kyaw Tun says that this headman went away before he did: in fact, before any of the others. I consider, therefore, that the reliable evidence of Kyaw U is enough to prove that Kyaw Tun did legally attest the deed, and that it is valid under section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act. Had I not done so, I might, apart from reasons to be stated later, have remanded it, on terms, in order to have Kyaw Hla Aung's evidence taken. I have not dealt with the point that the law relied on relates, not to gifts, but to mortgages, because it is obvious that a gift requires attestation just in the same manner as a mortgage in order to be valid.

There is one more very important point. I have no doubt, from the evi-

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 945; 12 Bur. L. T. 261.
(2) 7 C. W. N. 160.
(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 61; 41 B. 384; 19 Bom. L. R. 147.
(4) 43 Ind. Cas. 916; 9 L. B. R. 159; 11 Bur. L. T. 114.

dence, that Ma Hnin Zi U admitted execution of this deed of gift before her death. That being so and being proved, it was not really necessary to prove attestation. This is quite clear from the case of Satish Chandra Mitra v. Jogendra Nath Mahalanobis (5) which was followed by the Patna High Court in the cases of Nageshwar Prasad v. Bachu Singh (6) and Hira Bibi v. Ramdhan Lal (7). In these two cases Woodroffe, J.'s views in Satish Chandra's case (5) that under section 70 of the Evidence Act, when a party has admitted execution, it is sufficient proof, even though it be a document required by law to be attested were followed. In his and Mr. Ameer Ali's Law of Evidence he had previously disagreed with the obiter dicta to the contrary in Jogendra Nath v. Nilal Churn (8), and his reasons are most convincing. He said "If the admission of the executant has not the effect of dispensing with proof of attestation, there was no necessity for the section at all, as recourse may be had to the general provisions of the Act relating to admissions if the admission of execution is to be used only in the sense of an admission of signing only. Attestation is only a form of solemn proof required in certain cases by special Legislative enactment, and it is difficult to understand why witnesses should be called to prove a document against a party who has admitted that it is a valid document against him." In this I concur. In the case of Nageshwar Prasad v. Bachu Singh (6) it is shown that the executant's admission need not have been made during the civil proceedings, but may be an admission made antecedent to the institution of legal proceedings.

I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(5) 34 Ind. Cas. 862; 44 C. 345; 20 C. W. N. 1044; 24 C. L. J. 175.
(6) 53 Ind. Cas. 794 P. L. J. 511.
(7) 62 Ind. Cas. 540; 6 P. L. J. 465; 2 P. L. T. 752; (1922) Pat. 42; 1 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 3; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 70.
(8) 7 C. W. N. 284.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2677 OF 1920.

January 26, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir N. R. Chatterjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cuming.

MOHENDRANATH BOSE AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ABINASH CHANDRA BOSE—PLAINTIFF —RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 43—Joint tenants —Liability, nature of—Heirs, position of.

As the liability of joint tenants is both joint and several, in view of the provisions of section 43 of the Contract Act, a suit for rent can be maintained against any or some of the joint tenants, the original contracting parties. Similarly, (assuming the liability of the heirs of each tenant to be a joint one), the whole rent can be recovered from all the heirs of any one of the original joint tenants, and there is no reason why on the death of all original joint tenants, the liability to pay the rent should devolve upon all their heirs (taken together) jointly. [p. 367, col. 2.]

Quaere.—Whether upon the death of the only tenant or one or more original joint tenants, a suit for rent can be maintained against some only of his or their heirs.

(Case-law reviewed.)

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge Nadia, dated the 6th of August 1920, modifying that of the Munsif, Meherpur, dated the 21st of July 1919.

Babu Pyari Mohan Chatterji, for the Appellants.

Babu Mrityounjoy Chattopadhya, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of cesses, in respect of a mourashi mokurari tenure, upon a kabuliyat.

It appears that one Khanta Kali Dasi who had inherited certain property from her son, together with the presumptive reversioners Brojo Gopal and Aghorenath, granted a mourashi mokarari lease of the property to three persons, Bidhu Bhusan Bose, Ram Lal Bose and Mati Lal Bose on the 13th Jeyth 1276 B. S. The lessees were to pay the Government revenue on behalf of the lessors and credit a portion of the rent in re-payment of the debt due to them by Khantakali under a kistbandi, and pay the net profit, viz., Rs. 300 to Khantakali for her life, and after her death to the reversionary heirs Brojo Gopal and Aghorenath. The lessees undertook to pay the Dak peon's salary and agreed that if in future any anka (cesses) like Dak peon's slary be imposed the lessees world pay the same and the lessors would have no connection therewith.

Brojo Gopal predeceased Khantakali and after her death the property devolved upon Aghorenath. The lessees failed to pay the cesses, and the Collector realised the same from Aghorenath (the original plaintiff) who thereupon brought the suit out of which this appeal arises to recover the cesses from the defendants who are the heirs of the original lessees. Three of them, however, were not properly served with summons.

The defence was that the heir of Brojo Bose was a necessary party to the suit, that the defendants were not liable under the lease to pay cesses to the Collector nor to the plaintiff under the Cess Act, and that the suit was barred under O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The Court of first instance overruled the contentions of the defendants, and dedreed the suit. On appeal that decree was set aside with respect to some of the defendants only viz., Kashupati, Probodn and Nanigopal. The remaining defendants have appealed to this Court.

The first contention in the appeal is that the present suit by Aghore (and on his death by his son) alone is not maintainable in the absence of the heir of Brojo Gopal. It is urged that although Brojo Gopal predeceased Khantakali; he had a vested intereet in the property which devolved upon his heir. This contention was not raised in the lower Appellate Court. It is contended that the question arises upon the lease itself and was raised in the Court of first instance. But although Brojo Gopal as a presumptive reversionary heir joined in the lease, he had merely a contingent interest. His right was contingent upon his surviving Khantakali, and as he predeceased the lady, he had no right at the time of his death which could devolve upon his heir. Aghore Bose survived the lady, and the suit, therefore, was properly instituted by him alone.

The next contention is that the suit cannot be maintained against only some of the heirs of the original tenants. The original lessees, Bidhu Bhusan, Ramlal and Motilal are all dead. All the heirs of Bidhu Bhusan are parties, but some of the heirs of Ramlal and Mati Lal are not made parties or not properly served with summons, and the question is whether it is necessary to have all the heirs of the original lessees parties to a suit for rent.

So far as the original lessees were concerned their liability for rent was, in the absence of a contract to the contrary joint and several, having regard to the provisions of section 43 of the Contract Act. It has been held in several cases that a landlord may bring a suit for the rent of the holding against some of the several joint tenants, see Jogendra Nath Roy v. Nogendra Narain Nandi (1); Rameswar Singh v. Jaideb Jha (2); Krishna Dos Roy v. Kali Tara Chowdhurani (3) and Beradar Singh v. Bacha Mahto (4). In all these cases the suit was against some of the original tenants who enter into the contract of tenancy. In the case of Kashi Kinnar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (5) an opinion was expressed that whether a promise is joint, or joint and several, is a question of construction depending upon the intention of the parties to a contract, and that it is not an inflexible rule of law that in every case of a lease to two or more persons jointly, there is a promise that each of them will be responsible for the entire rent, so that the landlord may recover the rent against any one of them. The observations, however, were obiter as in that case the persons who were sued, were not the original contracting parties, but the heirs of the original tenants. So far as the original contracting parties are concerned, the cases cited aboveshow that any one of them may be sued for the entire rent.

There is divergence of opinion, however upon the question whether upon the death of the original contracting party,

(1) 11 C. W. N. 1026.
(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 387; 12 C. L. J. 591.
(3) 44 Ind. Cas. 80; 22 C. W. N. 289.
(4) 54 Ind. Cas. 39; 5 P. L. J. 32; (1920) Pat. 91 P. L. T. 55; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 4.
(5) 7 Ind. Cas. 840; 15 C. W. N. 191; 12 C. L. J. 642.

a suit can be maintained against some only of the heirs. In the case of Kashi Kinnar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (5) cited above it was held [following the principle stated in the case of Ahinsa Bibi v. Abdul Kader (6)] that the heirs really constitute one body, and cannot be treated necessarily as persons who have made joint and several promises, and the suit was accordingly held not to be maintainable. Kashi Kinkar's case (5) was followed in Shaikh Sahed v. Krishna Mohan Basak (7). In Siba Krishna Sinha v. Jagat Chandra Talukdar (8) it was held by Woodroffe and Smither, JJ., that a landlord cannot maintain a suit for arrears of rent against one of several heirs of a deceased tenant without joining the others as defendants, and that section 43 of the Contract Act has no applicability to such a case. In the case of Krishna Das Roy v. Kali Tara Chowdhurani (3) of the Judges (one of the members of this Bench) expressed a similar view. The observation, however, was obiter as it was not a case of heirs of the original tenant, and the other learned Judge (Richardson, J.,) reserved his opinion on the point.

On the other hand in three cases a contrary view has been taken. In Lalit Mohan Sinha Roy v. Haran Chand Khamrui (9) it was held that a suit against the heirs of a deceased tenant for arrears of rent which did not accrue due during the lifetime of the deceased is maintainable even though all the heirs are not made parties to the suit. The case of Kashi Kinkar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (5) was distinguished on the ground that the rent sued for in that case became due in the lifetime of the father, and some of the heirs only were sued for the arrears. The learned Judges Fletcher and Teunon, JJ., followed the case of Chamatkarini Dasi v. Triguna Nath Sardar (10) and referred to the observations of Jenkins, C. J., in that case viz., that the liability of the tenants to pay the rent was contractual and that applying the provisions of section 43 of the Indian Contract Act, any one or more of the promisors could be compelled to fulfil the promise. The case of Lalit Mohan Sinha Roy v. Haran Chand Khamrui (9) again was followed by Fletcher and Walmsley, JJ. in Subashi Dassi v. Raj Krishna Roy (11).

In the case of Chamatkarini Dasi v. Triguna Nath Sardar (10) one Biswanath was the original tenant, and he was succeeded by his sons Narendra and Gouri, and two grandsons by two predeceased sons. The suit for rent was instituted against Narendra alone; the holding was purchased by his wife Chamatkarini, and the question arose whether the sale at which she purchased was a sale for arrears of rent under Chapter XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act so as to pass the entire holding, when all the tenants of the holding had not been joined as parties to the suit for rent. It was held that all the tenants should be made parties (except where one of a number of tenants is put forward by the rest as their representative) in order that the decree and sale in execution of it may have the important consequences described in Chapter XIV of the Bengal Tenency Act. That was the actual decision in the case, but the learned Chief Justice (Jenkins, C. J.,) observed that the liability of the tenants was contractual and under section 43 of the Contract Act a landlord may bring a suit for the whole rent of the holding against one of several raiyats for the purposes of a mere money-decree. It is to be observed that the defendant to the suit himself did not enter into the contract but was one of the heirs of the original tenant. This evidently was not noticed and it was unnecessary to do so, because the question was whether the decree having been obtained against one of the tenants, the entire holding passed at the sale. It was immaterial, therefore, whether the defendant was one of the original tenants or was one of the heirs of the original tenants.

In the case of Meajan Mondal v. Jogendra Nath De (12) the suit for rent was brought against some of the heirs of the sole original tenant and the learned Judges

(6) 25 M. 26 at p. 35.
(7) 35 Ind. Cas. 563; 24 C. L. J. 371.
(8) 45 Ind. Cas. 732.
(9) 36 Ind. Cas. 243.
(10) 19 Ind. Cas. 989; 17 C. W. N. 833.

(11) 23 C. W. N. xxvii (27) notes.
(12) 63 Ind. Cas. 949; 48 C. 518.

Teunon and Newbould, JJ., held that the cases of Kashi Kinkar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (5), Krishna Das Roy v. Kali Tara Chowdhurani (3), Siba Krishna Sinha v. Jagat Chandra Talukdar (8), and Shaikh Sahed v. Krishna Mohan Basak (7) were distinguishable (through the grounds of distinction were not stated) and followed the decisions in the cases of Lalit Mohan Sinha Roy v. Haran Chand Khamru (9), Subashi Dass v. Raj Krishna Roy (11), and Chamatkarini Dasi v. Triguna Nath Sardar (10). The learned Judges observed that they did so more readily as the defendants in that case were the tenants in actual occupation of the land; and the rent for which the suit was brought accrued due not in the time of the original tenant but in the time of the defendants, and also because a decree for rent was obtained against the defendants for a previous period.

It appears, therefore, that so far as the heirs of the original tenant are concerned the view taken in the cases of Kashi Kinkar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (5), Shaikh Sahed v. Krishna Mohan Basak (7) and Siba Krishna Sinha v. Jagat Chandra Talukdar (8) is in conflict with that taken in Lalit Mohan Sinha Roy v. Haran Chand Khamrui (9) Subashi Dassi v. Raj Krishna Roy (11) and Meajan Mondal v. Jogendra Nath De (12).

The observations in the case of Chamatkarini Dasi v. Triguna Nath Sardar (10), and those of one of the Judges in Krishna Das Roy v. Kali Tara Chowdhurani (3) are obiter, because as stated above, in the first case, the question for consideration was whether a sale in execution of a decree for rent obtained against some only of the tenants passed the entire holding, and in the second the suit was brought against some of the original tenants, and was not a case of a suit against some of the heirs of the tenant.

But the principle upon which the observation was based by Jenkins, C. J., in the case of Chamatkarini Dasi v. Triguna Nath Sardar (10) viz., that the liability of the tenants was contractual and that under section 43 of the Contract Act, a landlord may bring a suit for the whole rent of the holding against one of several raiyats for the purposes of a mere money-decree a principle applicable to the original contracting parties was applied by Fletcher and Teunon, JJ., to the case of heirs of the original contracting party in Lalit Mohan Sinha Roy v. Haran Chand Khamrui (9) while in the case of Siba Krishna Sinha v. Jagat Chandra Talukdar (8) Woodroffe and Smither, JJ., held that section 43 was not applicable to the case of heirs.

The authorities on the point appear to be in an unsettled state, and if it were necessary to decide the question we would have referred the matter to the Full Bench because the questions arise very frequently in rent-suits. We think, however, that in the present case it is unnecessary to do so because even assuming that in the case of the heirs of the original tenant, the liability is a joint liability, and not a joint and several one, in the present case all the heirs of one of the original tenants, viz., Bidhu Bhusan are parties to the suit and have been properly served. So far as the original tenants are concerned the decisions are practically agreed (except the obiter dictum in Kashi Kinkar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (5) that a suit for rent can be maintained against any or some of the tenants having regard to the provisions of section 43 of the Contract Act. That being so, Bidhu Bhusan alone as one of the original tenants could have been sued for the entire rent, and all his heirs (assuming that the liability descended to them jointly) can be similarly sued for the entire rent. In other words assuming that the liability of the heirs of each tenant is a joint one, a suit for the entire rent can be maintained if all the heirs of one of several tenants are made parties. For instance if A, B and C jointly take a lease, the liability of each of them for the rent is a joint and several liability, and assuming that on the death of A the liability of all his heirs is a joint one, a suit can be maintained against his heirs provided all the heirs are joined in the same manner as A alone could be sued for the entire rent in his lifetime. Similarly on the death of B and C the liability of each of them would devolve upon all the heirs of each, but we do not see why upon the death of A, B, and C, the liability should devolve upon all the heirs of A, B and C (taken together) jointly.

It may be said that although where A, B and C jointly take a lease, A alone may be sued for the entire rent having regard to the provisions of section 43 of the Contract Act, it would be hard that the heirs of A alone, who were no parties to the contract, should be made liable for the entire rent. But the right of A in the tenure devolved upon his heirs together with the liability for rent, and as A alone could be sued for the entire rent, his heirs who succeed to his rights in the tenure may be sued for the entire rent.

The defendants relied upon a judgment of the High Court in another suit for rent between the same parties relating to the same tenure, where it was held that all the heirs of the deceased tenant (in singular) should be made parties and the rent suit was dismissed because that was not done. The fact, however, that there was not one, but several joint contractors originally does not appear to have been brought to the notice of the learned Judges who decided that case. That judgment, therefore, is not binding upon the question now raised before us.

As stated above all the heirs of Bidhu Bhusan one of the original tenants who alone could have been sued for the entire rent in his lifetime are parties to the suit. It is not denied that they are in possession, and there is no suggestion that the arrears of rent accrued due in the lifetime of the original tenants. The plaintiff who is the respondent before us is willing to take a decree against the heirs of Bidhu Bhusan alone which of course will be a mere money-decree. In these circumstances we think that the suit cannot be dismissed as against them.

The next contention is that the suit is barred by the provisions of O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. It appears that a suit for rent was previously brought against the defendants and the claim for cesses was not included in it. But under the contract the lessees agreed to pay cesses into the Collectorate, and it was because the defendants did not pay the same to the Collector and the Collector realised the cesses from the plaintiff, that the latter became entitled to claim the same as damages against the defendants. The claim for cesses, therefore, is not barred under O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The last contention is that the plaintiffs' name was registered only with respect to four annas and odd share, he is not, therefore, entitled to recover the entire amount claimed. This objection however was not raised in the Courts below, and we decline to entertain it for the first time in second appeal.

The result is that the decree of the Court of Appeal below will be confirmed so far as the heirs of Bidhu Bhusan Bose are concerned, and the suit will be dismissed as against the other defendants. These other defendants will however pay their own costs in all the Courts. As against the defendants who are the heirs of Bidhu Bhusan Bose, the plaintiff will get costs in all Courts.

S. D. Decree partly confirmed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 192 OF 1921.

January 22, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lentaigne.

MA PWA—APPELLANT

versus

MUHAMMAD TAMBI AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 90—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 166—Execution of decree—Sale, application to set aside, on ground of absence of attachment—Appeal, second, whether lies—Limitation—Sale, whether nullity.

Where a judgment-debtor seeks to set aside an execution sale on the ground that there was no valid attachment of the property, the application falls under section 47 and not under O. XXI, r. 90, of the Civil Procedure Code and there is a right of second appeal in the case. [p. 369, col. 2.]

Sheodhyan v. Bholanath, 21 A. 311; A.W.N. (1899) 84; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 907, dissented from.

Rasaraj Kunai v. Prasanna Kumar Roy, 15 Ind. Cas. 506; 40 C. 45, relied on.

Article 166 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act applies to every application filed under the MA PWA v. MUHAMMAD TAMBI.

Code of Civil Procedure to set aside a sale made in execution of a decree, irrespective of the specific section or Order and rule of that Code applicable to such application. [p. 370, col. 2.]

Satish Chandra Kanungoe v. Nishi Chandra Dutta, 54 Ind. Cas. 431; 46 C. 975, relied on.

An execution sale held without a previous attachment is not a nullity. [p. 370, col. 2.]

Sorabji Coovarji v. Kala Raghunath 12, Ind. Cas. 911; 36 B. 156; 13 Bom. L. R. 193, distinguished.

Kishory Mohun Roy v. Mahomed Mujaffar Hossain, 18 C. 188; 9 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 126; Tincouri Debya v. Shib Chandra Pal, 21 C. 639; 10 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 1057 Sasirama v. Meherban Khan, 9 Ind. Cas. 918, 13 C. L. J. 243 and Tarak Nath Roy Chowdhury v. Syama Charan Chowdhury, 36 Ind. Cas. 292 at 295, relied on.

Second appeal.

Mr. Mya Bu, for the Appellant.

Mr. Iyer, for Respondent No. 1.

Mr. Banerjee, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—The first question which I have to decide is whether there is a right of second appeal. If the case is one under O. XXI, rr. 90 and 92, there is no right of second appeal; whilst there would be such a right if the case comes under section 47. In so far the petition filed by the judgment-debtor contained an allegation that there were material irregularities in the publishing and conducting the sale, the application must be treated as being in part an application under O. XXI, r. 90. Such irregularities, however, were not specified, and the real ground of attack was based on the absence of any attachment of the greater portion of area. In the case of Sheodhyan v. Bholanath (1) a Bench of the High Court at Allahabad held that the object of an attachment is to bring the property under the control of the Court with a view to prevent the judgment-debtor from alienating it and thereby preventing the sale of such property in execution of the decree, that the publication of the attachment is thus a step leading up to the publication of the sale, the actual proclamation of the sale being a notice to the public that the sale is to take place on a particular day and that, consequently, the absence of an attachment may be a material irregularity in the publishing of the sale. I notice, however, that other High Courts have hesitated to take the same view which appears to be an extension of the application of r. 90 to the more remote preceding conditions. Assuming, however, that the reasoning of that decision is correct as far as it goes, it does not cover every aspect of the question because an attachment and the application therefor is also the prescribed procedure for giving the judgment-debtor formal notice as to what property is being brought under the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree. In Rasraj Kunai v. Prosonna Kumar Roy (2) the High Court at Calcutta held that section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure is the section applicable where the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground of the failure to give notice to the judgment-debtor. A defective notice specifying the wrong property or portion of a property, such as we find in this case, may be so misleading as to amount to an absence of notice. I, therefore, hold that the objection as to defect or absence of the necessary attachment in this case involves a substantial question as to the absence of proper notice to the judgment-debtor as to the property attached, which does not come within O. XXI, r. 90, but which does come within the provisions of section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that consequently there is a right of second appeal in this case.

The next question is the Article of the First Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, applicable to the case. There were various decisions under the previous Indian Limitation Act, 1877, to the effect that the Arts. 166 and 172 of that Act (corresponding to Art. 166 of the Act of 1908) did not apply to an application to set aside an execution sale filed under section 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, (which corresponds to section 47 of the Code of 1908); and that the proper Article applicable to such an application was the Art. 178 of that Act (corresponding to Art. 181 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908) which prescribes a period of three years as the period of limitation for applications for which no period is provided elsewhere in that Schedule of the Act or by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 230 (see section 48 of the Code of 1908). The Indian Limitation Act, 1908, however, effected certain very important alterations in the wording of the Art. 166 which was substituted for Arts. 166 and 172 of the previous Act.

(1) 21 A. 311; A. W. N. (1899) 84; 9 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 907.

(2) 15 Ind. Cas. 506; 40 C. 45.

Arts. 166 and 172 of the Act of 1877 were worded as follows:—

Description of application.	Period of limitation.	Time from which period begins to run.
166. To set aside a sale in execution of a decree, on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale.	Thirty days	The date of the sale.
172. By a purchaser at an execution sale, to set aside the sale on the ground that the person whose interest in the property purported to be sold had no saleable interest therein.	Sixty days	The date of the sale.

I have italicised certain words in the above Articles for the purpose of emphasising the point that such Articles were very limited in their operation, and that consequently the Courts were justified in holding that such Articles did not apply to many applications filed under section 244 of the Code of 1882 to set aside execution sales. The corresponding Art. 166 of the Act of 1908 is as follows:—

Description of application.	Period of limitation.	Time from which period begins to run.
166. Under the same Code to set aside a sale in execution of a decree.	Thirty days	The date of the sale.

I am of opinion that the Legislature in making this alteration of the wording of these Articles had very materially widened the operation of Art. 166 of the Act of 1908, and that Art. 166, when couched in such wide terms, must be given its plain meaning and applied to applications like the one now before me filed under the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside a sale made in execution of a decree, irrespective of the specific section or Order and rule of that Code applicable to such application. This modification of the law appears to have escaped the attention of various Courts in certain decisions published in some unofficial reports cited before me, and as I am not bound to consider any unofficial report of a decision it is unnecessary for me to discuss such decisions. I find, however, that the High Court at Calcutta in 1919 has taken the same view as I do of the operation of Art. 166 in Satish Chandra Kanungoe v. Nishi Chandra Dutta (3), and certain unofficial reports also indicate that the High Courts of Bombay, Patna and Madras have adopted the same construction which I regard as the plain meaning of the Article.

For the above reasons I am bound to hold that Art. 166 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, applied to the application in question, and that as the application was not filed within thirty days after the sale, it is barred by limitation.

On behalf of the appellant great stress was laid on a passage in Mr. D. F. Mulla's recent Edition of the Code of Civil Procedure to the effect that an execution-sale held without a previous attachment is void and a nullity; and as a finding of law to that effect might open out new avenues for attacking the sale and raise the question whether there would be any necessity to formally set such sale aside, I have endeavoured to ascertain if there is any force in the argument. The decision quoted as the basis of the passage is Sorabji Coovarji v. Kala Raghunath (4). That decision, however, when closely examined, is really a decision on the point which I have discussed above, whether a second appeal lies by reason of the case coming under the provisions of section 47 and not under O. XXI, r. 19. Though the Advocate for the appellant in that case used the words "void" and "nullity" in his address to the Court, the judgment is much more guarded and when setting the sale aside, does not go into the question whether the absence of the attachment constitutes an absolute defect of jurisdiction or is merely a material irregularity. The Court had power in that case to set the sale aside on the ground of material irregularity and was right in doing so. I have failed to find any authority which would justify me in holding that the absence of an attachment would justify a finding that the execution sale was void ab initio and a nullity, but I have found authorities to the contrary. In Kishory Mohun Roy v. Mahomed Mujaffar Hossein (5) the Calcutta Court held that it could see no sufficient reason why the absence of an attachment should render a sale void after it had been duly confirmed and a sale certificate granted to the purchaser. In Tincauri Debya v. Shib Chandra Pal (6) the same point was similarly decided but in this case in respect of a sale held without an attachment under a mortgage decree. In Sheodhyan v. Bholanath (1) the High Court at Allahabad held that the absence of an attachment was merely a material irregularity in the publishing and conducting of the sale. In 1911 a Bench of the Calcutta High Court held in Sasirama v. Meherban Khan (7) that the absence of an attachment does not vitiate the sale unless the objection is taken before the sale has taken place and as the objection in that case had been before the sale, the sale was set aside. In 1916 the Calcutta High Court again considered the question in Tara Nath Roy Chowdhury v. Syama Charan Chowdhury (8) and appear to have come to the same conclusion that the absence of an attachment, though an irregularity, does not render the sale absolutely void. In the present case there was a previous attachment of small portion of the holding and of less than one-sixteenth of the area sold, and that attachment, which applied at first to 9 acres and subsisted after the removal of attachment as regards half of that area, should have put the judgment-debtor on her guard and made her watch the proceedings. She had notice of the proceedings to that extent and if she had been vigilant, that notice would have given her ample opportunity to protect her rights. For the above reasons it is clear that the contention that the sale is a nullity is not supported by authority, and the defective attachment cannot justify me in granting her relief at this late stage of the proceedings.

(3) 54 Ind. Cas. 431; 46 C. 975.
(4) 12 Ind. Cas. 911; 36 B. 156; 13 Bom. L. R. 1195.

An objection was also taken on behalf of the respondent to the effect that appellant is now estopped from claiming the relief prayed for by reason of the provisions of sub-rule (2) of r. 89 of O. XXI. There is possibly some force in this objection, especially as the arrangement to pay the money into Court was a consent one and permitted the appellant to pay the money into Court after the thirty days, but it is unnecessary to discuss the point. It is no doubt probable that if the judgment-debtor had appealed against the finding that she had paid the money into Court too late, she might have succeeded in such appeal. Her present misfortune is due to the fact that she was grossly negligent in not looking after her interests and in omitting to appeal against that order in the previous proceeding when there was still time to appeal and when there was no provision of limitation barring her right to relief. The Court is, however, now bound to administer the statutory law of limitation, as she has allowed the period to elapse; and her appeal must be dismissed, as this later proceeding is also barred by limitation.

As regards the question of costs, it is unfortunate that the appellant should have had her suit dismissed by the Township Court because the Judge regarded the suit as one governed by section 47 of the Code. The Court had an alter-

(5) 18 C. 188; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 126.
(6) 21 C. 639; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1057.
(7) 9 Ind. Cas. 918; 13 C. L. J. 243.
(8) 35 Ind. Cas. 292 at p. 295.

native power conferred by sub-section (2) of section 47, and cou'd more properly have directed that the suit be treated as an application under that section. I cannot set aside the order as to costs made in that suit against the appellant, but as the proceeding now under appeal was a repetition of that suit in the form of an application which could have been decided in the previous suit, I am of opinion that I should set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court directing her to pay the costs of the application in the Township Court as she should not be compelled to pay double costs. Likewise, the Judge of the lower Appellate Court was wrong in refusing to decide the case on the merits because he thought that the application should have been in the form of a separate suit. Section 47 would have permitted the Judge to treat the application as a suit and to call upon the applicant to pay the necessary Court-fee for that purpose, if he considered that the questions involved were questions which should be decided in a separate suit. If the appellant had established a case of fraud, this question might have assumed more importance, but on either aspect of the question the appellant was entitled under section 47 of the Code to have the case decided in the proceeding instituted under that section. As the lower Appellate Court erroneously refused to give the appellant a decision on the merits, I do not think that she should be compelled to pay costs for that infructuous proceeding.

For the above reasons I think that the fair balance will be attained by directing that each party should bear his or her own costs in the present proceeding in both the lower Courts and that respondents should be allowed only costs of this second appeal. I, therefore, dismiss the appeal on the merits except as to costs, and I set aside so much of the decree of the lower Appellate Court as awards costs to respondents, representatives of the decree-holder and auction-purchaser. The respondents shall have their costs in this Court only. Advocate's fee two gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 78 OF 1922.

July 9, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Duckworth and Mr. Justice Po Han.

U PE GYI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MAUNG THEIN SHIN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Public policy, agreement opposed to—Champertous agreement, validity of—Test—Compensation.

While the specific English Law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy, yet such agreements should be carefully watched, and if extortionate and unconscionable, or made not with the bona fide object of assisting, for a reasonable recompense, a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy, and not enforced. At the same time, reasonable compensation for the expenses properly incurred by the financier and for work done may be awarded. [p. 377, cols. 1 & 2.]

One of the tests to be applied in determining whether such a contract ought or ought not to be enforced is the comparison between the liability which the financier incurs under the contract and the amount of the award which he is to obtain in the event of the defendant's success. [p. 377, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the District Court, Myaungmya, in Civil Regular Suit No. 20 of 1920.

Mr. Villa, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. R. Das, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—After the death of a certain Daw O, there were disputes and trouble about the estate left by her and her previously deceased husband, U Maung.

Some time in November 1916 Ma E Mya, the deceased first defendant in this case, was claiming that she was the sole adopted daughter of these persons, and in consequence that she was desirous of filing a suit for a declaration of her status, and for administration and possession of the estate.

On the 20th November 1916 it appears that a registered agreement, Exhibit 1, was entered into between the said Ma E Mya and U Pe Gyi, the present appellant-plaintiff, whereby he agreed to finance her during her litigation, on condition that all his expenses incurred on her behalf should be deducted from the sum total of all the properties which she might acquire by means of a suit, and that he should also obtain a half share in the nett balance. This agreement, however, was cancelled by mutual consent on the 1st February 1917.

On the 26th February 1917 Ma E Mya applied for permission to file her suit in forma pauperis. Permission having been given, her suit started as from the 12th June 1917. Her suit was contested, but Ma E Mya was successful in the District Court of Myaungmya, acquiring, by means of that decree, properties to the value of Rs. 27,602-14. It may be said incidentally that in her pauper suit she valued her relief at approximately half a lakh of rupees.

The defendants in that case, Ma Hla and Maung Nyi Bu, appealed to the Chief Court of Lower Burma. Ma E Mya contested this appeal; and the appeal was dismissed with costs. The judgment is dated the 16th March 1920. It should here be stated that the judgment of the District Court of Myaungmya is dated the 17th January 1919.

It appears that after Ma E Mya had been successful in the District Court, another agreement, Exhibit A, the subject of the present suit, was drawn up during June 1919, while the appeal of Ma Hla and Maung Nyi Bu was pending in the Chief Court. This agreement, Exhibit A, is almost identical with the previous agreement, dated the 20th November 1916, which was cancelled in February 1917, with this difference that this later agreement, Exhibit A, contains conditions whereby the appellant was not only to finance Ma E Mya for her legal expenses, but was also to advance, money for her maintenance. Moreover, this agreement, Exhibit A, though it does not expressly refer back to the prior or cancelled agreement, Exhibit 1, yet it purports to have retrospective effect, and cover advances made to Ma E Mya by the appellant during the pendency of her suit before the District Court of Myaungmya, as well as such further advances as might be necessary for successful resistance to Ma Hla and Maung Nyi Bu's appeal. By this agreement Ma E Mya was to allow the appellant to deduct all his expenses and moneys advanced by him on her account from whatever properties were realised, and he was then to take half the nett proceeds of the decree

Though this agreement was drawn up in June 1919, it does not appear that it was either executed or registered until the 28th August 1919. Though it was drawn up in the office of Mr. J. A. Maung Gyi in Rangoon, it was not executed there or in Rangoon. It was not executed or registered at Wakema where the appellant lives and near which Ma E Mya resided; nor was it executed or registered at Myaungmya, the headquarters of the district in which they lived. But it purports to have been executed and registered at Bassein during the temporary visit of U Pe Gyi, the present appellant, accompanied by Ma E Mya, to Bassein on the 28th day of August 1919.

After the successful resistance to the appeal made by Ma Hla and Maung Nyi Bu, it appears that Ma E Mya was not ready to carry out her side of the bargain. On the 26th July 1920 the present appellant filed a suit on this agreement, Exhibit A, against Ma E Mya, whereby he stated that the total realizations made by her in the suit consisted of properties to the value of Rs. 27,602-14; and that his advances and expenses on Ma E Mya's behalf amounted to Rs. 5,586, deducting which left a balance of Rs. 22,016-14. In this suit he claimed half this nett value; in other words, property valued at Rs. 11,008-7 and, of course, the sum of Rs. 5,586 as well, or a total of Rs. 16,594-7. Two other parties were added, namely. U Po Thet and his wife, Ma Kyi Nyo. Ma Kyi Nyo died during the suit; but U Po Thet remained as representing himself and his deceased wife. They were made parties, because they were alleged to have taken a mortgage on certain properties, which by the suit belonged to Ma E Mya, from Ma Hla and Maung Nyi Bu as mortgagors, and because it was alleged that the said mortgage was made after Ma E Mya had legally attached the properties, the mortgage, therefore, being void under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. During the suit Ma E Mya herself died also, and her son, Maung Thein Shin, the present first respondent, was added as her legal representative.

Ma E Mya's defence was that, although she signed the agreement, Exhibit A, and the power-of-attorney, Exhibit B, which was drawn up in terms of the agreement, Exhibit A, in favour of the appellant, she was persuaded to such execution by misrepresentation, coercion and undue influence. She contended that the appellant was a very influential man in Wakema, and that he had threatened and treated her in such a manner that, on a previous visit to Bassein, she had refused to sign anything, and had returned of Myaungmya. Eventually, she did sign two papers in Bassein, she being under the impression that they were documents relating to the proceedings taken against Ma Hla and Nyi Bu in connection with the mortgage to Po Thet and Ma Kyi Nyo. Further, she contended that, even if it was held that there was this agreement between the appellant and herself, it was hard, unconscionable, champertous and opposed to public policy, and should not be enforced under section 23 of the Contract Act. She urged that all that the appellant had done was to advance her moneys on loan without interest towards her expenses in the litigation; and that he had not rendered her any particular personal services, but occasionally gave her advice and guidance. She stated that the total amount advanced by the appellant would amount to a sum of Rs. 3,400, which amount she was ready and willing to pay to the appellant, if it was so found due. She also contended that, in addition to the amounts realised by her litigation, the appellant obtained a sum of Rs. 250 as land rent, and Rs. 65 as house rent and that these should be deducted from whatever amount was found due to him by her.

The other defendants also contested the suit but inasmuch as they have not been represented in this appeal, although the survivor, Maung Po Thet, was duly served, it is really not necessary to set out their defence.

The learned Judge of the District Court of Myaungmya held that the agreement was bad on the ground that its terms were extortionate and out of all proportion to the amounts advanced by the plaintiff and the risk, if any, incurred by him; in other words that the agreement was unfair and unconscionable. He held that it was conceivable that Ma E Mya understood the terms of the agreement Exhibit A; but he felt constrained to hold that, when she executed it, there was no free consent. In other words, that she executed the agreement under undue influence. The learned Judge gave the appellant a decree for the amounts which he held to have been proved to have been advanced by him, namely, a sum of Rs. 3,660-8, with interest at Rs. 12 per cent. per annum. With reference to the mortgage of the second defendant, Maung Po Thet, he held that it was void, having been made after the legal attachment; and, with these exceptions, the balance of the claim was dismissed.

Against this decree U Pe Gyi has appealed to this Court. His principal grounds are that there is no evidence of undue influence or coercion, or that Ma E Mya had acted without free consent; that the agreement was not unconscionable and inequitable or opposed to public policy; and that the inadequacy of the consideration was not of itself sufficient to render the contract champertous. It was further urged that the District Court was wrong in finding that the appellant was entitled only to Rs. 3,660-8; and that the lower Court, having found in favour of the appellant on the issues in regard to the mortgage made to Maung Po Thet, was in error in awarding the latter his costs when dismissing the appellant's claim against him.

Now, the principal point in this case is that, when this agreement was made, Ma E Mya had already obtained a decree in the District Court; and that the original agreement, Exhibit 1, had been cancelled by mutual consent in February 1917.

From the proximity of the date of the cancellation of that agreement, Exhibit 1, and the date of Ma E Mya's application to sue as a pauper, there can be little doubt that one, at least, of the reasons for the cancellation of that agreement was to enable Ma E Mya to secure leave to sue as a pauper. It is quite clear that the other side had knowledge of this agreement; and it appears that it was actually pleaded. But, when it was found that the agreement had been properly cancelled, that objection was not permitted to prevail. Other reasons for the cancellation of agreement, Exhibit 1, are given on page 73 of the trial record, where the appellant stated that he considered that the costs were somewhat heavy; that he wanted further time to consider; and that he did not approve of the terms thereof in their entirety. It is, therefore, probable that at that period before her suit had been launched he was under the impression that he was in for a bad bargain; and that this was the other and chief reason for the cancellation of that agreement. It is important to bear this in mind, because it has been urged by Mr. Villa for the appellant that, although that agreement was cancelled, it was really acted upon by both parties from the very first; and that, inasmuch as the present agreement, Exhibit A, is in almost exactly the same form, it must be held that it was nothing more than a legal re-establishment of the previously cancelled agreement, stress being laid upon the fact that the present agreement shows that it was to have retrospective effect as regards the previous advances made by the appellant to Ma E Mya. In this connection, however, it must be borne in mind that, under the terms of the cancelled agreement, the advances were to be made without interest; whereas it is clear that after that date and, indeed, until the present agreement, Exhibit A, had been drawn up, advances were made at interest at Re. 1 per cent. per month. It cannot, therefore, be held that the agreement, Exhibit 1, subsisted after its cancellation; and the most that can be stated is that until the drawing up of the present agreement, Exhibit A, not long before the decision of the appeal, the appellant was advancing money either as an agent or as a money-lender in the hope of some substantial profit in the case of Ma E Mya's final success.

At the time at which the agreement, Exhibit A, was drawn up in Rangoon, the appellant had actually advanced to Ma E Mya, according to the promissory-notes filed in the case, Exhibits D-1, D-6, dated from the 25th January 1918 to the 23rd March 1919, a sum of Rs. 2,379-3. The appeal having been filed by her opponents, the sole probable future cost to her would be her Advocate's fees and, possibly, the costs of certain copies. At the most it should not have been more than a sum of some Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,000. As a matter of fact, her lawyer's fees were arranged to be the taxed costs plus a sum of Rs. 200. The taxed costs actually amounted to a sum of Rs. 653-12.

After the agreement, Exhibit A, had been drawn up and before its execution, Rs. 370 was advanced to her; and, after the execution and registration thereof, three sums of Rs. 130, Rs. 532-13 and Rs. 248-8 were advanced to her. The total advances, which, by the way, were in terms of the agreement without interest after the agreement, Exhibit A, had been drawn up, amounted to a sum of Rs. 1,281-5.

The appellant has not proved any other advances or expenditure on Ma E Mya's behalf. The Court-fee, which she had to pay after her success in her pauper suit, amounting to Rs. 1,155, the balance lawyer's fee to Mr. J. A. Maung Gyi, and the balance fee paid to Mr. Tajudin Khan are the principal items which the appellant claims in addition. But there can be no doubt that the learned Judge of the District Court was quite right in his decision that these extra items were not proved, the figures in the remarks column of Schedule E filed with the plaint which were realised by the appellant from the estate, having a remarkable and most significant similarity to the figures of the amounts of Court-fees, and the balance fees to Mr. J. A. Maung Gyi.

Mr. Maung Gyi was not examined on the point in regard to his fees. Mr. Tajudin Khan was not called as a witness; and the Government chalan, showing the payment of Rs. 1,155, indicates that that amount was paid in by Mr. Tajudin Khan as Advocate for Ma E Mya. These amounts, therefore, were not proved, and were rightly disallowed.

It may, therefore, be taken that the total advances made by the appellant to Ma E Mya for the purposes of her litigation amounted to the total sum as found by the District Court, namely, Rs. 3,660-8.

It is admitted that advances were made from time to time, and that periodically there was a settlement of account, on which the promissory-notes were executed by Ma E Mya. These pro-notes and some vouchers were produced by the appellant, Exhibits D-1, D-10, and were admitted by Ma E Mya before her decease. There is a very strong presumption that, if there had been any other amounts advanced to Ma E Mya by the appellant, or expended by him on her behalf, they would have been included in a settlement of account. Therefore, the District Court was obviously correct in holding that all amounts expended were included in the promissory-notes and vouchers filed in the suit.

From this it will be seen that at the time when the agreement, Exhibit A, was drawn up, the appellant was aware that Ma E Mya had succeeded in her case in the District Court, and that, though at that time he had only advanced to her a sum of Rs. 2,379. he stood to gain in case of her very likely success in the Appellate Court, a sum of some Rs. 16,000, and that his probable future advances would not much exceed a sum of Rs. 1,000. It is true that Ma E Mya was technically a pauper, and that she might not have been able to have prosecuted her suit successfully, or to have engaged a lawyer of standing to represent her in the appeal, unless the appellant or somebody else had stood behind her. But there can be no doubt that, in the particular circumstances stated, the agreement, Exhibit A, was unfair; that the bargain was unconscionable; and that his very probable gains were far in excess of any expenditure or likely expenditure on his part.

A further point is that the circumstances in which this agreement was drawn up in Rangoon, but was not executed there, and was eventually executed and registered on the same day at Bassein, that is to say, the headquarters of a district to which neither the appellant nor Ma E Mya belonged, are sufficient to cause any Court to study with great caution the question of due execution.

We have the evidence of Mr. J. A. Maung Gyi (now the Hon'ble Mr. J. A. Maung Gyi, one of the Ministers of the Government of Burma), that, while he was in his office, Ma E Mya agreed to the terms of the agreement; but, when he was asked as to why it had not been executed in his office, he stated that his impression was that they wanted to consult others before they decided to execute the documents, the documents being this agreement, Exhibit A, and a power-of-attorney consequent thereon, Exhibit B. In other words, his evidence seems to show that he did not think that Ma E Mya was entirely satisfied. Then we have the significant facts, referred to already, that the documents were not executed at Wakema or at Myaungmya, but were executed and registered at Bassein, when the appellant had taken Ma E Mya thither, and they were staying at the house of his influential brother, U Po Maung.

The appellant has given the most prevaricating answers as to why the documents were executed and registered at Bassein; but the evidence of his own witnesses shows that the real object of his visit to Bassein was the execution of these documents. In view of what those witnesses said, it is impossible to believe that the appellant, U Pe Gyi, has told the Court the truth with reference to his visit to Bassein.

Though it is clear from what the attesting witnesses stated in their evidence that Ma E Mya executed these documents, and stated that she understood and agreed to them, it is open to grave doubt as to whether her consent was free, because at the time she was indebted to U Pe Gyi to the extent of a sum of Rs. 2,749-3, and must have felt that she was considerably under his influence.

There is evidence that the appellant is a man of wide-reaching influence and importance, and it is very significant that in his evidence he stated that he has given similar help to another woman at Pyapon under a similar agreement and that he appears to consider it an easy method for acquiring considerable riches. There is, indeed, evidence that, after the execution and registration of the documents, Ma E Mya referred to them in the presence of respectable persons; but this does not necessarily denote that her consent to the documents was free, or that she had not been subject to considerable influence and pressure in the execution and registration thereof. At that time the appellant, U Pe Gyi, must have been deeply regretting his cancellation of his previous agreement, and must have been extremely anxious to obtain some security for what he hoped to obtain by Ma E Mya's success. He admits in his evidence that he was somewhat in a hurry, because he thought that Ma E Mya was in process of approaching Ma Hla and Maung Nyi Bu with a view to compromising her claim. It, therefore, seems clear that the execution and registration of these documents must be treated with the gravest suspicion. It is not as though Ma E Mya had admitted that this agreement was executed with her free consent, in which case the Courts might have been inclined to treat it differently; for, here, before her death, she deliberately set out that coercion and undue influence had been used by the appellant in order to induce her to make the bargain in question.

The law on the subject of such agreements as administered in India, is perfectly clear; and it has been laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in several cases. It is that while the specific English Law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India, and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy, yet such agreements should be carefully watched, and if extortionate and unconscionable, or made not with the bona fide object of assisting, for a reasonable recompense, a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy, and not enforced.

The case in point is that of Ram Coomar Coondoo v. Chunder Canto Mookerjee (1), which was referred to in the case of Chunni Kuar v. Rup Singh (2). Another case, in which the law on the subject was discussed, is that of Loke Indar Singh v. Rup Singh (3). A still further case in that of Hussain Bakhsh v. Rahmat Husain (4). A somewhat similar case to the present was discussed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Raja Mohkam Singh v. Raja Rup Singh (5). It was there held that, judging by the disproportion between the liability, which the financier incurred under the contract, and the amount of the reward, which he was to obtain in the event of the defendant's success, the reward was excessive and unconscionable; and the claim under the agreement was, therefore, disallowed. In the case of Raghunath v. Nil Kanth (6) their Lordships decided that a nine anna share in the property in consideration of the expenses to be incurred by plaintiff in the prosecution of the case was extortionate and inequitable, and that the agreement should not be given effect to. At the same time it was held that reasonable compensation for the expenses properly incurred and for work done could be awarded.

Much reliance has been placed by Mr. Villa on behalf of the appellant on the case of Achal Ram v. Kazim Husain Khan (7), in which their Lordships of the Privy Council held that a transfer of a moiety of a person's interest in a property in consideration of the vendee assisting him in litigation for the pur-

(1) 4 I. A. 23; 2 C. 233; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 442 (P. C.).

(2) 11 A. 57; A. W. N. (1888) 296; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 465.

(3) 11 A. 118; A. W. N. (1889) 72; 6 Ind. Dec. (N S.) 504.

(4) 11 A. 128; A. W. N. (1888) 273; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 510.

(5) 15 A. 352; 20 I. A. 127; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 327; 17 Ind. Jur. 376; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 943 (P. C.).

(6) 20 C. 843; 20 I. A. 112; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 302; 17 Ind. Jur. 374; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 129; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 567 (P. C.).

(7) 27 A. 271; 15 M. L. J. 197; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 772; 9 C. W. N. 477; 8 O. C. 155; 32 I. A. 113 (P. C.).

pose of recovering that property was not extortionate or unreasonable, and was enforceable. But, though that was undoubtedly the decison in that case, it is easily distinguishable, because, when the matter came to be decided, the vendor was no longer a party to the suit, which was prosecuted by the vendee alone. In other words, it was not a question between the vendor and the vendee.

Reliance has also been placed on the case of Bhagwat Dayal Singh v. Debi Dayal Sahu (8), in which their Lordships of the Privy Council, in dealing with a similar kind of transfer, held that it was not contrary to public policy or void. But in that case also it is expressly stated that the question whether the bargain was inequitable and unconscionable was a question between the assignors and the assignee, which it was unnecessary to decide in a suit in which the assignors did not repudiate the transaction, but asked that effect be given to it, and for that purpose joined the assignee as plaintiff in the suit. This case also, as pointed out by Mr. Das for the first respondent, is distinguishable, and it cannot be urged that their Lordships of the Privy Council have intended, by their pronouncements in these two cases, to alter the general law as already stated, or to lay down such a proposition as that a transfer of a moiety and, even more, of a property, in consideration of assistance in legal expenses is, in no case, a hard or unconscionable bargain.

It is urged by Mr. Villa that, in any case, under the rulings quoted, the appellant is entitled to compensation for his persona services. The learned Judge of the District Court has found that these services were insignificant. After studying the evidence with care, it is impossible to hold that they were very great, and it is difficult to see on what basis such compensation should be based. The learned Judge of the District Court was, therefore, right in disallowing any such compensation.

As regards the claim made by Ma E Mya in her written statement that a sum of Rs. 315 should be set off against anything payable to the appellant it does not appear from the record that there was any proof of this amount as against the appellant. It must, therefore, be disallowed.

* * * * *

As regards the contention of the appellant that costs should not have been awarded by the decree to Maung Po That as representing himself and his deceased wife, it would appear that the District Court was perfectly right. By its findings it decided, in effect, that by means of the agreement in suit the appellant had no claim to the land, whether the subject of the mortgage or not, and it is, therefore, obvious that Maung Po That must have, in any case, been allowed his costs.

In conclusion there can be no doubt that on the evidence before it and in the circumstances and probabilities of the case, the decision of the learned Judge below was correct. As Maung Po That has not appeared in this appeal as second respondent, it is not necessary to deal with his case, or to come to a definite finding as to whether the mortgage in his favour is valid or void.

The appeal will stand dismissed with costs in favour of the first respondent.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(8) 35 C. 420; 10 Bom. L. R. 230; 12 C. W. N. 393; 7 C. L. J. 335; 5 A. L. J. 184; 18 M. L. J. 100; 3 M. L. T. 344; 14 Bur. L. R. 49; 35 I. A. 48 (P. C.).

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 846 OF 1921.

July 2, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Macpherson and Mr. Justice Das.

Musammat RAMDULARI KUER—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

JANG BAHADUR SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Vendor and purchaser—Hindu joint family—Agreement to purchase by father in personal capacity— Sons, liability of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 37.

Where the father of a Hindu joint family enters into an agreement for purchase in his personal capacity, on his death, his sons, as the surviving members of the family (as distinguished from his heirs and representatives within the meaning of section 37 of the Contract Act) are not bound by the same, and are entitled to a refund of any earnest money paid by the deceased together with interest.

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Gaya, dated the 4th February 1921, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, Gaya, dated the 13th September 1919.

Mr. N.K. Prasad, II, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Macpherson, J.—This appeal is preferred by the widow and legal representative of the defendant, the suit against whom was dismissed by the Trial Court but decreed in part by the District Judge on appeal.

The case for the plaintiffs was that Rai Bindheshwari Prasad on or before the 4th December 1916, in anticipation of a decree on compromise which he eventually obtained on 15th December against Mathura Prasad for Rs. 19,145-9-1 contracted to sell the decree to the plaintiffs and their father, Ramphal Singh, for Rs. 18,000 and took Rs. 3,000 at once out of the stipulated consideration and on the 11th January 1917 executed an agreement (Exhibit 1) in favour of Ramphal Singh to sell the aforesaid decree to him, mentioning therein that Rs. 2,000 had been paid, though in fact Rs. 3,000 had been paid. The plaintiffs inter alia alleged as follows:—

"4. That Babu Ramphal Singh, the plaintiffs' father lived jointly with them and they were members of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara School. He died while living jointly with the plaintiffs and leaving the plaintiffs behind him. The plaintiffs entered upon possession and occupation of the entire property belonging to the joint family by right of survivorship."

The defendant failed to execute the deed of sale in spite of notice from the plaintiffs and on the other hand realised the decretal money from Mathura Prasad by execution of the decree which he had contracted to sell to plaintiffs. The plaintiffs, therefore, claimed Rs. 4,522-9-1 made up of Rs. 3,000 paid to the defendant Rs. 1,145-9-1 damages and interest.

The defences were that non-execution was due to the laches of the plaintiffs, that only Rs. 2,000 had been advanced and that the contract was void as Ramphal Singh had died before the 11th January 1917 when the contract was executed.

The Trial Court found that the contract was complete before 4th December but sustained the defence that non-execution of the sale-deed was due to the inexcusable laches of the plaintiffs in spite of notice from the defendant to execute the kewala and held that the plaintiffs were accordingly not entitled to recover the deposit of Rs. 2,000, even though there was no express stipulation for forfeiture in case of default. As to the death of Ramphal Singh it was found to have occurred on the 20th December 1916 but the learned Subordinate Judge held that the matter was not affected by his death inasmuch as the agreement did not appear to be a personal one in his favour.

The lower Appellate Court held that it was not proper to apply to Exhibit 1 a construction at variance with its terms which he considered were a promise to execute a sale-deed in favour of Ramphal Singh personally and that this promise became incapable of fulfilment on his death; accordingly the plaintiffs could not enforce a penalty clause against the defendants, and equally the defendants' claim was untenable that the plaintiffs forfeited the earnest money (1) since on the defendant's own showing there was uncertainty in the contract on the question in whose favour the deed should be executed, and (2) since the deed was not signed by Ramphal Singh or by any one on his behalf. As the death of Ramphal Singh had rendered the contract incapable of fulfilment and, therefore, void, or in the alternative as it is or had become void for uncertainty the defendants must refund Rs. 2,000 the earnest money with interest to the plaintiffs.

KO PO MAUNG v. MA MEIN GALE.

In second appeal by the widow and heir of the defendant it is submitted that the contract which was admittedly entered into on the 3rd or 4th December 1916 was capable of performance since it was entered into by the joint family and the money was advanced from the joint family funds.

In reply it is contended that there is a clear finding of fact that the contract was a personal one and the earrest money could not be forfeited except for default and Ramphal Singh was not in default.

No other contention was advanced and indeed the arguments in the appeal have hardly extended beyond a statement of these propositions.

The peculiarity of the present position is that each party relies upon the pleadings of the other. The question for decision is, therefore, whether the contract of appellant's husband was a personal one with Ramphal Singh or one with him as karta of the joint family of which respondents, his sons, are the surviving members. It is admitted that if it is not found to have been a contract with the joint family of which Ramphal Singh was karta this appeal must fail.

Now the findings of the First Court on this point are very far from confident. After deciding that the contract was complete before the 4th December 1917, he proceeds "Besides the contract does not appear to be of a purely personal nature; Ramphal Singh was a member of the plaintiffs' joint family and the plaintiffs themselves appear to have been paid the earnest money." He relies on the fact that such had been the case of defendant in his first written statement as well as of plaintiffs.

The learned District Judge relying upon the fact that the document itself is expressed as being in favour of Babu Ramphal Singh and not in favour of him and his heirs or of him and other members of his family, finds that the contract is of a personal nature so that it did not bind the executants to execute a sale-deed in favour of any one but Ramphal Singh. Here he accepts the case made by de endant in his second written statement and displaces the hesitating finding of the Trial Court. No copy of Exhibit I has been produced and thus this Court is restricted to the information obtainable from the paper-book. It appears, therefore, that the question whether the contract was personal or was entered into by the joint family consisting of the respondents and their father is disposed of by the finding of fact of the lower Appellate Court when he holds that the defendant did not bind himself to execute a sale-deed in favour of any person but Ramphal Singh himself. It has not been contended before us on the strength of section 37 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, or otherwise, that the respondents as heirs and representatives of their father (as distinguished from members of the same joint family with him) are bound by his agreement to purchase.

In our opinion in the circumstances of the case the decision of the lower Appellate Court is correct. The appeal accordingly fails and is dismissed with costs.

Das, J.—I agree.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 241 OF 1922.

July 2, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice May Oung and Mr. Justice Duckworth.

KO PO MAUNG AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MA MEIN GALE AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 35—Mortgage, proof of—Entries in supplementary Revenue Records value of.

In the absence of other evidence, entries in supplementary Revenue Records, viz., Revenue Register No. 1 and Revenue Register No. 5 though relevant under section 35 of the Evidence Act are not in themselves sufficient to prove a mortgage.

Mi Se Baw v. Me Min Ya, 4 Ind. Cas. 1084; 2 U. B. R. (1907-09) Evidence 19, relied on.

Maung Hlaing v. Maung Chit Su, 76 Ind. Cas. 449; 1 R. 135; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 196, distinguished.

KO PO MAUNG v. MA MEIN GALE.

Appeal against a decree of the District Court, Pyapon, in Civil Regular No. 2 of 1922.

Mr. Higinbotham, for the Appellants.

Mr. Kyaw Din, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—It is clear that the appellants-defendants have been in possession since 1901. Strong evidence of the alleged mortgages is, therefore, required. From first plaintiff's own evidence it appears that the mortgage of 1900 was made in writing. If so, it was compulsorily registrable, and cannot be proved. But the transaction of 1901 which both sides admit, the one side calling it an usufructuary mortgage and the other an outright sale, is on a different footing. That may be proved by the plaintiffs. The question is whether they have proved it. It is clear that they have not done so. The plaintiffs-respondents called only two witnesses, besides Ma Mein Gale herself, namely, the ex-headman San Nyein, who was dismissed from his appointment, and was formerly Ma Mein Gale's brother-in-law, and Po Bwin, a cooly, who is alleged to have been present casually, and is the husband of Ma Mein Gale's step-daughter. They both contradict Ma Mein Gale as to whether her husband, Maung Ni, was present at the transaction at San Nyein's house. She says that he was not. They say that he was. Po Bwin's memory, for a casual witness, is extraordinary, and it is clear that not much reliance can be put on such evidence as he and San Nyein give twenty-one years later about the transaction.

As regards the map, extracts from Revenue Register No. 1 and extract from Revenue Register No. 5, which show the respondents as mortgagors and the appellants as mortgagees, these are in themselves, being but supplementary Survey Records, quite inadequate to prove the mortgage That this is the case has been held by the Courts in Burma time after time. Moreover, no effort was made to produce Register No. 9 (as it then was), in which reports of alienation are made direct, and signed by the parties. The best evidence available from the Revenue Records was thus not made use of. It was held by Shaw, J. C., (later Sir George Shaw), in the case of Mi Se Baw v. Mi Min Ya (1), that, in the absence of other reliable evidence, supplementary Survey Records are insufficient to prove mortgage. This is undoubtedly right, and in no way conflicts with the decision of Pratt, J., in Maung Hlaing v. Maung Chit Su (2) where entries in Register No. 7 (formerly 9) were referred to as creating a presumption that a report of an alienation in the temrs stated was made.

No doubt the Revenue Records, put in evidence in the District Court, were relevant under section 35, Evidence Act, but they are not sufficient in themselves to prove the mortgage.

The combined force of these records (which are of course in effect copies from Register No. 9), and the very weak oral evidence for the plaintiffs-respondents was inadequate to prove the mortgage. The land, moreover, in 1901, was most probably not worth more than the amount in question.

There was no onus of proof on the appellants, and it was immaterial whether they chose to enter the witness-box or not; but they did examine two witnesess whose evidence was at lest as good as that of San Nyein and Po Bwin.

The appeal must be allowed. The decree of the District Court is set aside, and the plaintiffs-respondents' suit is dismissed with costs in both Courts.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 1084; 2 U. B. R. (1907-09), Evidence 19.

(2) 76 Ind. Cas. 449; 1 R. 135; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 196.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1232 OF 1920.

April, 10, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ryves.

KISHORI MAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

PARSADI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), ss. 10, 165—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 36—Purchaser of khud kasht land—Suit for profits—Rent suit—Assessment of rent.

A purchaser of khud kasht land is not entitled to sue the co-sharer landlords for profits under section 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act. His suit is a simple one for rent against his vendor ex-proprietary tenant. As a preliminary step, however, it is necessary for him to have the rent assessed by the Collector with reference to the provisions of section 10 of the Agra Tenancy Act and section 36 of the Land Revenue Act.

Second appeal.

Mr. Sanyal, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. L. Banerjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs-appellants purchased certain specific plots of land in the village from the ancestor of the respondents. In the deed of sale the land sold is described as the khud kasht of the vendor.

The vendor, therefore, would automatically become the ex proprietary tenant of these plots and possession, therefore, was not given to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs brought this suit against all the co-sharers including the lambardar, for profits for the three preceding years, under section 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act. Various objections were raised and the Trial Court dismissed the suit as against all the other defendants, but decreed the suit for Rs. 177-5-10 against the present respondents as representing the plaintiffs' share of profits.

On appeal, the learned First Additional District Judge of Aligarh held that the suit was misconceived, that it was not a suit under section 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act but was really a suit for rent, and as such, could not be brought until the rent had been assessed by the Collector.

The plaintiffs come here in second appeal and it is argued that the lower Court is wrong in holding that section 165 does not apply. It seems to me quite clear that section 165 has no application whatsoever. The only claim which the plaintiffs had against the respondents was to recover rent due to them as ex-proprietary tenants. In reality this was the way in which the First Court treated the suit. It came to the conclusion that the proper rent should be something less than what appears to have been agreed upon between the parties in the sale-deed, having regard to the prevailing rates in the neighbourhood and it was on that basis that it gave the plaintiffs their decree although it described it as their share of profits. It seems to me that the suit was entirely misconceived and did not lie at all against the other co-sharers; it should have been brought simply against the respondents for rent. But having regard to section 10, clause (5), of the Agra Tenancy Act and section 36 of the Land Revenue Act, it seems to me that as a preliminary step to such a suit, it was necessary first to have the rent assessed by the Collector. In my opinion the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs, including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE NO. 5 OF 1923.

July 23, 1923.

Present:—Sir Sydney Robinson, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice May Oung.

S. P. R. M. FIRM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MAUNG PO KYA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XII, r. 6—Usurious Loans Act (IX of 1918), applicability of—Admission by defendant—Court, power of, to reduce interest.

The rule laid down in O. XII, r. 6 of the Civil Procedure Code is merely permissive, and the judgment which the Court may pass under that rule is such as the Court may think just.

The terms of the Usurious Loans Act are very wide and apply to all suits whether heard ex parte or otherwise.

RAZA HUSAIN KHAN v. GANESH PRASAD.

A Court can apply the provisions of the Usurious Laons Act for the benefit of a defendant who has confessed judgment.

Civil Reference from the District Court, Toungoo, in Civil Appeal No. 25 of 1923 of that Court.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference under O. XLVI, r. 1, of the Code of Civil Procedure. The question referred is "can a Court apply the Usurious Loans Act for the benefit of a defendant who confesses judgment ?"

Plaintiffs brought a suit on a promissory-note against three defendants. One failed to appear, another denied execution, and the third admitted the claim and confessed judgment. It was held by the Original Court that the case was one to which the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act of 1918 should be applied. The reference is made because it is thought that under O. XII, r. 6 of the Code, had the plaintiff applied for immediate judgment, the Court would have had to pass immediate judgment. There was nothing on the record at that stage to suggest that the interest charged was exorbitant. As to O. XII, r. 6, it is to be noted that the rule is merely permissive; further upon such an application the Court may make such order or give such judgment as the Court may think just. The Court is not, therefore, bound to pass an immediate judgment, but in any case in the present instance no such application was made, and when the Court came to pass judgment the facts were fully before it. It can then pass such judgment as it thinks just. The whole of the terms of the Usurious Loans Act are extremely wide, and they apply to any suit whether heard ex parte or otherwise. If the judgment in the case of the defendant who did not appear, and in the case of the defendant who denied execution, is not to be for the full amount claimed by reason of the provisions of the Usurious Loans Act, it will clearly be unjust to pass a decree in favour of an honest defendant who truthfully admitted the claim for a very much larger amount. We are able to find nothing in the Act or in the Code of Civil Procedure, which could prevent the Court from taking the Act into consideration in favour of the defendant who confessed judgment, and the answer to the point referred is in the affirmative.

Order in affirmative.

Z. K.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 9 OF 1922.

February 9, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

RAZA HUSAIN KHAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 TO 5—APPELLANTS

versus

GANESH PRASAD—PLAINTIFF, Musammat ZAINAB BIBI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16, ill. (c).— Undue influence—Burden of proof—Creditor and debtor, relationship of—Mortgage—Redemption—Post diem interest, rate of—Intention of parties.

The burden of proving that the rate of interest stipulated for in a mortgage-deed was agreed to by the mortgagor under undue influence lies on the mortgagor or his representatives, and the burden is not shifted on to the mortgagee by proof of the fact that at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed the mortgagor was indebted to the mortgagee in a small sum. [p. 384, cols. 1 & 2.]

A mortgage-deed fixed the term for redemption at two years and stipulated for a heavy rate of interest. Mention was made of the payment of interest year by year but there was no stipulation that interest would be payable at the contract rate after the due date:

Held, that the parties did not intend that after the due date interest should be paid at the contract rate. [p. 384, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Gonda, dated the 29th October 1921.

Messrs. Haider Husain and M. Wasim, for the Appellants.

Mr. J. K. Banerji, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff has obtained a decree for sale on foot of a simple mortgage dated 12th June 1912 executed by Tajuddin since deceased. The defendants were the heirs and a subsequent mortgagee of the mortgagor. The defendants (sons of Tajuddin) have appealed and the argument by the learned Counsel was confined to the question of interest allowed by the Trial Court on the principal sum secured The money was payable at the end of two years and interest was to run at the rate of 22 per cent. per annum with yearly rests. The argument here was (1) that this high rate of interest was consented to by Tajuddin under undue influence and (2) that under the terms of the deed there is no contract for post diem interest after the expiry of two years from the date of the mortgage and that, therefore, the same rate of interest should not be allowed up to the date of suit. As an alternative it was further argued that the contract rate should run up to the date of the institution of the suit in the First Court and not subsequently up to the date of judgment as was allowed by the lower Court.

There is no force in the contention regarding undue influence. The argument was that the burden of proving want of undue influence lay on the paintiff-respondent because the mortgagor, when he entered into the mortgage in suit, was indebted to the mortgagee. Reference was made to Illustration (c) of section 16 of the Contract Act. That Illustration does not mention all the necessary facts and has to be supplemented. There would be a case of undue influence if the debt is of a large amount and the money-lender puts pressure on the debtor for its payment. Here it is admitted that the previous debt was of a small sum of Rs. 134 while the amount borrowed at the time of the mortgage in suit was Rs. 2,000. No witnesses suggested that the money-lender had made any demand for the payment of the small sum of money due prior to the execution o the bond in suit. When the deed was executed at Mankapur Tajuddin's son Raza Husain was present. He is a defendant but did not come forward to give evidence in the case. In his place another son Ahmad Husain gave evidence and two witnesses Asad Ali and Abdullah Khan who had no reason to be present at the time of the execution of the deed at Mankapur several miles away from their home. Ahmad Husain was not present when the deed was executed. Tajuddin was a tutor of the mortgagee and of his son. This fact does not raise any presumption that the mortgagee would be in a position to dominate the will of Tajuddin. The burden of proving want of undue influence did not lie on the mortgagee and there is an entire absence of proof on the side of the defendants.

As regards the payment of post diem interest the question must depend upon the interpretation of the deed. The learned Counsel for the defendants-respondents quoted a large number of cases where it was held that under the terms of particular mortgage-deeds there was a contract for the payment of post diem interest at the contract rate. The present case, however, is different. In the mortgage, mention is made about the payment of interest year by year but after the clause relating to the payment of principal and interest after due date there is no stipulation that interest shall be payable at the contractrate. The penalty of not paying at the end of two years is stated to be the right of the mortgagee to recover principal and interest when he liked. There is no stipulation here that if the money is not paid on due date interest at the contract rate will continue to run. When the contract rate is so onerous the deed should be read as far as possible to favour the mortgagor. There is no reason shown, such as insufficiency of security, why such an exorbitant rate of interest should be agreed upon. If money is required only for two years and the mortgagee suddenly gets his money back and is not able promptly to invest it one could understand that he would charge a high rate of interest. When, however, as is urged by the defendants, the contract was for the money to remain on interest as long as the mortgagor desired to keep it, there was no reason why the mortgagor should consent to pay such a high rate of interest. It may be observed that in less than eight years the sum due has grown to nearly five times the original amount borrowed. On the terms of the deed I am fully satisfied that the parties did not agree upon the rate of interest to be paid after the expiry of the two years fixed for payment. Under the circumstances the Court can fix a reasonable rate and I consider 12 per cent per annum compoundable every year to be a reasonable rate. The decree of the lower Court shall, therefore, be amended accordingly. The amount will be Rs. 3,001-4 up to the end of the stipulated period 11th June 1914 and after that the office shall work out the amount calculating interest at 12 per cent. per annum adding interest into the principal sum at the end of every year. This shall be done up to six months from to-day's date. After that date interest shall run at 6 per cent. per annum. If the money so arrived at is not paid by the defendants within six months of to-day's date the property shall be sold. In preparing the decree the office shall pay attention to certain objections to the lower Court's decree made by the respondents here. Before my signature is obtained the office shall get the account tested by the Pleaders of parties, and my signature shall not be obtained before the signatures of the Pleaders are obtained. Both parties shall receive and pay costs in both Courts according to their success and failure.

Decree modified.

Z. K.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE NO. 9 OF 1923.

July 30, 1923.

Present:—Sir Sydney Robinson, KT., Chief Justice.

TIN TIN NYO AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

MAUNG BA SAING AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Appeal filed in wrong Court—Time spent in wrong Court, whether can be allowed—Bona fide mistake—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 98—Letters Patent (Ran.) cl. 34, applicability of—Appeal—Difference of opinion—Procedure.

Where time has been spent in prosecuting an appeal in a wrong Court owing to a bona fide mistake of Counsel as to the jurisdiction of that Court, such as could be made in spite of the exercise of due care and attention, the period so spent may under section 5 of the Limitation Act be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the appeal. But this indulgence will not be granted in a case in which the mistake is such as could have been discovered by the exercise of due care and attention. [p. 390, col. 1]

Case-law discussed.

Per Robinson, C. J.—Clause 34 of the Letters Patent (Ran.) does not in all cases override the provisions of section 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure and where that section can properly apply it may be resorted to in spite of the provisions of clause 34. [p. 380, col. 1.]

Clause 34 of the Letters Patent (Ran.) applies only to those cases in which the appeals come before the Court by virtue of a right of appeal given by the Letters Patent. Where an appeal lies under the ordinary law of land, the Letters Patent will not override the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to the appeal. [p. 389, col. 2.]

Civil Reference arising out of Civil First Appeal No. 325 of 1922 of the High Court of Judicature sitting at Mandalay.

JUDGMENT.

Pratt, J.—The appeal against the decree of the District Court was promptly filed in the Judicial Commissioner's Court after return of the Memorandum of Appeal.

It is common ground that the appeal is time-barred unless the time occupied in presenting the appeal in the wrong forum, i. e., the Divisional Court and the subsequent appeal from the Divisional Court's decree to the Judicial Commissioner's Court, be excluded.

The question for decision, therefore, is whether the delay caused by prosecution of the appeal in a wrong forum is sufficient cause for admitting the appeal after expiration of the prescribed period within the meaning of section 5 of the Limitation Act.

A large number of authorities have been cited in support of the admission of the appeal but it is only necessary to refer to some of them.

In Ramjit Missir v. Ramudar Singh (1) a Bench of the Calcutta High Court treated a Memorandum of Appeal, which had been wrongly filed in the District Court and adjudicated upon there, as though presented in that Court and held that it was a suitable case for exercise of their discretion under section 5 of the Limitation Act.

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 940: 17 C. W. N. 116 at p. 117; 16 C. L. J. 77.

In that case, however, the appellant had grounds for considering the District Court was the right forum and there was a divergence of judicial opinion as to the right method of valuing the suit.

The Privy Council case of Brij Indar Singh v. Kanshi Ram (2) to which reference has been made is not of great assistance as it dealt with the exclusion of the time occupied in a proper application for review of judgment.

In Sheo Pal Singh v. Kripala (3) it was held that, where a mother acting for her minor son and without legal aid presented an appeal in a wrong Court her mistake was bona fide and the delay in presenting the appeal to the proper Court was excusable.

The circumstances in that case are similar to the present, but the decision is important, because of its being based on the bona fides of the appellant.

The case of Maung Sin v. Maung Po (4) is undoubtedly in favour of admission of the appeal.

In that case [Maung Sin v. Maung Po (4)] a Bench of the Lower Burma Chief Court held that the fact that the Advocate had by oversight filed an appeal in the Divisional Court instead of the Chief Court and the Divisional Court omitted to notice the error and heard the appeal and gave judgment was sufficient cause for not presenting it within the prescription period.

The authority is not, however, a good one as the reasons for the decision are not discussed or given and the question of bona fides was apparently not considered.

In the later case of Ma Mat Gale v. Moung Tun Win (5) a Bench of the Chief Court held that the Divisional Court was wrong in admitting an appeal, which was prima facie time-barred because it had been wrongly presented by the Advocate to the Chief Court in the first instance.

It was pointed out that the mistake of the Advocate was one which must have been obvious to anyone who had taken the trouble to read the plaint. The Court after reference to authorities held that a bona fide mistake of a Pleader may afford sufficient cause for admitting an appeal after time, but pointed out that a bona fide mistake is one made in spite of exercise of due care and attention.

There is little doubt that this is the correct view. The criterion of the excusability of the delay caused by presenting the appeal in the wrong Court is the bona fides of the mistake, that is whether it was made after the exercise of due care and attention.

In the present instance the plaint itself disclosed that the value of the suit was about Rs. 10,000 and in filing the appeal in the Divisional Court, it seems obvious that the Advocate cannot be held to have exercised due care and attention.

Had he considered the question of the value of the appeal he must have seen that it was at least Rs. 10,000 and that, therefore, the Divisional Court was not the correct forum. It was common ground that the land in suit had been mortgaged by the first three defendants to the fourth and fifth for Rs. 8,500, so that they were perfectly well aware that the value of the property was greatly in excess of Rs. 3,011, the sum for which the decree for redemption was sought and obtained.

In spite of this in the Memorandum of Appeal in the Divisional Court the appeal was not separately valued for the purposes of jurisdiction, as it ought to have been, but there was a mere note, "value Rs. 3,011" which was the value for the Court-fees only.

I am of opinion that the mistake of the Advocate in presenting the appeal in the Divisional Court, having been made without due care and attention, cannot be considered bona fide and that it is not, therefore, sufficient cause for admitting the appeal under section 5.

(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 43; 45 C. 94; 33 M. L. J. 486; 22 M. L. T. 362; 6 L. W. 592; 126 P. W. R. 1917; 15 A. L. J. 777; 19 Bom. L. R. 866; 3 P. L. W. 313; 26 C. L. J. 572; 104 P. R. 1917; (1917) M. W N. 811; 22 C. W. N. 169; 127 P. L. R. 1917; 44 I. A. 218 (P. C.).

(3) 30 Ind. Cas 211; 2 O. L. J. 325.

(4) 12 Ind. Cas. 28; 4 Bur. L. T. 224.

(5) 37 Ind. Cas. 815; 8 L. B. R. 566; 10 Bur. L. T. 221.

TIN TIN HYO v. MAUNG BA SAING.

I would dismss the appeal as time-barred.

Macgregor, J.—Although section 14 of the Limitation Act, 1908, relates to suits and not to appeals, it is the recognised practice that the circumstances contemplated in section 14 should ordinarily constitute a "sufficient cause" within the meaning of section 5. Balwant Singh v. Gummi Ram (6) cited in Karm Bakhsh v. Daulat Ram (7) and in Brij Indar Singh v. Kanshi Ram (2). The question then is whether the mistaken proceedings were prosecuted in good faith, i. e., whether the Advocate's belief that the appeal lay to the Divisional Court was formed with due care and attention, Ma Mal Gale v. Maung Tun Win (5).

In the last mentioned case plaintiff, and not as here the defendants, was the appellant. In his plaint he had valued the land of which he sought redemption at Rs. 4,500. The decree gave him a portion only of what he claimed. On the last day for filing an appeal, which at that time in Lower Burma, on a valuation not exceeding Rs 5,000 lay to the Divisional Court, the Pleader acting for him wrote to a Rangoon Advocate to file the appeal in the Chief Court and indicated a valuation of over Rs. 5,200 in a letter which might well have put the Rangoon Advocate on his guard. The latter did not ask for the Memorandum of Appeal to be returned to him for presentation in the Divisional Court until it came up for hearing and that was fifteen months after the records had been received in the Chief Court. There had also been other inaction on plaintiffs' part, and the Bench held, on subsequent appea from the Divisional Judge, that on grounds of unjustifiable carelessness and inattention, coupled with gross delay, he ought not to bave admitted the appeal so long out of time. They cited Sarat Chunder Bose v. Saraswati Debi (8). In that case the appeal was against an order arising out of an execution, and appellants who were the applicants were well aware that the forum of appeal depended on the value of the original suit. A week before filing their appeal in the wrong Court, viz., the District Court, they had had before them the decree in the original suit showing on the face of it a value of Rs. 15,260, and another paper showing that the appeal against that decree had been preferred to the High Court. They had also been guilty of delay after becoming aware of their mistake.

In Ram Narain Joshi v. Parmeswar Narain Mahta (9) the plaintiffs brought two separate suits against different defendants in respect of the same property, valuing it at different sums over Rs. 5,000 in both for jurisdiction, at Rs. 4,514 in one for Court-fee, and at over Rs. 5,000 in the other for Court-fee. When he lost both, he filed one appeal rightly in the High Court and won it and the other wrongly in the District Court. The two suits had by consent been tried together. The High Court, in dismissing his subsequent application in the matter of the wrongly filed appeal, remarked. "They (i. e. the suits)" appear "to have been instituted on different dates," and that is probably the reason why the "values are put down at different figures; but the applicant, who was the plaintiff in those suits, must have known very well that the value of the suit was above Rs. 5,000 and that the appeal in this as in the other lay to the High Court." Apart from that, they held that on grounds of delay alone, and want of due diligence when the mistake became known, he was not entitled to the benefit of section 5. Their Lordships of the Privy Council declined to interfere six years afterwards.

Those are the cases cited before us against the defendants-appellants. In their favour are Ramjit Misstr v. Ramudar Singh (1) and Sheo Pal Singh v. Kripala (3) and less directly three other rulings, viz., Brij Indar Singh v. Kanshi Ram (2) (exclusion of time occupied in a proper

(6) 5 A. 591; A. W. N. (1883) 142; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 515.
(7) 183 P. R. 1888.
(8) 34 C. 216; 5 C. L. J. 380.

(9) 30 C. 309; 30 I. A. 20; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 431 (P. C.).

application for review); Balwant Singh v. Gumani Ram (6) (time occupied in application for review to High Court although an appeal lay): and Brij Mohan Das v. Mannu Bibi (10) (suit presented in wrong Court owing to a bona fide mistake of law as to mode of valuing for jurisdiction). In the first of these cases, Ramjit Missir's Case (1) there had been it is true a divergence of judicial opinion as to the right method of valuing the suit, and in the second a mother acting without legal aid for her minor son presented an appeal in the wrong Court, but the material divergences between the present case and the three first examined are wider and more numerous. In those cases want of good faith appeared in the parties not only going to the wrong Court with the valuation—their own valuation in two cases—staring them in the face, but also in action and delay. In the present case the valuation is stated in the 12th paragraph of the plaint in Burmese, where it is vaguely put on the very boundary for appellate jurisdiction, and was forgotton thereafter by all concerned, and the proceedings reached the final stage without any objection from plaintiffs. Diligence is regarded as a great test of bona fides and defendants-appellants have throughout been prompt and diligent. Due care and attention does not mean such as will make mistake impossible. On the facts and circumstances of this case, I would hold that the appeal was presented in good faith in the Divisional Court and that the appellants are entitled in this Court to the benefit of section 5 of the Limitation Act and that the appeal is it not time-barred, and should be heard.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

Pratt and Macgregor, JJ.—Plaintiffs sued and obtained a decree in the District Court, Sagaing, for redemption of certain lands for Rs. 3,011. It was stated in the plaint that the value of the suit lands was about Rs. 10,000 and it was common ground that there had been a second mortgage for Rs. 8,500.

The defendants nevertheless filed an appeal to the Divisional Court valuing the suit at Rs. 3,011 without any distinction between the value for the purpose of Court-fees and for jurisdiction.

The Divisional Court admitted the appeal and dismissed it after hearing.

On second appeal to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner in which the appeal was again valued at Rs. 3,011 it was pointed out after the appeal had been admitted that the value of the appeal was over Rs. 10,000 and the first appeal, therefore, did not lie to the Divisional Court, whose decree was set aside as without jurisdiction.

The Memorandum of Appeal was returned to defendants to be presented in the Judicial Commissioner's Court, if thought fit, and was promptly filed in that Court.

The appeal is barred by limitation unless the time occupied by the appeal in the District Court and the subsequent appeal to the Judicial Commissioner's Court be excluded.

The question for determination, therefore, is whether the delay caused by prosecution of the appeal in the wrong forum is under the circumstances sufficient cause for admitting the appeal after expiration of the prescribed period within the meaning of section 5 of the Limitation Act.

The decision turns upon whether Counsel for defendants can be considered to have acted bona fide in presenting the appeal to the Divisonal Court.

As we are not agreed on the point of law involved, the appeal must be heard by another Judge or Judges as the Chief Justice may direct on the point of law stated under section 98 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Mr. Kyaw Din, for the Applicants.

Mr. Keith, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a reference under section 98 of the Code of Civil Proecdure by the Division Bench of this Court sitting at Mandalay, who have differed in opinion on a point of law, namely, a question as to whether the appeal before them was barred by limitation. The eaxct point on which the learned Judges differ was whether there was sufficient cause shown for admitting the appeal under section 5 of the Limitation Act.

(10) 19 A. 348; A. W. N. (1897) 86; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 228.

Mr. Keith has raised a preliminary objection that section 98 cannot apply, and that no reference lies. He urges that clause 34 of the Letters Patent of this Court governs the case, that the opinion of the senior Judge should prevail, and that there would then be an appeal under clause 13 of the Letters Patent.

In my opinion the objection cannot prevail. In the first place, the differing Judges are not bound to refer the point of law on which they differ and, if they decided not to do so, then the provisions of clause 34 will apply. But, had they taken that course in the present case, the result would have been that the decision of the Court would be that the appeal was barred by time, and that the Court had, therefore, no jurisdiction to hear it.

I agree with the view expressed by the Full Bench of the Allahadad High Court in the case of Husaini Begam v. Collector of Muzaffarnagar (11) that the proper procedure, when a preliminary question of limitation is raised, is to hear that question and decide it as a preliminary point and, it it is so decided, it cannot be said that the Appellate Court, which had not heard the appeal on its merits, either confirms or reverses the decree appealed from; and, that being the case, their decision cannot be "a judgment" within the meaning of clause 13 of the Letters Patent, and no appeal would, therefore, lie. I agree with the learned Judges in the authority cited that clause 34 of the Letters Patent does not in all cases override the provisions of section 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure and where that section can properly apply it may be resorted to in spite of the provisions of clause 34 when the result is such as would be the case in the present instance, it seems obviously right for the differing Judges to refer the point of law on which they differ, as has been done in the present case. Further, I am of opinion that clause 34 of the Letters Patent applies only to those cases in which the appeals come before the Court by virtue of a right of appeal given by the Letters Patent. Where an appeal lies under the ordinary law of the land, the Letters Patent will not override the provisions of the Code applicable to the appeal. For these reasons, I hold that there is no force in the objection which has been raised.

Coming to the matter of the reference, I do not think it necessary to refer to the large number of authorities that have been cited. The general rule in this matter is clearly laid down in the case of Karm Bakhsh v. Daulat Ram (7)—"We think the true guide for a Court in the exercise of this discretion, is whether the appellant has acted with reasonable diligence in presenting his appeal, and we think, further, that he ought ordinarily to be deemed to have acted with ordinary diligence, when the whole period between the date of the decree appealed against, and the date of presenting the appeal, does not, after excluding the time spent in prosecuting with due diligence a proper application for review of judgment, exceed the period prescribed by law for presenting the appeal." It is true that the time sought to be excluded in that case was spent in an application for review of judgment, and that that was a proper course to take. The same rule will apply where the time has been spent in prosecuting an appeal in a wrong Court where there was a bona fide mistake as to the jurisdiction of that Court. This rule was approved by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Brij Indar Singh v. Kanshi Ram (2), and Their Lordships say thereafter—"There may be a general rule as to the exercise of discretion, but each case must, nevertheless, be examined as to its own circumstances to see whether they make it fall within or without the terms of the general rule." The guiding principle is again, in my opinion, correctly laid down in the case of Ma Mat Gale v. Maung Tun Win (5). The Judge had in that case admitted the first appeal, saying—"After argument, I am of opinion that the mistake in filing the appeal in the Chief Court instead of in this Court was due to an error about the value of the land on the part of the Pleader, who instructed appellant's Counsel." It is pointed out that there was no evidence as to this—either oral or by affidavit—on the record. There was no explanation as to how Maung Saw Pe came or could come to find that the land had been worth over Rs. 5,000. It is pointed out that, if he had examined the plaint, as he should have done, he could not have made the mistake, and further that, if the plaintiff had untruly told him that the land was worth over Rs. 5,000 after having valued it at Rs. 4 500 in his plaint, such untrue statement should clearly not have afforded a ground for relaxation of the law of limitation in plaintiff's favour. It is pointed out that the discretion in admitting an appeal under section 5 of the Limitation Act must be judicially exercised and must be based on materials judicially cognizable. Lastly it is pointed out that, though it has been held that a bona fide mistake of a Pleader affords sufficient cause for admitting an appeal after time, that mistake must have been one made in spite of due care and attention that had been exercised. There was also in that case want of due diligence, in that a month was allowed to pass before an application was made for a copy of judgment, and there was gross delay in remedying the mistake in filing the appeal in the wrong Court. Further, it is pointed out that in that case the appeal had been filed by the plaintiff, whereas in the case before me the appeal is filed by the defendant.

(11) 11 A. 176; A. W. N. (1889) 27; 13 Ind. Jur. 316; 16 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 540.

In the present case the plaint is headed—"Suit for redemption of lands as per attached plans, A, B, C, D, and E, measuring 87·14 acres for Rs. 3,011, the mortgage money." The plaint does not give the value for purposes of jurisdiction at all, but in paragraph 12 thereof it states that the lands in dispute are worth about Rs. 10,000, that they are situated in the Sagaing Township, and that, therefore, the suit lies within the jurisdiction of this Court. When the Advocate came to file the appeal, he ought to have read the plaint and, had he done so, he would have observed the fact that no value for purposes of jurisdiction is given and would have further learnt that the value of the lands is so near the border line between an appeal lying to the Divisional Judge and to that of the Judicial Commissioner that he must have been put on enquiry as to the true value of the lands. Apparently no enquiries were made. The Advocate merely took the figure given in the heading of the plaint as the amount due on the mortgage to be the value for purposes of jurisdiction. It is little or no excuse to say that his clients would not know because the defendant had a second mortgage on these lands for Rs. 8,500, a fact which is admitted, and they must have been in a position to instruct him had he sought instructions as to the true value of the lands. The Advocate filed an affidavit in explanation, and in that he merely says "That by an oversight I filed an appeal against the decree of the District Court in the Divisional Court of Sagaing instead of the High Court to which it lay, the value of the land in suit having exceeded Rs. 10,000 according to the plaintiff-respondent's valuation which I overlooked." In extenuation of his mistake he calls attention to the fact that the error had escaped the attention of the Counsel for the respondents and also that of the learned Divisional Judge. I cannot see that the error of the Counsel and the omission of the Divisional Judge affect the matter in the slightest degree.

The real question is whether the error was one that is in any way excusable, or whether it was one which might easily have occurred even if reasonably due care and attention had been exercised by the Advocate. In some cases no doubt such as when there is a real doubt as to the forum or the question is for some reason difficult to decide, the fact that it has not been observed by other people may tend to excuse the mistake. But, in the present case it appears to me that there was a mistake that can only be accounted for by the facts that no care at all was taken, that no consideration was given to the question as to the forum in which the appeal lay, and that the very obvious necessity for considering the value of the lands for purposes of jurisdiction was entirely neglected. Nobody can imagine that the mistake was made with any ulterior motive. In fact, it would have been much more convenient to the Advocate to have filed the appeal in the right Court. But that does not relieve the Advocate of the necessity of exercising due care and attention.

In my opinion, therefore, there is no sufficient cause for admitting this appeal after due date, and in this I concur with my brother Pratt's view.

The reference will be returned for disposal in due course of law, the appeal being dismissed as barred by time.

Reference returned.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 7 OF 1922.

March 20, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

Chaudhari JANGI SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Chaudhari GANGA SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Partition—Member seizing portion of property, effect of.

A member of a joint Hindu family, quarrelling with his family, might seize some part of the family property in order to provide himself with a living. In such a case he would not forfeit his right to obtain a formal partition, in which he would get his proper share. [p. 392, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Hardoi, dated the 14th November 1921.

Mr. Salig Ram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Haider Husain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a first appeal by a plaintiff. The suit was for declaration of title to a 1/6th share in a certain property alleged to belong to the joint family. The following pedigree will show the real parties:—

KANHAI SINGH

Ganga Singh—Musammat Ram Dei, defendant No. 1. defendant No. 6.

Jangi Singh, plaintiff (eldest son.)	Jaimal Singh, defendant No 2. (second son.)	Raja Singh, defendant No. 3.	Shambhu Nath, defendant No. 4.	Drigpal Singh, defendant No. 5.

The suit turns mainly on the plaintiff's right to certain villages which are in the possession of his mother Musammat Ram Dei defendant No. 6. The family has owned at various times no less than 16 villages. Of these twelve were ancestral, namely, Seoni, Daulatpur, Shankarpur, Herenkuda, Kewalpur, Ahmadpur, Gutkamau, Dawanipur, Pali, Khwajgipur, Bhagwantpur, Dariapur, four are acquired, namely, Medhipur, Khanjahanpur, Dharapur, Rampurlal. Out of these viliages Gutkamau, Dawanipur, Pali, Khwajgjpur, and Bhagwantpur were gifted to Musammat Ram Dei and there is practically nothing else left in the hands of the parties. The plaintiff himself got hold of a part of the family property and he has alienated most of that part. The other villages have passed out of the hands of his father and brothers. The only substantial property remaining is what was gifted to Musammat Ram Dei. There are two main questions for decision in this case.

The first is whether there has been a partition between the plaintiff and the rest of the family such as to destroy the plaintiff's right in the joint family property.

It is common ground that there was a quarrel, and that the plaintiff has been living separately from the family for years, and also that he obtained exclusive possession of some of the family property. In face of these facts, it is difficult to hold that there was not a partition. What appears to have happened is this. The grandfather, Kanhai

Singh, got into debt. The first mortgage on the record is Exhibit 50 dated 11th December 1888 in favour of Balmukund of 8 annas of village Shankarpur for Rs. 3,500. The second is dated 7th June 1892 in favour of Bishesharnath son of Balmukund of remaining 8 annas of Shankarpur together with 16 annas of Kewalpur, Ahmadpur and Herenkuda for Rs. 9,000. The next transaction is dated 8th August 1893. It appears to have been an attempt by Kanhai Singh to save some part at least of village Shankarpur by means of a permanent lease, in favour of Jangi Singh, plaintiff, and his brother Jaimal Singh, defendant No. 2, his grandsons, of about 2 hundred bighas of village Shankarpur. The rent reserved was only Rs. 40 per annum. Taking into account the relationship between the parties, the minority of the lessees, the rent, and the fact that the whole of this village was already mortgaged, it is likely that the object was to keep these 2 hundred bighas out of the reach of Kanhai Singh's creditors.

The next transaction is dated 26th January 1900 and it is surprising to find that it is the purchase of a village, the village Dharapur. It is purchased in the name of Ganga Singh, although his father Kanhai Singh, the head of the family, was still alive. Probably this also was done with an eye to Kanhai Singh's debts.

The next thing that happened was that in 1901 one Kanhai Sah brought a suit against Kanhai Singh for a debt and obtained a money decree for Rs. 10,000 dated 9th May 1903. This is Exhibit 56. We know of other debts paid to one Kishan Lal amounting to Rs. 11,000 and one to Maiku Lal of about Rs. 5,000. It was at this time on 8th December 1903 that Kanhai Singh gifted to Musammat Ram Dei 16 annas of Dawanipur, 4 annas, which was all he possessed. in Gutkamau, 1 biswa and 5 biswansis share, which was all he possessed, in Pali, a 1-12th share, which was all he possessed, in Khwajgipur and certain groves and houses. It is certainly probable that the object of the gift was to put this property out of the reach of creditors. But it does not follow that the gift was not valid,

On 13th July 1904 Bishesharnath brought a suit against Kanhai Singh, Jangi Singh and Jaimal Singh on foot of the mortgage of 1892 to recover Rs. 25,325 by the sale of the property mortgaged and he got a decree dated 7th June 1905 which is Exhibit 55. In the same year Pandit Kishan Lal obtained a decree dated 22nd January 1905 for about Rs. 10,000. This is Exhibit 57.

On 3rd May 1906 Kanhai Singh died. About a year after in 1908 Mehdipur was sold for about Rs. 15,000. Then Bishesharnath brought a suit against Jangi Singh and Jaimal Singh for the cancellation of the lease of 1893. This was settled by compromise dated 12th January 1909 which is Exhibit A 8.

On 5th March 1909 Maiku Singh got a decree against Ganga Singh and others for Rs. 3,000. This is Exhibit 54.

There were various suits by Jangi Singh and his brothers to set aside these alienations. Exhibit 35 is the plaint of a suit against Bishesharnath and others in which the father Ganga Singh was arrayed as a defendant. This suit was dismissed on 16th November 1908 (Exhibit 22). About this time we find the plaintiff on bad terms with his family. That is evidenced by the Sessions Court judgment Exhibit 28 dated 18th December 1911. I do not forget that a judgment is not evidence. But, the question being whether the plaintiff and his family were in good terms, it is a relevant fact that the plaintiff was attacked and seriously injured, and that he charged his own brother Jaimal Singh with having taken part in the attack and Jaimal was convicted and sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. Whether he was rightly or wrongly convicted, it is plain that Jangi Singh and Jaimal Singh were not on terms of brotherly affection, and this makes it more probable that there was separation in estate and a partition about this time. Apparently what happened was that Jangi Singh left the family house, and laid his hands on as much of the family property as he could. The lease, for instance, which stood in the name of himself and Jaimal, enabled him to seize that property. And the village Rampurlal somehow came into his hands. Perhaps it was already standing in his name. He has since sold it.

Now this state of things might be explained in two different ways,

The first is that these transactions amounted to a partition, that the plaintiff obtained certain property which was regarded, both by himself and by the other members of the family, as a fair equivalent to his share, and consequently there was a complete severence of interest, by which he became exclusive owner of what he got and ceased to have any undivided interest in the rest of the property. The view of the Court of trial is that this is what did happen, and I see no sufficient reason to differ from this finding. Even now the plaintiff claims to be exclusive owner of what he has got. It is true that he professes himself to be willing, in the last resort, to throw it into the hotchpot. But this I believe to be due to the fact that there is very little left. The only substantial family property is in the hands of Musammat Ram Dei.

The other state of things would be that a member of a joint family, quarrelling with his family, might seize some part of the family property in order to provide himself with a living. He might not thereby forfeit his right to obtain a formal partition, in which he would get his proper share.

In order to determine which is the true state of things, the main questions to note would be how long time elapsed before the separating member claimed his share, and whether any alienation of the property took place, whether by himself or by the other members.

Applying these tests we find that many years elapsed without plaintiff's taking any step, and we find that both he himself and the rest of the family have alienated practically all they could alienate.

There is no evidence to show that the share which the plaintiff obtained was inadequate, and the fair inference seems to be that he accepted what he got as representing his share. The result of this finding is that the appeal must be dismissed. But I proceed also to decide the second question which is of the validity of gift to Musammat Ram Dei.

I have no doubt that the object of this transaction was to protect property from creditors. Kanhai Singh was very heavily in debt and he was not in a position to make a generous gift to his son's wife, who herself belonged to a wealthy family. But when a person wishes to put property out of the reach of his creditors, he sometimes finds it necessary to make a real gift, and this is what appears to have happened with regards to Musammat Ram Dei. It is always difficult in such a case to arrive at the real facts. If, the property was really gifted to Musammat Ram Dei, is would naturally be managed by her husband and her sons. If on the other hand, the gift was colourable, and the ownership really remained with Kanhai Singh, again the management would be in the hands of Kanhai Singh's family. The fact that mutation was effected in the name of Ram Dei, and certain leases were granted in her name, are not conclusive. If the transaction is to be colourable it is necessary to give it colour. But, on the whole, I am disposed to say that the plaintiff at least cannot successfully attack this transaction, He has taken part in it and he has acted repeatedly as if it was genuine. There may be no actual estoppel but is a case where he ought to give some definite evidence that the gift was not real.

In the result the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 584 OF 1921.

September 3, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pratt and Mr. Justice Macgregor.

MAUNG MU AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

MAUNG KAN GYI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI,

MUNG MU v. MAUNG KAN GYI.

r. 17, O. XXII, r. 4, O. XXIII, r. 1 (3)—Withdrawal of suit without liberty to bring fresh suit—Second suit in respect of same subject-matter, whether barred—Appeal—Death of respondent—Abatement—Amendment of plaint.

Plaintiffs brought a suit against certain defendants for a declaration of their right and title to a ticket in a Sweepstake which had won a War Loan Bond. The suit was withdrawn without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently plaintiffs brought a second suit against the same defendants to recover from them the amount of the Bond which had in the meantime been delivered to them by the Managers of the Sweepstake. One new defendant was added to the suit on the allegation that the other defendants had transferred the bond to him:

Held, that the subject-matter of both the suits was the same within the meaning of O. XXIII, r. 1 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code and the second suit was, therefore, barred under the provisions of that rule. [p. 396, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

Where during the pendency of an appeal some of the defendants-respondents die and their legal representatives are not brought on the record within limitation, and the cause of action does not survive against the remaining respondents but it appears that events have happened since the institution of the suit which give the plaintiffs a separate cause of action in respect of the subject-matter of the dispute against each of the defendants, the appeal abates only qua the interest of the deceased respondents and the plaintiffs can be allowed to amend their plaint so as to continue the suit against the remaining respondents individually and need not be referred to a separate suit. [p. 395, cols. 1 & 2.]

First appeal against the judgment and decree of the District Court, Kyaukse, in Civil Suit No. 1 of 1920.

Mr. Chatterjee, for the Appellants.

Mr. Mya U, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Pratt, J.— Maung Mu, headman, and nine other villagers of Wuntho sued the defendants, 210 in number, to recover a War Loan Bond for Rs. 75,000 or Rs. 75,000 together with interest thereon.

Plaintiffs' case as set forth in the plaint was that the ticket, which won the second prize in the Burma War Loan Sweepstake, a War Loan Bond for Rs. 75,000, which had issued in the name of first plaintiff, had been wrongly made over by the Executive Committee of the Sweepstake to the defendants on their false representations that they were purchasers of the ticket in question. That the defendants were liable jointly and severally to return the bond to plaintiffs or to pay the money equivalent with interest to date, and that defendants No. 1 to 209 had transferred the bond to defendant No. 210.

The Trial Court held that the suit was barred under O. XXIII, r. 1 (3), the subject-matter being the same as that in Suit No. 1 of 1918 of the District Court, Kyaukse, which was dismissed without contest.

In this Court a preliminary objection has been taken that, the appeal having abated against six of the respondents owing to their death, the whole appeal fails.

Counsel for respondents relies upon the rulings in Ma Zan Nyein v. Maung Kyaw Zan (1), the Lahore case of Sardari Lal v. Ram Lal (2) the Punjab case Jamna v. Sarjit (3) and the Privy Council case of Raj Chunder Sen v. Ganga Das Seal (4).

It is argued that the shares of the various defendants cannot be decided, unless the representatives of the deceased defendants are made parties to the suit. If that were so then the suit must fail because of its abatement against defendants, who were necessary parties. The crucial point is whether plaintiffs can obtain a decree on their claim against the remaining defendants in the suit as framed, in other words whether the defendants against whom the appeal has abated are necessary parties.

In Ma Zan Nyein's case (1), it was held that where an appeal abated against a deceased respondent, who was a necessary party to the appeal the appeal abated as against all the respondents.

In the Lahore case cited, where one of the respondents in whose favour a decree was passed jointly with others had died and her legal representatives had not been brought on the record, it was held that the decree being a joint one the appeal abated in toto.

(1) 74 Ind. Cas. 1027; 1 R. 189; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 258.

(2) 57 Ind. Cas. 199; 1 L. 225; 1 L. L. J. 225; 143 P. L. R. 1920.

(3) 52 Ind. Cas. 510; 67 P. R. 1919.

(4) 31 C. 487; 1 A. L. J. 145; 8 C. W. N. 442; 31 I. A. 71; 14 M. L. J. 147; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 623 (P. C.).

In Jamna v. Sarjit (3) similarly where a decree for a declaration of joint title to a share in a piece of land had been granted, and the appeal had abated against one of the respondents it was held that the appeal abated in its entirety.

In Raj Chunder Sen v. Ganga Das Seal (4) their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the nature of the suit being such that the cause of action did not survive against the remaining respondents alone, the appeal abated entirely.

The Advocate for appellants contends that his suit against the remaining defendants does not necessarily abate but that he still has a cause of action, since the bond, which is the subject of the suit, was cashed through the Imperial Bank, and the proceeds divided amongst the defendants, and he is prepared to prove what each defendant received as his share.

He does not now seek a decree for the whole amount against the defendants jointly, but wishes to recover from each what he has received as his share of the proceeds of the bond.

Counsel for respondents contends that the suit is in substance a suit for declaration of title to the bond and that consequently a decree cannot be given against some of the defendants, when the appeal has abated against others.

I do not know that I am prepared to accept this point of view nor the argument that on plaintiffs' case as now explained a separate suit should be instituted against each defendant. It is a maintainable thesis that on the plaint as at present worded the defendants are sued jointly and the cause of action does not survive against those defendants with reference to whom the appeal has not been ordered to abate.

If, however, as a matter of fact the proceeds of the bond have been distributed amongst the defendants and it can be proved what sum each has received, then plaintiffs still have a cause of action for that sum against each of them, and the necessity of obtaining a declaration of plaintiffs' title to the bond would be a ground for uniting all the surviving defendants in a single suit. This would apparently necessitate an amendment of the plaint, but the circumstances having changed since the suit was filed, I should not be prepared to hold that the amendment of the plaint was inadmissible. I am not, therefore, satisfied that the representatives of the deceased defendants are necessary parties to the suit, or that the appeal must fail because they have not been joined.

It becomes necessary accordingly to decide whether the learned District Judge was right in holding that the suit was barred under O. XXIII, r. 1 (3), by reason of Suit No. 1 of 1918 having been withdrawn without leave to bring a fresh suit.

In Suit No. 1 of 1918 of the District Court, Kyaukse, plaintiffs sued the defendants, the rival claimants to ownership of the ticket in the Sweepstake for a declaration of their right and title to the ticket in dispute. The plaint was filed on March 14th 1918. The War Loan Bond to which the owners of the ticket were entitled was at the time in possession of the Managers of the Sweepstake, Messrs. Craig, Gardner and Harris.

No consequential relief was sought, because as stated in paragraph 7 of the plaint, plaintiffs believed that if they obtained a declaration of title to the winning ticket the Managers of the Sweepstake would deliver the ticket to them.

On the 28th January 1919 after the suit had been transferred by the Judicial Commissioner's orders to the file of the Additional Judge of the District Court an application was filed by Maung Mu on behalf of all the plaintiffs asking for permission to withdraw the suit under O. XXIII, r. 1 (1), and that notice might be given to defendants.

No reason was given for withdrawal.

On the 31st January the case was called and Advocates on both sides were present.

Defendants made no objection to the withdrawal of the suit but asked for costs.

The suit was accordingly dismissed with costs.

On the 13th February 1920 plaintiffs filed Suit No. 1 of 1920 in the District Court, Kyaukse, the decree in which is now under appeal.

MAUNG MU v. MAUNG KAN GYI.

The defendants were substantially the same as in the previous suit with the addition of defendant No. 210, J. Carew, to whom it was alleged the remaining defendants had transferred the bond. They did not now ask for a declaration of title to the bond, but, as already stated, prayed for its recovery or for its value Rs. 75,000 with interest as against the defendants, alleging that the bond had been wrongly made over to defendants on a false representation of their ownership.

Paragraph 2 of the plaint set forth that defendants had no right to the bond, and were, therefore, liable jointly and severally to return it to plaintiffs or to pay plaintiffs the money equivalent with interest to date.

In paragraph 4 it was stated that the cause of action arose, when the bond was made over by mistake to the defendants.

In a concise and lucid judgment the learned District Judge after discussing the contention that the cause of action in the former suit was of a different nature being merely for a declaration of title, whereas in the present suit the possession of the bond had passed to defendants and the prayer was for recovery of the bond or its value plus interest, held that plaintiffs could not succeed without a favourable decision as to their title to the bond, and that therefore, the fundamental subject-matter of the two suits was the same. The sole question for decision, therefore, in this appeal is whether the subject-matter of the two suits is the same within the meaning of O. XXIII, r. 1 (3).

The first point made on behalf of appellants is that the previous suit was withdrawn with a view to settlement by arbitration and that in such a case, when the arbitration falls through, a fresh suit on the same cause of action is not barred. In support of this contention reliance was placed on the ruling of the Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma in Ma Ko v. Maung Po Tun (5), a case in which both parties put in a joint application to withdraw the suit, stating that they had agreed to refer the suit to arbitration.

It was held following Juggobundo Chatterji v. Watson (6) that the withdrawal of the suit and the mutual reference to arbitration, which proved infructuous because the arbitrators declined to give a decision was not a bar to the institution of a fresh suit on the same cause of action.

It is not necessary to discuss the correctness of the ruling cited, because it is obvious that the facts in the present appeal are not similar. There is nothing whatever to prove that the previous suit was withdrawn in order that the matter in dispute might be referred to arbitration. The plaint in the second suit makes no reference to any arbitration proceedings. It is true the learned District Judge in his judgment states that the previous suit was withdrawn because there was some talk of arbitration. Apparently this remark was based on some allegation made by one of the Advocates in his Court.

The application for withdrawal made no reference to the subject of arbitration and the suit was dismissed with costs.

There was no joint petition for withdrawal nor any request therefor on the ground that the matter was to be referred to arbitration.

The most that can be said is that the suit was withdrawn because plaintiffs thought that there was more chance of a satisfactory solution by a settlement outside Court than by proceeding with litigation further.

The ruling cited is, therefore, no authority for allowing the institution of a fresh suit on the same cause of action. The suit was dismissed without leave to bring a fresh suit and under the circumstances a fresh suit on the same subject-matter is clearly barred.

On behalf of plaintiffs it is urged that the facts in the two suits are quite different, since the bond has been wrongly made over to defendants since the dismissal of the former suit.

It is contended that in the first suit the cause of action was the refusal of the Managers of the Sweepstake to make over the bond to plaintiffs. Whereas in the second the cause of action was the making over of the bonds to defendants by the Executive Committee of the Sweepstake. This is undoubtedly a specious presentment of the case, but unfortunately the Advocate for plaintiffs was unable to adhere to this statement of the causes of action. Nevertheless he is insistent that the subject-matter of the present suit is not the same as that of the former and that the view of the District Court cannot be maintained.

(5) 2 U. B. R. (1897-01) 284.

(6) 7 Bourke's Reports 162.

He relies on the definition of "subject-matter" given by Scott, C. J., in Rakhmabai v. Mahadeo Narayan (7) as "the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed," which is taken from O. I. r. 1.

The circumstances in the Bombay case are not parallel with those in the present appeal, because there the first suit was for ejectment, which was bound to fail because no formal notice to quit had been given, whilst the second was brought after formal notice to quit had been given.

The cause of action had clearly, therefore, changed.

The definition of subject-matter is, however, useful and pertinent.

The Calcutta case of Gopal Chandra Banerjee v. Purna Chandra Banerjee (8), which is also quoted, is also not similar, since in the first suit plaintiff sought partition of joint property, whereas in the second he sought to recover joint possession, from which he had subsequently been dispossessed, on the ground of his title to a share. The subject-matter of the two suits was obviously, therefore, not identical and I am quite unable to agree with the contention that the facts of the case are on all fours with those now before us. To make the rulings cited applicable Advocate for plaintiffs modifies his original proposition as to the causes of action in the two suits and now re-states the cause of action in the first suit as a declaration of title and in the second as a return of money. This is a considerable change from the position previously taken.

Accepting the definition of "subject-matter" put forward as "the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed," it has to be considered whether the series of transactions in the suit under appeal and in the suit previously withdrawn is different.

The relief sought is undoubtedly different.

In the first suit the relief sought was merely a declaration of plaintiffs' title to the winning ticket in the Sweepstake, carrying with it the prize of the War Bond for Rs. 75,000.

The bond was at the time still in possession of the Managers of the Sweep.

In the second the relief sought was the War Bond or its value plus interest.

The relief sought was different, because in the interval defendants had obtained possession of the bond and had cashed it and divided the proceeds. Plaintiffs could not, however, succeed in the second suit, unless the Court found, as a matter of fact, that their title to the ticket, and consequently the bond, was proved.

The first suit was brought because the Manager of the Sweepstake declined to make over the bond to plaintiffs till they had proved their title to the winning ticket.

The first plaint shows that defendants had already put in a claim to the ticket to the Managers.

It was plaintiffs' case in both suits that defendants had put in a wrongful claim to the bond, and they sued relying on their title as owners of the winning ticket.

Although in the first suit plaintiffs asked for no consequential relief, it was open to them to have sued for the bond or its value joining the Managers of the Sweepstake as parties.

Had they succeeded in the first suit the bond would not have been delivered to defendants and no further suit against them would have been necessary.

The addition of the consequential relief, which (in theory alone) was sought in the second suit, became necessary, because of consequences which ensued owing to the withdrawl and dismissal of the first suit.

I am of opinion, therefore, that viewed broadly the two suits are substantially the same in nature, though couched in different form.

(7) 43 Ind. Cas. 752; 42 B. 155; 20 Bom. L. R. 35.

(8) 4 C. W. N. 110.

HARJI MAL v. DEVI DITTA MAL.

The crucial matter of each suit is in reality the title of plaintiffs to the winning ticket. If they failed to prove that title, neither suit could succeed.

Plaintiffs' alleged title to the ticket is in each suit the ultimate cause of action.

Stripped of its trappings the suit now brought is merely the previous suit with its form modified appropriately to the change in circumstances which has supervened consequently on the dismissal of the first suit.

The series of transactions giving rise to the relief claimed is identical, but a stage further has been reached since, and in consequence of the failure of the former suit.

I do not consider it is a maintainable thesis that the subject-matter has changed in its essentials, merely, because of the consequences of the failure of the former suit.

The further relief claimed in the second suit is purely consequential; and the fundamental basis of the suits, to slightly vary the words of the District Judge, remains the same.

I have no doubt that the Trial Court was right in holding that the present suit is barred under O. XXIII, r. 1 (3), by reason of the former suit and I am of opinion that it was precisely to cases of the present nature that sub-rule (3) was intended to apply.

I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Macgregor, J.—I agree with my learned brother's conclusions on the question of the abatement of the appeal, on the grounds given by him. I am also of opinion that the suit was barred under O. XXIII, r. 1 (3). Alike in the present suit and in the previous one, plaintiffs sued and defendants were sued as claimants to the bond. According as the question of title to the bond was decided one way or the other, plaintiffs must succeed or fail. The fundamental subject matter of the two suits was clearly the same. I agree in the order dismissing the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2309 OF 1923.

May 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Harrison and Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

HARJI MAL—AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

DEVI DITTA MAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XVIII, r. 2—Arguments, oral, not addressed—Written arguments put in—Judgment, validity of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114—Appeal—Points not mentioned in judgment of Appellate Court—Presumption.

In O. XVIII, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code an option is given to the parties to argue their case when the evidence is concluded and it is for them to decide whether they will avail themselves of this privilege. [p. 399, col. 1.]

On the date fixed for arguments in a case Counsel for the parties expressed their inability to argue the case and were given an opportunity to put in written arguments, which they did. Before writing judgment, however, the Sub-Judge was transferred. Counsel had opportunity to argue the case before his successor but did not avail themselves of it and the latter, therefore, pronounced judgment without hearing Counsel:

Held, that there was nothing illegal in the procedure adopted, and the judgment was perfectly valid. [p. 399, col. 1.]

Sher Khan v. Bahadur Shah, 91 P. R. 1904; 5 P. L. R. 1905, Mahmud Khan v. Ghazanfar Ali, 57 Ind. Cas. 34; 2 U. P. L. R. (L.) 133; 141 P. L. R. 1920, distinguished.

The presumption is that an Appellate Court deals with the arguments put before it and if the form of the judgment shows that the only points presented before it were those with which it has dealt, the only inference which can be drawn, especially in the absence of an affidavit to the contrary by the Counsel who appeared before it, is that the remaining points were not urged and were definitely abandoned. [p. 399, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the Additional Judge, Lahore, dated the 23rd May 1922, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Lahore, dated the 23rd February 1920.

Dr. G. C. Narang, Mr. Jagan Nath and Bakshi Tek Chand, for the Appellants.

Mr. Badri Das, R. B. for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this second appeal the first point raised by Counsel is that the Senior Sub-Judge who disposed of the case and wrote the judgment did not actually hear oral arguments although written arguments were before him, and reliance has been placed on Mahmud

Khan v. Ghazanfar Ali (1) and Sher Khan v. Bahadur Shah (2) as authorities to show that under these circumstances the judgment is a nullity and the case must be remanded to the Trial Court.

The facts are that Mr. Muhammad Shah, the Sub-Judge, who heard the case, fixed the 10th of November, for arguments. On that date Counsel appeared and stated that they were not ready to argue and asked for an adjournment, which he did not allow but directed them to put in written arguments, if they wished to do so. They, therefore, failed to avail themselves of the opportunity given them to argue the case before the Judge who had tried it. Further adjournments were given for written arguments and these were finally submitted on the 10th December. The Sub-Judge then came to the conclusion that it was necessary to inspect the spot, though what advantage exactly was to be obtained from this inspection is not clear. He was transferred before he carried out his inspection leaving the judgment unwritten and on the 22rd of January the parties appeared before Mr. Strickland, his successor, who fixed the 5th February for inspection. Later the Counsel for the defendants who are now the appellants, appeared before him and asked for an adjournment which he granted. He eventually carried out the inspection in the presence of the parties and then gave judgment. Now Sher Khan v. Bahadur Shah (2) is to be distinguished as being the case of a first appeal, and in Mahmud Khan v. Ghazanfar Ali (1) it is clear that the parties had no opportunity to argue the case before the successor. Here they had ample opportunity before both Sub-Judges. In O. XVIII, r. 2, an option is given to the parties to argue their case when the evidence is concluded and it is for them to decide whether they will avail themselves of this privilege. Here they were given a further opportunity at a later date, the 10th November, and failed to make use of it. It is contended that even so they were entitled to an opportunity before the successor of Muhammad Shah, who was not in the same advantageous position as he was, inasmuch as he had not heard the evidence. Even so they certainly had more than one opportunity when they appeared before Mr. Strickland. It was for them to argue the case if they wished to do so. They did not do so and the only construction which can be put upon the events is that they deliberately failed to avail themselves of such opportunity and left the case in his hands knowing that the written arguments were before him. Under these circumstances we find that it was quite unnecessary for Mr. Strickland to attempt to insist on their availing themselves of the privilege and indeed it would have been futile for him to do so.

In the grounds of appeal various points are raised which are not dealt with in the judgment of the learned District Judge. There were four issues in the Trial Court regarding two of which the judgment of the District Judge is silent. After disposing of two preliminary issues which had not been decided by the Trial Court, the District Judge says in his judgment "The first point for determination is....." and having dealt with this point he proceeds: "Lastly the objection is taken ....." Now, the presumption is that a District Judge deals with the arguments put before him and if the form of the judgment shows clearly, as it does in this case, that the only points presented were those two with which he has dealt, the only inference which we can draw, more especially in the absence of an affidavit to the contrary by the Counsel who appeared before him is that the remaining points were not urged and were definitely abandoned.

Note.—The rest of the judgment is not material for the purposes of this report.—[Ed.]

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(1) 57 Ind. Cas. 34; 2 U. P. L. R. (L.) 133; 141 P. L. R. 1920.
(2) 91 P. R. 1904; 5 P. L. R. 1905.

S. N. SEN v. ABDUL AZIZ TAR MAHOMED.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION NO. 18 OF 1922.

June 26, 1922.

Present:—Sir Sydney Robinson, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Macgregor.

S. N. SEN, RECEIVER TO THE ESTATE OF HAJEE TAYUB, DECEASED—APPLICANT

versus

ABDUL AZIZ TAR MAHOMED AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 110—Appeal to His Majesty in Council—"Decision," meaning of.

The term "decision" in section 110 of the Civil Procedure Code means, the decision of the suit by the Court, and it is not necessary that the Appellate Court should also affirm the grounds of fact upon which the judgment under appeal was based.

Where, therefore, the District Court decides that plaintiffs are entitled to a half share in the properties of a certain business and the decision of the High Court is the same, that amounts to affirmation of the decision of the District Court and for the purposes of a certificate for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council it is immaterial that the High Court comes to a different conclusion on the question of fact as to what the business was.

Tassaduq Rasul Khan v. Kashi Ram, 25 A. 109; 30 I. A. 35; 5 Bom. L. R. 100; 7 C. W. N. 177 (P. C.), followed.

Nagendrabala Dasi v. Dinanath Mahish, 70 Ind. Cas. 933; 26 C. W. N. 651; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 215, distinguished.

Application.

Mr. Das, for the Applicant.

Mr. Burjorjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

That the subject-matter of the suit satisfies the requirements of section 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards value is not disputed.

The question that we have to decide is, whether the decree of this Court on appeal affirmed the decision of the Court immediately below. If it did, the petitioners will have to establish that the appeal involves some substantial question of law.

The suit was brought, praying for an account of the estate of the late Hajee Tayub, and for possession of the same, or, in the alternative, for such share thereof as plaintiff are entitled to, with mesne profits.

The plaintiffs set up that the business that had been carried on by Hajee Tayub was his own separate business, and that the immoveable properties acquired had been paid for out of the profits of this business. The defendants claimed, on the other hand, that the business had originally been a joint family business and had remained so till the end.

The learned District Judge passed a decree, holding that the business was the joint business of Hajee Tayub and another brother of his, Hajee Sulaiman, and that Hajee Tayub's heirs were entitled to a half share of the properties in suit. It is to be noted that this decision was not in accordance with the allegations of either the plaintiffs or the defendants.

An appeal was filed in this Court by the plaintiffs in respect of the half share that had not been awarded to them by the District Court. Our decision was as follows:—"The real question at issue is whether this was a joint family business, or whether it was a partnership between Sulaiman and Tayub, and in my opinion the former is the correct decision." We reversed the decision of the learned District Judge in so far as it held that the business was a partnership between Sulaiman and Tayub, but we confirmed the decree so far as it awards a half share in the properties. The question is whether, under these circumstances, our decree affirmed the decision of the Court below.

In Tassaduq Rasul Khan v. Kashi Ram (1) their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the word "decision" means the decision of the suit by the Court, and further that it was not correct to say that it was necessary that the Appellate Court should also affirm the grounds of fact upon which the judgment was based. The decision of the District Court was that the plaintiffs were entitled to a half share in the properties, and the decision of this Court was the same. The decision was, therefore, affirmed, and for the purposes of a certificate, we must hold that it is immaterial that we came to a different conclusion on the question of fact as to what the business was.

(1) 25 A. 109; 30 I. A. 35; 5 Bom. L. R. 100; 7 C. W. N. 177 (P. C.).

We have been referred to the case of Nagendrabala Dasi v. Dinanath Mahish (2). The facts of that case were somewhat peculiar, and the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council to which I have referred was not apparently before the learned Judges who passed that decision.

Next, as to whether there exists in this case some substantial question of law, it is urged that the onus of proving that it was not a joint family business had been wrongly placed on the petitioners. It does not appear that the onus was so placed, and the decision did not turn on the question of onus, but was a decision based on a consideration of all the evidence tendered by both sides. We, therefore, hold that no substantial question of law was involved, and that the petitioners are not, therefore, entitled to a certificate.

The application is dismissed with costs, Advocate's fees 3 gold mohurs.

Applicat on dismissed.

W. C. A.

(2) 70 Ind. Cas. 933; 26 C. W. N. 651; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 215.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 142 OF 1923.

February 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad and Mr. Justice Adami.

JADUNANDAN SAHAY—APPELLANT

versus

HANUMAN SAHAY—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 12—Extension of time for appeal—Different applications for copies of judgment and decree—Application for copy of one document within time extended by other, validity of.

Applications for copies of the judgment and the decree must be made before the expiry of the time for filing the appeal so as to obtain extension of time under section 12 of the Limitation Act. There is, however, no obligation on the appellant to file the applications at one and the same time; and applications made at different times will entitle the appellant to take advantage of the time spent to obtain copies of both the judgment and the decree.

If the time requisite for obtaining copy of one of these documents extends the time of limitation, then the application made for obtaining copy of the other document, after the time originally fixed for filing the appeal under the Law of Limitation but before the extension of time allowed by reason of the time required for obtaining copy of one of these documents expires, will entitle the appellant to extension of time required for obtaining copy of the other document. [p. 402, col 1.]

Selamban Chetty v. Ramanadhan Chetty, 4 Ind. Cas. 301; 33 M. 256; 7 M. L. T. 29; (1910) M. W. N. 141; 21 M. L. J. 152, Pandharinath Sakharam v. Shankar Narayan Joshi, 25 B. 586; 3 Bom. L. R. 244 Raman Chetty v. Kadirvalu, 8 M. L. J. 148 and Ali Muhammad v. Nathu, 54 Ind. Cas. 879; 163 P. R. 1919, 78 P. L. R. 1919; 1 L. L. J. 106, relied on.

Sher Singh v. Pem Raj, 48 Ind. Cas. 31; 100 P. R. 1918; 185 P. W. R. 1918, dissented from.

Second appeal.

Messrs. Murari Prasad and Satya Sundar Bose, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is reported to have been filed out of time by one day.

The term of 90 days for filing an appeal against the decree expired on 29th January 1923 but before the time expired the appellant applied for a copy of the judgment on the 17th November 1922 and obtained a copy on the 23rd November 1922. Under section 12, clause (3) the time for filing the appeal was extended from the 29th January 1923 to the 5th of February 1923; but before the expiry of this extended time, the appellant made an application for a copy of the decree on 31st January 1923 and obtained a copy on the same date. Under clause (2) of section 12 he was entitled to add one day more to the time within which he was required to file his appeal. Adding this one day to the 5th of February within which he could file the appeal by reason of the extension allowed to him under clause (3) of section 12, he was entitled to file the appeal on the 6th February 1923 and he did file the appeal on that day. Therefore, the appeal was filed within time.

No doubt, an application for copies of the judgment and the decree must be made before the expiry of the time for filing an appeal. There is, however, no obligation imposed upon an appellant to file applications for copies of judgment and decree at one and the same time and, therefore, he can make his applications for copies at different times. It seems to be settled by authorities that the applications made at different times will entitle the appellant to take advantage of the time occupied in obtaining copies of both judgment and decree. Now, if the time requisite for obtaining copy of one of these documents extends the time of limitation, then the application made for obtaining copy of the other document after the time originally fixed for filing an appeal under the Law of Limitation but before the extension of time allowed by reason of the time required for obtaining copy of one of these documents, expires will entitle the appellant to extension of time required for obtaining copy of the other document. The Madras and the Bombay High Courts so far as the rulings have been placed before us, appear to be unanimous upon, the point: viae Selamban Chetty v. Rumanadhan Chetty (1), Pandharinath Sukharam v. Shankar Narayan Joshi (2) and Ruman Chetty v. Kadirvalu (3). The Oudh Court in Din Dayal v. Rameshar (4) seems also to be of the same view. There was a difference of opinion in the Punjab High Court. That Court in Sher Singh v. Pem Raj (5) took a contrary view based apparently upon the view that applications for copies of judgment and decree must be simultaneously made and not at different times. The Court however, changed its view laterly in Ali Muhammad v. Nathu (6). This Court in the case of Debi Charan Lal v. Sheikh Mehdi Hussain (7) took the view that it is not essential that applications for copies of judgment and decree should be made simultaneously and the time taken in obtaining copies of both the documents, thou h applications for each were made at different times, was allowed to be excluded in computing the period of limitation. It seems that in that case the decree was passed on 27th September 1913 by the Munsif, it was prepared and signed on that very day. The annual vacation began on the following morning and the Court re-opened on November 1st. Ordinarily the appeal should have been filed before the District Judge after the re-opening of the Court, or an application for copies of the judgment and decree should have been made on that day in order to enable the appellant to file his appeal after obtaining copies of the judgment and the decree, but the application for copy of the judgment was made on the 3rd of November and for copy of the decree on the 13th November. The applications were made after the expiry of the time for filing the appeal yet the appeal was held to have been filed within time and the appellant was entitled to take advantage of the vacation as well as of the time required in obtaining the copies of the judgment and the decree. The point in question in the present case was not directly decided in that case, but the dates given above will show that the decision of the case helps the contention of the appellant.

Apart from both the decisions we are of opinion that under true construction of clauses (2) and (3) of section 12, the contention of the appellant must succeed and the appeal filed must be held to be within time.

N. H. Appeal admitted.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 301; 33 M. 256; 7 M. L. T. 29; (1910) M. W. N. 141; 21 M. L. J. 152.
(2) 25 B. 586; 3 Bom. L. R. 244.
(3) 8 M. L. J. 148.
(4) 28 Ind. Cas. 366; 18 O. C. 74; 2 O. L. J. 159.
(5) 48 Ind. Cas. 31; 100 P. R. 1918; 185 P. W. R. 1918.
(6) 54 Ind. Cas. 879; 163 P. R. 1919; 78 P. W. R. 1919; 1 L. L. J. 106.
(7) 35 Ind. Cas. 888; 20 C. W. N. 1303; 1 P. L. J. 485; 1 P. L. W. 209.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

SPECIAL SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 238 OF 1923.

June 15, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Duckworth.

SAW HLA AUNG—APPELLANT

versus

MA MA NYO—RESPONDENT.

Execution of decree—Decree against husband—Sale of property belonging jointly to husband and wife—Suit for declaration by wife, maintainability of—Estoppel.

LINTON MOLESWORTH & CO. v. JAGGANNATH SUPAKAR.

A suit brought against a Burmese husband on the basis of a pro-note executed by him in respect of money borrowed by him for the benefit of himself and his wife, was decreed, and in execution of the decree a house belonging jointly to the judgment-debtor and his wife was sold. The wife thereupon brought a suit for a declaration that half the house belonged to her:

Held, (1) that the decree being against the husband only, his right, title and interest in the house alone were sold and passed to the purchaser;

(2) that the plaintiff was not estopped from claiming half the house and her suit was, therefore, entitled to succeed.

Appeal against a decree of the District Court, Akyab, in Civil Appeal No. 33 of 1922.

Mr. Ba Tin, for the Appellant.

Mr. Kyaw U, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—There is nothing to show that the respondent, Ma Ma Nyo, took any part in the loan to her husband, Pan Tha U, and it is admitted that she was not made a party to the suit by the creditor. It was in execution of a decree passed against Pan Tha U alone that the house and site in question were sold by the Court. Clearly only Pan Tha U's right, title, and interest, were sold to the appellant. There is no ground for holding that Ma Ma Nyo is estopped from claiming, under Buddhist Law, her share in the property, as being the joint property of herself and her husband, Pan Tha U. She has merely stood by, as she has a perfect right to do.

There is nothing to show that in taking the loan, Pan Tha U was in any sense her agent. I indorse the remarks of Burgess, J. C., in Ma Me v Maung Gyi (1) and the Bench decision in the case of Maung Po Tha v. Maung Shan Gyi (2). The case of Ma Sein v Muthucurpan Chetty (3), which was followed in Ma Nyun v. Texeira (4), is also useful for reference.

I think that there is enough on the record to show that the loan was taken for the benefit of both husband and wife, but the point, which is the kernel of this case is that respondent was no party to the suit on the pro-note evidencing the loan and no decree was passed against her.

It is not disputed that the property was joint.

The case was correctly decided in the District Court, and accordingly I dismiss the appeal with costs, confirming the lower Appellate Court's decree.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(1) 2 U. B. R. (1892-96) 45.
(2) 11 Bur. L. R. 278.
(3) 25 Ind. Cas. 931; 7 L. B. R. 135.
(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 563; 10 L. B. R. 36; 12 Bur. L. 31 (F. B.).

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 89 OF 1920.

June 14, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Foster.

MESSRS. LINTON MOLESWORTH & Co. LIMITED—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JAGGANNATH SUPAKAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND BISWA NATH GORAIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Lease—Description by boundaries — Erroneous statement as to area, effect of—Landlord and tenant—Dispute about boundaries of demised land—Tenant whether may rely on landlord's transaction with third party.

Where a deed contains an adequate and sufficient definition of the property which it was intended to pass, any erroneous statement in it as to the dimensions or quantity of the property will not vitiate the description. [p. 405, col. 2.]

When the operative part of a lease does not give the area of the land demised but gives the boundaries only, although in the schedule attached to the document the area of the demised land is mentioned by guess, there is one description of the land demised and only one and that is the description by the boundaries. [p. 405, col. 2.]

In an ordinary action between a landlord and the tenant, it is not open to the latter to rely upon a subsequent transaction between his lessor and a third party and raise a defence which would have the effect of imperilling the identity of the boundaries of the demised land which it was his clear duty to preserve. [p. 407, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Dhanbad, dated the 12th January 1920.

Messrs. P. K. Sen, S. N. Bose and Subai Chandra Mazumdar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick, B. N. Mitter, N. C. Rai and P. C. Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—The main queston in this appeal turns upon the construction of an underground lease granted by the plaintiffs to Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., Ltd., on the 16th August 1912. In order to understand the lease, it is necessary to refer to an earlier lease dated the 25th August 1892 granted by the plaintiffs to defendants Nos. 3—17, who may be conveniently referred to as the Gorains. That lease was in respect of the enire Mouza Swardih with the exception of one pond and homestead land measuring 3 bighas. It is admitted that the pond excepted out of the lease of 1892 was not in existence at the date of the lease, and that neither its area nor its geographical position is indicated in the lease of 1892. Nor is there any indication in the lease as to the situation of the 3 bighas of homestead land. The lease in favour of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co. Ltd., was in respect of that portion of Mouza Swardih which was expressly excepted out of the lease of 1892; and the critical question in this appeal is whether the disputed land lies within the block that was demised to the Gorains in 1892 or whether it lies within that portion of the mouza which was expressly excepted out of the lease of 1892 and expressly demised to Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co. Ltd., in 1912. It may be mentioned that, at the date of their lease, Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., were in possession of the leasehold interest of the Gorains as their managing agents and that sometime in 1916 they took a sub-lease of that interest from the Gorains. Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., are accordingly in possession of the underground rights of the entire mouza Swardih as to a portion under the lease of the 16th August 1912 and as to the other portion under their sublease of 1916. It appears that the terms of their lease are more onerous than the terms of the sub-lease and it is important for them to establish that the disputed land lies, not within the area that was excepted out of the lease of 1892, but within the block that was expressly demised by the plaintiffs to the Gorains in 1892. The suit was for recovery of commission at the rate agreed, on the coal raised by the defendant Company, on the footing that the disputed land from which the coal has been raised is within the block of land that was demised to the defendant Company in 1912. The substantial defence is that the land demised to the defendant Company comprises an area of 13 bighas and that the disputed land does not form part of the land demised to them in 1912, but that it forms part of the land which was demised to the Gorains in 1892. The learned Subordinate Judge has found in favour of the plaintiffs and has given them a decree for Rs. 23,907.

I have said that the land excepted out of the lease of 1892, that which forms the subject-matter of the lease in favour of Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., was not in any way identified in the lease of 1892; but the lease in favour of Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., is perfectly clear. After describing the land excepted out of the lease of 1892 as consisting of a burd known as barabund amounting to 10 bighas and homestead land amounting to three bighas, that is in all 13 bighas by guess, and known as east Swardih, the document proceeds to make a settlement in favour of Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., of the entire land known as East Swardih and described in the schedule to the lease of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co. Ltd. The schedule is in these terms: "The entire land known as East Swardih whose area is 13 bighas and whose boundaries are the following:—

East.....Sutikdih Colliery.
North.....Bridge and Road.
West.....Mine No. 11 of Swardih.
South.....The Jote land of Malik grantees of the kabuliyat.

Stopping here for a moment, it will appear that though the block of land excepted out of the lease of 1892 was not sufficiently described in that lease, its actual situation was known to the parties and it was certainly known to Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., who, at the date of their lease, were actually carrying on the mining operation on the land demised in 1892 to the Gorains as their managing agents. In their kabuliyat which they executed in favour of the plaintiffs, they discribed that block of land as East Swardih, and as lying within certain fixed boundaries. One of these boundaries is mine No. 11 of Swardih which Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., were actually working as the managing agents of the Gorains. The other boundary is Sutikdih Colliery, by no means a negligible thing for those who were not strangers to the locality, and by their kabuliyat Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., described the entire block of land between their own mine No. 11 and Sutikdih Colliery bounded on the north by the bridge and the road and on the South by certain jote lands as East Swardih and as having been expressly excepted out of the lease of 1892.

It will be noticed that the area of the land demised to Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., is given by guess; but that the actual demise is expressly of the entire land known as East Swardih and described in the schedule at the foot of lease. The Commissioner has found that the disputed land lies within the boundaries given in the schedule of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co's., lease and that the area of that land is 4r bighas 13 cottas and 5½ gandas.

Now the important question in this appeal is whether the lease was of 13 bighas of land situate within certain boundaries mentioned in the lease or whether the lease was of the entire block of land within the boundaries given at the foot of the lease. I confess that it is quite impossible to arrive at any conclusion other than that at which the learned Subordinate Judge has arrived. The operative part of the lease does not give the area of the demised land; but expressly states that the lease is of the entire land known as East Swardih and described in the schedule below. It was quite true that the schedule gives the area of the demised land; but when the schedule is read together with the recital in the lease, it is perfectly clear that the area mentioned in the schedule is by guess and is purely conjectural. It follows, therefore, that the description of the land demised by acreage is confessedly conjectural; and where this is so, it is impossible to look upon such a description as actually in conflict with the description by boundaries. It is well-established that where a deed contains an adequate and sufficient definition of the property which it was intended to pass, any erroneous statement contained in it as to the dimension or quantity of the property will not vitiate the description. The question is whether the description of the property by its acreage can be regarded as an untrue statement. In my opinion there is in this lease one description and one only of the land demised and that description is the description by the boundaries. No doubt the area of the demised land is mentioned by guess; but the description of area could not be regarded as description of the property demised since it was confessedly conjectural. If I had to decide the case on the construction of the lease of 1912. I would have no hesitation whatever in agreeing with the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge.

But then it is argued on behalf of Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., Ltd., by Mr. P. K. Sen, that having regard to what has subsequently taken place we ought to hold that the description of area in his lease was the dominant description and that in that view we ought to dismiss the plaintiffs' suit. Now the circumstances upon which Mr. Sen relies are these. In 1916 a suit was instituted by the Gorains, Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., and the present plaintiffs, cited as defendants Nos. 2 to 8 in that suit. The Gorains being under the apprehension that the present plaintiffs as brahmottardars or tenure-holders had no title to convey in regard to the underground rights of the mauza, took a settlement of the underground rights of the entire mauza from the Zemindar, and sued to have it declared that the present plaintiffs-defendants Nos. 2 to 8 in that suit, had no right whatever to make a settlement of the underground rights of East Swardih with Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co. It will be remembered that Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., were working the Swardih Colliery belonging to the Gorains as their managing agents, and they sought a declaration in their suit to the effect that Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., were actually in possession of East Swardih, not under any lease that may have been granted to them by the present plaintiffs, for that lease was wholly inoperative, having been granted by persons without title, but as their managing agents and on their behalf. They entered the subject matter of the lease of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., in schedule (ga) of their plaint and they described the property in these words:—"The entire land known as East Swardih, the area of which is about 13 bighas, and the boundaries of which are the following;—

East.....Sutikdih Colliery.
North.....Bridge and road.
West.....Mine No. 11 of Swardih.
South.....The Jote land of Jagannath Supakar and others."

That was the suit which they filed in 1913. On the 20th December 1913 there was a compromise between the present plaintiffs, defendants Nos. 2 to 8 in their previous suit, and the Gorains who were the plaintiffs in that suit. Mr. P. K. Sen relies upon one of the terms of that compromise which runs as follows:—"The area of the land, detailed in the schedule No. 3 of this petition," which is the same as schedule (gi) of the plaint, "the sub-soil rights of which we have leased out to defendant No. 1 has been put down to be 13 bighas by guess in patta. The actual area of the said land will be determined in reference to the Revenue Survey Map, i. e., it is put down in the patta that the area of the homestead land is three bighas and that of the barabund is 10 bighas. In fact what is shown as the area of the said homestead land and bund in the Revenue Survey Map, will be determined as the actual area of the said lease-hold land, and we and defendants Nos. 2 to 8 both parties agree to this." Now the actual compromise partitioned the lease-hold interest of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., between the present plaintiffs and the Gorains, and provided that the present plaintiffs will be entitled to two-fifths of that interest and that the Gorains will be entitled to three-fifths of that interest; and what is remarkable is that schedule 3 of the sulehnama which is the schedule of the land demised by the plaintiffs to Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., on the 16th August 1912 is described as follows:—"The entire land known as East Swardih whose area is 13 bighas by guess, and whose boundaries are the following:—

East.....Sutikdih Colliery.
North.....Bridge and road.
West.....Mine No. 11 of Swardih.
South.....Jote land of Jagannath Supakar and others.

Mr. Sen's contention is this:—"It is impossible to understand my lease unless you consider the lease of 1892 because my lease is in respect of that portion of the land which was expressly excepted out of the lease of 1892" and then he argues that it is impossible to understand what was actually excepted out of the lease of 1892 unless you have regard to the compromise of the 20th December 1913. And he contends that if the terms of the sulehnama be taken into consideration, it will be found that what was excepted out of the lease of 1892 was a pond and certain homestead lands as shown in the Revenue Survey Map. In my opinion, the argument does not deserve any success. In the first place, although the barabund, that is to say, the pond, is shown in the Revenue Survey Map. It is conceded that the homestead lands are not delineated in the map. In other words, the land demised cannot be completely identified in the Revenue Survey Map, and it is ridiculous to suppose that the demise could be on that Map. In the second place, though the sulehnama does say that the actual area of the land demised should be calculated form the Revenue Survey Map, the description of that land in the schedule to the sulehnama which is identical with the description of the land in the lease of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., shows conclusively that the parties had no doubt whatever as to the identity of the land. In the third place, in a later transaction between the parties into which they had to enter as a result of the consent decree, they deliberately gave up the plea of having the area of the land demised calculated from the Revenue Survey Map. The fifth paragraph of the sulehnama provided as follows:—

"According to the terms of this compromise petition, the bond" that is to say an agreement carrying out the terms o' the sulehnama "will executed between both the parties, the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 2 to 8 within 15 days from this date." In pursuance of this express term the parties on the 12th February 1914 executed a document which is referred to as the deed of settlement; and that deed provided as follows:—

1. "That the area of the land described in the schedule below, namely, schedule which was intended to describe the land demised by the plaintiffs to Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., on the 16th August 1912 which has been stated to be 13 bighas in the patta, dated the 12th August 1912, was put down by guess. Its area for the present is not determined for certain. The area of the said land is guessed to be 13 bighas for the present and this bond is executed.

2. "That it is determined that in respect of the sub-soil and surface right on the said land, described in the schedule, the first party have three-fifths share and the second party two-fifths share. According to the said share, the parties shall continue to be in possession and enjoyment thereof down to their sons, grandsons and representatives in succession."

The third paragraph of the deed of settlement provides that "the first party and the second party, that it to say, the plaintiffs in this suit and the Gorains agree that the first party and the second party shall have according to the aforesaid share whatever interest has been created by the aforesaid patta dated the 16th August 1912, since the date of its execution; and according to the share mentioned above, the first party and the second party shall continue to hold possession of the surface and sub-soil right of the land described in the schedule." These provisions in the deed of settlement make it perfectly clear that the parties agree to be bound by the description of the demised land as contained in the schedule of that deed; and that description is identical in every respect with the description as contained in the lease of Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co.

In my opinion if it is relevant to consider the sulehnama of the 20th December 1913, it is also relevant to consider the deed of settlement of the 12th February 1914 and once the terms of the deed of settlement of the 12th February 1914 are examined the issue is determined and the question is solved.

I have thought it necessary to examine the subsequent transactions between the plaintiffs and the Gorains for the purpose of removing a grievance on the part of Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., but in my opinion, the question does not arise, Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., have been sued in this action for commission on the foot of the kabuliyat admittedly executed by them. It is an ordinary action between landlord and tenant, and, in my opinion, it is not open to them to rely upon a subsequent transaction between their lessors and a third party and raise a defence which would have the effect of imperilling the identity of the boundaries which it was their clear duty to preserve. But Mr. Sen explains to us that Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co., are not only the plaintiffs' lessees, but that they have also taken a sub-lease from the Gorains and it is also their duty not to imperil the title of the Gorairs to any portion of disputed land. But, in my opinion, the defence entirely fails as soon as the Gorains are drawn into the controversy. Their sub-lease is of 1916, and they are conclusively bound by the arrangement between their sub-lessors and the plaintiffs as disclosed in the deed of settlement of the 12th February 1914. In my opinion their defence entirely fails, and the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge on this point must be affirmed.

It was argued by Mr. P. K. Sen that, as a matter of fact, there is not an adequate and sufficient definition of the property by boundaries, because the boundaries as given in the lease of 1912 do not agree with the natural features of the land in the locality. The Commissioner in his report stated as follows:—Schedule 1 of the plaint as shown by the plaintiffs agrees in boundaries on the locality as given in the plaint and in the kabuliyat executed by defendant No. 1 dated the 16th August 1912 and schedule 2 of the plaint is included within schedule 1 as will appear from the map The defendants show the land included within 3, x, y, 15, 16, culvert, 1, 2, 3, to be the land of schedule No. 1 but this does not tally in boundary on the locality for in this plot we do not get on the east the "Sutikdih Colliery" and on the south the "khas paddy lands of the plaintiffs as will be clear from the map. Now the Commissioner was examined on behalf of Messrs. Linton Molesworth and Co. It was not suggested to him that his report on this important topic is erroneous and that the map as drawn by him does not support the statement made by him in the third paragraph of his report. In my opinion it is impossible for this Court to entertain an argument of this nature since no opportunity was given to the Commissioner to explain the matter in the witness-box.

Lastly, it has been contended that the plaintiffs, are estopped from disputing that the acreage is the dominant description in the lease or that the area is to be determined by reference to the Revenue Survey Map. The argument again is founded upon the sulehnama of the 20th December 1913. In my opinion the argument is an unsubstantial one. There is no representation in this transaction by the plaintiffs and certainly none that was intended to mislead Messrs. Linton Moleworth & Co., and to induce them to change their position to their detriment. The statement contained in the first paragraph of the sulehnama is as much the statement of the Gorains as the statement of the plaintiffs, and the actual truth was known to both the paries and estoppel cannot possibly arise Apart from any other consideration, Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., actually took the sub-lease of the interest of the Gorains after the real position was made perfectly clear by the deed of settlement of the 12th February 1914. No reason is given by Messrs. Linton Molesworth & Co., who should have acted upon the sulehnama of the 20th December 1913 rather than on the deed of settlement of the 12th February 1914.

There is, in my opinion, nothing at all in the argument as to estoppel.

In the result I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Foster, J.—I agree.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION NO. 23 OF 1922.

August 15, 1922.

Present:—Sir Sydney Robinson, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Duckworth.

V. E. R. M. V. E. RAMANATHAN CHETTY AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

V. E. R. M. N. R. RAMANATHAN CHETTY alias SOMASUNDRAM CHETTY AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 22, 23—Transfer of suit—"Subordinate," meaning of—Original Side, whether subordinate to Appellate Side.

Section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code deals with all Courts in which suits may be instituted including the Original Side of a High Court. [p. 409, col. 1.]

The word "subordinate" in section 23 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code refers merely to subordination in the sense that appeals lie from one Court to the other, although the Court may not be a subordinate Court for administrative purposes. [p. 409, col. 2.]

It is difficult to hold that a Court whose decrees and orders are liable to be reversed on appeal is not subordinate to the Court which has the jurisdiction to reverse its decisions. [p. 409, col. 2.]

For administrative purposes the Original Side of a High Court is not subordinate to the Appellate Side but for the purposes of appeals it is subordinate, using that expression in its ordinary sense and without any reference to its technical subordination in the sense of its being a Court of a lower grade. [p. 409, col. 2.]

The Appellate Side of a High Court has, therefore, power to order the transfer of a case pending on the Original Side. [p. 409, col. 2.]

Mr. Burjorjee, for the Applicants.

Messrs. Das and Chari, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Mr. Das raises a preliminary objection to the hearing of this application for transfer. He urges that the suit having been filed in the Original Side of this Court there is no Court to which that Court is "subordinate" and therefore no Court to which such an application can be made or which has power to pass an order of transfer. This involves a decision as to what is the meaning to be assigned to the expression "subordinate" in sub-clause 3 of section 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Section 22 deals with the power to transfer cases and it deals with all Courts in which suits may be instituted. There is nothing in this section to suggest that it was not intended to and does not apply to the Original Side of a High Court. Presumably it does so apply but we are asked to hold that as there exists no Court which can exercise the power of transfer it must be held that section 22 does not apply to the Original Side of a High Court. It may be that on a certain reading of section 23 (3) that sub-clause would not govern this case, but inasmuch as we can find no ground for limiting the purview of section 22 or for assuming that it was intended that suits instituted on the Original Side of a High Court should never be transferable under any circumstances we must consider what is the meaning to be assigned to sub-clause 3, and if it is possible to assign a meaning that would allow transfer without any straining of the language used we should assign that meaning. What then is the feature which determines the Court to which an application for transfer should be made? In sub-sections (1) and (2) of section 23 we find the application is to be made to the Appellate Court, that is the Court to which ordinarily appeals will lie from the Court in which the suit, or one of them, has been filed. Where the Appellate Courts are different then it has to be made to the High Court and lastly where the High Courts are different then to the High Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the Court in which the suit is brought is situate. There is nothing to show that in the case of a suit brought in the Original Side of a High Court any different rule is to be applied.

But it has been urged that the Judge sitting on the Original Side is a Judge of the High Court, that the Appellate Side is not a different Court and that the Judge on the Original Side is in no way subordinate to the Judges sitting on the Appellate Side. That is quite true. It is pointed out that this Court has held that the Appellate Side cannot interfere in revision with a decision of the Original Side because it is not a subordinate Court. That again is perfectly true. But we are now dealing with the question of transfer and we find that the deciding factor is whether appeals lie from the Court in which the suit is brought. For administrative purposes the Original Side is not subordinate to the Appellate Side but for the purposes of appeals it is subordinate, using that expression in its ordinary sense and without any reference to technical subordination in the sense of its being a Court of a lower grade. In ordinary parlance we find it impossible to hold that a Court whose decrees and orders are liable to be reversed on appeal is not subordinate to the Court which has the jurisdiction to reverse its decisions.

Finding then that section 22 deals with all Courts in which a suit may be brought; finding that the determining factor is whether appeals lie, to the Court in which the application is made; finding that we can properly interpret "subordinate" for the purposes of transfer as referring merely to subordination in the sense that appeals lie, even though the Court may not be a subordinate Court for administrative purposes, we are of opinion that the present application lies and that we have jurisdiction to deal with it if a suitable case is made out for ordering a transfer.

Note.—The rest of the judgment is not material for the purposes of this Report—[Ed.]

Application allowed.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 193 OF 1922.

May 21, 1923.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Martineau.

Bhagat GOBIND DAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RUPKISHORE AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 177—Limitation and Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act (XXVI of 1920), s. 2—Appeal—Death of respondent—Application to bring legal representatives on record—Limitation—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 78 (2)—Act

GOBIND DAS v. RUP KISHORE.

published in Gazette, whether authentic—Interpretation of Statutes—Intention of Legislature.

The period of six months for an application under the Code of Civil Procedure to have the legal representative of a deceased defendant or of a deceased respondent made a party, as prescribed by Art. 177 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act has not been reduced to ninety days by anything contained in section 2 of the Limitation and Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act of 1920. [p. 412, col. 2.]

The text of an Imperial Act as published in the Gazette of India must be taken to be the authorised text of the Act. [p. 411, col. 2.]

In interpreting a Statute it is not for the Court to speculate as to the intention of the Legislature if that intention has not been carried into effect by the language used. [p. 412, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Harrison, dated the 3rd July 1922, reported as 69 Ind. Cas. 748.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, Messrs. Sardha Ram and Fakir Chand, for the Appellants.

Sardar Dalip Singh, Messrs. Piare Lal and Kanwar Narain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question of law, upon which we are invited to express our opinion in this case, is whether the period of six months for an application under the Code of Civil Procedure to have the legal representative of a deceased defendant or of a deceased respondent made a party, as prescribed by Art. 177 of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908, has been reduced to 90 days. Now, section 2 of the Indian Limitation and Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, XXVI of 1920, provides that in the third division of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, in Arts. 176, 178 and 179 for the word "Ditto" in the second column the words "ninety days," "six months," and "ninety days," respectively, shall be substituted. It will be observed that this section deals directly with only three Articles, namely, 176, 178 and 179, and makes no reference to Art. 177 with which we are concerned in the present case. It is beyond dispute that the period of six months as originally prescribed by Art. 176 has now been reduced to 90 days, and the question for determination is whether this amendment of Art. 176 has resulted in a corresponding amendment of Art. 177 which immediately follows the amended Article.

In order to answer the question we must turn to the Indian Limitation Act of 1908 as passed by the Legislature and find out the exact word or words used in the second column relating to Art. 177. Now, the aforesaid Act, was published in the Gazette of India in August 1908, and the First Schedule is so printed that, while Arts. 175 and 176 along with certain Articles preceding them appear on one page, Arts. 177, 178 and a few other Articles appear on the succeeding page; and the period of limitation under these Articles is indicated in the following manner.—

Page 190.

175.	For payment of the amount of a decree by instalments.	Six months	The date of the decree.
176.	Under the same Code to have the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or of a deceased appellant made a party.	Ditto	The date of the death of the deceased plaintiff or appellant.

Page 191.

177.	Under the same Code to have the legal representative of a deceased defendant or of a deceased respondent made a party.	Six months	The date of the death of the deceased defendant or respondent.
178.	Under the same Code for the filing in Court of an award in a suit made in any matter referred to arbitration by order of the Court, or of an award made in any matter referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court.	Ditto	The date of the award.

This is undoubtedly the authorised text of the Act printed by order of Government, and it is clear that the words "six months" which occur opposite Art. 177, have not been modified, either directly or indirectly. by anything contained in the Amending Act of 1920.

Our attention has, however, been invited to the text of the Act, as printed in the Unrepealed General Acts of the Governor-General in Council (1909 Edition) and also to the 1908 and 1909 Edition of the Act published in book form under the heading:—

"GOVERNMENT OF INDIA LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT."

In all these books Arts. 175 to 178 all appear on the same page, and the period of limitation under these Articles is described in the following manner.—

175.	For payment of the amount of a decree by instalments.	Six months	The date of the decree.
176.	Under the same Code to have the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or of a deceased appellant made a party	Ditto	The date of the death of the deceased plaintiff or app llant.
177.	Under the same Code to have the legal representative of a deceased defendant or of a deceased respondent made a party.	Ditto	The date of the death of the deceased defendant or respondent.
178.	Under the same Code for the filing in Court of an award in a suit made in any matter referred to arbitration by order of the Court or of an award made in any matter referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court.	Ditto	The date of the award.

On the other hand, we find that in the 1910 Edition of the Act the aforesaid Articles are printed in the same way as in the Gazette of India, and that the words "six months" occur opposite Art. 177.

In view of the confusion created by the various copies of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, referred to above, it is necessary to decide which text of the Act should be consulted in order to determine the controversy as to whether the Act, as it emerged from the Legislative Council, contained the expression "Ditto" or, the words "six months" opposite Art. 177. Now section 18 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 67), which was in force at the time when the Indian Limitation Act of 1908 was passed, authorised the Governor-General in Council to make rules prescribing inter alia, the mode of promulgation and authentication of the laws made by the Council, and one of the rules framed under this section provides that:—

"When a bill is passed by the Council, a copy thereof shall be signed by the President, and, when the Governor-General has declared his assent thereto, such copy shall be signed by the Governor-General, and the Bill shall be published as soon as possible in the official Gazettes under the signature of the Secretary, as an Act of the Governor-General in Council. Such publication shall be made in the Gazette of India in English....."

(Vide General Statutory Rules and Orders, Volume I, 1915 Edition, page 15, rule 34). It was in accordance with this rule that the Limitation Act was published in the Gazette of India, and under sub-section (2) of section 78 of the Indian Evidence Act the text as published in the Gazette must be taken to be the authorised text of the Act. The books containing the Act, which have been relied upon by the learned Vakil for the appellants, do not purport to have been printed by order of Government and cannot be used under the aforesaid sub-section for the purpose of proving the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act as passed by the Legislature.

It is possible, nay probable, that the draftsman of the Amending Act of 1920 had before him a copy of the Indian Limitation Act in which Arts. 175 to 178 were all printed on the same page, and he accordingly thought that when the period of limitation under Art. 176 was altered to 90 days, the word "Ditto" opposite Art. 177, which existed in his copy of the Act, would be regarded as equivalent to 90 days, and that the retention of that word would automatically reduce the period of limitation under Art. 177. It is not, however, for the Court to speculate as to the intention of the Legislature if that intention has not been carried into effect by the language used. As pointed out by Maxwell in his book on the Interpretation of Statutes 6th Edition, at page 10, when the words admit of but one meaning:—

"A Court is not at liberty to speculate on the intention of the Legislature, and to construe them according to its own notions of what ought to have been enacted. Nothing could be more dangeous than to make such considerations the ground for construing an enactment that is unambiguous in itself. To depart from the meaning on account of such views is, in truth, not to construe the Act, but to alter it. But the business of the interpreter is not to improve the Statute, it is, to expound it. The question for him is not what the Legislature meant, but what its language means, i. e., what the Act has said that it meant. To give a construction contrary to, or different from, that which the words import or can possibly import, is not to interpret law, but to make it, and Judges are to remember that their office is jus dicere not jus dare."

It is urged that the text contained in the Gazette of India makes the amendment of Art. 178 superfluous, for the words "Ditto' that occurred opposite that Article, would attract to it the words "six months" printed in the Gazette opposite Art. 177, and it was consequently unnecessary to provide in the Amending Act of 1920 that the words "six months" be substituted for the word "Ditto" in Art. 178.. It is contended that the interpretation of an enactment should be such as not to render any portion of it superfluous. This consideration, however, applies only when the language of the Statute is capable of two rival meanings, but in the case before us the language is clear and unambiguous and there is, therefore, no scope for the application of the rule against superfluity.

We must accordingly hold that the words "six months" that occur opposite Art. 177 in the authenticated text of the Limitation Act, have not been altered by anything contained in the Amending Act of 1920, and that the period of limitation for making an application to implead the legal representative of a deceased defendant or of a deceased respondent is still six months. It is regrettable that the question of amendment should depend upon the use of the words "Ditto", which has, it appears, been used only in those copies of the Act in which Art 177 has been printed on the same page as the preceding Article. It is certainly desirable that the word "Ditto" should be omitted altogether, and that it should be replaced by words mentioning the actual period which it was intended to represent.

In this view of the law it is unnecessary for us to deal with the contention urged on behalf of the respondent that sufficient cause has been shown for setting aside the abatement. We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 643 OF 1921.

November 14, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Marten and Mr. Justice Fawcett.

SHA BULAKHIDAS JAMANDAS—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SHAH GANPATRAM DALSUKHRAM—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Construction of deed—Sale of house property—Courtyard, common, user of—Intention of parties—Nuisance—Injunction, when to be granted.

Defendant was the owner of four houses out of which he sold three to the plaintiff. The sale-deed contained the following clause:—"There is an open chowk belonging to these three houses and in front of the door of my other house. All may use the said chowk according to the limits of their respective houses, and the inmates of all the four houses have the right of egress and ingress through the main Khadki door."

Held, that the clause relating to the chowk did not mean that the chowk was to be in the exclusive ownerships and possession of the plaintiff.

that it was intended to be used by the occupants of all four houses, but that no particular owner was to be entitled to use the chowk more than would be reasonable according to the proportion of the whole property which he actually occupied. [p. 413, col. 2.]

A Court ought not to grant an injunction on the ground of nuisance, unless the particular nuisance complained of is proved. [p. 414, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decision of the Assistant Judge, Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 8 of 1919.

Mr. R. J. Thakor, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. V. Divatia, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Marten, J.—This is an unfortunate suit between neighbours, and it concerns mainly the rights of the parties to the chowk coloured pink on the plan, Exhibit 17, and the rights in respect of the water tap Exhibit G shown on the same plan. It appears that formerly, that is to say prior to 1911, the whole of the property shown on this plan belonged to the defendant or his predecessors-in-title. The property consists of four houses, and as the result of a sale-deed of the 19th of March 1911, Exhibit 16, three houses were conveyed to the plaintiff's predecessors-in-title, and the remaining house was retained by the present defendant. The plan I have referred to has the parties just the other way round, but that is because it was made for the purpose of another suit where the parties were reversed.

The plaintiff's claim as regards the chowk is founded on the allegation that he is the owner of the chowk. This allegation has been decided against him in both the lower Courts, but the lower Appellate Court has in effect granted an injunction restricting the defendant to the use of ¼th of the chowk, and also against his using that ¼th in such way as to cause a nuisance and annoyance to the owners of the other three quarters. It is this injunction of the lower Appellate Court that the present appellant the defendant objects to. The cross-objections raised by the plaintiff contend inter alia that he is the owner of the chowk.

It is all important, therefore, to consider what is the true construction of the sale-deed, Exhibit 16. This deed recites that there was originally one house, and it then proceeds that three houses were afterwards built anew and "are hereby sold to you with the right of ingress and egress through the main door and given over to your possession." Then followed particulars of the boundaries. Then comes a clause about the chowk which has given rise to much controversy in the present case. It runs "There is an open chowk belonging to these three houses and in front of the door of my other house. All may use the said chowk according to the limits of their respective houses, and the inmates of all the four houses have the right of egress and ingress through the main Khadki door."

In my judgment, if it had been intended to include the chowk in this sale-deed, it would have been included as part of the three houses which are expressly sold to the defendant with the express boundaries which are there described. But if, on the other hand as, I think, is the true view, it was intended to keep this chowk as an open space for the benefit of all the four houses, then one can understand that only three houses would be expressly conveyed, and that there would be a separate provision as to the rights of the parties in connection with the chowk. In my opinion the words "open chowk belonging to these three houses do not mean, having regard to the context, that this chowk was to be in the exclusive ownership and possession of the three houses. I construe the words "all may use the said chowk" as meaning all four houses, and that they have the same meaning as "the inmates of all the four houses" referred to in the next sentence.

The words "according to the limits of their respective houses" no doubt create some difficulty. But, in my opinion, the dominating motive of the parties was that all might use the chowk and this means the whole chowk. Accordingly the limitation put in that deed was intended to prevent any one particular owner using the chowk more than would be reasonable according to the proportion of the whole property which he actually occupied. For instance, one party could not tether his horses, or put up linen or pots and pans over the whole of the chowk. It is difficult in these cases where some open space is intended to be used in common by all parties proportionately to their respective holdings, to frame any rules which unreasonable or cantankerous men won't find an opportunity of creating quibbles about and possibly bringing about litigation. Obviously a small space like this used in common may lead to squabbles and quarrels, if the parties who have the right of user cannot be reasonable enough to respect their neighbour's rights as well as their own. However, that may be on the true construction of this deed, I am of opinion that the plaintiff is entirely wrong in contending that it conveyed the chowk to him and that he is the sole owner of the chowk.

I am further of opinion that the learned Appellate Judge was wrong in granting an injunction restraining the defendant from using any more than $\frac{1}{4}$th of this chowk. That injunction in effect amounts to a partition of the chowk because if you restrain a man from using any more than $\frac{1}{4}$th of land, for all practical purposes you have given him that quarter and prevented him from exercising any rights whatever over the remaining $\frac{3}{4}$ths. Further in the present case the unfairness of such an injunction is that it only operates against the defendant and that there is no corresponding injunction against the plaintiff debarring him from exercising rights over the $\frac{1}{4}$th allotted to the defendant. On the contrary the learned Judge gives the plaintiff a right of passage over this quarter which is nowhere found expressly in the deed under construction. In a formal partition, each party would have been allotted a particullar portion and could not have afterwards used the portion of the other party, apart from any rights of way or other easements granted on partition.

Then as regards the injuction which the learned Judge has granted restraining the defendant from so using his quarter as to create a nuisance to the plaintiff, the issue on that question of fact in the Trial Court was Issue No. 2, viz.; whether the defendant and his tenants obstruct the plaintiff and his tenants from passing through and using open chowk. The answer to that issue was no. When we come to the Appellate Court, there is no issue whatever raised as to whether there was any such nuisance as is the subject of this injunction. Nor do I find that the learned Appellate Judge has even found as a fact that there was such a nuisance and annoyance. The Trial Court held on page 14, line 55 that in almost all important particulars the plaintiff was guilty of exaggerations and falsehoods. Then with reference to the plaintiff's witness he refers to Exhibit 57 as being a friend of plaintiff's who speaks of defendant's children being made to answer the calls of nature in the chowk, and alleged nuisance which even plaintiff has not the hardihood to mention.

In my judgment, the Court ought not to grant an injunction on the ground of nuisance, unless the nuisance, which is a question of fact, is proved. Here there is no issue raised on the point in lower Appellate Court. There is no finding of fact and on the contrary I find the facts found quite clearly the other way in the Trial Court. In my opinion the learned Appellate Judge erred in granting this injunction; and I cannot for one moment accept the contention of the respondent's Pleader that all that the learned Judge was really doing was to endeavour to carry out the rights of the parties under Exhibit 16. As I have said he had no right to grant an injunction for nuisance unless the nuisance was proved.

Now I come to the question of the tap. There was an express issue on this in the Court of first intance, viz., whether the defendant's water tap near the Khadki door is a nuisance to the plaintiff. The answer to that finding was no. In the lower Appellate Court there is no issue raised about this tap, Exhibit G, at all, except Issue No. 2, viz., as to whether the lower Court erred in holding that the tap, Exhibit G, and Chokdi Fare not new but they looked old. The answer to that issue was no. There is no finding here whatever as far as I can see, that the defendant has committed a nuisance in respect of his user of this tap. G. There again, if I may say so with all respect, the learned Judge seems to have granted an injunction merely by way of emphasizing his views as to how this particular tap should be used. He says in paragraph 20 "He (the plaintiff) can only have an injunction restraining the user of the pipe for any other purposes such as, washing and bathing than that of taking water from it", and paragraph 23 is the formal order to that effect.

Now I can quite understand that if on the facts here it could be proved that the defendant's household at all hours of the day were either washing their dirty clothes or washing their persons and slopping dirty water over the entrance to the chowk and keeping the main Khadki door open for that purpose and really causing a nuisance to their neighbours and particularly if this injuriously affected the common user of the chowk, then I can understand that the Court would force the defendant by injunction or otherwise to preserve a more neighbourly and gentlemanly attitude. But here, again, these matters of nuisance are questions of fact and no such evidence is brought before our notice.

Accordingly it seems to me that on the facts at present before us, the learned Judge erred in granting an injunction in these terms. It follows, therefore, that, in my opinion, the decision which the learned Trial Judge arrived at was the correct one, and that this appeal must be allowed and the judgment of the learned Trial Judge must be restored. Then as regards costs, I would also restore the learned Trial Judge's order as to costs, viz, that each party pay the costs mentioned in his judgment. As regards the costs of the lower Appellate Court and of this appeal they must be borne by the respondent to this Appeal No. 643 of 1921. Similarly the cross-objections in which he has urged inter alia his absolute ownership of the chowk will be dismissed with sosts.

I wish to add, speaking for myself. one word of advice if I may be allowed to do so to the parties. I regret to see neighbours fighting and squabbling and spending their money over litigation in this way for years and years. They have adjoining properties where if they choose to behave in this ungentlemanly way, they can no doubt find opportunities for further quarrels. Up to now it may be said that the honours of the fight have rested fairly easy between them. Now that this Court has explained what their legal rights are, I trust that there will be no more conduct on either the one side or the other such as we have seen in the past, as to lead to further litigation. I trust in particular that nobody will think that as a result of this judgment he is entitled to make an unreasonable use of either the chowk or the water tap in such a way as to cause annoyance and nuisance to his neighbours. If he does he will probably find that the result of such future litigation will be extremly unpleasant. But I sincerely hope that the parties will have the good sense to regard this present litigation as their last venture in the law Courts.

Fawcet, J.—In regard to the plaintiff's claim to ownership of the whole chowk, I think that the construction put upon the sale-deed, Exhibit 16, by the Subordinate Judge is a more reasonable one than that adopted by the Assistant Judge in appeal. On this point I fully concur in the remarks and conclusion of my learned brother. I would only add that, on the facts of this case, it seems to me analogous to one falling under section 22 of the Easements Act, which in effect lays down that the dominant owner is to exercise his right in a reasonable manner, with due regard to the interests of the other person concerned.

As regards the injunction which has been granted by the lower Appellate Court, I concur fully with the views of my learned brother. I think that the learned Judge had no jurisdiction to grant those injunctions, because the proper foundation for such an injunction is not forthcoming. There in no proof that there has been an actual invasion, or threat of invasion, of the plaintiff's right as to entitle him to an injunction under section 54 of the Specific Relief Act, cf. section 35 of the Easements Act.

Accordingly I concur that the Trial Court's order should be restored and that costs should be borne as proposed in my learned brother's judgment.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2558 OF 1922.

March 15, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

Agha MUHAMMAD ASLAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JODH SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Interest, future—Discretion of Court—Appeal, second—Interference by High Court—Costs, rule as to.

The award of future interest is discretionary with the Court and where this discretion has been exercised by the lower Appellate Court by disallowing future interest, the High Court will not interfere in second appeal.

Ordinarily costs should abide the result.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Lahore, dated the 16th May 1922.

Lala Tirath Ram, for the Appellant.

Mr. Barkat Ali, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—There are only two questions for decision in this second appeal (1) whether the learned District Judge was justified in disallowing future interest, and (2) whether the costs have been rightly disallowed. A preliminary objection has been raised by Mr. Barkat Ali on behalf of the respondent that the appeal is barred by limitation inasmuch as the full amount of Court-fees on this appeal was not paid till the 23rd October 1922, when the period of limitation had already expired. I do not see any force in this preliminary objection. The appeal was filed on Rs. 18 stamp on the 10th October 1922 within limitation, and the balance of Court-fees was made up within a week under the orders of the Court without any objection on the part of the appellant. The mistake clearly appears to be a bona fide one, and I am of opinion that this is a fit case for the extension of time under section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act. I accordingly overrule the preliminary objection and hold that the appeal is within time.

As to future interest it has been contended by Mr. Tirath Ram that it had been allowed by the Court of first instance from the date of the decree, and that the lower Appellate Court was not justified in disallowing it in the absence of a specific ground of appeal in this respect. A reference to the grounds of appeal, however, makes it clear that the defendant objected to the correctness of the decree and pointed out that the decree of the Court of first instance was wrong both in law and on facts. This ground of appeal, in my opinion, included also a prayer to the effect that the decree of the First Court allowing future interest should be set aside. In any case the question of the award of future interest was discretionary with the Court and following Kishna Mal v. Muhammad Bakhsh (1) I do not see any reason to interfere on this point in second appeal.

The question of costs, however, stands on a different footing. The learned District Judge has disallowed costs simply because future interest had been disallowed and because, as the learned District Judge observes, the defendant had succeeded in part in his appeal. In my opinion the reason given by the learned District Judge for disallowing costs is quite arbitrary and no sufficient cause has been shown by the learned Vakil for the respondent why they should not be allowed in this case. Costs generally abide the result and as the plaintiff's suit was practically decreed in full, costs should have been awarded to him. I accordingly accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the Court below direct that the plaintiff's suit shall be decreed with costs in both the Courts below. The prayer as to future interest is disallowed, and in this Court the parties shall bear their own costs.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

(1) 27 Ind. Cas. 616; 52 P. L. R. 1915; 131 P. W. R. 1915.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION NO. 11 OF 1922.

March 21, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ross.

Maharaj Kumar NAND KISHORE NATH SAHI DEO AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR AT THE INSTANCE OF MESSRS. GARG BROTHERS AND CO.—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 107, proceedings under—Indefinite information—Magistrate, duty of.

In the case of proceedings under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Magistrate must show that he had information entitling him to act under the section. [p. 418, c l. 1.]

Where proceedings drawn up by a Magistrate, against one party to a dispute concerning some property, under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code, recite simply that he has received a report from the Police that that party is likely to commit a breach of the peace or do a wrongful act which may occasion a breach of the peace, inasmuch as it is using threats of violence to the other party, the information is too vague and indefinite to justify action and the proceedings must be set aside. [p. 418, col. 1.]

Messrs. Manuk and G. C. Pal, for the Petitioners.

The Government Advocate, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—By this application the petitioners seek that proceedings drawn up against them under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code may be quashed or in the alternative that the case be transferred from the Magistrate who is trying it.

There are five petitioners. The first is the son of the Maharaja of Chota Nagpur and is Khorposhdar of Diwarkband Pargana in the District of Ranchi, the second is a Barrister who has obtained a prospecting lease from the first, the third is the Tahsildar and the fourth is a Barahil of the first petitioner, and the fifth is a lessee under him. The opposite party are Messrs. Garg Brothers and Co. who have taken a prospecting lease for coal from the Maharaja. The proceedings drawn up by the Magistrate recites that it appears from the report of the Sadar Inspector of Police that the second party, that is, the petitioners, are likely to commit a breach of the peace or do a wrongful act which may occasion breach of the peace inasmuch as the first and second petitioners personally and through their servants, the other petitioners, and other men employed by them, are using threats of violence to the men of the first party. It further alleges that the petitioners Nos. 1 and 2 are believed to have instigated various offences. This second allegation refers apparently to a series of cases set forth in the Police report, in all of which, except one which is still under trial, the petitioners have been acquitted or discharged. It is conceded by the learned Government Advocate who opposed this application that this affords no basis for a proceeding under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the question is, therefore, restricted to the first ground.

It is contended on behalf of the petitioners that this ground is too vague; it does not give the necessary details which are required to inform the petitioners of the accusation that they have to meet and does not satisfy the tests laid down In the matter of Jaiprakash Lal (1) and In re Nagireddy Kondareddy (2). It is also contended that it does not comply with the provisions of section 112 of the Criminal Procedure Code and that the proceeding is, therefore, bad. The learned Government-Advocate relies on the last paragraph of the Police report in which it is stated by the Police Officer that on recent enquiries he had come to learn that the servants of the Garg Brothers and others assisting them in their prospecting operations, including witnesses Nos. 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17 and 18 have been threatened with violence on different occasions by the petitioners. It is argued that, if the petitioners have not received due notice of the acts of intimidation alleged against them in the proceeding, they can apply to the Magistrate for further particulars. But it appears that this very objection was taken in the written statement filed

(1) 6 A. 26; A. W. N. (1883) 208; 3 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 641 (F. B.).
(2) 41 Ind. Cas. 990; 41 M. 246; 18 Cr. L. J. 878.

by the petitioners and that the Magistrate nevertheless did not amend the proceeding. Now it appears that there was an earlier proceeding drawn up on the 4th of August 1921 which was quashed by the High Court on the 30th of September last. It was pointed out by the learned Judge of this Court in dealing with that earlier proceeding that "the responsibility of issuing notice under section 112 is of the Magistrate." The proceeding drawn up in that case was discussed and it was found that it did not show that there was any information before the Magistrate entitling him to act under section 107. Now the Magistrate has been informed by the judgment of the High Court in that earlier case of the necessity of showing that there was information before him entitling him to act under section 107. But the present proceeding can hardly be said to be more definite than the last or to show any definite ground for proceeding against the petitioners. The Police report, if it can be referred to in this connection, is little better. It does not give any details nor does it allege any recent acts of intimidation. It is too indefinite to be met and the petitioners are necessarily prejudiced by being called upon to meet vague allegations of this kind. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that when the Magistrate, after having had his attention drawn by this Court to the necessity of setting out the specific allegations to be met, has nothing more definite to say than what is contended in this proceeding, the proceeding in itself is without substance. The proceeding in this case does not satisfy me that there are any genuine tangible grounds for calling upon the petitioners to show cause why they should not be bound down to keep the peace and it must be set aside.

There is one other matter to which I ought to refer in connection with the application for transfer although that question no longer falls to be decided. In paragraph 13 of the affidavit it is alleged that the Magistrate at the suggestion of the Pleader of the first party got the chamber of Mr. Basu, Barrister-at-Law, petitioner No. 2, and also the chamber of the Counsel appearing for the accused searched to find out the petitioner, Jawahir. Now the Magistrate has dealt with the other allegations contained in this paragraph, but has said nothing about this alleged search. This may be due to an oversight, but if it is to be construed as an acknowledgment of the truth of the allegation then I must say that the Magistrate acted with grave impropriety and on this ground alone the case would have had to be transferred from his file.

N. H.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE NO. 913 OF 1923.
CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 731 OF 1923.

December 13, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Odgers.

In re BHARATA AYYAR—PETITIONER.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 488—Offspring of Sambandham—Maintenance.

The offspring of a sambandham are entitled to maintenance from their mother and not from their father provided the mother has sufficient means to maintain them. But if the mother is not in a position to maintain them without an allowance from the father, the latter is liable to pay the allowance [p. 419, col. 1.]

The expression "unable to maintain" in section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not confined to physical inability but includes also pecuniary inability. [p. 419, col. 1.]

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise an order of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Malapuram, dated the 27th October 1923 in M. C. No. 12 of 1923.

Mr. N. R. Sesha Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

ORDER.—This is an application to revise the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Malapuram made under section 488, Criminal Procedure Code, wherein he ordered the petitioner to pay a monthly allowance of Rs. 4 for the maintenance of the child of the respondent, a Nair woman, the petitioner being a Brahmin. The petitioner denied the sambandham and disowned the paternity of the child. The learned Magistrate, however, observed that his Vakil did not press this point seriously either in the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses or in his own defence, and has come to the finding that the paternity of the child is proved. The main point relied upon before the lower Court was that the woman was in a position to maintain the child and, therefore, the father was not liable to maintain it. Mr. N. R. Sesha Aiyar before me has taken the same point and relies on two decisions of this Court, namely, Chantan v. Chakkapayyan Mathu (1) and Parappati Chinna v. Shankunni Menon (2). In the former case it was held that a child that possesses a right to maintenance from its mother's tavazhi is not entitled to an order for maintenance against its father. It was also held that the words "unable to maintain" are not confined to physical inability but include also pecuniary inability. Abdur Rahim, J., in that case said:

"I think the ability contemplated by the section applies as much to the case of a child which has got means of its own or which is entitled in law to be maintained, and is being maintained as in this case by some other person, as to a child which is able to earn a living by its own exertions."

In the later case in Parappati Chinna v. Shankunni Menon (2) to which Ayling, J., was also a party as in the earlier case which was followed, the learned Judges say that the offspring of a sambandham are entitled to maintenance from their tavazhi, and if the tavazhi or tarwad has sufficient means to maintain them they are not entitled to an order for maintenance against their father. And the reason which prompted the learned Judges there to revise the order of the Magistrate was that the lower Court had not found what the income of tavazhi was, nor had it given any finding as to the income of the tarwad. In this case the learned Magistrate has found as a fact that the respondent's tarwad is not in a position to maintain the child without an allowance from the petitioner. Sitting here in revision, I am bound by that finding of fact. I must, therefore, dismiss this Criminal revision case.

V. N. V.
S. D. Petition dismissed.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 144; 39 M. 957; 19 M. L. T. 231; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 111; 17 Cr. L. J. 16.
(2) 52 Ind. Cas. 893; 37 M. L. J. 361; 10 L. W. 229; 26 M. L. T. 238; (1919) M. W. N. 632; 20 Cr. L. J. 733.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 267 B OF 1922.
June 26, 1922.
Present:—Mr. Justice Duckworth.
PAN BU AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Burma Village Act (VI of 1907), s. 12—Refusal to obey requisition of Headman—Knowledge of requisition—Burden of proof.

In Settlement Operations Headmen have to assist Settlement Officials by turning out villagers for such duties as soil classification, holding-marking, crop-reaping, etc., and a villager who refuses to comply with such a requisition by a Headman is guilty of an offence under section 12 of the Burma Village Act. [p. 420, cols. 1 & 2.]

Under section 12 of the Burma Village Act the prosecution has to prove that the accused was either present at the time when the requisition was made or was informed of it in time to obey it. [p. 420, col. 2.]

Criminal revision of an order passed by the Township Magistrate, Dedaye.

Messrs. Ba Dun and San Shwe, for the Applicants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The 39 applicants were convicted by the Township Magistrate, Dedaye, under section 12 of the Burma Village Act for refusing to comply with a requisition of the Headman to assist him in his public duties. They were each fined a sum of Rs. 15 only, or, in default, were sentenced to undergo seven days' rigorous imprisonment.

PAN BU v. EMPEROR.

A Settlement Party is at work in Pyapon District. In the village tract in question eight plots of paddy land were marked out for crop reaping and measuring, for the purposes of revenue assessment. The crops on five of these plots had been reaped and measured. This case concerns the remaining three plots. The Headman ordered the villagers to turn out on the day in question, and to reap and measure the crops. The applicants are shown to have refused to go, unless they were paid to do so. For this, they have been punished as stated. They have applied to this Court on revision through their Counsel Maung Ba Dun, on the grounds that the requisition was not for the performance of any public duty imposed upon villagers under the Burma Village Act, and that, even if it was the applicants admittedly reaped the said three plots a week after their refusal. It was further contended that there was no proof that applicants, Le Gyaw, Po Han, Ba E, Po Tha Han, Po Kyaw, and Po Htaw were present, or ever received the Headman's order and that, therefore, the Magistrate was in error in placing the burden of proof on these six applicants under section 12 of the Act. Finally it was argued that the Township Magistrate, as an executive officer, was biased, and that he should have held that Thu Daw's statement that " if only the Deputy Commissioner's order explicitly stated that the reaping must be done with the villagers, they would undertake the work," was a complete answer to the Headman's requistion and a reasonable excuse.

